Feature Subjects of Short Length

"The Yellow Arm"

(Geo. B. Seitz—Pathe Serial—15 Episodes)

AFTER witnessing two episodes of Pathe's newest serial, "The Yellow Arm," we can only substantiate its claim that it "contains suspense enough to support a bridge across the Hudson river." The House of Serials has put over another winner in the "continued in our next" attraction. What has been said of some other releases may be expressed here. It carried all the favorite elements such as lively action, thrills, suspense, romance, intrigue, hate, vengeance and atmosphere. The ingredient, catalogued as intrigue is particularly dominant because of the sinister exploitations of the yellow men who are present to add the mystery and quicken the pulse.

These Orientals are determined to execute revenge upon the house of Bain. Years before a sea-faring Bain had led a wild, tempestuous life. During a brief trip into the interior of China, he had rescued an aristocratic girl from bondage and brought her to America where he married her. Their life was lived in peace and happiness. The present head of the house of Bain is a son of this union and it is his fear which starts the serial on its cumulative suspense. One instinctively hopes the best for him and his two children.

The first scenes are punctuated by a series of mysterious happenings in the house with the atmosphere charged with rain and lightning. A party eager to seek shelter is admitted to the house, which is the occasion to pile up the complications and mystify the spectator.

The acting is in the very capable hands of Warner Oland, who is to a serial what Bill Hart is to a western. One never knows just what this character actor is interpreting. There is a suspicion present that he is an apostle of wickedness, judging from his sinister roles of other serials. The other principal parts are taken care of by the personable Juanita Hansen, the dainty Marguerite Courtot and William Bailey. There is indication that they have their work cut out for them in the shape of frenzied climaxes, daring rescues and what not. Bertram Millhauser directed from a scenario by James Shelly Hamilton. The direction is in good hands since the man in charge has had long experience with serials. The paper is ready. Get it quick and bill the offering like a circus. The patrons are certain to like it.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Game Lady"

(Lehrman Comedy—First National—Two Reels)

HENRY LEHRMAN, the producer of this comedy, has a good time in smashing the conventions to pieces. There is no logic and he did not intend there should be any. He has assembled a cast of fairly clever comedians, a lot of trick incident, some hokum atmosphere, plenty of comedy properties and pieced them together in a crazy quilt pattern—without any attention being placed to law or order. The wild people are engaged in the pastime of shooting ducks. They are game with their rifles and are after game—all kinds of it.

It is a crazy chase—with flivvers, ducks, wild geese, and a troup of merry burlesquers all involved and running around in circles. The offering carries a number of laughs—the antics of the troupers arousing guffaws on several occasions. The titles are snappy and carry double meanings. Phil Dunham and Lloyd Hamilton are in there making the action ridiculous. "A Game Lady" may be topsy-turvy but it succeeds in sending the "peepul" forth laughing as they say goodby.—LAURENCE REID.

"The American Badger"

(Bill and Bob Series—Pathe)

It is placed in a hole probably not more than six or eight inches in depth, wrapped in oil paper and then covered with earth. But this does not complete the job, for the young hunters have to be careful and not leave their footprints or anything that would arouse Mr. Badger's suspicions.

When things are completed the hunters retire and a subtitle announces that after three or four days discouraging work the following scenes were taken. These scenes show the badger arriving at the trap and cautiously smelling about. He is not wary enough for the trap and when he is not thinking, unconsciously springs it and is caught. He is then tied by the young adventurers and led away.

Films of this sort are always interesting to the studious and to those who love the great outdoors.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Flirt"

(Harold Lloyd Re-issue-Pathe)

IF they make 'em as good now-a-days as they did when they made this one reeler, which is not so long ago, no one in the world will ever kick. The principals in the cast are Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniel and "Snub" Pollard with a few others for good measure.

Lloyd, of course, is favored with the fattest part, a part which gives him plenty of opportunity to display his own particular talents.

The young hero becoming disgusted with the way things are run in a restaurant, which he patronizes, throws the waiter out and takes his job. When he is not spilling the soup, breaking the dishes or confusing everybody, he is making violent love to Bebe or getting into trouble with the boss, "Snub."

A most ridiculous situation occurs when Lloyd in his anxiety to serve a customer, spills the "chowder" on his head. The young waiter is not confused at all when the customer becomes enraged but proceeds to massage the soup into his bald head. When this is done the vinegar is used as an "added attraction" and to give the impatient one a "run for his money." The wind-up shows Lloyd diligently using the powdered sugar on the customer's bald head.

These scenes are played seriously by the star, and the result can easily be imagined.

If you haven't played it—play it, if you have let them see it again, it will make them laugh.—FRANK LEONARD.

"At the Ringside"

(Snub Pollard Comedy—Roach—Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS comedy featuring Snub Pollard may be called timely in view of the recent Dempsey-Carpentier fight, since it exploits a burlesque fistic encounter between the comedian with the walrus moustache and an exceptionally comic heavy-weight. Certainly "At the Ringside" is the cleverest Pollard comedy which has been offered in some time. The heavyweight is a fakir since he uses a kicking donkey back of the stage, hidden behind a screen to exploit a healthy hoof in the direction of the opponent. When the latter approaches this screen to get into position for sending home a good right arm—or left—the donkey attends to the obsequies. He kicks the opponents into the arms of the big fellow and he calmly tosses them out of the ring.

It is the big man's ring style which is the mirth-provoking incident. He is slow and labored and he constantly looks towards the spectators for applause. His curt bows and careless manner of expectorating are good for a laugh any time, anywhere. Finally Snub gets into the ring and maneuvers about until he has his hefty opponent in proximity to the donkey's hoof. And he gets the imprint of the iron shoe full on the face. The titles are good and the "extra" atmosphere is all to the merry. A bright little number and not overdone.—LAURENCE REID.

"No Stop-Over"

("Snub" Pollard-Pathe)

"SNUB" POLLARD is a very busy comedian in this one reeler. When he isn't working up a situation, he is in the middle of one diving hither and thither or scrambling about to put over the points.

And this he certainly does and with the aid of a good story which scintillates with comedy moments, the comedian and his assistants, Marie Mosquini, and Sunshine Sambo run the gamut of fun from the time the comedy opens until the last scene.

The opening scene shows Pollard and his wife, Marie Mosquini about to take a train to visit "Snub's" sick uncle. When the trains are ready to leave the Pollards are not and vice versa. The trains leave every fifteen minutes but though the happy couple are always on time, some mishap always occurs. Sometimes they lose their ticket; at another time they become confused and cannot find it; and at another a goat either chews it up or—well they must have sat up nights thinking up the situations so many are they and so varied. But they're all good and will certainly give the patrons plenty of amusement.

The old shell game is brought into the picture and with the aid of the star, a gambler, and the little colored gentleman "Sambo," it is worked to perfection.

"MAN TRACKERS"
(Universal)

"MAN TRACKERS" is another Northwestern picture with strong dramatic moments, heart interest, love interest and about everything necessary to keep patrons who like stories of this type in a "sit-up" position while the picture is being screened.

It's a most peculiar thing, but true however, that no matter how many Northwestern pictures are produced there is always room for one more. This does not mean that "Man Trackers" is a picture out of the ordinary, for it is not, but the authors have written an interesting tale, kept it well within bounds, have developed gradually to the big moments and have had sense enough to keep the scenes moving in the right direction when there is nothing else to do. In other words they have kept building.

In this way the mind doesn't have to jump about hither and thither in order to remember the drift of the story for the incident is closely woven.

The characters are the same as we have seen in dozens of these pictures, the "Mounties" with their hero who is a private this time, but always on the job and reckless of his life when danger is at hand, the half breeds, one of whom is a half witted man whose mind returns to normal when the time arrives, thus saving the day for the hero by his dramatic disclosure, and the other a half breed girl who is the bad man's woman.

Of course the bad man is very bad and is supported by his "gang" who are always scheming to outwit the law. And when they come together something is bound to happen.

This picture has a rather novel plot, for the villain shoots one of his own gang who has been in a fight with the hero in order that the latter may be accused of the crime. In the trial scene the gang sticks together and hero is sent to jail for six months.

At the expiration of his term he vows vengeance and follows the bad man into the depths of the forest where two good hand to hand fights in the snow covered regions with the contestants in pretty bad shape from want of food and exposure furnish plenty of excitement.

The picture will give satisfaction wherever screened.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Universal's latest feature, "Man Trackers," will appear at the ———— theatre on ———— of next week.

It is one of those productions that will grip and hold you from the very start, being as it is a tale of the great Northwest with all the bigness and greatness that goes with a locale that is laid in this part of the country.

Molly Killbride might have married Morgan had it not been for Jerry Burke, one of her father's men and a devil-may-care man-hunter of the scarlet-coated service.

In a fight which took place between the two lovers, Jerry was knocked unconscious and a second later Morgan fell wounded with a bullet through the chest. Jerry was accused of the shooting and arrested. To the world it looked as though Jerry was a man who would shoot another without provocation.

In the time of Jerry's disgrace, Morgan regained favor with Molly and got her to promise that she would give him an answer on the day following. While Morgan was pressing his suit with the girl, Jerry was galloping over a fresh trail left by a desperado and an Indian girl with whom he fled.

He found them in a desolate part of the woods and after a terrific battle brings them back to the barracks and with them the evidence that clears his repuation.

PROGRAM READER

"If you didn't have on that uniform Molly would never look at you," he taunted. Jerry promptly took off his insignia and was beating Morgan to a pulp when a blow from behind knocked him unconscious. A second later Morgan fell, wounded with a bullet through the chest. Jerry was accused of shooting him and arrested.

This is a mere outline of "Man Trackers," Universal's latest feature which will be the attraction at this theatre on ———— of next week.

Its story has a locale which is laid in the Northwest and which fairly scintillates with dramatic moments, love interest and tense moments. Tales of this kind are always in demand when they breathe of the vast woods, the great outdoors and the strong people who dwell therein.

Interest is aroused when the half breed is brought into the story. He worships Jerry and tries to collect his scattered wits long enough to tell the inspector a desperado knocked Jerry out from behind, snatched his gun and shot Morgan as a plot to discredit Jerry in the service and cause his dismissal.

Did he succeed in doing it? See the picture and see for yourself. The production is well directed and has a strong cast including George Larkin and Josephine Hill.

"THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN"
(Paramount)

Fails to Come Up to Expectations

THE director and scenario writer missed an opportunity to put over a clever homespun drama from Booth Tarkington's widely read novel. "The Conquest of Canaan," a forerunner of the popular "Main Street." They have missed the mark completely—a fact noticeable in their failure to catch the psychology of the plot and characterization. The figure of Joe Louden, the ne'er-do-well, who came back to his home town resolved to make good, is one of Tarkington's cleverest characters—a character possessing a lovable personality. On the screen as interpreted by Thomas Meighan, the figure is well nigh colorless. Indeed the star is miscast, being too "hefty" and matured and he fails to make the role human. There are any number of scenes in which he does nothing but stand in front of the camera or wander about aimlessly.

One of the chief faults is the lack of continuity, there being no real sequence of action. But the fault which will irritate those spectators, who remember the book as one of the most interesting studies in character development, is the failure of the sponsors to develop the character on the screen. Joe Louden had overwhelming obstacles to overcome as conceived by the author. In the picture these obstacles are treated in an arbitrary fashion—as if introduced to build situations and climaxes. The director will have to answer for presenting mountain backgrounds in the flat country of Indiana. Again he has selected a city which furnishes atmosphere contrary to the ideas exploited in the book. The movie conception of small town life is introduced when the mob greets the heroine at the station after a sojourn in Paris. Again the scene which shows the howling mob led by the dignified Judge Pike, the scalawag of the story, chasing a dog and breaking into a courtroom is contrary to good form.

To judge from the captions and the manner in which the plot is treated one is led to believe that small town life is being exposed. Then the sponsors lose touch with the logic by presenting a fair sized city. The inhabitants of such a place would not act so "movieish" as the director would have them here. The heroine is almost neglected which is also contrary to the novel. She formed a vital character toward the moulding of the much abused Louden. The picture certainly misses fire, there being little drama and the incident thoroughly out of order. Besides the action is allowed to drag. Much more could have been made from the Pike reception and other details might have been emphasized. The book furnished keen satire and no small amount of humor. This note is almost negligible here. There is too much generalization and not enough intimate incident detailing character development.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PROGRAM READER

Booth Tarkington's memorable story of the small city youth who was condemned by his fellow natives, but who was resolved to keep his head up and show them that he had character has reached the screen. "The Conquest of Canaan" is one of the author's cleverest novels, and it also makes one of the cleverest pictures of the year. All the fine sentiment, charm, pathos, humor and romance are intact in this feature which stars Thomas Meighan in the role of the ne'er-do-well. It is a picture which is certain to arouse the interest of everyone. There is a homely quality about it that conquers. Doris Kenyon is the leading woman. Next ———— at this ————.

SUGGESTIONS

You can link up with your bookdealer in exploiting this picture. By all means take advantage of Tarkington's popularity with the fiction reading public. Spread his name broadcast. Also play up Meighan, who has here a role different from anything he has heretofore attempted. Bill it as a classic of small town life. Play up the plot. A male quartette singing the old songs would make an effective prologue. State that Doris Kenyon is in the cast as leading woman. Bill it as a fascinating romance of small city life—one that conquers for its sympathy and appeal. The names of the star and author is your best angle for advertising.

CATCH LINES

"STRAIGHT FROM PARIS"
(Equity Pictures-State Rights)

Well-Mounted Production Makes Satisfactory Entertainment

ANOTHER of the Clara Kimball Young series, the successor to "Hush," comes to the exhibitor as an example of satisfactory audience entertainment, which should nowhere draw less than the average receipts and in many places, in the neighborhood and shopping district houses, for instance, a great deal better. Director Harry Garson knows well the capabilities of the statuesque star. She never steps out of the latest gowns nor out of the highest society. And she is, in Sada Cowan's story, once more the ultra-perfect woman, almost childish in her innocence, and quite the most kind-hearted and generous soul in the world.

No picture could be more perfectly mounted, from a box-office, if not from a true-to-reality standpoint. There are ocean liner salons, a fashionable millinery shop, ballroom scenes, dining room sets, and a remarkable eighteen century court scene, which are used to prove the aristocracy of the forebears of the twentieth century milliner back in the golden days of France.

Miss Cowan's story does not tread upon the same dangerous ground as did "Hush." As finally cut, there can be few if any grumblings from the censor, and this is simply because of one scene. The theme is unimpeachable. The heir of an aristocratic New York family falls in love with the French-American milliner. But the prospective mother-in-law is a snob, and calls the girl an upstart. The star's noble character, however, wins for her more than one admirer, and her sweetheart's uncle, while loving her himself, is willing to make her happy by smoothing the way to a peaceful marriage with his nephew. There is one puzzling situation. The snobbish old lady threatens to cut off her son without a penny should he marry the milliner, but it later develops that this woman is herself dependent upon the magnanimous uncle. The nephew is a philanderer and the girl breaks her engagement to be won by the uncle. There is some suspense, since the nephew is shown in the first part of the picture to be a mild type of roue.

The story is not nearly as dramatic as some of the star's previous offerings, but we do not believe that it will suffer from this. If it moves along slowly towards the end, it will never lose the interest, of a feminine patronage at least, because of its lavish settings and costuming. Bertram Grassby is the fickle-minded lover and William P. Carleton the generous Uncle John. The star presents her usual personality which has won her such a high place in filmdom, and such a large following.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The chief attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— is "Straight From Paris," written by Sada Cowan and starring Clara Kimball Young. Miss Cowan will be remembered as the author of "Hush," a previous story in which Miss Young starred, and her newest photoplay gives the emotional actress another opportunity to flash her abundant talent in a role which calls for a display of the newest styles in Parisian finery. The picture is one which interests throughout because of its generous amount of compelling situations—situations which give Miss Young an opportunity to win sympathy from the spectator.

"Straight from Paris" may be called a typical Clara Kimball Young offering. It certainly will be enthused over by her following and will establish hundreds of new friends. Prominent in the supporting cast are Bertram Grassby, William P. Carleton, Betty Francisco, Thomas Jefferson and Gerald Alexander—players who have been wisely selected for the demands of the story. Harry Garson directed. The picture is marked for its atmosphere of good taste.

PROGRAM READER

One of the few emotional actresses of the screen is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— when "Straight from Paris" will be shown. Clara Kimball Young is the star and she has in this powerful and compelling drama, a picture which permits her to show her abundant talent for emotional expression. In the role of Lucette she not only has a role for which she is ideally suited but which enables her to show why she is called one of the best dressed women of the screen. The feminine patrons of the ———— are certain to become enraptured over the display of stylish raiment which adorns the colorful star. The picture is interesting and well acted by a cast that includes Bertram Grassby, Thomas Jefferson and William P. Carleton.

SUGGESTIONS

Clara Kimball Young has had several good pictures of late, the most recent being "Hush" and "Charge It." The newest offering, "Straight from Paris," is of the same high calibre and you can state that it enables the star to flash her abundant talent for emotional expression. Play up the title and make use of the opportunity to link up with modiste shops. Ask your patrons what it is that comes straight from Paris. Ask them to come and see the latest styles from the boulevards. There is an excellent chance to cooperate with fashion shops and millinery. Play up the picture as a fascinating drama which is certain to interest every type of patron. Mention that William P. Carleton is in the cast. You can offer a prologue showing a fashion display.

"AN UNWILLING HERO"
(Goldwyn)

Will Rogers at His Best—Undeniably High-Class Light Comedy

MANY of O. Henry's short stories of twenty years ago, when transcribed to the screen, made rather dull entertainment to all except those to whom the story and the style of the writer were pleasingly familiar. If there is a dull moment in "An Unwilling Hero" we failed to find it. But it is a case of Will Rogers stealing the honors from the author. Give O. Henry credit for conceiving the character of "Whistling Dick," the musical hobo, but all honor and glory to the Goldwyn star who makes him live on the screen.

It is a case of Rogers scoring again in the type of picture which he has created. The star has no romance. He does not step out of character to fall in love and settle down to the quiet life. In the end he is still the good-natured, ragged, work-avoiding, whistling hobo, as he ambles down the lane away from the family he has saved from robbery and which seeks to foist upon him labor, and Saturday night baths, and snug respectability.

It is difficult to choose between Will Rogers and his titles. Certainly the New York audience appreciated to the fullest Rogers' powers as a humorous writer. From the time the shivering tramp looks heavenward at the flock of wild geese flying southward over New England and says "Just to show that I have as much intelligence as those geese, I'm going south too," up to the time when he exclaims "I'm one of the few men that prohibition hasn't driven to drink," the titles are exhilarating in their originality. Not one is trite or forced.

The story could well be told in a few lines. A hobo, going to the winter rendezvous of his tribe in Louisiana, discovers his companions plotting to rob a family which has befriended him. He cannot show his gratitude by accepting the offer of employment tendered him by these people, but he does frustrate the plans of the hoboes. This is the climax. That which follows is considerable and entirely unnecessary to the plot, but it is entertaining because of Rogers and his titles. It shows Rogers trying to avoid the ordeal of a bath, and his friends trying to force it upon him. There is a touch of romance between the girl of the family and the foreman of the plantation. It is negligible, but adds the necessary zest. This slim plot is surrounded with excellent incidents. A pugnacious bulldog furnishes plenty of fun. Although assured that the dog is harmless, the tramp instinct in "Whistling Dick" warns him to beat a retreat at the first opportunity.

The cast with the star is excellent, with Molly Malone as the girl. Director Clarence Badger has found perfect exteriors. The New Orleans scenes appear to be taken in that city. Certainly they could not be better. "An Unwilling Hero" is the best example of a Will Rogers picture, departing from the traditions of the "handsome hero" type of production, yet containing rich entertainment for an appreciative audience.—Length, 5 reels. —Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The ———— theatre will offer a new Will Rogers' picture as the feature attraction on ————. It is entitled "An Unwilling Hero," and it is a screen adaptation of one of O. Henry's most famous stories, "Whistling Dick's Christmas Stocking." Mr. Rogers will have the distinction, when the history of the American screen is written, of being not only one of its leading actors, but one of the most appreciated humorists as well. Ever since the days when he won fame for his monologue delivered at "The Follies" on Broadway, this star has been considered one of the quaintest humorists that America has produced. His titles in "An Unwilling Hero" are an example of the most appealing and exquisite comedy.

O. Henry has furnished a character in the care-free musical hobo which no one else but Will Rogers could interpret. The tribe of hobos is not extinct. The clan still survives. And this story illustrates perfectly the life of the hobo. In the winter they go South. In the spring they wander through New England. The adventures of "Whistling Dick" makes excellent entertainment. There is a wealth of humor, not a little romance and a tingle of thrilling adventure which makes an excellent climax. The picture will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

The ———— theatre will offer another Will Rogers' picture on ————, ————, and ————. This time his newest, and, according to many, his best, is entitled "An Unwilling Hero" and it is a screen adaptation of O. Henry's story, "Whistling Dick's Christmas Stocking." Coupling O. Henry's art of character building and plot construction, with Will Rogers' delineation and quaint humor in the subtitles, makes a combination that is hard to beat. If Charlie Chaplin created the slapstick vagabond, Will Rogers is sponsor for the happy-go-lucky, carefree hobo type of screen hero. Here he is cast as "Whistling Dick," a wandering tramp with a natural, undying hatred of work, which he calls "the curse of the world."

We consider this one of the most attractive and high-class comedies which we have ever offered to our patrons. We believe you will thoroughly enjoy the clean and human comedy of the story, the acting and the titling.

CATCH LINES

"Whistling Dick" was a musical hobo. Give him the grass under his feet and a song on his lips and Dick was happy. But sometimes strange adventure comes into the life of even a harmless tramp. This is one of Will Rogers' best pictures.

O. Henry might have been living today and written this story directly for Will Rogers. Certainly that quaint character of "Whistling Dick," the musical hobo, lives again on the screen in this latest Will Rogers picture.

"THE MAN WHO"
(Metro)

Rather Novel Idea Plays Out Through Lack of Variety

BERT LYTELL has quite a novel plot in his latest expression, "The Man Who," written by Lloyd Osborne. It is of farcical pretensions, and furnishes some amusement in a mild sort of way for three reels, after which it falters because there is no variety of incident or detail. The idea may be said to be rather timely in that it is an expose of profiteering among shoe dealers. Before the action swings into its stride the scenes are taken up with effective planting of ridicule for the superior society dames who tolerated and patronized "our heroes" during the war for the sake of getting a mild thrill under the cloak of patriotism.

The forepart of the story is much more interesting because it offers clever satire. When the snobbish girl refuses to encourage the hero because he is not a man who accomplishes big deeds, he resolves to publicize himself by playing the "nut" up and down the streets of New York, going barefoot and wearing top hat, cane, a swagger muffler and overcoat. It is his argument that he will walk on hot coals in preference to buying high priced shoes. But his appearance is not consistent with his fine ideals. He attracts a crowd and gets his name in the papers. However, a constant repetition of scenes which never vary in detail or incident makes the action monotonous and there is no question about the offering becoming tedious after a time.

The romance does not have much of a chance, but is presented for the final fade-out and some scenes immediately preceding it. The girl in the next apartment happens to be the daughter of the head of the shoe trust. And she encourages him with no display of ultra-snobbishness. She finally takes to the avenue with him, sans shoes, and is forgiven by father eventually. The picture carries strong burlesque possibilities and should have been played more broadly. But the director has allowed it to become heavy by introducing a serious slant occasionally. The last two reels and a half are filled up with Lytell's excursions and his ability to arouse excitement with the curious pedestrians. There is no variation, and the lack of incident is noticeable in the manner in which the players are allowed to overact in putting over the pep. Lytell is seldom at ease, which may be said for many of the others. Lucy Cotton catches the spirit of the haughty girl in a fairly adequate manner, while Tammany Young crashes into the picture for a vivid bit as a doughboy. The picture is snappy enough and keeps moving after a fashion, and there is an abundance of creditable atmosphere. Had it been broadly satirized and more incident incorporated it would prove far more entertaining.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Bert Lytell is the star of "The Man Who," the Lloyd Osborne story which originally appeared in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post, and which has been adapted to the screen next ———— and ————. The offering is said to furnish Mr. Lytell with a role which permits him to show his histrionic capabilities. The star plays Bedford Mills whose ambition to become a Man Who is inspired by his desire to win the favor of Helen Jessup, daughter of an old New York family, who has no use for men who are just "nice and ordinary."

So Beddy, as he is commonly called, decides to go about faultlessly dressed, except that his feet are always bare as a protest against the high prices of shoes. Going barefoot into exclusive social circles produces amusing complications and gives Lytell a chance to prove that he is as fully talented in interpreting serio-comic roles as in roles that call for serious or dramatic expression. On the screen the picture may be called a spirited and swiftly moving comedy-romance. In the cast are the personable Lucy Cotton, Frank Currier and Virginia Valli.

PROGRAM READER

Bert Lytell in a new picture! That's the attraction we offer you as the feature in our program beginning ————. The popular Metro star, who has established a large following through years of successful pictures, will be seen in a role which will be acknowledged by many as the most conspicuous success of his career. It is a different role—one which shows that the star is equally at home in satirical studies as in the expression of serious interpretations. The new picture is "The Man Who," adapted from a popular magazine story. It tells of the adventures of a young man who delighted in going barefoot in the exclusive circles of society. Did he shock them? Did he lift them out of their boredom? See this swiftly moving romance and be royally entertained.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that Lytell is coming in a role which is vastly different from anything he has heretofore interpreted. Bill it as a swiftly moving and spirited romance—one that affords plenty of amusement. Tell that it upsets traditions—that it offers moments of unadulterated fun in the figure of the young man who defied conventions by going barefoot in society. Play up the value of the Lytell name and announce the principal members of the cast. Lucy Cotton, Virginia Valli and Frank Currier have names which should mean something at the box office. You can put over some effective bally-hoo stunts if you go in for that style of exploitation. A barefoot man may be employed. Also link up with the younger generation by asking the barefoot boys to enjoy your show. Run a teaser campaign.

"LOVETIME"
(Fox)

Sugary and Conventional Romance Ideal for Shirley Mason

SHIRLEY MASON'S screen expressions are coming out on schedule and according to formula. There is no great amount of substance to any of them, which is natural considering the ingenue appeal of the star. Her personality and talent are such that she would look out of place in pictures of sterner stuff. So "Lovetime" may be called ideal for the expression of her charm. The picture would look better compressed into three reels since it carries no strong dramatic moments and what high lights there are are used repeatedly.

One may be safe in calling it a conventional romance—the plot revolving around a peasant girl of a province in France and a young aristocrat of the Paris boulevards—a youth posing as an artist and living incognito in the immediate vicinity of her home. To give away his identity would be placing himself in a false light since the heroine might become frightened in hobnobbing with the aristocracy. For the purposes of movie conflict, an uncle of the youth, represented as lacking in moral fibre, pursues her through four reels for the sake of compromising her into some sort of romantic intrigue. And a counter conflict is brought forth in the up-stage manner of the youth's mother, who looks with horror upon her son capitulating to the charms of the pretty peasant. And the latter has her troubles with her own people who do not look with favor upon her romance since they cannot conceive that the hero means any good toward their little Marie.

The action opens upon a pretty pastoral shot of the youth sketching a landscape when the heroine passes before him. He stops his daubing and feels the love-call immediately. The subsequent scenes establish the mild conflicts. The lecherous uncle has his moments, as well as the native son who realizes that his childhood sweetheart has given her affection to another. The scene is set for the grand compromise when the hero enters and spoils it all. He journeys back to Savoy and receives the family blessing.

The picture carries good atmosphere and some genuinely appealing pastoral shots. These are made the most of by the director who has appreciated the fact that the exteriors must counterbalance the frail plot. It is a picture in which the good people are unduly virtuous and the villain sharply contrasted. Edwin B. Tilton played the character in a heavy, impossible manner much after the style of the old-fashioned "curse you Jack Dalton" heroics. He acted all over the place. A pretty title and a winsome star—these will attract them on double feature day.—Length, 4,800 feet.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A simple story of love in an old world atmosphere—a sweet and tender romance in the province of Savoy with the principals, a peasant girl and an impressionable aristocrat who paints for diversion. That is "Lovetime," which comes next ———— starring dainty Shirley Mason. It is an ideal role, the figure of Marie Gautier, who dwells among the Savoy hills and placid streams. An ideal spot for the expression of youthful romance. No wonder that Arthur de Sivry felt enchanted. He did not advise her of his high station of life. To do so would have been fatal, since she would have felt out of place.

He encouraged her to go to Paris to become a model. And Marie encounters strange experiences—experiences which might have brought disaster had she been equipped with less character. The settings and environment of the story are superb in that they suggest quietude and charm. In the supporting cast are Raymond McKee, Harold Goodwin and Edwin B. Tilton.

PROGRAM READER

Among the hills and placid streams of Savoy, that romantic province of France, is laid the story of Shirley Mason's newest photoplay entitled "Lovetime," which is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The dainty and charming star has a most fascinating romance in this pretty picture which permits her to display her winsome personality in a role which exudes sentiment and youthful ordor. The star plays a peasant girl who finds herself in love with a young aristocrat posing as an obscure artist. Little does she know that his station in life is far superior to hers. The romance is tinctured with moments of dramatic conflict. But the course of true love runs smoothly in the end. See "Lovetime," a picture of love and summertime.

SUGGESTIONS

The title is attractive and ideal for Shirley Mason and should be exploited for its value in arousing sentiment and romance. Use simple melodies and love themes in your orchestral arrangement. Tell that it offers a fine, sweet romance in an old world atmosphere—an atmosphere which exudes charm and sentiment. Bring forth the argument that love is heard around the world but has no finer expression than is shown in the quaint province of Savoy where life is lived in sweet contentment. Bill it as an ideal Shirley Mason offering and stage a prologue—a boy and girl number in some old-fashioned song.

"THE GOLDEN SNARE"
(Curwood-Hartford-First National)

Old-fashioned Formula Is a Good Bet for Hot Weather

THE much overworked pattern of the Northwest Mounted policeman who always "gets his man" is lugged out the well-worn cubby-hole of the producer's desk. "The Golden Snare" is another of Curwood's favorite plots—a plot which is nothing but a variation of dozens of others. Having been served up so often in various guises, the spectator has no occasion to be placed in a suspensive state of mind. He will react to the exceptional atmosphere particularly during the dog days, because of the vast expanse of snow and the far off white spaces of the Northwest, which certainly make one feel twenty degrees cooler.

"The Golden Snare" may be catalogued as just a motion picture of average merit. The action violates logic throughout and there is flashed scene after scene of hectic physical action. But in its favor is exceptional acting. Trust Wallace Beery to make a role stand out vividly and richly melodramatic. He literally walks away with the bonors despite the fact that Lewis Stone is the best interpreter of the Mounted on the screen. His is a role which calls for sympathy and he makes it doubly appealing through playing it in a manner which suggests the deepest pathos. According to the plot he is represented as being half-mad since leaving civilization. The overwhelming silences of the North, the expanse of white snow, the all conquering climatic conditions have seen to that. Twenty years before he had gone to the rescue of his father and killed a number of Officers. So the most intrepid policeman is entrusted with the mission of bringing him back, dead or alive.

One knows for a certainty that the Mounted will be influenced by romance. And in introducing this important element the director bas found occasion to incorporate a note of mystery. The girl's identity is hidden until the picture is nearly over. One does not know whether she is a relative or sweetheart until a flashback presents her as a ward. There is a counter conflict brought forth in the villainous tactics of a northern bandit who is desirous of winning the girl away from the mad man by fair means or foul. But the conflict of duty versus love never once enters into the scheme. Tbe policeman is rescued by the girl and she adopts the foundling. And the subsequent scenes between the three are devoid of rugged melodrama. The picture offers a number of punch scenes, however, in the fights between the melancholy figure of the lone trapper and his vicious enemy. These are emphasized through a play of knife and fist. The pathetic hero succumbs in the end through injuries. The picture is marked for its exceptional snow stuff. It carries all the familiar ingredients—huskies, fights, atmosphere, primitive scenes—ingredients which will make it entirely acceptable.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The picture offers tense moments because of its primitive action. It also offers moments of pathos and sympathy through the character of Bram Johnson, excellently played by Mr. Beery—a figure sought for by the Mounted for a crime enacted twenty years previously. It is a picture which presents strong and rugged men, vital situations, huskies which race over the white mantle of snow, trappers who mush through the white expanse, and thrills and startling climaxes.

PROGRAM READER

Husky men who fight hard and live life to its fullest expression; husky dogs that carry the white man's burden over the white reaches of snow and fight to protect the hand that feeds them; intrepid trappers who fight and love fiercely; fearless minions of the law in search of their human prey—these are all assembled in James Oliver Curwood's vital story of the great Northwest—a story of love and vengeance, pathos and courage as only he can write it. That is "The Golden Snare" which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that features Wallace Beery and Lewis Stone. It is a picture with exceptional backgrounds. Come and be royally entertained.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this is an exceptional snow picture it would be a good angle if you play it at the present time to feature the snow stuff, as calculated to make the temperature cooler. Play up the fact that the chance has arrived to enjoy cool weather. Play up that it is an excellent hot weather attraction. Since most spectators are familiar with Curwood's work by this time, it would be a good bet to feature him and to play up the fact that he has no superior in the writing of stories of the Canadian Northwest. Tell that it is as vivid and vital as anything he has ever written. Play up Beery and Stone. And feature the snow. Have a male quartette garbed in the uniform of the Northwest Mounted sing some appropriate number.

CATCH LINES

See "The Golden Snare," a smashing, vital picture of the Canadian Northwest. A picture of strong vivid drama and charged with thrills and startling climaxes.

EVENTUALLY—WHY NOT NOW?

BEBE DANIELS in "The March Hare" is certain to be a box-office success. The popularity of the star and the unquestioned excellence of the film itself assure it. Nevertheless REAL ART PICTURES have made that success doubly certain by adding a RITCHEY twenty-four sheet stand for the picture's exploitation.

Which naturally suggests the following question: If such a play as this, with such a star, requires a RITCHEY twenty-four sheet, how can the ordinary feature be put over without a similar box-office aid?

One Big Clean Laugh Every Week in the Year

SAYS M. P. WORLD, speaking of BROWNIE, the Wonder-dog, in "SOCIETY DOGS": "New stuff and a lot doing make this a fine comedy. Get this if you want your people to laugh. The dog is good—he is almost human and, what is rarer than that, he is funny. He may truly be called the 'Charlie Chaplin of the animal kingdom'—Charlie won't mind when he sees him. You will want more pictures of this dog after you have seen this one."

RNEY'S END"

What the New York Newspapers Say

New York American:

The chance to use your imagination may be found at the Capitol Theatre where a picture called "The Journey's End" is filmed without titles. This is done very ingeniously, for your imagination must supply all the "explanations."

Photographically, "The Journey's End" is one of the most beautiful pictures I have ever seen. I think that the final episodes, which take place in the catacombs of Rome, are simply gorgeous. Having explored these catacombs—in the casual way permitted to tourists—the scenes interested me immensely, and there must be thousands to whom they will be equally interesting.

New York Sun:

THERE is a novelty feature at the Capitol this week. It is a photoplay called "The Journey's End," adapted from the story "Ave Maria," and the tale is unfolded without sub-titles.

It is a decided relief from the type of photo play that is burdened with a multitude of obvious titles. The photography is excellent and Miss Ballin made a pretty and pleasing heroine.

New York Times:

HUGO BALLIN'S second production "The Journey's End" is at the Capitol this week. It calls for attention first as a photoplay without sub-titles.

"The Journey's End" is significant and valuable, far more so than nine out of every ten pictures that come along. The story becomes real. It is genuine. It holds the interest.

New York Commercial:

"JOURNEY'S END" at Capitol. A motion picture that is intelligent, dramatic and colorful and whose throbbing little story is unfolded swiftly and with perfect continuity without the aid of a single sub-title.

New York Tribune:

"THE JOURNEY'S END," the perfect picture without titles He has established localities and time without a single sub-title or without one's feeling the lack of them. Mr. Ballin is a director with imagination and he had made a beautiful picture.

Mabel Ballin as the Girl is exquisitely beautiful, and she gives a performance which is full of appeal.

George Bancroft as the Ironworker gives a gorgeous performance.

New York Herald:

Hugo Ballin made an interesting experiment at the Capitol yesterday afternoon in "The Journey's End." The picture succeeded one another without the sub-titles to explain the story. Yet the departure was an entire success. It is no more difficult to understand "The Journey's End" than it is the ordinary picture play.

New York Telegraph:

WHEN we reviewed Hugo Ballin's "The Journey's End" at a private showing a few weeks ago we believed it to be one of the finest photoplays seen in some time. We are still of the same opinion, if not more so. As the featured attraction of the Capitol bill this week it affords unusually fine entertainment.

The picture is one that will long be remembered by all who are fortunate enough to see it.

New York Journal:

THIS picture is the first serious drama created without a single sub-title, representing a striking novelty in the art of moving pictures, and when this is coupled with the fact that viewed from an artistic standpoint, the picture presents several scenes that are charming to the eye, one realizes why the Capitol Theatre Management was anxious to book the film.

The cast is a splendid one. Mabel Ballin in the leading feminine role leaves nothing to be desired.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXIV JULY 30, 1921 No. VI

A Fair Exchange

WE print in this issue the text of a cablegram to President Harding from Lieut.-Colonel A. C. Bromhead of London, who speaks for the motion picture producing industry in Great Britain.

It is an appeal, and a sound one, against a prohibitive tariff on foreign pictures.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has already made clear its position in this matter.

The problem we regard as one of the most serious now facing the American industry.

And we are whole-mindedly against a tariff that will prohibit the importation in this country of foreign films.

Such an act by Congress will not only deal a serious and probably an unbearable commercial blow to the American producing and distributing industries but it will rob American theatres of pictures the public expects to see and furthermore, and for the first time in history, put provincial barriers around an art of expression.

Today there is no commercial menace from the foreign picture; no firm's business and no indivdual's livelihood has been affected in the slightest degree. A larger supply of marketable foreign pictures might to some extent, and temporarily, have such an effect. But these are mighty small matters not even to be considered in view of the common good and the true aim of this art and industry.

There is the large problem of the American producer and distributor who cannot afford, by reciprocal action from abroad, to lose his foreign market.

But the biggest commercial aspect is simply this: If the American public wants interesting foreign pictures—and it certainly does, because it wants interesting pictures—then the American industry wants foreign pictures, because its prosperity is directly and largely dependent upon the American box-office.

Stick to the Ship

IT is decidedly refreshing to find in a morning's mail three letters which laugh at the calamity howler and the spineless quitter.

One is from a big city exhibitor who says he is running two air-domes and making money as never before in his ten years exhibiting experience.

One is from a mid-west city where times have been none too good. An 1800 seat house "stood 'em out" Sunday night, Monday matinees and Friday night. How? By special, yet inexpensive advertising. The letter concludes with:

"A lobby display of large cut-outs, circles and comedy one and three sheets make them reach in their pockets for the money and enter the theatre. Mix comedy with your serious pictures and you'll get them in."

And just so the alibi-users won't jump to the bat we pass on quickly to the third letter—from Dallas, Texas, where a good man is smiling in the face of about the stiffest odds we've heard of.

The letter is from Ed Foy of the Foy neighborhood theatres.

In the parks adjoining these theatres the Park Board of Dallas is giving 220 free shows and forty band concerts a month, entertaining, so the Board claims, three quarters of a million people a month.

"But," says Mr. Foy, "regardless of present burdens or any additional ones that may appear we expect to weather the storm and this coming Fall and Winter get our share of the business. This is no time to quit the ship."

We've got some Foys in this business; but we need a lot more.

Plan Is to Raise Funds for Industry's Defence and for Charities

Eleven motion picture producing and distributing companies, and exhibitors throughout the country are to ally in designating August 25 as Motion Picture Day. The campaign to make the day a notable occasion was started this week when exchange managers were notified to canvass their territories for the full co-operation of the exhibitors.

"The exchanges, on August 25, will give free screen service to all exhibitors who will contribute 50 per cent of their receipts on that day to a general fund. The fund will be used for two purposes—to finance the necessary co-operative work for the protection of the motion picture industry, and to contribute to worthy charities and humanitarian relief funds, thus avoiding, as far as possible, solicitations for such purposes in motion picture theatres."

General managers and sales managers met on Thursday of last week in New York and agreed upon a uniform campaign plan for distributors and producers. The meeting was attended by Edward M. Saunders, general sales manager of Metro Pictures Corporation; Morris Kohn, president, Realart Pictures Corporation; Charles R. Rogers, general manager Robertson - Cole Distribution Corporation; Henry Ginsberg, general sales manager, Educational Film Exchanges; J. H. Siedelman, assistant general manager, Associated Producers; Gabriel Hess, vice president, Goldwyn Picture Corporation; H. B. Ballance, general sales manager, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Charles C. Pettijohn, who originated the Motion Picture Day plan. Other companies, not represented at Thursday's meeting, are reported to have endorsed the plan and instructed the branch managers to set the campaign in motion in their territories, are Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Fox Film Corporation and Triangle Distributing Corporation.

A Special General Managers Committee has been organized with Mr. Saunders as chairman. Each State will have its own Motion Picture Protective Committee, composed of nine exhibitors and three exchange men. The exhibitors will elect their own representatives.

The funds raised will be turned over to the State committees. Two-thirds will be retained under control of the exhibitors in the State committees, and one-third will be sent to the Motion Picture Protective Committee in New York, which is composed of producers and exhibitors.

Exchange representatives have been advised to arrange meetings with prominent exhibitors, forming joint working committees. The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will be requested to co-operate in exploitation of Motion Picture Day and publicity and exploitation men will be asked by Chairman Saunders to boost the plan.

Exhibitors will be urged to give extra performances and to enlist the co-operation of local Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army and other relief organizations in obtaining big attendance, so that the fund from which such organizations may subsequently get assistance will be as large as possible.

In cases where the motion picture to be exhibited has been paid for in advance, credit memorandums for Motion Picture Day rentals will be issued to the exhibitors, it is explained.

The agreement to be signed by the exchange and the theatre managements, under the plan to make August 25 "Motion Picture Day," reads as follows:

"PLAN"

"In order to further the cooperative handling of the industry's problems and to do away with the frequent solicitations of relief organizations in motion picture theatres, it is proposed to designate one day each year to be known as MOTION PICTURE DAY.

"On this day it is proposed to secure funds for the above purposes in the following manner:

"I. Producers and Distributors of motion pictures to furnish gratis their film service to theatre which participate in the plan.

"II. Exhibitors who receive such free film service to donate fifty per cent of their gross receipts on Motion Picture Day.

"The specific purposes for which such funds will be used are:

"I. To finance the necessary cooperative work for the protection of the motion picture industry.

"II. To contribute to worthy charities and humanitarian relief funds, thus avoiding, so far as possible, the solicitations for such purposes in motion picture theatres.

"For the present year, Thursday, August 25th, has been designated as Motion Picture Day.

"ORGANIZATION"

"The organization plan provides for the appointment in each state of a Motion Picture Protective Committee to be composed of twelve members, nine of whom are to be Exhibitors and three of whom are to be Exchange men, representing participating, Producing and Distributing companies in such state. If it is found desirable in certain states to increase or decrease the size of such state committee, the ratio of Exhibitor and Exchange representation to remain the same.

"For the purpose of contact and communication, each state Motion Picture Protective Committee to designate a Chairman, who will represent the committee in all matters pertaining to Motion Picture Day in that state.

"ADMINISTRATION"

"On the day immediately following Motion Picture Day, each Exhibitor participating in this plan to send to the office of the Exchange which has furnished his feature picture for the Motion Picture Day performances, a check representing fifty per cent of his gross receipts for Motion Picture Day, less admissions tax. This check to be made payable to the designated Motion Picture Protective Committee Chairman in his state. The Exchange Manager, upon receipt of the check, to immediately deliver it to the Motion Picture Protective Committee Chairman and the latter to acknowledge its receipt in duplicate, to the Exhibitor and the Exchange Manager.

"Exhibitors who do not ordinarily run matinees on this date are urged to open their theatres earlier than usual and to give the greatest possible number of performances.

"In some instances where film has been paid for in advance by an Exhibitor, a credit memorandum for the Motion Picture Day rental will be issued by the Exchange to the Exhibitor.

"Fifty per cent of the gross receipts for all performances given on Motion Picture Day, less admissions tax, shall be accounted for to the state Chairman.

"One-third of the funds so raised in each state to be remitted by the respective state Chairman to the Chairman of the Motion Picture Protective Committee in New York (representing the participating Producers and Distributors) for the purpose of protecting the motion picture industry.

"Two-thirds of the funds raised in each state to remain with the Motion Picture Protective Committee of that state, to be expended for the purposes set forth as the state Motion Picture Protective Committee may determine.

"All requests for 'drives,' contributions, donations or cooperation nationally with organizations of charitable or humanitarian character to be referred to the Motion Picture Protective Committee for disposition in each state.

Selznick Opens New Offices in Australian Territory

With plans which have been in work for a number of months practically completed, Lewis J. Selznick, president of the Selznick Corp., has just announced an important extension of the Selznick business in far-off Australia. Select Pictures Corp., the distributing branch of the Selznick enterprises, has just opened three large and completely equipped offices in the Antipodes—one at Perth, West Australia; another at Adelaide, South Australia, and the third at Brisbane, Queensland. Added to the two Select branches established a long time ago in Sydney, New South Wales, and Melbourne, Victoria, the three new offices make a total of five distributing branches.

The actual work of organizing the Australian territory has been under the supervision of E. C. Steuler, of the Selznick offices in New York City. Mr. Steuler, who joined the Selznick forces a year or more ago as an efficiency expert, was sent out to work with John Corbett Jones, who has been general manager of the Australian division of Select Pictures Corp. for some time.

Educational's Branch-Managers Hold Convention in Chicago

E. W. Hammons Introduces A. S. Kirkpatrick as Ass't Gen'l-Manager

THE annual convention of the branch managers of the Education Films Corporation of America opened at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, Ill., on Monday, July 18. The business sessions continued throughout Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. During the course of the convention, E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Films, introduced A. S. Kirkpatrick to the assembled managers as the recently appointed assistant general manager of Educational Films. Up until recently Mr. Kirkpatrick had been associated with Robertson-Cole as general manager of the division of films.

The convention was opened at 10:30 A. M., on Monday, with a roll call of the branch managers. Mr. Hammons addressed the managers at the afternoon session. He began his speech by reference to the discouraging comments which met his determination a year ago to organize an international organization for the distribution of short subjects exclusively.

"Just a year ago they were saying we were crazy," said Mr. Hammons. "They told us it couldn't be done. Short subjects had always been handled merely as a side line; as a sort of necessary evil. The distributor did not ask enough for them to enable the producer to develop a real quality in the shorter pictures. They were just 'fillers,' and with so little attention paid to them the short subjects were usually of the quality that might be expected under the circumstances.

"We were able to see, however, that it was not only the so-called feature that the patrons of a theatre went to see. Many of them were keenly disappointed with two out of every three 'features' they witnessed. Yet they continued to go to the theatre because they could usually hope for instruction, enjoyment and amusement from the short subjects—the travel pictures, scenics, comedies, news reels.

"The folly of the exhibitor putting all his eggs in one basket seemed apparent. When his 'long' 'feature' failed to please, as it frequently did, what was he to do unless his short subjects could take the curse off the bad 'feature.'

"A diversified programme, one with pleasure and amusement for all, seemed the wise, the logical solution. But how could a diversified programme that the exhibitor would be proud to present be arranged if there was nobody in the producing and distributing branches of the industry to see the wisdom of giving serious thought to the development and improvement, in subject matter, direction and photography, of the short pictures?

"So while the know-it-alls who 'had been in the game for years and knew it couldn't be done' talked on, we started out to improve the quality of these one and two-reel subjects, trying to get a return fair enough so that the producer could afford to go to greater expense in making his pictures.

"It was not very many months before the result began to be apparent. The producers acquired greater faith in us, and knowing that the better the quality of each picture they turned out the greater was going to be the return, they stopped holding before them as the highest consideration the saving of every cent possible at the expense of beauty and effect in their pictures, and began to have an ideal—an ideal of quality and service.

"The results of the first year's efforts have been most pleasing. Distribution of our product has shown a steady improvement. As to the quality of the pictures, Christie, for example, never made before his association with Educational anything to compare with the comedies he has produced in the last few months. It is the same way with the other producers.

"We have found it necessary at the beginning of our second year to add in great measure to our products. To the Christie Comedies, Mermaid Comedies, Torchy Comedies, Robert C. Bruce Scenics, Chester Outings and other subjects which we have released in the last year we have added Punch Comedies, with casts including some of the best known comedy stars in the country; a series of two-reel dramatic photoplays from Selig-Rork, which already, with only one theatre showing and the private showings in our projection room, give signs of meeting with an enthusiastic reception, and other subjects. Among these are Sketchographs, a splendid example of animated cartoon by Julian Ollendorff. Within the last few days we have contracted for a series of Toonerville Trolley Comedies."

Mr. Hammons talked also of his ideals for the sales organization.

"It is not enough merely to sign up contracts for our pictures," said Mr. Hammons. "The trouble with most businesses is that they have gotten into a rut. When we merely tell an exhibitor a picture is so much, and ask him to sign on the dotted line, and takes his check, we, too, are getting into a rut. Let's get out of it. Let's be of service to the exhibitor, the man who buys our product. Show him how he can make use of our short subjects to better advantage. Give him a good exploitation idea now and then. Tell him how he can hook his various pictures up to best advantage. Let us look to his interests, too."

Among the others in the Educational organization who made addresses were Henry Ginsberg, for the domestic sales department; J. W. O'Mahoney, for the department of advertising and publicity; Carl Anderson, for the distributing organization, and A. S. Kirkpatrick, the new assistant general manager.

Mr. Kirkpatrick has been identified with the motion picture industry in an executive capacity for more than seven years, and in this time has dealt extensively with every phase of the business end of production and distribution. He entered the industry with the Colorado Motion Picture Company of Denver as production manager, and from there went to Metro. In 1915 he became identified with the Mutual Film Corporation of Chicago, and joined the Robertson-Cole staff in May, 1919.

After considerable experience as production manager early in his motion picture career, Mr. Kirkpatrick was in the sales end for some time, and from that went to general managership.

"The extensive experience and wide knowledge of the exhibitor and his needs which Mr. Kirkpatrick brings with him," said Mr. Hammons, "are of inestimable value to Educational. He is one of the keenest thinkers and one of the most far seeing men in the managerial end of the industry today."

Before taking up his duties at Educational's headquarters, Mr. Kirkpatrick made an extensive tour of the Eastern states, investigating conditions in the motion picture industry. Mr. Kirkpatrick described his recent tour and the observations he had made during the course of his short talk to the branch managers at the convention.

THAT British film manufacturers are anxiously awaiting action on the American tariff schedule as far as it appertains to the importation of motion pictures from Great Britain into America is clearly shown in a cablegram received at the News offices this week from Lieut.-Col. A. C. Bromhead, representing the British Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association of London. The cablegram follows:

"Have addressed the following cable to President Harding: 'British Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association, 167 Wardour Street, London, comprising all the film producers in Great Britain, express great anxiety at prospect of tariff bill, terms of which would entirely preclude possibility of British films being seen in United States picture houses. This exclusion strikes a deadly blow at free interchange of Anglo-American ideals and aspirations. British screens are open to American films, which represent 85 per cent of pictures shown in Britain. This association would deeply deplore any artificial barriers raised in either country, as owing to the existence of British film manufacturers being seriously threatened, proposed American action would inevitably be followed by tariff in this country, for which public agitation is now arising. In the interests of continued Anglo-American amity we beg you to use your powerful influence to maintain freedom for films as for stage plays and press telegrams. The film should be a greater link between our two nations than stage or press.'"

"The British producing companies greet American conferences through your journal and confidently expect their co-operation in maintaining unrestricted freedom of intercourse between two great nations through the medium of their screens.

(Signed) "A. C. BROMHEAD, Lieut.-Col."

Owen Moore Weds Kathryn Perry, Screen Beauty

Owen Moore, former husband of Mary Pickford and star in Selznick pictures, was married Saturday, July 16th, to Kathryn Perry, ex-Ziegfeld Follies beauty and leading woman opposite Mr. Moore in his two latest Selznick productions, "The Chicken in the Case" and "A Divorce of Convenience."

The wedding took place at Greenwich, Conn. Every effort was made to keep the affair a secret, but the news soon leaked out to the daily papers. The only others present at the ceremony were Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production of the Selznick Corporation, and Catherine McCarthy, who served as best man and bridesmaid respectively.

Mrs. Harding Gets Film of Presidential Campaign

Brady, president of the National Association, formally presented to Mrs. Harding as a gift of the film industry, a two-reel picture containing views of both the President and Mrs. Harding taken upon various occasions during the presidential campaign which preceded Mr. Harding's election to office. The scenes start with Mr. Harding's nomination and end upon the White House lawn.

Walter Porges Dead; Had Been Sick 8 Months

Walter Porges, formerly associated with the Select, Realart and Famous Players-Lasky organizations, and more recently president of the Herald Productions, Inc., of New York, died at the age of twenty-nine on July 10th, following a protracted period of illness which lasted over eight months.

About two years ago J. S. Woody, who was then with Select, brought Mr. Porges from the Select branch office of Seattle to New York and appointed him as assistant sales manager. Following Mr. Woody's association with the realart organization Mr. Porges transferred his activities to Realart, first in a special capacity and later as assistant manager of Realart's Philadelphia office. Mr. Porges was subsequently made assistant sales manager for Famous Players-Lasky, with whom he remained until becoming president of the Herald Productions.

Dempsey-Carpentier Fight Film Shown in Montreal

The Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures have been passed by the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors and the first showing of the official views, called "The Battle of the Century," was conducted at the Imperial Theatre, Montreal, on Sunday, July 17, at $1.60 top price. This was the opening of an indefinite engagement, the pictures to be shown as long as possible.

On the other hand, the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors at Toronto decided on July 15 to condemn the fight feature on the ground that it was the policy of the Board to reject all pictures of prize fights. In spite of this decision, it was intimated by one representative of the Ontario Board that no objection would be taken to the presentation of the Dempsey-Carpentier films in private.

Missouri-Kansas Exhibs. to Hold Joint Convention

At last week's meeting of the Missouri and Kansas joint convention committees in Kansas City, plans for what probably will be one of the largest gatherings of exhibitors ever held in this section were arranged. For the first time exhibitors of both states will meet at a joint convention to be held in Kansas City the first week in September, lasting two days. The date and exact meeting place will be determined at a meeting of the two convention committees in the next day or so.

Lawrence Goldman of Kansas City has been appointed chairman of the Missouri convention committee by C. T. Sears of Brookfield, Mo., president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri. A chairman for the Kansas committee has not yet been named.

Invitations will be sent to the leading officials of both states. The governors and the mayors of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., are scheduled to address the exhibitors at the opening ceremonies. Attorney General Hopkins of Kansas and Senator Penzel of Poplar Bluff, Mo., who introduced the deposit bill in the recent session of the legislature, also will be among the speakers.

The morning of the first day of the convention will be devoted to a joint meeting of the exhibitors, while a banquet will be held that night. The remainder of the first day and the second day will be spent in special and executive meetings, a joint meeting being planned for the evening of the second day.

Ready for South American Bids on Ingram Special

Word that Metro Pictures Corp. now is receptive to negotiations for the distributive rights in South America to the Rex Ingram production, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," was had this week from the president of the releasing organization, Richard A. Rowland.

The company's first active step toward this, Mr. Rowland announced, will be the departure of Harry J. Cohen, foreign manager, for Buenos Aires, in the Argentine. Mr. Cohen's itinerary will take him to Brazil, Uruguay and Chile. Mr. Cohen will sail August 3 on the Huron. Between now and steamer time he may be reached at the home offices of the Metro Co. in New York. After his arrival in the Argentinian city he will make his headquarters at the Hotel Plaza there.

E. A. Schiller Is Appointed to Staff of Governor

Hardwick, Governor of Georgia.

Reduced Wages Result in Strike in Coast Studios

A WIRE received during the week from Los Angeles advises that producers have asked all craftsmen, affiliated with organized labor, to return to the schedule of wages effective previous to September of last year, in an effort to curtail productions.

This schedule would pay seven dollars for an eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays. The schedule is to become effective at the nearest payday to July 18th.

As a result of this action, the entire Metro staff, seventy per cent of the Lasky and Realart forces, the entire Fox and Hal Roach staffs, and the Goldwyn carpenters, millmen and painters have gone out. The Ince cut becomes effective Thursday, Universal on Wednesday, and Brunton on Thursday.

Production will continue in a curtailed way at all except the Roach plant where two weeks' lay-off of production has been ordered for all units. The strike will not affect production seriously, it is declared, for the studios are receiving more applications for positions than will be needed to fill the vacancies left by the carpenters, electricians, millmen, painters and property men who have walked out.

"A condition exists at present which makes it absolutely imperative that pictures be made at a lower cost. It is a question of making them at a lower cost, or not making them at all. There have been too many inflated salaries in the picture business, and no injustice is being done in the reductions now being made.

"There has been a decrease in the cost of living and in the price which we receive for our pictures. Wages were the last thing to come down. They are now being reduced to the 1919-1920 scale."

New York Censors Appointed at Last; All Are Active and Well Known Politically

THE names of the long-awaited censors who will pass upon motion-pictures to be exhibited in the State of New York were announced on Wednesday afternoon of this week by Governor Nathan L. Miller from his home in Syracuse. The commission will consist of the following:

George H. Cobb, of Watertown, serving until December 31, 1925, and acting as chairman; Mrs. Eli T. Hosmer, of Buffalo, whose term will expire December 31, 1924; and Joseph Levenson, of New York, whose term will end December 31, 1922.

The Commissioners will receive an annual salary of $7,500, together with their necessary traveling expenses.

Mr. Cobb has been a lifelong resident of northern New York, serving as state senator from 1905 to 1912. On March 11, 1910, he was elected to the presidency of the state senate, serving as Lieutenant-Governor under Governor Horace White.

Mrs. Hosmer is vice-chairman of the State Congress of Mothers; chairman of the committee on Education of the Western Federation of Women's Clubs; a member of the National Congress of Mothers' Clubs; a former member of the Citizens' Committee of Buffalo, to secure the regulation of Motion Pictures; and vice-chairman of the Erie County Republican Committee.

Mr. Levenson, secretary of the new commission, was appointed in 1916 by President Charles D. Hilles of the National Republican Club, chairman of the committee to investigate the spread of Socialistic doctrines in New York city. At the present time he is engaged in organizing a movement to combat the spread of Socialism. Mr. Levenson has been a Republican Leader in the first Assembly District of New York county for many years and has always been active in public affairs and community movements. He is a director of the Young Men's Hebrew Association and a member of the Educational Alliance.

It is expected that the three Commissioners will be in Albany by the last of this week for the purpose of taking the constitutional oath of office, which will be administered by Secretary of State John J. Lyons. Censorship becomes operative in New York on August 1st.

Albany F.I.L.M. Club Has Elected New Officers

Word has been received from the F. I. L. M. headquarters in New York City that the Albany Club has elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Chas. Walders, Select; treasurer, Arthur E. Beck, Vitagraph, and secretary, C. R. Halligan, Universal.

Shipman Obliged to Stop Work Temporarily

Ernest Shipman was affected by the recent extreme heat to such an extent as to cause his physician to cut out all business activities for the time being and to place him in strict confinement in his summer home on Long Island, where it was hoped absolute rest and better weather conditions would have a beneficial effect.

Mr. King, of the Shipman forces, states that reports received all point to a speedy recovery and Mr. Shipman may be expected back very shortly.

Rupert Hughes Author, Not Director of "Old Nest"

In the review of "The Old Nest," of July 16th issue, the reviewer erred in classifying it as an Eminent Authors-Goldwyn production, directed by Rupert Hughes. The picture is a Reginald Barker production, released by Goldwyn and directed by Mr. Barker. Mr. Hughes wrote the story.

Finkelstein and Ruben Escape Disastrous Fires

The Finkelstein and Ruben Enterprises have had two narrow escapes from disastrous fires in Minneapolis and both within one week. The first occurred when a $500,000 fire destroyed a building adjoining the Loeb Arcade, in which the executive offices and the First National and Universal exchanges are located. Only the prompt work of the Finkelstein and Ruben employees saved the company's property in the Arcade, including a large number of films in the First National and Universal exchanges, which Finkelstein and Ruben control. The Arcade itself escaped serious damage.

Former Assistant Manager E. D. Barensfeld of the State theatre spent an agonizing half hour when he was accidently locked in one of the film vaults, with only a two-foot wall between him and the flames.

A few days later a $50,000 fire in the New Garrick Theatre Building caused damages to fixtures and draperies amounting to $20,000. The fire did not seriously damage the theatre proper, however, and it was possible to open the house the following day as usual.

W. R. Rothacker in London

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, has forwarded word to the News of his arrival in London.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

Too Much Speed—

Delightful story with star at his best. Boosted attendance figures despite minimum of advertising and extreme heat. (Middle West.)

Full of pep and speed. Will get 'em if anything will these days. (West.)

Fine production. Pleased my patrons and brought good business. (West.)

Went over well. Excellent story, well handled, and business was good. (East.)

Sacred and Profane Love—

Attendance good considering hot weather. Patrons liked picture, some scenes delicate but handled well. (Middle West.)

Good business on second week of run. Good picture. (West.)

One a Minute—

Fine feature and good business. My patrons seemed to like it. (West.)

The Wild Goose—

Fairly good feature picture. Weather had been exceedingly warm and many people out of the city along the beaches, but attracted pretty good business. (South.)

Proxies—

Very entertaining and pleasing picture. More than usual business on this one. (West.)

Woman God Changed—

Five weeks to satisfactory business and pleased audiences. (West.)

The Faith Healer—

Appeals to a "church" audience. Too drawn out for a real show. Had nice business first three days and then receipts were poor. (East.)

City of Silent Men—

Went splendidly, both as regards audiences and receipts. (East.)

Appearances—

Good results in spite of adverse criticism. In various quarters held to be a fine show. (East.)

White and Unmarried—

Very good picture and we did good business with it for week. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Scrap Iron—

The best thing Ray has ever made. Picture intensely interesting and shows realistic fight although knockout in fight is not shown which was disappointing to many. Attendance good. (Middle West.)

Charles Ray is a favorite here and he gained several new supporters in this production which did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Only fair as a picture, but a good attraction from a box-office standpoint. The picture drags too much. The prize-fight scene is realistic. (Middle West.)

The Golden Snare—

Well received and up to the standard of Curwood production. (Middle West.)

Lessons in Love—

Nothing to it, except star's charm and Kenneth Harlan's genuine ability. Silly little story, lavishly produced. Seemed to please fairly well and business just average. (East.)

A fair picture for Constance Talmadge. Warm weather interfered with business. (Middle West.)

Peck's Bad Boy—

Fine picture. Good business. Appealed strongly to kiddies. (Middle West.)

Isobel—

The Passion Flower—

Strong enough to attract good business despite extremely warm weather and many outside attractions of holidays. Norma Talmadge showed up to splendid advantage. (South.)

My Lady's Latchkey—

A fair production to fair business. (East.)

The Oath—

The picture was successful for a week's run and deserved better patronage than it received. (Middle West.)

The Sky Pilot—

A good, entertaining picture with excellent photography. Went over well for a week. (Middle West.)

Sure did go over big and patrons declared it to be a wonderful production. (West.)

Wedding Bells—

Good, light entertainment for hot weather. One of the best things she has ever done but not the best. Well liked by patrons and attendance was good considering the heat. (Middle West.)

Girl in the Taxi—

Fairly good. Weather very warm and holidays offer many outside attractions, but business tolerably good, anyhow. Offers excellent opportunity for exploitation. (South.)

Plenty of life and plenty of action. Good as a farce. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

Bob Hampton of Placer—

One of the finest pictures of the season—and it went over just moderately well. Business just average. (East.)

Exceptionally good picture and business splendid. Unusually strong cast. Patrons evinced much satisfaction. (South.)

GOLDWYN

Guile of Women—

Will Rogers lives up to his reputation in this production, although business was only fair during the week's run. (Middle West.)

The Highest Bidder—

A rather unusual production, well acted. Played in conjunction with "A Voice in the Dark," and drew well. (Middle West.)

Boys Will Be Boys—

Patrons liked this picture very much. Drew editorial commendation from daily paper for being clean picture and faithfully portraying the characters in the story. Attendance very good. (Middle West.)

Wet Gold—

Appealing picture. Did unusual business. (West.)

The Concert—

Playing in tie-up with Harold Lloyd comedy, it made a fairly attractive program but business was poor. (East.)

Voice in the Dark—

A good mystery picture which keeps up the suspense until the final reel. (Middle West.)

REALART

A Private Scandal—

Star pleases in an interesting subject. Story is appealing. Attendance fair. (Middle West.)

Very big entertainment in this feature. Box office receipts large. (West.)

The March Hare—

A fair feature; business poor. (East.)

Fair picture with fairly good business. (West.)

FOX

Who's Who—

A very good sunshine comedy. At least comes up to the average. Rather laughable and seemed to be well enjoyed. Business tolerably good despite hot weather. (South.)

The Big Town Round Up—

A fair picture; business fair. (East.)

Ridin' Romeo—

His Greatest Sacrifice—

A fair picture. Strong sob stuff. (Middle West.)

Blind Wives—

Not up to expectations. Business fair. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Reputation—

The Man Tamer—

Average picture with fair business for hot weather. (West.)

Christmas End at Pilot Butte—

Desperate Trails—

Fair business on this picture, which is average. (West.)

METRO

Very good comedy. Comedian popular and responsible for attendance which was fair. (Middle West.)

Part of H. A. Albright's exploitation of "The Traveling Salesman" when this picture played at the American theatre, Butte, Mont.

Albright Makes Big Play for Visiting Elks

Manager H. A. Albright, of the American theatre, Butte, Mont., took advantage of the recent dual convention of Elks and Eagles held in Butte.

Knowing that Roscoe Arbuckle is an Elk, Albright booked "The Traveling Salesman" for the convention dates and then proceeded to exploit the picture in a manner that would especially appeal to the first named fraternity. A large "grip" as shown in the cut on the opposite page was built about an automobile and paraded about the city. The ballyhoo was equipped with an electric bell outfit played by a jazz musician.

A huge sign was suspended between the roof of the theatre and that of one across the street. The letters were eight feet high and spelled the word "Arbuckle." A hand on the sign pointed to the lobby entrance, where a display as shown in the cut had been built.

Classified Ad Section Used to Exploit Serial

Mrs. Eva Vernon, manager of the Grand theatre, Texarkana, Ark., got a good start for the first episode of "Fantomas" by use of a teaser campaign in the classified ad section, and without a cent's cost. The editor made no charge because he considered it attracted good attention to that whole department. For several days she ran notices that on Saturday there would be free tickets to "Fantomas" in the classified section. The notices were in black type and everybody soon knew about them and nearly 2,000 tickets were clipped on the opening day.

"Cabiria" Prologue Is Ingenious Bit of Stage Craft

"Cabiria," shows Mt. Aetna in full eruption, smoke billows pouring from the red glow of the crater and lava skyrocketing to earth. Mr. Hyman wanted to reproduce this eruption in a stage prologue so that it would look and sound like an actual volcano letting-go.

Mr. Hyman counselled with electricians with the result that a scenic set of the doomed city at Aetna's base was reproduced and the face of the painted canvas so made that certain electrical illumination effects produced the required eruption action. Mt. Aetna was pictured in back center of the drop with the field of the canvas at the crater transparent. The remainder of the drop was opaque.

A red color lamp diffused a ruddy glow at the eruption point of the volcano through this transparent part surrounding the crater. The color lamp was so operated in conjunction with the cloud effect lamp that a colorful realistic eruption was the result, when men back stage got the smoke-and-fire bellows working full blast. The volcano side was striped with silvery red light to give the effect of a stream of lava pouring down the side. The eruption was really a careful combination of knowledge of lighting, electrical equipment and orchestral effects. The orchestra, of course, provided the thunder, boom and crash atmosphere.

Goldman's "Too Much Speed" Exploitation

St. Louis Manager Ties Up With Local Used Car Auto Show

Managing Director William Goldman, of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, once again has executed an exploitation coup which attracted widespread attention and enlarged box office returns. This time it was "Too Much Speed," and many St. Louisans are still speaking of the unusual publicity afforded the production during its week run at the Missouri.

A teaser campaign to the extent of 12,000 circular post cards started the exploitation. Goldman has obtained through assiduous effort a large list of many of the regular patrons of the Missouri, and it was to these fans that he sent the cards, which read:

"There will be 'Too Much Speed' in St. Louis next week. But have no fear, it will be good for you."

Various sized posters along teaser lines were thrown on nearly every conceivable unused signboard in the city. The entire populace was advised of the fact that "Too Much Speed" was about due for a stay in the city and that it was something good for everybody's health.

One of a number of window displays for "Too Much Speed" secured by Manager Goldman during the run of this picture at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis

While the newspaper advertising was not increased during the heralding of the film by virtue of additional expenditures, columns upon columns of free space was granted through collaboration with a number of automobile dealers in the city, who were holding a used car auto show.

Of course the automobile sections of the newspapers were filled during the entire period with news of the automobiles, and here is where Goldman edged his way into many free columns of advertising. He spoke to organizers of the show and convinced them that a tie-up with Too Much Speed would result in mutual and many benefits. So they agreed to use the three words—"Too Much Speed"—in all of their advertising. This done signs were posted all over the city, in the windows of the dealers' showrooms to the effect that "This Car May Not Have TOO MUCH SPEED But Its Mechanical Construction Is Perfect," and that "TOO MUCH SPEED? There Is No Such Thing When You Drive This Car," etc.

The newspaper stories written by automobile editors naturally carried the phrase Too Much Speed many, many times. There is no doubt, too, that the advertising done by the Missouri theatre was of much advantage to the automobile men. And so the tie-up reaped untold harvests.

But that wasn't all Goldman did. The distributor of the Franklin passenger cars in St. Louis is the possessor of one of the very few existing first cars to be manufactured by his concern. It is of the vintage of the early days of the Twentieth Century and looks the part. But the machine still has "legs" and with the assistance of a capable mechanic can be made to move perceptably about the streets. Here Goldman saw another opportunity. He hired the machine and the mechanic to go with it, embellished it with two large canvas signs, and paraded it about the city's streets.

The signs told of the picture and the Missouri theatre where it was to be shown. To say that the automobile attracted unusual attention would be putting it very lightly. Every place the antiquated affair stopped large crowds assembled to scrutinize its picturesque body and appointments. It even attracted the blase messenger boys and that's saying a lot for an exploitation stunt.

"Scrap Iron" Exploitation Goes Big at Milwaukee

In spite of the hot weather "Scrap Iron" was the talk of the town in Milwaukee last week when it was presented at the Saxe's Strand. The lobby of the Strand was "dressed" with scenery high board fences on which the name of the attraction was crudely lettered. The box office was disguised as a shack and the brass rail in front of it which is used to form a line of ticket purchasers was also hidden. Clothes lines on which underwear made of painted cambric and bearing the title of the attraction were strung across the lobby. "Scrap Iron" is a lively photoplay in itself, but Manager Weisfeldt increased the pep in the boxing bout scenes with the help of the Strand orchestra. When the time-keeper in the film rang the fight bell a big gong clanged in the Strand orchestra pit. Instantly the music stopped and the sudden silence resembled that at a regular fight. As the fight progressed members of the orchestra yelled, "Get him Charlie," "Zowie!" "Swing that right," and other remarks common to the fight arena. It only took a minute or two before the members of the audience themselves were yelling. In between rounds the orchestra played but the moment the gong rang the music stopped. During the picture scenes are shown taken from the rear of the fight arena and whenever film people would stand up in their seats cries of "Sit down" came from the audience. The wind-up of the screen fight found the Strand audiences on their feet yelling, and as Charlie Ray walked out of the ring they applauded in true fashion. Needless to say the attraction drew scores of fight fans to the Strand and they were pleased with the Dempsey-Carpentier views with which Manager Weisfeldt rounded out his program.

Free Tickets Given to People Finding Misspelled Words

Free tickets for persons finding misspelled words greatly aided a double-truck tie-up for "Something to Think About," playing at the Auditorium theatre, Red Wing, Minn., recently.

Leon J. Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer, tied up nine mercantile concerns of Red Wing for two pages in the Daily Eagle. There was a misspelled word in each ad, and the theatre gave each store a ticket, which was given to the first persons presenting a tear of the display with the incorrect word marked.

There was a lively competition to see who could obtain a free ticket and both the merchants and the theatre benefited by the tie-up.

Dumont Puts Over Clever Exploitation Stunt

George Dumont, manager of Loew's State theatre, Cleveland, pulled off one of the most original and one of the most popular prologue stunts Cleveland has ever seen. In the first place be it known that there is a popular restaurant upstairs in the State theatre building known as the Carlton Terrace. Among other things, this restaurant is well known for its jazz orchestra and its dancing floor. Cashing in on this popularity which usually attends a new eating place, Mr. Dumont, in connection with his feature, "The Traveling Salesman," presented what he appropriately called "Twenty Minutes a la Carlton Terrace."

Ralph Williams, and his Carlton Terrace jazz orchestra, were requisitioned, and, stationed on the stage, pretty well back, played the kind of music that the public is loudly applauding at the Carlton Terrace. Mr. Dumont has built a new stage for the State theatre with two wings, extending from one main stage like two long arms. These arms are adjustable, can be moved so as to provide a 51-one foot apron. The average apron is about 36 feet.

These wings, extending from the main stage, were fixed up to look like the Carlton Terrace. Two tables, laid for two couples each, were on either side. While the orchestra played, the four couples, who came in and seated themselves at the tables, got up and danced, just as they do regularly at the restaurant. First one coupled danced. Then the other couple danced. Then they both danced. Not fancy dances. Just the so-called social dances.

The whole thing was so natural that it made a tremendous hit, and the novelty of it was fruited about by word of mouth, so that pretty nearly everybody in town went to see it.

"A Day With Jack Dempsey" window display secured from a department store in San Francisco recently in the interests of the local theatres who had booked the picture

This cut, the one below and the story appearing on this page, tell how the Orpheum theatre, Roundup, Mont., put over "Reputation"

Small Town Exploitation Proves Practical for "Reputation"

O. W. Lambert, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Roundup, Mont., is such a firm believer in exploitation that he has a special exploitation man, despite the fact that his theatre only seats 400, and that Roundup has only 2,000 inhabitants.

The size of the theatre doesn't admit of large exploitation appropriations, but Lambert and John Anderson, Jr., his exploitation man, make up in ingenuity what they lack in purchasing power.

An instance of how they get Roundup worked up over coming pictures is supplied by their recent campaign for "Reputation."

They followed the "this is the house that Jack built" idea. First there appeared a large card in the window of the local express company announcing that the film for "Reputation" would be received in that office. A delivery wagon and horse then were decorated with signs indicating that the film would be transported from the express office to the theatre by that team.

In the theatre lobby a special film container was set up to receive the "Reputation" reels and appropriately placarded.

The actual receipt and transmission of the film was made a ceremonial event and when it rested in the lobby container, guards stood over it.

Editor and Showman Join Forces at Great Falls

Until doomsday or the great earthquake, the Sexton theatre, Great Falls, Mont., will be featured daily on the front page of the Great Falls Tribune. This remarkable tie-up was engineered by Rick Ricketson, the Paramount exploiteer from the Salt Lake exchange. All it costs the Sexton theatre is a donation of the unsold seats in the theatre, and all it costs the Tribune is a little free space.

Every resident of Great Falls who is also a subscriber to the Tribune will receive one free ticket to the Sexton theatre with every want ad he buys for a Sunday edition. The Tribune runs a box daily on the front page advertising the offer and also giving the name of the feature picture, the name of the theatre, and about five lines devoted to boosting the film.

Manager Steege, of the Sexton, figures on from two to three hundred unsold seats a week in his large first-run house. The co-operative stunt was tried for "Paying the Piper" and "White and Unmarried," and Mr. Steege reported that 75 per cent of the persons who received the free tickets came to the box office and bought from one to three additional. He furthermore said the general attendance was stimulated by the front page publicity, and he believes the daily regularity of the box will train the public to consult the box for the amusement suggestions.

Dayton Theatre Is Making Local Film

Following the selection of six beautiful girls through a beauty contest conducted by the Dayton Daily News, The Pyramid Film Co., of Dayton, O., and Manager Arthur E. Smith, of Loew's theatre staged the "Making of a Movie" on the stage of his theatre, making a new scene of the picture at each of the three shows every day during a period of ten days.

Through a friendship which dates from the old Biograph days when Smith was a director of one-reelers he induced Romaine Fielding to go to Dayton for the purpose of directing the making of this local film.

The scenario was written by a Dayton woman, the characters are all played by local people and the scenes are actually shot on the stage in full view of the audience.

The exterior scenes are being "shot" in the downtown districts and in and around one of the most exclusive residences and always attracts an enormous crowd. Inasmuch as the director's auto carries a big banner and the car of the cameraman is very plainly labeled this is exceptionally good publicity and is getting the theatre exceptional business.

The film after cutting and assembling will be shown on the screen of the theatre in which the picture was made.

This cut, the one appearing above and the accompanying story will explain the exploitation campaign which O. W. Lambert, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Roundup, Mont., put over for "Reputation"

Minneapolis Theatres Hold Movie Week

Finkelstein and Ruben, Minneapolis picture magnates, have just put over a "Banner Movie Week" with results that brought much added business to the F. and R. houses.

"Buzz" Bainbridge, a veteran showman and in the theatrical season manager of the Minneapolis Shubert theatre, was general manager of the event.

Arthur C. Janisch, advertising director and Ronald D. Scofield, publicity director capably handled their respective duties in putting the campaign over.

The week took on the aspect of a contest when it was announced that a prize of $150 would be awarded the manager who arranged the best balanced program, including music, short reels and feature, the best lobby display and whose employes were the most courteous. A committee of five exhibitors attending the M. P. T. O. A. convention was selected to pass on the theatres and the prize was awarded to the Strand theatre. James A. Keough is the manager of the Strand.

In advertising the "Banner Movie Week," several thousand attractive one-sheets were sniped and lithographed all over the city. Street car cards were used for two weeks and 50,000 heralds were distributed before the opening. Several ads were run announcing the special week. These ads did not specify any particular house but advertised "The Utmost in Pictures" to be shown all week at all F & R theatres.

Finklestein and Ruben are very enthusiastic over the "Movie Week" results and will arrange other similar events.

As was the case in this Banner Week, in the future as these contests are arranged, the program for each theatre will be chosen with great care and the public will be educated to look for these occasions. They will also be educated to realize just what they are getting for their money in the way of entertainment at all times.

Dances Held in Ottawa Theatre Lobby Successful

Manager J. D. Elms, of the Loew theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, started a real innovation on Friday evening, June 17, when the first of a series of public dances was held in the beautiful and spacious marble lobby of the theatre. Dancing started immediately after the close of the performance and patrons were invited to attend the event. Music was supplied by the theatre's own orchestra, which was placed on the balcony of the promenade. Many young people waited after the close of the show and they were not long in stepping out to the music, the smooth floor presenting an animated and interesting appearance for the occasion. The dancing lasted for about an hour—until the orchestra played its last scheduled number.

Hyman Presents Prologue for "The Golden Snare"

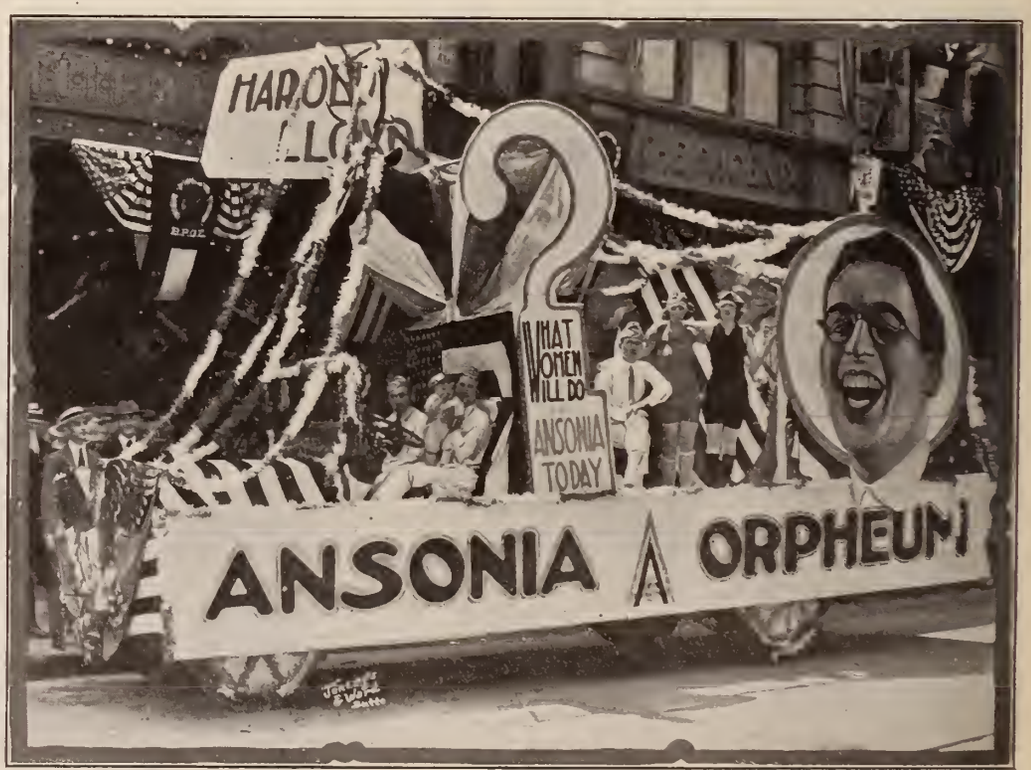
A real "frosted, way below zero, rim of the Arctic" appetizer in the form of a prologue was served at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre along with "The Golden Snare."

Manager Hyman used an Aurora *Bo*realis idea for the fundamental idea of his prologue, which he appropriately termed, "The Northern Lights." Then he had his artists design a snowstorm stage set that was realistic even to the icicles and the frosted boughs of the firs and evergreens.

The stage cut-outs of trees were weighted down with glistening snow, the hills were a background of snow, the sky was overcast as it is in the Northwest. The fur-clad Canadian snow trekker with his pack added more zero touch, and then through the snowy haze the electricians shot the maze of colorful light which reproduced a veritable effect of the Northern Lights. To cap this cool appetizer two noted dancers in snow white ballet costume with silver snow flakes illuminating them, danced in the guise of snow sprites.

Andrews Uses Capsules as Containers for Heralds

Manager Andrews, of the Columbia theatre, Muncie, Ind., has been giving out his picture "dope" in capsules. He secures very large size capsules from a druggist and rolls his program or announcement of a feature so that only the word dope in large letters shows through. They are scattered around store counters, etc., and there are not many but what are opened and read, getting the message over a little differently.



Merle Davis, manager of the Ansonia theatre, Butte, Mont., rigged up this float, which paraded the city during the recent Montana Elks convention held in Butte

Carl Laemmle Invites Censors to National Conference

Set for August 15 at Universal City; Every Board to Be Represented

IT is expected that every censor board in the United States and Canada will be represented at Universal City, Cal., on August 15th at a conference called by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. Answers have been received from the censor boards of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Kansas, the cities of Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal, and the National Board of Review, either signifying their intention of being present or of sending a representative to the meeting.

Among the personnel of the party there will be Dr. George Heller, chairman of the Maryland State Board of Censorship; Harry L. Knapp, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, and J. A. Berrier, executive clerk of that board; Mrs. J. M. Miller, chairman of the Kansas State Board of Censors, and Mrs. B. L. Short of that board; Henry Goldman, chief censor for Kansas City, Mo.; A. S. Hamilton, of Toronto, chairman of the Ontario Board of Censors, and Miss Velma Hamill, also of that board; Walter Hepburn, chairman, and James A. Smith of the censorship board of Vancouver. The other boards have not yet chosen their representatives.

This conference is Mr. Laemmle's contribution toward the solution of the censorship question. The invitation was sent out by Mr. Laemmle just prior to his departure for Europe. It will be impossible for him to be there in person, but H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, will act as host to the party of censors who will assemble at Chicago, and Irving Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, will issue the invitations to producers to meet with them at the Beverley Hills Hotel near Universal City, where the conferences will be held.

"Misunderstanding is always the basis for human conflict and intolerance," said Mr. Laemmle in discussing his solution of the censorship problem just before he sailed. "We certainly have had plenty of it in this censorship matter. It is high time we started to understand each other. It is time we found out that the watchword of this present day is 'Stop Fighting.' It is high time producers began to look at censors as the result of a widespread feeling. We may not agree with the feeling, but we cannot deny its existence. But if producers will come to realize through this conference that censors are not all crepe-hanging reformers clad in blue glasses and armed with scissors, and if censors will come to know that producers are not all knaves, jackals and purveyors of cheap amusement, without principle or honor—but that both are human and that both are sincere, I will consider that I have performed a real service for the moving picture industry.

"I have not changed in any way my conviction that censorship will not do what the advocates of censorship wish to accomplish. Also, I regard it as unutterably foolish to attempt to oppose censorship with more censorship, whether of a self-imposed nature or not. I am convinced, however, that it is high time to stop fighting and to agree among ourselves on a program to which we can all subscribe.

We have all been in the dark—we are still in the dark. What I am trying to do is to open the door and let the light of commonsense and common understanding in on the censorship situation.

"In spite of every effort which has been made, producers do not yet know what all the boards insist on and there is no uniformity in the many state and city board decisions. If this meeting brings the censors themselves together so that their rulings and requirements are more in conformity, it will be very helpful. And if producers, directors, scenario writers and authors can be shown what is and what is not admissible, much time, money and effort can be saved. In our own case we have a tremendous amount of money tied up in the 'Foolish Wives' picture. This picture may or may not conform to all the censorship requirements of the various boards. But we will feel much more confident in sending it out and so will every exhibitor if the boards themselves have had a hand in cutting it."

The arrangements which have been made and which have met with the approval of the boards call for the assembly of all of the censorship boards in the East at Chicago, on August 10th. This will bring the entire party, with the exception of the censor board of Vancouver together in one party. The entire expenses of the trip will be borne by the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., from the time the censors leave their homes until the time they return there again. A New York Central representative is busily engaged in routing the various censors from their homes to Chicago, and a special train is being provided in Chicago to take the party of thirty-five or forty to Universal City. The party will be entertained at the Beverley Hills Hotel and arrangements are now being made for a gathering room in the hotel, itself, where the various conferences with producers, directors and authors may be held.

Erich von Stroheim, who directed "Foolish Wives," is working day and night with a corps of assistants to cut down the enormous amount of footage of "Foolish Wives" to an amount which will enable the censors to see this story in the form which will be understandable to them. In this form it will probably occupy something like 15 or 20 reels, to be cut down to a final twelve.

In all of the censorship discussion the argument always comes up on both sides that if pictures were censored at the source, a tremendous saving would be affected and the producer would be able to present a much more logical and perfect picture. Although this was not Mr. Laemmle's primary object in inviting the censor boards, they have all welcomed this opportunity to put into actual practice one of the pet theories of both sides in the censorship agitation.

Blackton Wins Editorial Tribute to Innovation

THE production of a full-length photoplay in natural colors by J. Stuart Blackton has elicited the highest praise abroad, and in its issue of July 2nd, the Motion Picture Studio, one of the leading film trade journals in England, pays editorial tribute of a high order to Mr. Blackton whom it describes as "an inveterate pioneer." So pleased is the journal over the latest innovation of Mr. Blackton's genius that it has decided to set aside its issue of July 16th as a "Blackton number."

"And in order to show to America that British studios are subscribing to a progressive policy," continues the editorial "we have arranged for copies of this special number to be circulated in every American studio."

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Miss Du Pont, Universal Star, Starts Picture

Miss du Pont, signed to star at Universal City as a reward for her good work in support of Erich von Stroheim in "Foolish Wives," has started work on her first feature, "The Rage of Paris," in which she is directed by Jack Conway.

The story is from "The White Peacock Feather," a colorful narrative by DuVernet Rabell, and has been given an unusually dramatic screen version by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City.

Jack Perrin has been engaged as the leading masculine character. The cast also includes Ramsey Wallace, Leo White, Freeman Wood, J. J. Lance and Elinor Hancock. The action takes place in New York, Paris, Arabia and other romantic locales.

Mary Pickford in Every Scene in New Picture

For the first time in the history of her career as a motion picture actress, Mary Pickford is appearing in practically every scene in the picture she is now producing. This feature is a cinematization of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," scheduled as a fall release by the United Artists' Corporation.

In this production Little Mary plays a dual role, appearing as the Little Lord and also as his mother.

Universal's Gala-Week Plan Proves Popular

THE Laemmle-Uninversal Anniversary celebration, in the form of Gala Week bookings of 100% Universal pictures, is proving extremely popular with exhibitors, it is announced by Mr. Harry M. Berman, Universal's sales chief. Several hundred exhibitors already have availed themselves of the offer, it is declared and requests for solid week bookings under the Anniversary plan continue to pour in daily, Universal exchange managers report.

The Gala Week program, which commemorates Mr. Laemmle's fifteenth anniversary in the film business, and Universal's ninth birthday, is the most wide-spread celebration ever attempted by Universal. For the advantage of the exhibitor, Universal pictures are offered not as single attractions but in groups, to theatre owners inaugurating a Gala Week. The entire Universal output is announced to be at their command.

Paul Brunet Visits Kipling

Makes Airplane Trip from Paris to London to Confer With Noted Author

PAUL BRUNET, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc. coming from Paris to London by aeroplane, on Thursday, July 14, visited Rudyard Kipling at the latter's country estate, Bateman's, near London. The meeting was a noteworthy event in international motion picture affairs, for it was Mr. Brunet who induced Mr. Kipling to write directly for the screen. All England today is awaiting the showing of "Without Benefit of Clergy."

During a significant conference with Lord Beaverbrook bearing on the international motion picture situation, Mr. Brunet arranged a special showing of "Without Benefit of Clergy" for Mr. Kipling, which will be attended by Lord Beaverbrook.

With Mr. Brunet, when he visited the Kipling estate, was Randolph Lewis, who was designated by the Pathe head to personally supervise for Mr. Kipling the production of "Without Benefit of Clergy." On his arrival in Paris from America, Mr. Lewis immediately conferred with Mr. Brunet, who had been for some weeks arranging the details of a transaction whereby the American stockholders and present American management of Pathe Exchange, Inc. have taken over control of Pathe Exchange, Inc. from Pathe Cinema, Ltd. of Paris.

Mr. Brunet is entirely optimistic over present conditions. During his stay in France he has seen physical evidence of the rapid return to normal being made by the French, and to hear the brightest reports from other European countries badly hit by the war, all of which is so important to the eventful return of the greatest prosperity to the United States.

Mr. Lewis will work with Mr. Kipling on the third picture to be produced by Pathe from the noted author's own scripts.

Harry Beaumont Heads New Producing Unit

Harry Beaumont, who ten years ago directed Viola Dana in her first screen appearance, has been engaged to head a producing unit at the Metro studios in Hollywood, Cal., to make pictures starring her. Word of this was received this week from Milton Hoffman, production manager at the Metro coast headquarters.

Miss Dana's first photoplay under his direction will be "The Fourteenth Lover," by Alice Duer Miller. Edith Kennedy, formerly of the Famous Players scenario department and this week signed by Metro, is at work on the script. This combination of three—Miss Dana, Mr. Beaumont and Miss Kennedy—will ally in producing a new series of Viola Dana pictures.

The long-looked-for vacation which Miss Binney has been anticipating will have to be postponed. She had hoped to spend several weeks among the hills of Connecticut at the conclusion of the picture on which she is working, but now she will leave for the Coast instead.

Although her present one is the seventh picture which Miss Binney has made for Realart, none of them have been made at the West Coast.

Chester M. Franklin, who came East to direct Miss Binney in this one picture, will also go to the Coast when it is completed.

Educational Releases in Force in Omaha

Educational Pictures, which recently have shown consistent growth in the West, again have had 100 per cent representation in the first run theatres of Omaha. During the week of July 4, each of the four first run houses showed Educational subjects, there being eight subjects on the various programmes during the week.

During the first half of the week the Rialto played Kinograms, a Christie Comedy, "Southern Exposure," and a Chester Screenic, "From Dear to Dam." Kinograms and a Gayety comedy, "Hero Pro Tem," were on the programme for the last half of the week.

The Strand ran all week "Snooky's Wild Oats," a Chester Comedy.

"It's a Great Life—If," a Hudson Bay series picture, was shown all the week at the Sun.

"Wet Gold" Is Shown to President Harding

At the request of Senator Knox a private screening of the J. Ernest Williamson undersea photoplay, "Wet Gold," distributed by Goldwyn, was given for President Harding at Senator Knox's country home at Valley Forge, where the President spent the week-end with him, June 4 and 5.

Lasky Announces Changes at West Cost Studio

Jesse L. Lasky states that Ann Forrest will go immediately from Hollywood to London to play the leading feminine role in "Perpetua," which is to be produced there under the direction of John S. Robertson.

Mr. Lasky also announces that Rolin Sturgeon, Thompson Buchanan, Thomas J. Geraghty and Julia Crawford Ivers will be assigned to certain units of production at the Lasky studio in the capacity of supervisors under the general direction of Frank E. Woods, supervisor-in-chief.

Big Advertising Drive for Paramount Week

FOR the advertising of Paramount Week, September 4 to 11, the campaign planned by Paramount's Advertising and Publicity Department, under the supervision of Jerome Beatty, is declared to be the biggest yet launched by the company for the National sales drive which opens the Paramount year. In fact, the Paramount office states that this year's campaign will be practically twice as large as that of last year, both in point of newspaper space used and the expenditure of money for advertising and accessories furnished free to exhibitors participating in the week.

For the National advertising direct to the public, in advance of Paramount Week, a full page will be run in the Saturday Evening Post, with its circulation of over 2,100,000, in the issue of August 20. This will be followed by a two-page advertisement in the Post of September 3, which is out the Thursday before Paramount week.

The newspaper campaign this year will be more than twice as extensive as last year's, in which approximately 600 newspapers were used. The list made up for this year includes more than 1,100 daily papers, it is stated by the Paramount office, and the minimum space used will be 900 lines, or a space equivalent to seven columns by nearly ten inches. This will be increased to full pages in the larger cities, in many of which every daily newspaper is to be used.

"Justice" Ready for Studio

E. J. Montagne Finishes Continuity; Ralph Ince to Start Filming Soon

EDWARD J. MONTAGNE, of the Selznick scenario staff, has completed the continuity of John Galsworthy's "Justice," and work will begin upon the production very shortly at the West Fort Lee studios of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, with William Faversham in the role of Falder.

The combination of Montagne continuity and Ralph Ince direction has been successful in a number of the most important productions of the Selznick Corporation in the last few years. Among these is a special, not yet released, "A Man's Home" made from the play by Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese. Another special directed by Ralph Ince from a Montagne script was "Red Foam" from the Saturday Evening Post story by William Hamby.

In "Out Yonder," an Olive Thomas production, and a new Elaine Hammerstein picture not yet released, "Remorseless Love," the Ince-Montagne partnership of continuity and direction has been notably happy. Mr. Montagne also wrote the continuity of "The Greatest Love" the Vera Gordon special which has been the talk of the Spring and early Summer. "Bucking the Tiger," from the May Tully-Achmed Abdullah play, was another of his scripts.

When Myron Selznick assigned the writing of this continuity to Mr. Montagne his instructions were confined to a single brief sentence —"Follow Galsworthy's story absolutely." As a consequence, it is declared, "Justice" will afford a remarkable example of the screen method of telling a story as compared with the stage method. As the plot is to be identically the same, and the ending unchanged, even to the tragic circumstances of Falder's death, the basis of comparison will be ideal. This does not mean, however, that the screen version of "Justice" will be simply the play illustrated with pictures, declares Selznick. This has been the unfortunate result in many instances where great plays have been picturized. The broader scope of the camera will be employed, to show in action what the play can suggest only in dialogue, it is explained.

Cameramen In Competition

William Fox Announces Awards to Be Competed for By News Staff

THE Fox News cameramen's recent competition for a gold badge was so productive of fine results that William Fox has decided upon a new competition for the season of 1921-2 for the news reel forces.

The competition just closed was won by Blaine Walker, a Los Angeles staff man, for his splendid pictures of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. Some of these were taken from an airplane in an exciting journey, the camera faithfully recording a hazardous encounter with an air pocket, when it appeared for some seconds as though the enterprise would end in disaster. These were the first news reel pictures of the canyon ever taken.

According to Fox's announcement of the new competition, a gold badge is to be awarded as grand prize for the season, from June 15, 1921, to May 1, 1922, but instead of being presented for some particular news picture, the badge will be competed for upon a point basis—determined on the three bonus plan now governing Fox cameramen. On this plan a $5 bonus is given weekly for the best thrill picture of the week, and similar bonuses for the picture showing the most enterprise and the picture displaying the finest photography.

Three points will be credited to the winners of the thrill bonuses, and two points for each of the others. For the best thrill record of the season, a handsome gold trophy in the form of a statuette of appropriate design will be awarded, it is announced. For the best annual picture—tame or wild—a bronze tablet appropriately inscribed will be given; and for the best baby picture, a silver cup.

In case of a tie the persons so tied will receive equal awards.

The only condition governing the contest for the special prizes is that the picture must be originally thought out by the cameraman himself—must not be an assignment or the suggestion of the news editor. It is permissible, however, for the cameramen to ask the assistance of their editors. The offer is open to Fox cameramen wherever they may be. The winner of the gold badge will not be excluded from competition for the other prizes.

Kansas City Houses Run Sennett Day and Date

Associated Producers Kansas City Exchange set a record for runs on Mack Sennett's comedies in that city during the week of July 11. Three leading down-town theatres were running productions by the comedy king simultaneously while the suburban houses in both Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kansas, were giving a strong showing to first runs on "Home Talent."

The three down town houses running Sennett productions released through Associated Producers, Inc., were the Liberty, Frank L. Newman's Twelfth Street and the Idle Hour. "Home Talent" was the feature at the Liberty for the entire week, and also the feature at the Idle Hour for the last half of the week. Newman's Twelfth Street ran "She Sighed by the Sea Side."

Summer Business Booming

Ass'd Producers Says Release of Big Pictures Has Beaten Slump

SUCH success is said to have resulted from the policy of Associated Producers in maintaining a heavy schedule of big releases for the summer months that announcement was made this week by that distributing organization that several more special productions will be made available for the exhibitor before the hot days are gone. When the question of a summer schedule of releases was taken up last Spring, General Manager Al Lichtman decided against any reduction in the number of releases.

According to a statement from the A. P. headquarters, the result of the policy is that the actual releases by Associated Producers during the summer, to date, has nearly doubled the number which were offered to the theatres during the first three months of the year. In helping the exhibitor to combat the disinclination of patrons to attend theatres when the thermometers are threatening to burst, the organization has offered nine big productions up to this time and intend to offer future productions at an equal if not an enhanced rate.

Records reported by the theatres which have availed themselves of the productions seem to shatter the tradition that comedies are the only business getters for the summer months. With the single exception of Mack Sennett's "Home Talent" all the special productions released have been screening of strong dramatic stories and include two J. Parker Read, Jr., productions featuring Louise Glaum "I Am Guilty" and "Greater Than Love"; two Thomas H. Ince all star productions "Mother O' Mine" and "The Cup of Life," Allen Dwan's "A Broken Doll"; Maurice Tourneur's "The Foolish Matrons" J. L. Frothingham's "The Ten Dollar Raise" and Associated Producers presentation of "Devotion."

Short subjects were not neglected in the schedule as prepared by General Manager Lichtman and so far the following two reelers have been put on the release schedule "Made in the Kitchen," "She Sighed by the Seaside," "Call a Cop" and "Hard Knocks and Love Taps," all Mack Sennett regular comedies and two of the Mack Sennett special comedies featuring Ben Turpin "Love's Outcast" and "Love and Doughnuts."

Unusually Strong Cast Seen in "Disraeli"

The finishing touches are being put on the George Arliss production, "Disraeli," which will be released by United Artists' Corporation in the early fall.

Chief among the many points of interest connected with this production of the celebrated international stage success by Louis N. Parker, is the fact that Mr. Arliss has surrounded himself with a cast of star players, some of whom have supported him in the stage version of this production for years.

The cast is announced to include Louise Huff, who plays the part of Clarissa, daughter of the Duke of Glastonbury; Mrs. Arliss, who plays the role of Lady Beaconsfield; Henry Carvill, an Enlish actor who plays the part of the Duke of Glastonbury; Frank Losee, who plays the role of Hugh Meyers, a London banker; Edward J. Ratcliffe, as Sir Michael Probert, governor of the Bank of England; Margaret Dale in the part of Mrs. Travers, the Russian agent; Grace Griswold in the role of the Duchess of Glastonbury, and Noel Tearle, who portrays the part of Fojambe.

Canton, Ohio, Theatre Opens with Universal Film

J. D. Kessler, manager of the New Alhambra Theatre, one of Canton, Ohio's most up-to-date picture houses, opened his doors last week with "Once to Every Woman," Universal's stirring Jewel production of mother love, starring Dorothy Phillips.

A novel feature of the opening week was free admission on the first four days of the week to all mothers over fifty years old. An added appeal to children was made with the announcement of free admission to all youngsters from one to twelve years of age who presented a horse-shoe at the box office.

Hal Roach's One-Reelers Get Broadway Showings

Two first-run bookings on Broadway have been registered by Hal Roach's one-reel comedies, featuring Snb Pollard and distributed by Pathe. During the week of July 10th, "At the Ringside," which critics without exception have regarded as the best work Pollard has ever done, was featured on the Rialto theatre program.

The following week, managing director Joe Plunkett of the Strand Theatre booked "No Stop Over," which proved the equal in laugh making qualities, of "At the Ringside."

Reports from all over the country indicate that the Roach comedies are winning big success, and it is estimated by Pathe that, two thirds of the theatres in the nation play these releases.

Liberty, in West Columbia, Is Sold

The Queen theatre, of West Columbia, Texas, of which P. A. Preddy is manager, announce that they have purchased the Liberty theatre in the same city from W. Santell, a real estate operator.

"Lone Wolf" Re-Issue Set for Aug. 20th

THE Selznick Corporation's plan of reviving some of the pictures with which the name Selznick has been identified in the past brings interesting announcements from time to time. Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, has chosen "The Lone Wolf" as the revival release for August 20.

"The Lone Wolf" is from the book of the same title by Louis Joseph Vance. Herbert Brenon personally directed the production, and Hazel Dawn and Bert Lytell are at the head of a notable cast which includes the names of Alfred Hickman, Edward Abels, William E. Shay, Stephen Grattan, William Riley Hatch, Florence Ashbrooke, Juliet Brenon, Joseph Chailles, Ben Graham, Robert Fisher and other prominent screen players.

"The Lone Wolf" originally was released by Lewis J. Selznick four years ago. The Selznick headquarters announces that the picture has been completely modernized with new titles and art effects and that new prints are already on their way to the exchangtes throughout the country.

CenturyComediansSeen in Thrilling Stunts

"Hold Your Breath!" the newest Century to be turned over to Universal for early release is said to contain many spectacular and hair-raising incidents, depicting Charles Dorety and Bert Roach flirting with death twenty-two stories above the street level. In this comedy much of the action takes part on the ledge of a roof, it is declared, and far below can be seen the street. William Watson, directed.

Conway Tearle in "The Fighter" Due July 30

The Selznick production of Albert Payson Terhune's story, "The Fighter," gets into circulation promptly on release date, July 30th, with Conway Tearle the star and Winifred Westover his leading woman. Henry Kolker, who also directed Tearle in "Bucking the Tiger," supervised production of "The Fighter" when it was made early this Spring.

The R. Cecil Smiths furnished "The Fighter's" scenario from which Director Kolker worked. Arthur Housman, Ernest Lawford, George Stewart, Warren Cook and Helen Lindroth have prominent roles in the support.

E. A. Paul Joins Merritt Crawford's Staff

Edwin A. Paul, a well-known New York newspaper man for many years, has just joined the publicity staff of Merritt Crawford, publisher of the Screen Bulletin, 904 Fitzgerald Building, 1482 Broadway.

Mr. Paul was employed on various New York papers until 1903 when he went to the Evening Telegram. Between the Herald and Telegram he spent thirteen years and then took up publicity work.

During the war he handled publicity for the Junior Naval Reserve and other patriotic organizations. He has directed publicity for several screen and theatrical stars.

"Shoots" Views 1,900 Feet Below Surface

A descent of 1,900 feet below the earth's surface to take motion pictures is the record just achieved by Tiry Miller, head cameraman of the Rothacker Practical Picture Division. The pictures were taken by order of the United States Bureau of Mines. M. F. Leopold, Bureau Safety Engineer, supervised the taking of the pictures which are to be made part of the Bureau's library of educational films.

Bill Fairbanks Offers Thrilling Western

UNUSUAL interest is centered in the first of the new series of Westerns starring William Fairbanks, which are being offered by the Western Feature Productions, Inc. This production, which is a rapid fire story of the plains, is entitled "The Broadway Buckaroo," and is to be followed by "The Man Who Rides Alone," which will give Fairbanks the opportunity to portray a member of the Northwest Mounted Police.

"The Broadway Buckaroo" was written and directed by W. Hughes Curran, who has been assistant director with Charles Ray, and who has spent two years with William Hart. In the leading feminine role is Maryon Aye, who played the feminine role in Larry Semon's comedy, "The Hick." The popular Fairbanks has played in the past with Dorothy Dalton, Annette Kellerman, William S. Hart, Louise Glaum and Gladys Walton, and in his first series for Western Feature Productions proved that he was able to turn out the peppy, thrilling Western drama so much in demand among independents.

Wm. Duncan Completing "Steelheart"

William Duncan, whose feature picture, "Where Men Are Men," was completed some time ago, the prints already being shown in Vitagraph exchanges, is now on the very last interior scenes for his new special feature, which is called "Steelheart." "Steelheart" will follow "Where Men Are Men" on the release schedule. This latter film is set for release on Vitagraphs September-October list, being one of nine productions for that specific period.

Respond to Independent Drive

Ass'd Exhibs Reports Big Increase in Sept. Bookings

ACCORDING to a statement from the headquarters of Associated Exhibitors, the plan adopted at the recent national exhibitors' convention to set September apart as "Independents' Month" is resulting in a big increase in the September bookings of Associated Exhibitors' releases.

"Any doubt of the power of the exhibitor to put over September as Independents Month vanished with developments in the exchanges during the past week, "reads the statement from Associated Exhibitors." "A banner month is looked for by this organization and even more important that the increase in business during that time is the general effect of that month on the motion picture business.

"The determination of theatre owners everywhere to not only play independently made pictures, but to support them with big campaigns of exploitation means that the beginning of that renewed state of prosperity will probably begin in that month. We confidently expect a greater Fall business than this industry has experienced.

"Constantly improving conditions assured this period of prosperity and this general activity manifested everywhere will unquestionably bring millions into the motion picture theatre habit again. It was fully expected that this would come in October or November but the decision at Minneapolis and the support it is getting from exhibitors means that September will see the return to better than normalcy in the motion picture industry.

"The Associated Exhibitors extends congratulations to the originators of this plan and to the exhibitors who are so loyally supporting it. They are not only rendering a great service to the independent maker of pictures, but they are serving themselves well.

"Harold Lloyd seems to be a great favorite with independent exhibitors. The success of the recent short subject week at the Capitol, New York, with Harold Lloyd featured in (Among Those Present) has made a deep impression and in scores of theatres a short subject week similar to that planned by Mr. Rothafel will be a feature of September. It is stated by many exhibitors that with Lloyd as the main attraction a program of independently made short subjects will be as strong as any program presenting a feature with the usual short matter.

"'The Rider of the King Log,' which has been meeting with success on first runs in every part of the country is another favorite much sought after for September. The demand already has been so great that extra prints are being ordered to meet it. It is pointed to as one of the distinguished successes in the list of independently made pictures of this year.

"Bryant Washburn in 'The Road to London' is also a big favorite. It is conceded to be the best picture Washburn has appeared in since 'Skinner's Dress Suit' and has proven a strong box-office picture at every showing. George Arliss in 'The Devil,' unquestionably one of the best independently made pictures of the year, and 'What Women Will Do' are also going over big.

"These facts, the great increase in bookings of these productions for September, indicate clearly the success of the Minneapolis plan even at this early date and we again extend congratulations to the originators of it."

Doris May Robertson-Cole Star

H. Stromberg Enters Producers Ranks by Terms of Deal

THE veil of secrecy which has surrounded recent announcements of the signing by R-C Pictures Corporation of a new production unit to star one of the most popular of the younger cinema personalities, is lifted in an official statement issued today by R. S. Cole, president of that corporation.

Contracts have been signed by which Doris May, who leaped into popularity as the leading light in the co-star combination of Douglas McLean and Doris May in "23½ Hours' Leave," becomes a star in her own right.

The transaction which brings Miss May into stardom is supplemented by the further announcement of the introduction into the production ranks of Hunt Stromberg, whose activities as director of advertising and exploitation for several leading film corporations including Thomas H. Ince, has provided him with a broad foundation of intimate knowledge of the various phases of the motion picture industry.

Under the terms of the deal, the Dorris May series of super-specials will be known as Hunt Stromberg Productions, presented and released by R-C Pictures Corporation.

Associated with Mr. Stromberg in the productions to star Doris May is William A. Seiser, a veteran director who has to his credit scores of box office successes. His more recent affiliation with Thomas H. Ince as director of the Douglas McLean features has distinguished him as one of the foremost directors of the silversheet.

Bern Cann who was in personal charge of the photography for all of the Douglas McLean and Doris May productions, and for the Paramount releases with Douglas MacLean as the individual star, will be chief cameraman in the new unit.

The formation of the Hunt Stromberg Productions and the decision to star Doris May is declared to be the direct result of pressure brought to bear by theatre owners in all parts of the country.

A careful survey conducted by the resident manager of the twenty-six R-C Pictures Corporation Exchange in as many principal cities is stated to have revealed a vote that was almost unanimous favoring stellar honors for Doris May whose sprightly and vivacious personality is largely responsible for the unprecedented success which first greeted the presentation of the MacLean-May combination.

In the selection of a distinctive type of American girl as typified by Miss May, the exhibitors who were impelled by the force of public favor, to indorse her elevation to stardom, were quick to substantiate the judgment which predicted a wide scope and virtually unlimited opportunity for the "completely different" personality which she so ably and artistically represents. Her refreshing style, a beauty that is all her own, and a talent for varied forms of farce comedy interpretation and comedy drama is demanded constantly by an ever-growing volume of motion picture patrons.

In a statement announcing the new arrangement, the R-C home-office declares:

"Prior to co-starring with Douglas MacLean, Miss May won the esteem of the public as leading lady for Charles Ray and others of the former Ince stars. Following her personal triumph in '23½ Hours' Leave,' she appeared to remarkable advantage in 'What's Your Husband Doing,' 'Mary's Ankle' and 'The Rookie's Return,' as well as many other comedy and comedy drama successes. Upon the expiration of her contract with Thomas H. Ince, Miss May determined upon a long vacation for a much-needed rest. Her more recent appearances prior to signing her contract with R-C Pictures Corporation by which she will be starred in her own well-earned right. She was featured as the lead in 'The Bronze Bell' and Maurice Tourneur's 'Foolish Matrons,' in which she scored great personal triumphs.

"The production policy determined upon for the Doris May series calls for original stories, books or popular stage successes in which the star will be presented in characteristic roles, with supporting casts to include the best known and most capable players available. Originality in theme, plot and situation is to be the keynote of all stories or plays selected for Miss May.

"According to officials of R-C Pictures Corporation Miss May's first story will be an original, not yet named, which is a splendid example of the particular type of modern comedy-drama, which is to guide the scenario department of the new unit. It now is being prepared in continuity form by Violet Clarke in collaboration with director William A. Seiter. Active production is scheduled to begin August 1."

5 New York Houses Play Comedy Day and Date

A few weeks ago, the Strand and the Rialto Theatres in New York City played the Larry Semon Vitagraph comedy, "The Bakery," for one week. Five of New York's big motion-picture houses have arranged to play Larry Semon's "The Bakery" during the entire week beginning Monday, July 11th. These five theatres are The Broadway, 81st Street Theatre, The Bushwick, The Orpheum and The Riverside. This is claimed by Vitagraph officials to be the first time in the history of motion pictures that five big theatres in the same city have played one picture for a full week, day and date.

In addition to the contracts for the above theatre arrangements also have been completed to show "The Bakery" in all of the Keith, Proctor, Moss and Loew Theatres in the territory included in Vitagraph's New York branch, making a total of 122 days showing under these contracts alone.

Frank Mayo Completes Film of South Seas

The cameras recently clicked off the concluding scene for "The Shark Master," the speedy Universal picture of the South Seas that has kept Frank Mayo in action for several weeks.

"The Shark Master" was written by Fred Le Roy Granville from his own experiences as a camera explorer and was directed by him up and down the coast from Magdalena Bay to Santa Barbara with stop-overs at Catalina and the Santa Cruz islands.

"Invisible Power" Crook Play of Real Merit

"The Invisible Power," scheduled among Goldwyn's first group of fifth year productions, for release early in the fall, is described by Goldwyn as a "crook play with a difference." It has the rapid action, the thrill and suspense of the best crook drama, with the heart interest and naturalness of the highest type of emotional drama.

"The Invisible Power" is a Frank Lloyd production. Charles Kenyon is responsible for the story. Irene Rich plays the leading female role, and House Peters appears opposite. Sidney Ainsworth and DeWitt C. Jennings are also seen in important roles.

Fiske O'Hara's Voice on the Screen ?

Fiske O'Hara, the Irish tenor star, has been offered a contract to head a film company producing Irish pictures. The offer included the Ann Nichol's plays used by Mr. O'Hara, for the past seven seasons. Owing to an existing contract with Augustus Pitou, as well as a personal attachment between star and manager, Mr. O'Hara has deferred any action on the picture offer until the end of his present engagement.

"Journey's End" Scores Hit

Hugo Ballin's Production is Well Received at Capitol Presentation

"THE Journey's End" which played at the Capitol theatre, New York City, during the week of July 17th, was tendered a very favorable reception on the opening day. There was liberal applause at the conclusion of the first performance, which indicated clearly the frame of mind in which the audience had been placed by Hugo Ballin's production.

In commenting on the reception accorded "The Journey's End," a statement issued from the Hodkinson headquarters declares:

"It is expected that 'the Journey's End' will make for itself a place unique in the annals of the cinema. It represents one of the real novelties of the current season insofar as it is the first serious drama to be brought to the screen without a single sub-title from beginning to end. Not only that, but Hugo Ballin's artistry has lifted it far above the average run of picture productions, and made of it a cinema creation which combines dramatic force with artistic perfection of a very high degree. The New York newspapers have been highly enthusiastic in their praise of the picture, speaking in glowing terms of the excellent workmanship which characterizes it throughout, both on the part of the director and the splendid cast which interprets the story.

"Mabel Ballin, who plays the leading feminine role, has never been more appealingly beautiful. Wyndham Standing and George Bancroft, the remaining featured members of the cast, do work which can best be characterized by the adjective 'splendid.' Mr. Standing is a veteran of the screen, having appeared opposite practically every feminine star of any importance, while George Bancroft, a 'find' of Hugo Ballin's gave a performance which has won for him high praise from public and press alike. A brilliant career has been predicted for Mr. Bancroft."

Rex Beach Completes Cast

Strong Aggregation of Players is Assembled for "The Iron Trail"

REX BEACH has chosen his leading players for the first production he is to make for release through United Artists, "The Iron Trail." The selections he has made, and which he announced this week, comprise some of the best known players in the film world.

Wynham Standing will have the principal male role playing the part of an "Irish Prince," while opposite him, as the heroine of the story will be Alma Tell, one of the most popular players on the screen.

Reginald Denny, son of the late W. H. Denny, famous for his work in the original productions of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, will have the principal juvenile role Mr. Denny recently finished work in the George Arliss production of "Disraeli" which will also be released in the early fall by United Artists. Since his discharge from the British Army three years ago, Mr. Denny has been in this country and played in several very successful pictures.

Other members of the cast who have already been chosen to appear with these players are Bert Starkey, Betty Carpenter, who will play an ingenue part, Eulalie Jensen, the well-known character actress and Harlan Knight. As previously announced, Thurston Hall, will play the "heavy" role. R. William Neill has been selected as the director.

"The Ship" Released in Fall

Will Be Issued After "Theodora"; Other Goldwyn Subjects Announced

FOLLOWING the release of "Theodora," in the early Fall, the Goldwyn organization is planning to distribute Gabrielle D'Annunzio's screen masterpiece, "Ship." Both of these Italian made photoplays are of special magnitude; but their spectacular qualities are equalled by their story values declares the Goldwyn home-office. They have both unusual leading women in the main parts. "Theodora" is played by Rita Jolivet, who is well known in America. And the leading role in "The Ship," is in the hands of Ida Rubenstein, a Russian dancer of continental reputation who has never appeared in America.

With the release of these two Italian specials, Goldwyn will have four super-productions to introduce to the public in the coming season. The other two are the Rupert Hughes' made-in-America pictures, "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead." They are entirely different in treatment and in material from the spectacular Italian masterpieces. Where the latter deal with tales of imperial splendor, the American pictures portray simple stories of home life, and show that the every-day incidents in the lives of our countrymen have a romantic interest that was hardly suspected.

Besides these four super productions, Goldwyn's regular program for early Fall release includes pictures written by Charles Kenyon, Alice Duer Miller, Rita Weiman, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Gouverneur Morris, Leroy Scott, and Anzia Yezierska.

Film Version of Story Approved by Author

About all that has been said by the Selznick Corporation concerning their special feature "A Man's Home," to be released some time in the future, is that there is such a picture. "A Man's Home" was written by Anna Steese Richardson, associate editor of the Woman's Home Companion, in collaboration with Edmund Breese, the well known stage star. Miss Richardson has visited the Selznick offices and seen the production in its entirety for the first time.

The best proof that the production is one hundred percent is that the author not only did not complain of the manner in which the story had been translated to the screen but was enthusiastic in her statements that the camera had gone her many points better in getting over to the public the thought she had in mind when the story was written.

"Woman in the Case" Begun for Paramount

Production work has been started at Hollywood on "The Woman in the Case," which has been adapted by Albert Shelby LeVine from the play by Clyde Fitch. The picture will be released by Paramount. Penrhyn Stanlaws is directing. Betty Compson is the star, and William T. Carleton, who is well known as an operatic singer as well as a stage and screen artist, is the leading man. The cast also includes Cleo Ridgely, a former Paramount favorite; Casson Ferguson, regarded as one of the most popular leading juveniles; Henry Barrows, Helen Dunbar, and Lucien Littlefield.

Fitzmaurice to Produce "Three Live Ghosts"

On the completion of "Peter Ibbetson," in which Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid are co-starring and which is expected to be finished early this month, George Fitzmaurice, it is announced by Paramount, will go to London where he will produce "Three Live Ghosts," the play which has had a long run this season on Broadway. Ouida Bergere is writing the scenario, and it is expected that this production will be the most lavish that has yet come from Paramount's London studio.

Family at Christie Lot Has Six Additions

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Christie, of the Christie Studios, are being congratulated on the recent arrival of six sturdy additions to the family. The young Oscar-Christies have been appropriately named Oscar, Jr., Al, Charles, Fred, Minnie, and Mamie.

While mother Letty is reported to be doing well, the youngsters have had their christening in the fountain, and Mr. Oscar Christie, the proud father, who is said to be the only trained duck in moving pictures, is at work gathering worms for his offspring.

Crisp Unit Goes to Scotland

To Film Exteriors for "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush"; Has Fine Cast

DONALD CRISP, who has just started the production of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush" at Paramount's London studio, has gone to Scotland with his company to film the exterior scenes for the new picture.

The script which Margaret Turnbull has skillfully evolved from Ian Maclaren's story, calls for exceptionally fine and subtle character work, and a large number of candidates have had to be interviewed, before Mr. Crisp and Casting Director Lestocq have succeeded in finding precisely the types required for the leading character parts.

Mr. Crisp has been singularly fortunate in his choice of Alec Fraser as his leading man, Mr. Fraser is a young actor with a good presence who has appeared in a number of Stoll productions and who has earned for himself a considerable reputation on the musical comedy stage. Jerrold Robertshaw, a distinguished actor of the legitimate stage, will be seen in the part of the Earl of Kilespindle. Donald Crisp himself has undertaken the dual duties of actor and director. He will appear in the role of Lachlan Campbell, the austere Highland shepherd, while Mary Gynne will portray his daughter, Flora.

John East, who has been secured for the part of Postie, is an acknowledged artist in this type of role. He is an "old stager" in the literal sense of the world, one of the pioneers of good old English melodrama and made the pioneer's business pay, too, in those rearing days.

James English, another famous veteran, has been cast for the part of Dr. MacClure, and Mrs. Hayden Coffin, who played Mrs. Beresford in Hugh Ford's "The Great Day," has been entrusted with the wonderful part of Marget Howe.

The company will be away for five weeks, during which time preparations will be made at the studio for the filming of the interiors after their return.

Music for the Fall Program

Exhibitors Giving Question Close Attention, Says Music Score Corp.

IN a statement issued during the week from the New York office of the Music Score Service Corporation, it is declared that exhibitors, in addition to their customary mid-summer practice of considering prospective bookings for their fall programs, are this year giving much of their attention to the question of the music which will accompany their fall presentations. In anticipation of an increased demand for a music service of a kind to be synchronized with film offerings, the Music Score Service Corporation has issued the following statement:

"Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of 64 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill., stand sponsors for what it is believed, is destined to become the greatest development in a musical way the motion picture industry can boast of.

"Through twenty-two branches in as many key cities of the country, this company leases to motion picture theatres a full Synchronized Music Score for every standard production made by all standard producers. These scores, personally compiled by such authorities as Carl Edouarde, Hugo Riesenfeld, Erno Rapee, James C. Bradford, and J. C. Breil, are adapted for use in any house, no matter what the size of the orchestra. Their use eliminates much of the work that orchestra leaders have had to do in the past inasmuch as they are perfectly compiled and ready for instant use. With the world's largest library of music at their disposal and interpolating much original music of their own, the scorers of the Synchronized Scenario Music Co., are enabled to compile scores that are certain to please any audience. Repetition of music is unknown. New melodies are always in vogue, and all the very latest music, fresh from New York triumphs, is used as themes for Synchronized Scores where the screen action makes it possible."

Music Score Service Corporation, of 1600 Broadway, N. Y., local distributors for these scores report the signing of many contracts for their service. Exhibitors Film and Service Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., upstate distributors of Synchronized Scores, also report contracts with prominent upstate picture theatres.

"Molly O" Rivals "Mickey"

Camera Work Finished on Sennett Special; Mabel Normand is Star

FILMING of "Molly O" has ceased at the Mack Sennett Studios where the Mabel Normand stellar picture has been in the making for nearly six months under the direction of F. Richard Jones and the supervision of Mack Sennett. The picture is a completion, so far as the camera is concerned; the rest of the work on "Molly O" is for the cutting room, the editing processes, the subtitling and the art titling. It is expected that "Molly O" will be delivered into the hands of Associated Producers for distribution by September 1.

A statement from the Los Angeles headquarters of the Mack Sennett organization declares that "a fabulous sum was spent in its making." The entire company was taken to Pensacola, Fla., for the purpose of taking the thrilling aeroplane pictures at the government's Pensacola aviation station. These aerial views and the spectacular ball scenes staged on the largest set ever built by Sennett are among the features of the new production.

"But I am perfectly satisfied," says Mack Sennett, on speaking of production costs, "over the results. It isn't what a picture costs that matters, it is what a picture is worth, and I deemed no expense too great to provide Miss Normand with a setting suitable to her and to my determination to make 'Molly O' the only rival that "Mickey" has ever encountered."

Jack Mulhall was engaged as leading man; Lowell Sherman was assigned the part of the principal "heavy" to be supported in his suave villainies by Ben Deely; Jacqueline Logan, bright "comet" in the constellation of screen stars, was secured for the role of the charming, graceful adventuress; Albert Hackett plays the part of the wayward and younger brother of Molly; Anna Hernandez plays the part of her mother and George Nichols, as he was in "Mickey" will be seen as the father of the heroine. Eugenia Besserer, Frank Bond and Eddie Gribbon also appear in the cast.

Realart Announces Release

Bebe Daniels Has "Good Little Bad Girl" Role in "One Wild Week"

REALART'S "good little bad girl" in "One Wild Week" is well cast in the role of Pauline Hathaway. As Pauline, Bebe Daniels has a regular "cut-up" part, the kind that best suits her peppy disposition.

The story was written by Frances Harmer and adapted for the screen by Percy Heath, one of Realart's staff scenarists. In substance it is the tale of a young girl whose antics always keep her in hot water. Especially as far as her maiden aunt is concerned. Aunt Emma, never having had any children, naturally thinks she knows all about their up-bringing, and being a typical joy-killer, Pauline takes particular joy in disproving her theories.

How Pauline escapes from a net of circumstances that threatens to enmesh her, furnishes the material for several reels of rollicking comedy which finally ends with Bebe Daniels hanging from the roof of a house and receiving a proposal from the hero, who occupies another perilous position.

Major Maurice Campbell keeps up his pace as a director of high-class comedies, "One Wild Week" being the sixth which he has done for Realart with Bebe Daniels as the star.

Frank Kingsley, who plays opposite Miss Daniels is a newcomer with Realart and possesses a personality that fits in well with his role.

Maym Kelso again appears in the Daniels cast, as does Frances Raymond also. Herbert Standing, and Edwin Stevens, Edyth Chapman, Carrie Clarke Ward and "Bull" Montana also appear in the cast.

Metro Announces Release Schedule for the Coming Year

They consist of the Rex Ingram productions of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Turn to the Right," and "The Conquering Power"; seven special productions each for Bert Lytell, Viola Dana, Alice Lake and Gareth Hughes; and the Nazimova production of "Camille."

Besides enumerating the particulars of the Metro schedule for the twelve months to come, Mr. Rowland spoke of Metro's aspirations to present on the screen the clearly outstanding photoplay achievement of the year. He said:

"Metro demonstrated how sincere was its purpose and how painstaking were its efforts when it gave to the screen 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.' It has been seen in many of the biggest cities of the United States and Canada; and the verdict of the public and the press, whether in New York, San Francisco, Montreal or Pittsburgh, has been uniform in placing it at the very top of artistic and popular success. In brief, everyone says it is easily the greatest picture ever made.

"But Metro isn't going to stop there and pat itself on the back. There are other things for its hand to do. A few months ago the company bought from John Golden a half interest in the screen rights to 'Turn to the Right,' for a quarter of a million dollars. Rex Ingram has returned to the West Coast to make the picture. It has every element of a tremendous success; a record-breaking history when given at the Gaiety theatre in New York; and with Mr. Ingram to screen it, it will have an added lustre."

This stage play, it will be remembered, set a record for price when half interest in it was purchased by Metro last February for $250,000 from John Golden, its producer on the stage. It was written by Winchell Smith and Jack Hazzard; and it will be presented in pictures by Marcus Loew and John Golden.

Mr. Rowland said furthermore:

"A third great long-run production is Mr. Ingram's recently completed picture 'The Conquering Power,' from Balzac's 'Eugenie Grandet.' One of the most significant things said about this picture, when it ran, first at the Rivoli and then at the Rialto theatre, in New York, was that it was finer than anything Germany had sent over: it is the American answer to the Continental challenge.

"Navimova's modernized version of 'Camille.' we expect to be another sensation. It means a great play—one of the greatest ever written—done with the whole soul of the greatest actress who ever has attempted the title role. And it has been brought up to date, which is natural, for when the younger Dumas wrote it, he made the piece contemporary, not historical. To keep it contemporary, we must dress it according to the mode of 1921.

"For Bert Lytell, Viola Dana, Alice Lake and Gareth Hughes, we have a series of seven pictures each which we believe will prove the very best of their careers. In having these stars to enact the leading roles of the most interesting and distinctive stories obtainable in the literary or dramatic market today, Metro has artists who are versatile and magnetic and immensely popular. The acquisition of Gareth Hughes is immensely gratifying. Although young, he is among the most capable actors today either on stage or screen. And he is different. He has an imaginative personality of a sort that is unique. He is capable of anything from light comedy to searching character study.

"The Metro plans for the coming year are ambitious. But the company is ambitious. It believes in the best and it tries its best to make the best—it holds that supremacy is the best policy."

The special productions starring Bert Lytell, mentioned by Mr. Rowland, are: "A Trip to Paradise," a Maxwell Karger production of a play by Franz Molnar, as translated and adapted for the screen by Benjamin F. Glazer, and scenarioized by June Mathis; "Junk," a Maxwell Karger production of Kennett Harris's Saturday Evening Post story, likewise with continuity by Miss Mathis; "Lady Fingers," a Bayard Veiller production of Jackson Gregory's story as scenaroized by Lenore Coffey and four others.

Viola Dana will be seen in "The Match Breaker," a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production of the story by Meta White, done into continuity by Arthur J. Zellner; in the Bayard Veiller production of Frank R. Adams's story, "There Are No Villains," as adapted by Mary O'Hara, in Alice Duer Miller's "The Fourteenth Lover," under the direction of Harry Beaumont in "The Cave Lady," by James Cullen; in "The Five Dollar Baby," by Irvin S. Cobb; in "That Girl Patsy," by J. Malden Feigl; and in John A. Moroso's "Rings and Things."

For Alice Lake's starring appearances have been chosen "The Infamous Miss Revell," a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production of W. Carey Wonderly's story, whose scenario was written by Arthur J. Zellner; "The Claim," whose title may be changed; "Double Cure," by Edgar Selwyn; "The Hole in the Wall," by Fred Jackson; "June Jeopardy," by Inez Haynes Irwin; "The Making of Eleanor Jay, by Thompson Buchanan, whose two successful plays for Grace George and "The Cub" for Douglas Fairbanks brought him celebrity; and "Moonlight," by George Kibbe Turner.

Gareth Hughes will appear in seven George D. Baker productions for S-L (Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin) Pictures, to be distributed by Metro. Two already have been completed at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Including these the septet of Hughes pictures are: "The Hunch," by Percival Wilde; "Garments of Truth," from Freeman Tilden's story in Pictorial Review; "Little Eva Ascends," Thomas Beer's story as published in the Saturday Evening Post; Ben Ames Williams's story, "Barber John's Boy," from Munsey's Magazine; "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse by N. Warner; and "Tommy Carteret," by Justus Miles Forman.

Besides making every effort to provide the exhibitor with the best-made pictures producible, Mr. Rowland added that especial emphasis would be placed by Metro upon service to the exhibitor in the matter of delivering prints, accessories and press material well in advance of exhibition time, so that the showman might realize to the fullest extent upon the quality of the Metro releases.

From Usher to Head of Producing Unit

Dallas Fitzgerald, who is directing Alice Lake in "The Infamous Miss Revell," the little Metro star's newest picture, is one of the few men in the professional world who took the motion pictures seriously in the early stages of the industry. At a time when others were inclined to look upon films as a fad, he began making them his life work. As a result, Mr. Fitzgerald has worked in practically every department of picture production.

It was as an usher in a theatre in Louisville that Mr. Fitzgerald started his professional career. His chance came when a member of the stock company was absent and he was called upon to fill the place. He played it so acceptably that he was made a regular member of the organization. Later, he formed his own company and produced for several years.

When the old Imp corporation was first organized, he was selected to play a lead in one of the first two-reel dramas. In this, too, he was successful. Since then he has been connected with the motion picture industry as an actor, technical director, production manager and director.

Previous to joining Metro's directorial forces, Mr. Fitzgerald supervised a series of productions in New York, including "Chains of Evidence," "Smashing the Vice Trust," with Governor Whitman as the leading actor, and "The Twenty Million Dollar Counterfeiting Case," with William Burns and prominent government officials in the cast.

About two years ago he was engaged by Metro to direct Bert Lytell in "The Price of Redemption" at the company's studios in Hollywood. Since that time, he has directed Viola Dana in five of her most recent successes: "Blackmail," "The Offshore Pirate," "Cinderella's Twin," "Puppets of Fate" and "The Match Breaker."

Karger Engages William Davidson for "Junk"

Maxwell Karger completed the cast for his production of Kennett Harris's story, "Junk," starring Bert Lytell, when he added William Davidson to the cast, in the role of Dillingham Coolidge, rival of the hero.

"Townless" Townspeople Welcome Metro Star

Residents of Burbank, California, citizens of the town whose namesake has for many years astounded the world with mongrel vegetables, such as the spineless cactus, the leafless cabbage and the thornless lettuce, underwent this week the rare sensation of astonishment when Gareth Hughes, star of the forthcoming Metro release, 'Garments of Truth," was given an ovation at the railroad station by two hundred townspeople of Burbank who didn't live there.

The townless townspeople were the ten score extras engaged by George D. Baker, director of this S-L Picture for Metro, in order that the home coming scene in the photoplay based on Freeman Tilden's story be strictly according to 'script. Although the maker of the George D. Baker production realized that an announcement of the advent of Gareth Hughes to the California town would bring out many more than two hundred, he feared that a crowd uncontrolled by the pay envelope might not take his direction exactly. Hence his insistence upon a made-to-order aggregation; and also upon a special train and crew. This was got by arrangement with the southern Pacific railroad.

Rex Ingram to Marry Alice Terry

Rex Ingram, director of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Conquering Power" both Metro pictures

REX INGRAM, producer for Metro of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Conquering Power," is engaged to marry Alice Terry, the last year's high school girl who sprang to fame in the leading roles of the two big Ingram productions.

A rumor of their engagement had been running through the motion picture world for several weeks. The report was confirmed this week by Mr. Ingram in a telegram from Metro studios in Hollywood, Calif., to Metro's New York offices.

The engagement is the culmination of a romance that started last summer when Mr. Ingram saw Miss Terry among the "extras" at a Hollywood studio. He was then looking about for a girl to play the role of Dora Woodberry in Metro's production of Cecil Raleigh's melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps." Dora, in the picture, is an English girl of dazzling loveliness who poses for a celebrated portrait painter—a type of beauty that proves an inspiration to the artist.

"Miss Terry is made for the part," said Mr. Ingram when he saw her. "With the inspiration of such beauty any artist would rise to great heights."

His words proved prophetic. Although they were applied to the artist in the picture, their personal application to the romance of Mr. Ingram and Miss Terry is clear today. Mr. Ingram lifted Miss Terry from obscurity to the first rungs of the ladder of fame in "Hearts Are Trumps," and together they mounted to the heights in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Conquering Power."

It is doubtful if any mansion in the country has as picturesque an alcoholic alcove as that recently constructed at the Metro studios in Hollywood for scenes of Bert Lytell's newest picture, a Maxwell Karger production of Kennett Harris's Saturday Evening Post story, "Junk."

Unfortunately it is satisfying only to the eye, the reminiscent and wistful eye, and not to the throat, for its alcoholic content falls below the governmental minimum of half of one per cent. The bar is of the old 'Forty-nine variety. A man's bar, with mirrors, a rail for the weary and accustomed foot, a no-checks-cashed warning and a man behind with contempt in his eye for all to ask a chaser.

Edith Kennedy Joins the Metro Scenario Staff

Edith Kennedy, for four years a writer of original stories and continuities for Famous Players, has joined Metro's West Coast story producing department in Hollywood, Cal.

The first product of Miss Kennedy's typewriter under her new Metro contract will be the continuity for Viola Dana's forthcoming production, "The Fourteenth Lover," from the story by Alice Duer Miller. She will continue to write exclusively for Miss Dana and her director, Harry Beaumont.

Metro Reorganizes Its Research Department

Metro has reorganized its research department at the Hollywood studios and placed it under the direction of Miss Josephine Dillon.

The rearrangement is not merely one of personnel, but of resources. The most comprehensive library of reference books ever established in a motion picture studio has been instituted, it is declared. Specimens of old documents, plates of styles from the days of the fig leaf to the second-story skirt, volumes upon volumes relating to the customs of other days, whether ten years or ten thousand ago—these are but representative of the extent of Miss Dillon's department.

EdytheChapman Is Cast for "Lady Fingers"

Bayard Veiller announces this week from the Metro studios in Hollywood the selection of Edythe Chapman as a member of his forthcoming production, "Lady Fingers," starring Bert Lytell.

A Dual Role for Alice Lake, Metro Star

Nathan Hirsh Back from European Trip

NATHAN HIRSH, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, arrived in New York from Europe on Wednesday of last week. Conditions on the other side were found to be favorable, Mr. Hirsh said, particularly as to the marketing of independent productions. He made contracts for the handling of Aywon films in many cities while abroad, he declares.

He also stated that he had brought back from Europe a feature picture which he predicts will score a big success. The Aywon Film Corporation will, according to Mr. Hirsh, begin the production immediately for four five-reel features. These are to be thrilling jungle stories and will show the many varieties of animals controlled by the world famous Hagenback. As a matter of fact the first of the series has already been nearly completed and is expected to be ready for screening within the next two weeks.

Schlesinger Organizes Co.

Resigns from Inter-Ocean to Head Own Export Company; Has Big Plans

GUS SCHLESINGER, for the past six years associated with the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation as manager of the company's department of foreign film sales, announced this week his resignation from that organization and simultaneously the formation of his own export company. Schlesinger's latest move was motivated entirely by a normal desire for growth and expansion, and is the culmination of an ideal which he has secretly cherished since his entrance into the motion picture industry about ten years ago.

Mr. Schlesinger has taken offices in the Candler Building at 220 West 42nd Street, Suite 1007, and will henceforth transact all matters of business from these offices. His plans embrace the establishment of an extensive export organization designed to be of service to the American producer of motion pictures. Together with a corps of export specialists with whom he hopes to surround himself as soon as tentative plans materialize, he will conduct an export service reaching into almost every foreign country in the world it is declared.

It is also Mr. Schlesinger's hope that he will be able to establish even better mutual relations between the foreign buyer and the American manufacturer. In the past the American manufacturer by virtue of a previous contract, has in many cases unloaded his many films regardless of their adaptability to certain foreign film markets, it is declared in the announcement of the new company. Mr. Schlesinger, on the other hand, proposes to act both as foreign representative for the American manufacturer and resident foreign buyer, in this way developing a closer and more harmonious relationship between these two important factors, it is explained.

"School Days" Completed

Features Wesley Barry; His Red Top and Freckles to Be Seen in Colors

HARRY RAPF, who has just finished work on "School Days" featuring Wesley Barry announced this week that he was working on several natural color scenes for the opening of the feature and that the blending of the different shades would eclipse anything ever attempted in this line previous to the release of "School Days."

The opening scene in "School Days" will be a shot of Wesley Barry enjoying himself in the 'ole swimming hole displaying his red hair and numerous freckles just as they are. Wesley Barry is one of the few performers who is suitable for color reproductions inasmuch as few of them are blessed with red hair and a superabundance of freckles.

Some of the largest indoor sets ever built at the Biograph Studios were built for the filming of "School Days." The Tilford Studios who have finished the sets for most of Harry Rapf's latest productions also supplied this service for "School Days." One of the largest interior sets was a reproduction of the home of a wealthy merchant in Pelham Manor, N. Y., and was carried out to the last detail. One entire floor of the large Biograph studio was used for this set with six different rooms being utilized at the same time.

Prior to his departure for California this week Gus Edwards who produced "School Days" as a vaudeville act several years ago announced that the special prologue that he will furnish for the presentation of the film version was well under way and that his organization was working night and day to make it the most novel entertainment ever offered in a cinema house.

"Bill" Burt Will Make Two-Reel Dramas

WILLIAM P. BURT, for several years associated with George B. Seitz in the production of the latter's serials, is now producing a series of two-reel dramas for the Putnam Popular Productions, three of which already have been completed. The productions are being made from stories by Capt. Ross Whytock, of the New York World, a well-known American journalist and a member of the Army Intelligence service during the war.

"Tales of the Tenements" is the general title of the Burt productions, which are being made in the Hal Benedict studio at College Point, L. I. Announcement of the marketing methods of the series will be made later.

These stories are based upon the actual experiences of Mr. Whytock during his long career as a newspaper reporter. Many of them are founded on "inside information" obtained by Mr. Whytock while covering the biggest police cases in the past decade.

Lauds Adaptability of Urban's "Classics"

The variety and adaptability of the Urban Popular Classics is nicely illustrated by a comment on the part of Harriett Underhill, reviewing the program at the Capitol theatre this week. Discussing the Kineto Review, "Rome," Miss Underhill says it so in accord with the tone and atmosphere of the feature picture that the audience almost believes it actually is a part of the feature.

Two of Charles Urban's Movie Chats are also playing on Broadway this week. Movie Chat No. 48 is at the Rialto theatre and No. 49 is at the Rivoli.

Tarzan Serial Nears Finish

Robert Hill Said to Have Included Many Novel Effects in Production

IN the production of "Adventures of Tarzan," now nearing completion under the direction of Robert F. Hill at the studios of the Great Western Producing Company in California, it is said that many effects new in the making of serials have been introduced.

Due to the jungle atmosphere which forms a large part of the backgrounds for the action throughout this new serial starring Elmo Lincoln, it has been possible to achieve some startling climaxes through the use of the various wild animals. The climax of episode number one, entitled "Jungle Romance," shows two lions leaping bodily on Elmo Lincoln from opposite ledges, while episode two presents a realistic fight between a lion and a leopard. A tremendous effect has been obtained in the finale of the fifth chapter by means of a jungle fire. It is stated that in the staging of this fire, the entire studio buildings of the Great Western Producing Company narrowly escaped burning, and the scenes on the screen are particularly thrilling.

The construction of a vault built of gold, representative of the City of Opar, furnishes a gorgeous touch in chapter three of "Adventures of Tarzan" and an additional touch is loaned to these scenes by the presence of several hundred characters, both men and women, in the roles of native gold worshippers. A most realistic sandstorm features the unfolding of episode eleven.

Aside from these various picturesque features, "Adventures of Tarzan" lays claim to presenting more wild animals throughout the entire production than any serial yet produced. Every episode offers several scenes in which Tantor, the elephant, Joe Martin, the ape, Numa, the lion and a host of animals of the jungle, including zebras, wild boars, crocodiles, etc., figure prominently. It is said that Elmo Lincoln and Louise Lorraine, leading players in this serial, have endangered their lives many times for the sake of realism.

Change in Sun-Lite Comics

Reelcraft Says This Series Will Emphasize "Gags" Not "Situation"

IN accordance with plans just completed by Shiller Productions, Inc., Sun-Lite Comedies, which are nationally distributed by Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, are to be changed from a series of "situation" comedies to a series of "gag" comedies. This announcement comes in the form of a special statement issued this week by R. C. Cropper, President of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation.

The statement offers the explanation that comedies of the "gag" type, best exemplified in the Mirth and Aladdin comedies, both series of which are released through the Reelcraft distributing organization, are greater laugh-provokers and better suited to present theatre conditions. In rounding out a theatre program, it is emphasized, a comedy full of "gags," presented towards the end of the show, is more likely to be appreciated than a comedy brimming with "situations." While of course this is merely a personal viewpoint, it nevertheless evidences a desire on the part of the Reelcraft producing units to make comedies patterned after the popular demand.

In effecting the change in the type of comedy which will henceforth feature all future Sun-Lite Comedies, a new producing unit will veritably come into being. The company of comedians who have heretofore been cast in Sun-Lite Comedies will be augmented by the addition of a number of other prominent players who are well-known by virtue of their effective pantomime in "gag" comedies. The new producing policy will also necessitate the addition of another director and scenario writer, both of whom will have achieved a reputation for effective "gag" comedies.

Kineto's "Fable" Films Win Commendation

The recent announcement of Kineto Company that it had forthcoming a series of film translations of the famous old fables by La Fontaine has elicited favorable comment on the part of the photoplay critics of some of the daily newspapers. These films are to be known under the general title, "Modern Truths from Old Fables."

James W. Dean, motion-picture editor for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, following a recent showing expressed the following opinion which is typical of the other comments received on the new series:

"The film versions of La Fontaine's Fables are the finest entertainment for children ever placed upon the silver screen. . . . The immortal race of 'The Hare and the Tortoise,' teaching its immortal moral, is impressively visualized. . . . A child who has not yet mastered his ABC's can 'get' the story and the moral as the moving picture depicts it. . . . For these Fables are really enacted by things that creep and crawl and swim and fly."

The grounds surrounding the mansion are said to be beautiful and to offer considerable variety as to settings.

SHALLENBERGER of Arrow Film Corporation announces that Jack Hoxie, star of the series of Western productions being made by Ben Wilson and distributed to the independent field by Arrow will arrive in New York City on July 28th, completing the first half of a country wide tour of independent exchanges and theatres that has gone down on record as one of the most successful and spectacular personal presentations a motion picture star has ever made.

A writ has been issued by the Empire Palace Theatre, Limited, of London, England, at Toronto, against President Barney Allen, Jule Allen and J. J. Allen, of the Allen Theatre Enterprises, Toronto, to recover damages for alleged breach of contract under which the plaintiffs claim that the Allens agreed to purchase valuable freehold properties in London on which it was proposed to erect a large moving picture theatre. Various chattels, fixtures, furniture and other articles are also mentioned in the writ. The action will be heard in the courts of Ontario, it is said.

The Midway Theatre, a famous moving picture theatre of Montreal, was destroyed by fire on June 27 in a spectacular blaze which swept the theatre soon after it had been opened for the afternoon shows. There were about 100 patrons in the theatre when the blaze was discovered. They reached the street without difficulty.

It is not known definitely how the fire started, although it was reported that some waste films in the projection room became ignited in some manner. The two upper floors of the theatre were used for the making of the big special fronts for the house, and these were filled with inflammable material, it is declared. The fire drew 15,000 people to the scene and squads of police had difficulty in holding the crowd in check.

The theatres of Toronto, Ontario, have paid the civic administration about $218,000 for property and business taxes this year, according to an official announcement by a city official. The property assessment for all local theatres is placed at $5,341,863, while the business tax is a total of $1,266,149 for the year. The actual realty tax is $176,281, while the assessment for total business is $41,784.

It should be pointed out that the assessed valuation of all theatre properties does not represent the market price of the theatres, the assessment being based on an arbitrary valuation which does not nearly approach the actual value of the many theatres. In addition to these taxes, small theatres pay an annual license fee of $50, while the large houses pay a license tax of $100 per year.

GLADISH.

CLEVELAND

Max Marcus owns the U. S. Theatre in Cleveland. The U. S. is a neighborhood house, one of the largest of its kind in the city. It caters principally to a foreign element. It depends for its patronage upon the Saturday-pay-envelope type. It was a straight five-and-ten-cent house until the war came along. Then the pressure was too great and Marcus, like others, was driven to raise his prices. They rose steadily until they reached seventeen and twenty-two cents. And there they have stayed for the past two years.

But there is where Mr. Marcus strikes out independently. The war is over. Wages are reduced. Employment is scarce. Commodities are coming down in price. So, beginning this week, the U. S. theatre lowers its admission price to five and ten cents again. Marcus is the first exhibitor in the territory to come down to pre war prices. "What's the use of kidding ourselves," says the foresighted Mr. Marcus. "Everything's tumbling in price. Why shouldn't we fall in with the times?"

Several changes in the local Paramount office become effective this week. Ed Fontaine shifts his office managership from Pittsburgh to Cleveland, and George Schneider, who has been office manager of the local office, takes over similar duties in the Buffalo Paramount exchange.

His fiancee's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moritz Bossack, 905 West End avenue, New York City, have announced the engagement. It will not be long before Miss Esther Bossack is Mrs. Thomas D. Goldberg.

A rough survey of the local situation shows the New theatre closed for renovation; the Strand dark for a few weeks; the Cluster being rebuilt; and the New Belvidere motionless on Tuesday, Thursdays and Fridays. A number of other houses are putting into effect stringent retrenchment methods and a few others are to close for the remainder of the summer. Both the New Century and the Hippodrome have made preparations, it is reported, to darken their doors for a short period in the event business does not pick up.

Bush, head of the Bush theatres, owners of the house. A previous attempt, a month before, had failed as the burglars were scared away by an employee of the theatre who happened to be working late.

Amendments passed by the city commissioners at Pawhuska, Okla., last week to the occupation tax ordinances, struck a heavy blow to traveling shows, traveling venders and the so-called "fly by night" artists who have heretofore preyed on Pawhuska. Heavy taxes on outside concessions are expected to reduce the number of peddlers. Baby racks, cane and knife racks, merry-go-arounds and similar devices such as are used at carnivals must pay $10 per day.

Lecturers, concerts, entertainments, exhibitions and all other similar amusements or devices, not scientific, or literary, or in the nature of a concert or musicale, must pay $20 a day. Prize fights are taxed $25, and circuses with or without a menagerie $150 a day.

OKLAHOMA CITY

G. B. Howe, Kansas City auditor for the Universal Film Company, was in Oklahoma City this week auditing the local exchange's records.

Manager Sam Benjamine of the Universal will leave in the near future for a three weeks' trip to California, where he will visit Universal City and perhaps spend a season with Harry Chaney on the latter's ranch. Sam and Harry became fast friends when the star was on a visit to Oklahoma City a year ago.

J. R. Webb has taken over the management of the Dome theatre at Cyrik, Okla.

Two projectors were purchased last week by Manager Jackson of the Camera theatre at Stillwater, Okla., from the Southern Theatre Equipment Co. in Oklahoma City.

The Carter County Free Fair at Ardmore, Okla., will be the greatest yet conducted in this vicinity, as evidenced by the cooperation which all citizens are giving towards its success regardless of whether they are farmers, business men or professional or laboring men, fair officials declared Friday. Business men have donated prizes to the value of more than $6,500. The latest donation has been made by the Carpenters' Union, consisting of 200 members, which Thursday night voted unanimously for each member to give a day's work towards the construction of new buildings at the fair grounds.

R. P. Short and son of Sulphur, Okla., have taken over the management of the Liberty theatre at Ardmore.

SAN FRANCISCO

The Goddard theatre, Jay street, Sacramento, largest show house in that city, has been taken over by the T. & D. Jr. Circuit. This circuit is constantly adding new houses and will, it is predicted by many, be the largest circuit in the San Francisco territory within six months.

San Francisco exchanges have noticed a temporary depression in Nevada recently. The condition, however, is reported as rapidly getting better.

Harry Lustig, Western representative of Metro, was winner of the gold watch issued to the representative of the territory making the greatest increase in business during the month of March. To celebrate the occasion he took the Western branch exchange managers to the Dempsey-Carpentier fight as his guests.

Exhibitors throughout the territory are being urgently circularized by the All Star Feature Distributors exchange in San Francisco with a view toward cooperation in "an independent month drive," during September.

McGalbraith has opened an airdome in Visalia for the summer.

C. S. Greene, with a house in Gridley, has opened another theatre across the street.

Henry Daly has opened a third house in Chico. The three theatres will run for the summer.

Data concerning every phase of the motion picture distribution and exhibiting industries is being collected and notes made on every angle of the problems confronting exhibitors by Wayland H. Taylor, publicity and exploitation man at the San Francisco Paramount exchange. Mr. Taylor has already achieved considerable acknowledgment from theatre owners in the territory who are availing themselves of Taylor's service.

KANSAS CITY

M. Van Praag, Kansas City, Kas., who was elected recording secretary of the M. P. T. O. A., at the Minneapolis convention, and C. H. Burkey, Kansas City, Mo., who was named as one of the executive committee, returned home last week. They were accompanied by C. T. Sears, Brookfield, Mo., who also is a member of the executive committee.

Asserting that he was connected with a theatre, a man who gave his name as Fred Sims, Kansas City, recently booked "Luck of Geraldine Laird" and two single reel comedies, "Hearts and Diamonds" and "Betty and the Boys" from the Robertson-Cole branch in Kansas City and failed to return them. The Kansas City branch has searched the city for the man, but without avail. Exhibitors in Missouri and Kansas have been asked to notify the R.-C. Corporation of Kansas City in case any news is heard of the missing films.

Ben Blotcky, manager of the Kansas City branch of the F. B. Warren Corporation, has temporarily located on the seventh floor of the Film building.

A. K. Boussad, owner of the Star, World-in-Motion and Subway theatres in Kansas City, announces that he will close the Subway theatre this month and, after remodeling and redecorating the house, will reopen it as a vaudeville theatre.

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation branch in Kansas City, is now located at 111 West Seventeenth street, with the Pathe Film Exchange.

R. C. Cook, Kansas City, manager of Success Photoplays, has returned from a trip through Kansas, visiting all the key towns, and reports that first runs have been closed in every key town on the six Franklin Farnums and "Love's Battle," with Eileen Sedgwick. First runs also have been sold in Kansas City.

Hy Smith, northwestern supervisor of the Synchronized Music Company, was in Kansas City last week in conference with C. H. Stewart, Kansas City branch manager. Mr. Smith is making a tour of all the branches in the northwestern division and reports that Synchronized music is being used successfully.

Stuart Doyle, general manager of the Union Theatre Company of Australia, and W. A. Gibson, general manager of the Australasian Films, Ltd., who are making a tour of the world in the interests of their enterprises and who are making a study of film and theatre conditions in various countries, were in Kansas City last week. Mr. Doyle stated that his company was planning the erection of two new theatres which will be built on the order of the Capitol theatre of New York and that he is collecting ideas from the large theatres of the world for these two new houses.

Joe Fox, Kansas City, head of the Phoenix Film Corporation, announces that he has purchased the distribution rights for the Arrow Film Corporation's big serial, "The Blue Fox," starring Ann Little.

The Kansas City Goldwyn branch has sold first run bookings in Kansas City on every one of their 1920-21 output, according to W. E. Truog, Kansas City Goldwyn branch manager.

Two Kansas City motion picture houses, the Idle Hour and the Gayoso, have closed for the summer months. Lack of business was the reason given.

NEW ENGLAND

Damage estimated at more than $500 was caused recently at the Bradley theatre, Putnam, Conn., by a vandal who, entering by means of one of the fire escapes, tore down decorative draperies, slashed the projection screen and did other damage in the lobby. Theodore Latorie, a former employe of the house, who had been previously prosecuted for defacing walls of the theatre with tobacco juice, has been arrested and is being held in $1,000 bail, pending further investigation by the authorities.

The motion picture theatre owners of Norwich, Conn., are planning to hold a "get-together" dinner and invite Tax Commissioner Blodgett to attend and help exhibitors in the task of compiling their state amusement tax returns. The new amusement tax law passed by the general assembly goes into effect on September 1.

Reports from Hartford, Conn., proclaim business to be satisfactory among the local film theatres despite the slump in other localities.

Because of the handicap occasioned by "daylight saving," business depression and extremely hot weather, vaudeville and motion picture houses of Springfield, Mass., with few exceptions, are to be closed during July and August.

Hartford, Conn., theatres now open will continue to keep "open house" during the summer, according to the announcement of local managers yesterday.

Believed to have been struck by lightning, the Orpheum theatre at Savin Rock, Conn., probably the best known and pretentious summer resort motion picture house between New York and Providence, R. I., was destroyed by fire during a severe electrical storm early Sunday morning, with estimated loss of $60,000. The loss is said to be partly covered by insurance. It is believed the theatre will be replaced in time for opening next winter.

Widespread and open protest is being made throughout Connecticut over the five per cent. theatre tax, which goes into effect on September 1. The bill was signed by Governor Lake on Saturday, despite the huge deluge of petitions and requests that he refuse to sign it, and in spite of the objection of theatre owners and the general public.

A fire in the Poli Building, Worcester, Mass., recently caused an estimated damage of between $8,000 and $10,000 to that structure and the Plaza theatre next door. The lobby of the Plaza was badly gutted, the ceiling being completely ruined. The rest of the house escaped damage. The fire-wall on the north of the theatre prevented the flames from penetrating to the auditorium of the Plaza. Performances were continued in the evening of the day following the fire, the lobby passage having been sufficiently cleared to permit ingress to the theatre.

MINNEAPOLIS

"Daddy" Strong, veteran show man of Minneapolis, has been pensioned and placed on the Universal pay-roll for the rest of his life, according to A. N. Berman, assistant general manager of Universal.

"Dad" turned the crank of the first motion picture machine in Minneapolis, which was brought there from London in 1896 by Theodore L. Hays, general manager of Finkelstein and Ruben theatres. Since that time Strong has served as operator at various Minneapolis theatres and for the past fifteen years has worked in the inspecting room of the Minneapolis Universal exchange.

George N. Briggs, former publicity director for the Finkelstein and Ruben Enterprises, Minneapolis, now has charge of the programs for the State theatre, Minneapolis, and the Capitol theatre, St. Paul. Mr. Briggs has named the programs "A Little Magazine," which is just what it is. Ranging from eight to twelve pages in size, it is replete with interesting news concerning players and coming attractions.

Two of Finkelstein and Ruben's largest downtown motion picture theatres, the New Lyric and the New Garrick, the Calhoun, a neighborhood house and the New Grand which ran both motion pictures and vaudeville, have been closed for the remainder of the summer.

Because of the great slump in business caused by the hottest weather Minneapolis has experienced in fifty years, Finkelstein and Ruben have taken this time to give these theatres a complete renovation and remodeling.

The opening date for the theatres has not been announced but it is planned to have them ready for the fall season.

The Finklestein and Ruben staffs have been cut to a minimum for the summer, and a cut in salaries has been placed in

NEW ORLEANS

The week of July 2—8 was "First National" week in New Orleans. That is, every picture shown in New Orleans for the week was of the First National. This was the first week in the history of "Crescent City" filmdom, in which this idea was carried out.

The Strand theatre rendered a double bill last week as a feature of its fourth anniversary and a very strong additional attraction was the appearance in person of Pat O'Malley, one of the leading characters in Bob Hampton of Placer. Mr. O'Malley, with his characteristic magnetism and cheery smile, made two appearances before large Strand audiences on Monday (July 4th) and two on Tuesday and entertained briefly with little informal talks on motion pictures in general.

Appearing by special invitation of the Strand, Mr. O'Malley dropped into the city from Natchez, Miss., where he is playing the leading part in "Slippy McGee," a Morosco First National production being filmed there.

Many "Saengerites" (employees of the Saenger Amusement Company, Inc., of New Orleans) were entertained with a big barbecue at Elmwood Manor, the company's summer recreation home for its employees at Bay St. Louis, Miss., on July 4. Ernest Boehringer had charge of staging the affair, which was attended by many friends of the company in New Orleans, including Marshall Ballard, managing editor of the New Orleans Item, and E. V. Richards, manager of the company, and Mrs. Richards and Mr. Grandjean, publicity director for the company, and Mrs. Grandjean and a host of others.

BALTIMORE

Louis A. DeHoff, for years manager of the New theatre, who has a wide circle of friends, has been sent by the Whitehurst interests to a higher position here at the Century theatre. William E. Stumpf, Jr., former president of the company which operated the Goodtime theatre, has succeeded Mr. De Hoff.

Visitors to New York were J. M. Willis, of the Merit Film Company, and M. A. Berger, of the Apex Film Company.

J. A. Cunningham is renewing acquaintances hereabouts and digging up business. He is covering this territory for the Select Pictures Corporation.

Following a trip through Virginia, Frederick Klein, local representative of the Associated Producers, has returned. The trip, says Klein, was productive of good results.

PENNSYLVANIA

The fact that Harrisburg, Pa., has adopted the daylight saving time is given as the chief reason why four theatres, controlled by the Wilmer & Vincent interests in that city, have closed for the rest of the summer. The Capital, a motion picture house, and the Majestic, part pictures and part vaudeville, gave their last performances for the season on Saturday night, July 9, and a week earlier, the Grand, a picture house, and the Orpheum, stock and legitimate, became "dark" for the rest of the summer. The other two Wilmer & Vincent houses, the Colonial and Victoria, both picture theatres, will continue in operation without interruption.

After having served successfully as house manager of the New Colonial theatre, in Allentown, Pa., since its opening last October, I. E. Sanders has been transferred, by the Wilmer & Vincent interests, owners of both enterprises, to the Colonial, Third and Market streets, Harrisburg. Mr. Sanders succeeds, in Harrisburg, O. B. Feldser, who resigned to take over, as a partner of Samuel Katzman, the new film theatre of the Broad Street Theatre Company, about to be opened at 1304 North Third street, Harrisburg.

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin bill, 525A, providing for the regulation of the price of balcony and gallery seats in motion picture theatres, was killed by the Senate shortly before the legislature adjourned. The Assembly had passed the bill.

The Rex theatre, at Beloit, Wis., has been closed for the present. The Rex, together with Beloit's two other motion picture theatres, is owned by the Orpheum Picture Company.

The partial shut-down of Fairbanks-Morse and other industries, together with the opening of another amusement park, has probably been the cause of the closing.

"The Right Way" Scores in Norfolk Hou s

To the Producers Security, Feinberg writes: "Mr. Wells, who owns all the theatres in Norfolk and Richmond, said this feature was the surprise of his show experience."

ABOUT PLAYERS

Personal appearances having become a permanent fad, Hope Hampton has joined the corps of artists who are the exhibitors' obliging friends. At the Broadway theatre, in connection with her picture "Love's Penalty," Miss Hampton appeared nightly for the week of July 10th. The management had two reasons to be grateful. It brought the many people who would have come to see the picture anyway, but it brought hosts of people who would otherwise have remained home and kept cool. In the hottest week known to the constant followers of thermometer registrations for many a day, Miss Hampton brought crowds of people and kept the patronage at its height, during the entire week.

Surprising as it may seem that a screen actress is possessed of a singing voice, one which might make her a separate fortune, yet it is nevertheless true that she made her "personal appearance" something to remember by those who came to "see her," and who went away voting they would next time go also, to "hear her." She sang three beautiful light numbers, well selected for the occasion, and was recipient of much applause.

Miss Hampton aims right for the heart of the "fan" and seldom misses. She tells them how she became a motion picture star in a delightful little story of her temporary training in a dramatic school. Upon the presentation of a "class play," she was assigned the role of a "French girl," and it is here that Miss Hampton proudly declares herself a descendant of the Irish. In any event, she did not think she was "the type" for a French girl, but Leonce Perret, who happened to be in the audience, did. Upon requested presentation, he immediately offered Miss Hampton an opportunity to try a part in a screen play he was about to produce, and her "try-out" was convincing. That was the beginning. The end, she vizualizes by a little story concerning ambition, one in which she states that her ambition to win the hearts of the people, by painstaking, constant work, is the only thing in life which she will never relinquish. And with the determination she registers upon the screen, the audience could not but believe that the lady possessed of acknowledged beauty and talent will surely achieve her desire.

partment Store, printing Miss Hampton's itinerary for the day, during her stay in Columbus. Following is an excerpt from the letter:

"As a matter of interest we wish to advise you that wherever Miss Hampton appeared she was accorded a great welcome."

Personal appearances seem, after all, to be "the thing" these days.

House Peters, who plays the title role in 'The Man From Lost River," a Frank Lloyd production for Goldwyn, went into a Los Angeles shop the other day to be measured for some shirts. After applying the tape to him the clerk announced: "Mr. Peters, you have the exact measurements of Jack Dempsey." "How many shirts did I order?" inquired the actor. "Three." "Make it six, will you?"

Lon Chaney's full name is Lon Frank Chaney. He made his first big success in "The Miracle Man." He scored heavily in "The Penalty," by Gouverneur Morris and will soon be seen in "Ace of Hearts," by the same author.

Marie Edith Wells will play opposite Fred Church in a series of two-reel westerns to be made in an eastern studio. William Jones will play the heavy lead, with Morgan Jones in a very important role in the same production.

Norman Kerry has been spirited away from his native land and city, to join the ranks of motion picture players abroad. He will play a leading role in the George Fitzmaurice production for Famous-Players, to be made in London.

Athole Shearer will play the ingenue lead in a series of pictures for the Schiller Productions, being made in Yonkers, N. Y.

In the Robertson-Cole production, which has been given the working title of "The Barricade," Miss Katherine Spencer has been enengaged for the leading role. Dorothy Richards will also be a featured member of cast, while Nina Cassavant will play second lead, opposite Miss Spencer.

Said Sylvia Breamer to the Goldwyn p. s.: "I don't see how you can get pieces in the paper about me; nothing ever happens to me." "What you have just said is good for a paragraph," answered the scribe. "No!" countered the incredulous Sylvia. Whereupon they made a bet—a box of candy against a box of cigars—and it looks as though Miss Breamer is going to lose.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

Lauded as a representative Italian who has achieved exceptional success as an artist and a business man and who has contributed a substantial share towards the development of the motion picture, Robert C. Vignola, director of special productions for Cosmopolitan, has been invited by the Society of The Sons of Italy, one of the most exclusive Italian organizations in the world, to become an honorary member.

According to officials of the society there are but five honorary members in the whole organization and honorary membership is rarely conferred and only for exceptional achievement. The decision of the society to honor Mr. Vignola has just been made after an exhaustive investigation into his private and business life. The honor is awarded him for his distinctive success as a director of motion pictures and for his evident contribution to the art of the cinema.

Preparations for the conferring of the order are being made now and the event will take place in Albany, N. Y., Mr. Vignola's home, at a date to be announced later. High officials of the organization will attend and assist in the ceremonies that will inscribe Mr. Vignola's name upon the rolls of the organization as one of the most brilliant sons of Italy.

Director Frank Lloyd has returned from Big Bear, Cal., with the Goldwyn company filming "The Man from Lost River." The director caught a nice string of trout, the largest weighing 4½ pounds. He says that none of the others caught a single fish, but, you know, the director is boss of the company.

A well known cast has already been engaged, comprising William Tooker, Nellie Parker Spaulding, Pauline Garon, Robert Kenyon and Robert Bentley. The Biograph Studio will be used for interiors. Walter R. Sheridan will be associated with Mr. Kennedy as Assistant Director, Albert Viragh-Flower has been engaged as Art Director and George Peters will do the personnel, Melville J. Shyer will act as master of properties.

Alfred E. Green who with Jack Pickford is directing Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," got the shock of his life when two pistol shots fired on the Pickford set announced a surprise party on his twenty-ninth birthday.

Punch was served and a cake bearing fifty candles was cut. Needless to say the cake caused a great laugh, considering that Green is only twenty-nine.

Among the gifts presented to the director were a leather-bound set of Balzac autographed from Miss Pickford; a gold fountain pen from Mrs. Pickford; a complete set of traveling bags from Jack Pickford; a gold pencil from Bennie Zeidman and a morocco and gold cigar case from the crew.

George D. Baker, among the most prominent of motion picture directors, will next apply his magically directorial hand to "Little Eva Ascends." The production to be made in California.

"Dawn of the East" with Alice Brady, will be the fourth picture within the current season to appear on Broadway, which has been directed by E. H. Griffith, the young director who started his career not so many months ago, with Vitagraph.

The fact that J. Stuart Blackton went to England to produce features starring Lady Diana Manners, has not interfered with keeping the name of "Blackton" before American theatre-goers. The Commodore's daughter, Marion, has signed a contract to play one of the leading characters in "Skylark," which is scheduled to open at the Belmont Theatre on July 25th. Previously the daughter of the American producer-director appeared with the Yonkers Stock Company and the Beechwood Players.

Music and The Picture

Music in Your Theatre

"What Has Been Your Most Successful Musical Experiment"

By Charles D. Isaacson

Author "Face to Face with Great Musicians," Etc. Editor "Our Family Music" Page, N. Y. Globe

I want to publish the stories of musical motion picture successes, and widen the scope of our relationship. We have been honored in the confidences and co-operation of readers everywhere. Without exaggeration, it may be said that over a thousand exhibitors have been in intimate contact with your music editor at some time or other—on some problem or other.

Tell me what has been the most successful musical stunt you have ever staged. This might be an entire program, a special scoring of a picture or a musical number on a program.

Write down in your own way the story of that particular idea—tell in detail what you did, how you exploited it, and how the public responded. And why you think it was so much worth while. Just what did it teach, demonstrate or prove?

A symposium of these stories will be of tremendous value to the rest of the News readers, who have joined hands around this editorial board. What has been done in one city can be duplicated anywhere. And the broadest visioned executive, the man who is glad to open his secret archives for his contemporaries and colleagues will be rewarded in the old biblical manner "he who casts his bread upon the waters," etc.

Photoplaying and the Music Teacher
By Robert N. Watkin

THE music teacher perhaps more than anyone else, recognizes that music is a great and growing force in the civic welfare of a community.

The music teacher responds nobly to any effort made to improve the taste for music, and I therefore feel sure of the co-operation of music teachers in any efforts to improve music in the play-houses of Texas. That is my plea here today. You teachers have a wide influence, and when you realize that every year the moving picture houses of this country are bringing to their millions of patrons music in some form or other, you can readily believe that they exert a tremendous influence on the musical development of a community. While those who attend picture shows are unconscious of music's appeal, the appeal is there, and involuntarily the patron is affected.

These facts were largely the important ones that were brought out in the motion picture-music conference, held in New York City last January. In calling this conference Charles D. Isaacson, music editor of Motion Picture News, said:

"The time has come for a concerted action on the part of the musical and motion picture interests for an alliance which will have for its aim the simplification of motion picture music, an alliance which will serve both musician and motion picture interests for the mutual welfare of the industry and arts; an alliance which will further the movement to bring good music into the motion picture theatre as a means or the development of the development of the highest type of picture patronage.

"The time has come for a definite move in this direction. The first national conference will be important not only for what it accomplishes, but for what it sets in motion and for the goal toward which it moves.

"The best way to make musicians understand the theatre needs and to make the theatre men get the most out of a musician is for both interests to know each other intimately and to make their plans in common."

The music picture convention brought out already one idea: That the theatre generally succeeds which has learned that music enables the proprietor to give his theatre a personality, an atmosphere, which makes lasting patrons.

Women are recognized as leaders in all educational movements, and women even more than men realize that of all the liberal arts, music has the greatest influence over young people.

It has been truly, "As is a nation's music, so is that nation in morals." It is important that the right kind of music be heard in our picture shows. Music in this country is for the masses, but we must not presume that the masses do not want good music. Give them a chance.

The motto of the music department of the federated clubs is: "To make good music popular and popular music good." That would be a splendid motto for the Music Teachers' Association. In this way America will come into her own as the leader of the world in music.

THERE'S ever so much more of a need for flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon, than for piano, violin and 'cello, that the clever entrant into musical circles will think matters over carefully and see what he can do which will make it easier for him to succeed.

The obvious instruments to choose in making a musical career are piano, violin and 'cello, but as the saying goes, the words are full of those who play them well. The unusual and hence the less popular instruments are in the wood wind section of the orchestra. Would you believe it, when you hear that it is the most difficult thing in the world to find enough artists on the flute, clarinet, oboe and bassoon to go around? When a conductor wants to fulfill his long latent ambitions, to head a genuine symphony orchestra which can compete with the other standard bodies, he finds himself balked. Where can he get a wood wind section?

If you want to become popular with the conductors of orchestras, learn to play one of the wood wind instruments and do it so well that all will be competing for your services!

Walter Damrosch, who recently offered scholarships for oboe players brought that matter to a focus. He declared that the condition would be ludicrous if it were not so disastrous in its effect. If an oboe player might only divide himself into a hundred parts he could immediately obtain a hundred engagements! Mr. Damrosch some years ago went to France and actually imported the musicians he needed and made it attractive for them to stay in America. And Mr. Damrosch made his orchestra a success. When he was in France during the war he started a school for army band musicians and would have turned out several excellent artists in all instruments, but the armistice ended activities.

Those who go into music as a profession have in mind the desire to do something artistic or something that pays well—or both. If the reader is seeking an activity requiring expert and specialized knowledge which will be highly interesting and lucrative, this is a field to consider seriously. The opportunities are unlimited, the competition is comparatively nothing. Outside of a few masters of the instruments, America is a deserted plain. With the growth of the orchestra and opera idea in this country, the demand is growing. Every new motion picture theatre which wants to make a showing is installing a full orchestra—and what is an orchestra without its wood wind? Every band needs its wood wind.

SUCCESSFUL ARTISTS IN FILM CIRCLES
(Open to All Who Measure Up to the Title)

Amanda Brown, the colorature soprano, who occupies a foremost position in motion picture theatres, left this week for her home town, Williamsport, Pa., where she intends to remain for the months of July and August.

Miss Brown completed a very successful season in New York, confining her appearances to the New York and Brooklyn Strands exclusively. This remarkable artist appeared under the direction of the New York Concert League at 1664 Broadway, singing at these theatres practically a solid season, finishing last Saturday at the New York Strand, where she appeared in the prologue to "Cabiria."

The long term engagement of Miss Brown at these theatres is unprecedented and both Manager Joseph Plunkett and Edward Hyman are looking forward to re-engaging this remarkable artist for the coming season.

Another New York Concert League artist who has been placed in the Metropolitan district is Leon Zario, the young tenor who appeared at the New York Capitol in the title role of "Pagliacci." Zario recently returned from an extended tour of the leading picture theatres through the Middle West and South, returning East in time to open the New Branford theatre in Newark for the Fabian interests. He begins an indefinite engagement at the Brooklyn Strand theatre for Edward Hyman this week.

WELL KNOWN MUSICIANS AVAILABLE FOR THEATRES
(Inquiries May Be Sent in care of Music Department)

During the visit of the San Carlo Opera Co. here last Fall, the name which was on every one's lips, and which inspired the speculators to raise their prices for his performances, was that of Vincent Ballaster, the young Spanish baritone, who has been engaged by Mary Garden for the Chicago Opera next season.

Born in Valencia, he studied painting up to the age of eighteen, when the Mayor of the city heard him sing, and secured him lessons with the famous Jean de Rezske. After two years in Paris he made his debut in Pagliacci (the role of Tonio is one of his greatest interpretations). He made a big name for himself in Italy, whence he toured South America and Mexico along with Rosa Raisa and Stracciari.

He is now singing in the Buenos Ayres Opera, and will return here in the Fall for his work in concert and with the Chicago Co.

New Metropolitan Theatre Opens in Atlanta

Sig. Samuels Proud of His "Dream" House

The new Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta's newest motion picture theatre was formally opened to the public on July 4, and proved a most interesting and auspicious occasion.

The theatre is located at the corner of Broad and Luckie streets, an ideal site, being opposite one of the city's most popular downtown hotels, half a block from three others and in the heart of the city's best business district.

It is built of cream brick, cool and restful to the eye, and an ornament to its section. It is a block long, running from Peachtree and Broad, down Luckie street to the corner of Forsyth street, and occupies one-fourth of a block in width. It is six stories in height, three stories being occupied by the theatre, the remaining three stories being modern up to date offices. It is worthy of comment that the entire list of offices were leased before the foundations for the theatre had been dug. The rental from the offices will be more than sufficient to cover the cost of operating the theatre, so that the entire income from it will be "pure velvet"—which again demonstrates to

David Love, conductor of the Metropolitan orchestra, and a native Georgian, began his musical career in Atlanta at the age of three and a half years. Since then he has been a very vital part of the city's musical life. Two years ago when he came out of the army from overseas service he took charge of the Criterion orchestra and now that he is assuming the direction of the Metropolitan musical organization of twenty-one pieces he will continue to supervise the Criterion orchestra

Sig. Samuels, owner of New Metropolitan, Atlanta

Atlanta that Sig. Samuels, owner of the Metropolitan, is both a canny and a shrewd business man.

The entrance to the theatre is from Broad street, and the outer entrance has been done in soft, dull sapphire velvet, and gold, with a box office of copper grill work and Tennessee marble. The huge poster frames at either side of the box office are sapphire blue velvet, framed in gold, the specially hand-drawn cards, oval-shaped, edged with gold, and done on soft, cafe-au-lait cardboard.

These frames hold cards on which the entire program is given, together with the hours of each performance.

Stepping inside double-glass storm doors, one enters a lobby that is done in blues and bronzes, with Tennessee marble. The poster frames are all of gold, with sapphire blue velvet mats, cards in pale, soft brown, edged with gold, with stills attractively placed. Every poster ,or bit of advertising paper is special hand-drawn by Stoufer, who has, for several years, been in charge of all such work for the Criterion, the older sister house of the Metropolitan.

Leaving the lobby, one enters the house proper. Here is a rather broad "promenade," carpeted in dull, soft brown. At either side are broad, shallow steps of Tennessee marble, with tall, hand-carved balustrades over which have been flung, with careless grace, some really excellent Persian prayer-rugs. The bottom balustrade of each staircase holds a tall, shaded electric light.

The color scheme of the theatre is a blending of soft tan—cafe au lait—and browns, shading together so harmoniously that the effect is one of airy simplicity and charm. The relieving notes of color are in the Wedgewood medallions—ivory white figures on a background of delicate green-blue, an indeterminate shade, beneath the lights that is distinctly restful. The delicate coloring is made more effective by the contrast with the grills of weathered copper in the box partitions, balcony railings and ventilators. Under the tints and shades of various coloring which the theatre takes under the skilfully arranged art lights, the effect is unusually good.

"The Metropolitan theatre will be operated as a motion picture and music theatre exclusively," said Willard Patterson, manager of the Criterion, and who is to manage the Metropolitan. "It was designed for that purpose alone, and was not designed so that it

Willard C. Patterson, managing director of Sig Samuels' Metropolitan and Criterion theatres, was given an ovation when he appeared on the stage of the Metropolitan at the brilliant formal opening Monday evening, July 4th. Mr. Patterson has been associated with Sig Samuels for five years and his experience in the show business covers a period of twenty-one years. To him more than to any other individual goes the credit for the substantial financial success of the Criterion and an even brighter future is predicted for him in the administration of the Metropolitan could be converted into a regular theatre later on. There will be no vaudeville acts in connection with the pictures."

And so the stage is designed principally as a background for the motion picture screen. It is curtained in dark green velour, and old gold. Beneath this is a curtain of dull, old blue that makes a beautiful drape for the screen during overtures.

On either side of the stage are boxes done in the same color scheme, with weathered copper grills as petitions, and gilt chairs upholstered in tans and browns.

The downstairs part of the house seats 950, while the boxes and the balcony bring the seating capacity up to 1,700.

The mural decorations are a matter of pride with the management of the house, and deservedly so, as they are the work of A. Vollmer, and Mr. de Pomorski, his able associate, who did the decorations for the Capitol theatre, New York.

"We have done larger theatres and many of them," said Mr. Vollmer, "but never have we been more pleased with our work than with the decorations of the Metropolitan."

The dome of the theatre attests most brilliantly the quality of this work. The dome is done in gold, with airy, graceful figures in bas relief. For all the size of the dome, the effect is graceful and dainty, and no one wonders why Mr. Vollmer is pleased with his work.

Climbing the stairs, one enters the main promenade, carpeted in soft, dull brown and golds and a faint, elusive touch of blue. There is one beautiful divan, in gold and brown, in Jacobean oak. There are comfortable chairs, where one may recline at one's ease, and meet one's friends.

Mounting three low steps, one comes out on a balcony built out over the street, catching every vagrant breeze. This balcony is paved in dark red, Moorish tiles, and a square wicker table. The chairs and settee are upholstered in brown and gold and blue cretonne, and there is always a low copper bowl full of fresh flowers on the table. This little outdoor sitting room has already proved to be the most popular spot in the theatre, for meeting one's friends, or waiting for the beginning of the program, when one comes in in the middle of it.

At the left of the little balcony-sitting-room, is the ladies' parlor, in green and rose and cream—gay old-fashioned English chintz, and a long, cozy chaise-lounge, comfortable chairs, and with two maids in attendance. Instead of one or two dressing tables, with a crowd of women always fighting for space to powder shiny noses, this rest room has two whole walls done in mirrors—one long mirror on each wall, covering that entire wall. There is a glass-covered cretonne shelf running beneath these mirrors, and eight small dressing tables before each shelf. There is always powder, rouge, eye-brow pencil, and similar aids to feminine beauty. There are phones, too, for Milady's convenience.

The men's smoking room is at the right of the entrance, on the first floor, down a flight of red-bricked stairs. It is tiled in the same dark-red tiles as the balcony, and furnished in solid, masculine looking mission, all in the same Adam period as the theatre. There are also plenty of phones, and there are smoking stands, cigarettes and cigars.

The operating room is a model of its kind, and houses two especially built Powers 6B machines, and with a specially built "color-dissolving" light.

The pipe organ is another item of special interest, being designed by Charles Sheldon, city organist for Atlanta. There is an echo organ placed in the back of the theatre to add to the effect of the main organ, which will be in the hands of George Lee Hamrick, a native Georgian, and a fine musician.

Perhaps one of the most unique features of the theatre is the installation of the Acousticon, in the orchestra pit, for the benefit of all deaf, or hard-of-hearing patrons who wish to enjoy the music. When these patrons enter the theatre, they are shown, by the usher, to a seat where the attachments may be applied, so that they need not be deprived of this by no means inconsiderable part of the program.

The house is cooled by means of the typhoon system — twenty-two big fans being used "mainly for psychological effect," as Willard Patterson expresses it.

With the exception of one magnificent chandelier on the mezzanine, there isn't a single unshaded electric globe in the place. All lighting is the indirect system, the globes in coves shaded with pale golden silk, with golden tassels.

There are individual shaded globes at the end of each aisle, so that there is no stumbling about, when patrons come from the lighted street into the darkened theatre.

When the theatre is filled with 1,700 people, it can be emptied in a little more than two minutes, by means of sixteen fire exits. The theatre has been made as fire-proof as possible, and nothing, no matter how slight, has been left undone to add to the comfort of the patrons.

Iced water has been piped to all parts of the house—and if anything more can be done for comfort, the management would be pleased to know it, so that they could add it to their list.

Sig Samuels, who is responsible for the Metropolitan theatre, has been, for several years, a power in the motion picture industry of Atlanta. It is said that the only thing he ever lost in the game was his hair—and he still has enough of that to make a trip to the barber necessary.

He came to Atlanta twenty-five years ago, without a dollar. He has made all of his money in Atlanta—and there is considerable to his credit in the way of bank stocks, real estate and business houses right here in Atlanta.

His first theatrical venture was six years ago, when he bought a half interest in the Alpha theatre, a little "storeroom" house in Whitehall street, that has proved a veritable gold mine. The Alpha has weathered all fashions in pictures—the first massive four-reel productions, regular programs, and finally serials and short subjects. But Mr. Samuels has held on to it throughout—as a sort of good luck piece.

He next bought the Savoy, and, five years ago, on the Fourth of July, he opened the Criterion theatre to the public. Straightway, it took its place as Atlanta's most popular theatre, and has built up, in the past five years, a following as loyal and steadfast as the old friends we read about—and none too often, find in real life.

"The Metropolitan theatre is a hope — a dream—realized" said Mr. Samuels. "And now that I have realized that dream, I shall build no more theatres."

Willard Patterson, who, in addition to managing the Criterion theatre, will manage the Metropolitan, has been in the show business practically all his life. In reality, he left the classic shades of the University of Georgia, to go out as advance agent, property man, and scene shifter for a perapatetic minstrel show that didn't have any more idea of its bookings than Patterson had of riding in a Pullman car.

Pat's friends—which means everybody that knows him—were not a bit surprised when Mr. Samuels did not send to New York for a manager—they knew that with Pat he didn't have to.

Mr. Patterson is one of the livest, most up to date exhibitors in the territory, and a showman of proven ability.

Among the firms who were interested in seeing that the Metropolitan was one of the finest and best equipped theatres in the southeast were the following:

The Metropolitan theatre is a member of the Associated First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and their pictures will be chosen from the very best of the independent market. The feature picture for the opening, July 4, was Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton, of Placer," following the second week with Charles Ray in "Scrap Iron."

Vacuum Cleaner Truck Solves Theatre Owners Problem

Show Houses Easily Kept Attractive by Machine

In providing for the comfort of his patrons, one of the first problems which the progressive owner of a theatre has to contend with is cleanliness and sanitation. A clean attractive theatre makes a lasting impression on the patron, who is seeking his recreation naturally remembers the show house where he has found the most ease and comfort.

Moving picture houses especially, where large audiences of different classes of people are coming and going at all times, must have all parts spotlessly clean in order to make the patrons get the feeling that they really are at home in the place.

An unclean show house is one that will rapidly lose its patronage. The one where sanitary cleaning has produced the spotless house is the theatre that invites and attracts the public.

The problem of providing an adequate method of quickly cleaning a theatre at a low cost is one that has confronted the moving picture theatre for some time. A practical way for cleaning every part of the theatre in the cheapest possible manner has long been sought.

One method that has been rapidly gaining favor through its thoroughness and despatch and is being used by many exhibitors at present is the truck vacuum cleaner. The problem of reaching every section of large houses with quickness has been solved by this machine.

This has been used to great advantage in cleaning the carpets in the aisles and boxes, draperies and coverings of comfort rooms, carpets in the lobbies, halls and stairways, the cloth seats and the drapings and other cloth decorations about the stage.

The vacuum cleaner truck system of cleaning is one that requires but little cost to install. The motor rests on rubber tire wheels so that every section of the theatre can be reached. Current for this durable one-half horsepower machine may be taken from the fuse box that controls a floor or a section of lights. No installation of new sources is necessary. The cleaner operates on a 110 or 220 volts, direct or alternating current.

Popularity of the machine is largely gained through its simplicity, as it can be successfully operated by women or the most unskilled labor, reducing exceptional results at very small costs.

The Arco Wand Truck Vacuum Cleaner, manufactured by the American Radiator Co., is being used in many of the large moving picture houses of the country. Some of the houses in which this machine is being used are as follows: Anniston theatre, Anniston, Ala.; Biograph theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Chateau theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Central Park theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Colonial theatre, Columbus, O.; Commercial theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Covent Garden theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Crawford theatre, Chicago, Ill.; Crown theatre, Chicago, Ill.; J. Ventilation Show Demonstrates How Movies Are Kept Cool Despite Heat

Many Theatre Men Visited Exhibition in Edison Co. Show Rooms

In these sweltering days when Old Sol joins forces with humidity to make it just as uncomfortable as possible, to be able to keep cool is the average person's highest ambition. And even that, we seem to have little chance of achieving.

Then, along comes the New York Edison Company with the idea of showing how easy and simple it is to be cooled off.

By their exhibit the company made Irving Place and Fifteenth Street just about the coolest place this side of the North Pole. The show was held from June 20 to 29, but so great was the demand for the continuation of the Ventilation Show that the closing date was postponed until the twenty-ninth.

The ventilating companies and cooling exhibitors made the mercury in the thermometer do a nose dive. It went down and stayed down so that the show was a regular magnet, according to the manner in which it drew the gasping crowds in.

Projectionists Report That New Condenser Has Proven Its Worth

Fifteen Per Cent More Light Made Possible by Paramount Condenser

The new Paramount Condenser, which was put on the market recently has proven its worth, according to reports received from projectionists who have used them. This condenser was recently brought from France by M. H. Tromba, an importer of lenses and optical glasses, and when tested showed results that satisfies all the claims advanced by its makers.

Made of pure flint glass by a special process by which they are annealed and toughened the condensers have also proven to be free from discoloration usually found in condensers, it is claimed.

Chief Engineer of Projection Rudolph Miehling, of the New York Capitol theatre, where the Paramount Condensers have been used with an arc of 120 to 170 amperes, says, "After giving the plane convex condenser lenses a thorough test and a rigid trial, I have found that they do not pit or crack as a majority of the lenses we have tried. No others we have tried have given us much definition, and in general, under equal conditions, I will state that these lenses are superior to any I have used."

The new lenses are said to make it possible to project at least 15 per cent more light on the screen. After making tests in their laboratories the Precision Machine Co. endorses the Paramount Condenser.

The new Paramount Condenser is also being used by the Princess Amusement Co., of Lincoln, Neb., which operates fifty-three theatres, and by the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia and many other theatres.

Plans are also being made at present to put a new projection lens shortly on the market.

Exhibitors Can Now Have Own Fan Magazine

Through the Motion Picture Post, a new fan magazine, giving news about stars and pictures in general, the exhibitor is now able to distribute a first-class artistic publication to all his patrons, each month, at no cost to him.

The Motion Picture Post has been in existence but for a short time but their subscriptions now number close to a quarter of a million copies.

The purpose of the Post is to advertise to the exhibitors' clientele more fully and at less than newspaper space rates, the pictures and stars he has booked to present advance publicity of his program in such a form that every reader will want to see it, and to give his patrons news about the stars and pictures in general so that they take a personal interest in the subjects, are enabled to discuss them with some degree of authority, and thereby become one hundred per cent fans.

Few house organs achieve the above results. The Post has, however, already proven its worth and the Motion Picture Post boasts of the following subscribers: Stanley Co. of America, Gordon Olympia Circuit of New England, R. D. Craver's Theatres, Majestic Gardens of the Butterfield Circuit, Fabian Enterprises of New Jersey and other live exhibitors throughout the country.

They are pushing ahead fast and have lined up many subscriptions for September, when exhibitors intend to adopt the Post as part of their coming campaign.

They have adopted the slogan, "There'll Be a Motion Picture Post in Every Home."

Columbia Amusement Co. Opens New Theatre

After being remodeled and rebuilt, the Columbia theatre at Kittanning, Pa., has been recently reopened. The theatre is owned and operated by J. D. Brown, who also operates theatres of the Columbia Amusement Co. at Brookville and Clarion, Pa. The services of Paramount exploiteer for that district, William N. Robson, were called in by Mr. Brown in reopening his house. Robson got in touch quickly with the public by inviting every child under two years of age to see the performance free if accompanied by his parents.

Rain Causes Delay in Work on Studio

Work on the Interstate Motion Picture Corp.'s studio at First and Clay Streets, Richmond, is progressing exceedingly slow and General Manager Irving has become restless due to the fact that the contractors are about three months behind with the work. Various reasons are assigned for the delay, much of which is attributed to the long rainy spell in May, which was followed by the strike of the bricklayers shortly after. Mr. Irving is rather optimistic of the possibilities of the new company and is hoping that the building will be ready for occupancy in the very near future.

Interesting News from South Africa

Evidence of the progress that American made projectors are making throughout the world is contained in word received by the Simplex officials, from John H Steyn, a well known figure in the motion picture field in Transvaal, South Africa, concerning the satisfaction he has received through the use of Simplex Projectors.

Mr. Stein operates the Alhambra theatre, at Ermelo, South Africa, and his Simplex machines were installed by the African Film Trust, Empire Building, Johannesburg, South Africa, distributors of the Simplex Projector for that territory.

Mr. Steyn states that his projectors are running constantly under the most adverse conditions and that great satisfaction has been realized through their use.

The Simplex officials are very enthusiastic over the conditions abroad and state that their machine is now used extensively, not only throughout Europe, Africa, and Asia, but in places located in far off quarters of the globe, whose names we seldom hear of and that the foreign demand is constantly increasing.

The African Films Trust maintains a most modern and up-to-date supply house and have exclusive territory in South Africa. A most complete supply of parts, motor generator sets, electric signs, tickets, carbons and any form of modern theatrical equipment needed, is handled by this progressive organization.

Recent reports to the Simplex Company indicate that conditions as regards the motion picture industry in South Africa are very promising and that the supply business is rapidly developing.

Marr & Colton Plant Well Underway

The Marr & Colton Company, pipe organ builders of Warsaw, N. Y., have their new plant well underway. The addition will be two stories high and when completed will practically double their present capacity. The same modern fireproof construction is being used as in their present plant.

The Company reports business as continuing to be good with them. Among recent new orders is one for a two manual organ for the New Strand theatre, Schenectady; a large three manual for the Strand theatre, Rochester, and a style 4x New Era organ for the Carroll theatre, Rome, N. Y.

These are all repeat orders from old customers. The New Era organs are as popular as ever and are being used in a great many of the new theatres. In many of these theatres they are being placed in an organ chamber leaving the orchestra pit clear.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Love's Penalty"

(Paramount—Review of Second Version, Feature Starring Hope Hampton)

PERHAPS the most striking example of art in re-editing and titling that has ever come to light is the re-vamped version of the Hope Hampton starring vehicle, "Love's Penalty." Out of material that could stand considerable doctoring, the work of Katherine Hilliker, who is responsible for the revision and sub-titles, a most pleasing entertainment has, almost magically, sprung up, with the previous glaring faults removed. This, of course, offers Miss Hampton an opportunity to command due recognition for her work. It is scarcely believable that this is the same girl, who, only a year or so ago appeared in her first picture. The fact that "Love's Penalty" is Miss Hampton's third picture accentuates above all else her wonderful possibilities. She deserves more than credit for some very convincing work, since the direction was decidedly at fault as was pointed out by reviews of the first version. The "re-vamp," however, covers a multitude of directorial sins, and most assuredly permits the star to be seen to advantage. It also brings out the best work which was done by other members of the cast. Percy Marmont gives a most satisfactory performance in a most difficult role.

Miss Hilliker, in remoulding the picture, has supplied logical reasons for previously shallow spots in the way of happenings, and made the photoplay a most interesting drama, with an appealing and unanimously voted beautiful star. Miss Hampton, in some scenes, has been called upon for dramatic ability usually identified with an actress who has a firm foundation of a long stage career previous to her screen appearances, or at least one who has gradually learned the "tricks" of screen play. She is not found wanting, but may be congratulated upon having surpassed in her work many who may point with due pride to the triumphs of their respective careers.

The new picture is complete with suspense, thrilling incidents and sympathetic appeal. And Miss Hampton has been permitted to reflect her beauty as a very young girl, as well as a beautiful woman, in a most gratifying manner.—LILLIAN R. GALE.

"Snooky's Blue Monday"

(Chester Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

THIS two reeler is probably the best the "monk" has ever made. Not that he is very funny in any of the scenes but that it is a genuine novelty to see him perform his many and various tricks and at the same time act his role, which, by the way, is a very difficult one.

William S. Campbell, the author and director, has a splendid idea of what the animal can do and with patience and perseverance has developed a comedy which will stand as a masterpiece in monkeyland.

If the children of the household see "Blue Monday" they'll never stop talking about it, for the story is of the sort that will amuse any boy or girl anywhere. Its theme goes over once more the trials and tribulations of the average school boy, featuring his "battles" with his chums and "teacher," and the results thereof.

The monkey runs the gamut of all these thrills and more, using the sling-shot, smoking a cigar and putting the burning weed into another scholar's pocket when the latter's back is turned, taking a bite out of the apple when teacher isn't looking and—well, tell your patrons to take their children and let them see a really interesting child comedy. Tell them that all the old tricks are rehearsed again by the monkey star and his "kiddie" assistants. And that they'll enjoy it just as much as the "kids" themselves. And they sure will.

FRANK LEONARD.

"The Raiders"

(Wm. N. Selig Production — Released Through Canyon Pictures Corp.—Starring Franklyn Farnum)

BILL HART better look out for his reputation for there's a young man by the name of Franklyn Farnum who is rapidly coming to the fore as an actor of Western roles who will not be disputed with when it comes to handling the old six shooter, riding the Western pony or doing any reckless stunt which he may be called upon to perform.

In his latest production, "The Raiders," which is a picturization of the novel by Bertram Sinclair, Farnum does many things which will endear him to the hearts of those who love the Western drama.

In the role of private Fitzgerald of the Northwest Mounted Police, the star plays his role with a sincerity and naturalness that cannot be doubted whether he is "on the horse," in a fight or rescuing a wounded comrade.

He is aided, however, by a story which is strong in dramatic moments, sure in its aim for interest and excitement and thrilling when it comes to gun play. It has its bad men who are engaged in whisky running, its lovable hero and heroine, its indian trailer who helps solve the mystery of the murder and many other characters.

When the plot is pocketed and one believes it will be hard to find the killer, the author springs a surprise by having the Indian guide find the heel of a shoe which has been left in the lonely region by the murderer and trace him to his cabin. Farnum does the rest.

The production has splendid backgrounds, is well directed and has a capable cast.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Standing Pat"

(Gayety Comedy-Educational—One Reel)

"STANDING PAT" won't make them scream, but it will make them laugh and give pleasant entertainment. The story is rather novel, although many of the situations have been used before, and is worked up in a splendid manner by the three featured players, Teddy Sampson, Henry Murdock and Thornton Edwards.

When the young hero discovers that his sweetheart's father will not tolerate him, he hits upon a very novel idea which he works to perfection. The father is interested in statuary and when hero hears that a new statue of a soldier is to be placed in a prominent position about the house he persuades his friends to carry him "statue fashion" and place him upon the pedestal.

This the friends do. The following scenes show hero posing in many funny positions which are worked up by the entrances and exits of the other actors.

The scenes with the girl and her father are very amusing as are those between hero and the gardener, especially when the latter brings a bottle of wine into the scene and proceeds to drink it in front of the thirsty "statue."

A satisfactory comedy and one that will amuse and make them laugh.

—FRANK LEONARD.

"Old New York"

(Kineto Review—One Reel)

OF all the species of "oldest inhabitants," the New Yorker is the worst. He delights in telling of the days when Forty-second street was uptown, and when there were ferries to Brooklyn. This single reeler shows what every old Manhattanite talks about, but in a far more interesting and vivid manner. Mr. Urban has resurrected from the dead past some photographic scenes of old New York. He shows old Castle Garden, the old reservoir at Forty-second street, the Star theatre, the skyline of twenty-eight years ago, the former Grand Central Station, and the ungainly mound that has been replaced by the modern tomb of General Grant. These dissolve into present day motion pictures and the comparison is exceedingly interesting. In many cases the pictures are taken from the identical place. Times Square of 1890 gives place to the bustling White Light section of today. A huge Pabst beer sign has disappeared in the interim. It adds a touch of pathos to the reel.

This should be of interest to the whole country, but naturally, the more so to New Yorkers. If, however, your patrons have not seen the Big City, they have at least seen pictures of the financial district, and the change from the past is well worth seeing.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"LITTLE ITALY"

Pleasing Little Picture with Alice Brady Contributing Clever Character Sketch

REALART has discovered that Alice Brady's forte in screen interpretation is character expression. The star, appearing recently in the role of a Polish immigrant, has come forward again in a character study in Frederic and Fanny Hatton's story "Little Italy"—a story which permits her to interpret a colorful, volatile daughter of Italian immigrants. Miss Brady is a splendid type for the role and her performance is always positive in the manner in which she has caught the Latin temperament. The picture may be called good entertainment of a light sort. While the action is easy to anticipate, the authors and the scenarist, Peter Milne, have injected a goodly number of high lights in the shape of appropriate incident, humorous touches, and realistic detail.

Mr. Milne's scenario is a worthy sample of direct continuity, there being no superfluous scenes added to score a point of three out of harmony with the central idea. Their plot is simplicity itself and certainly cannot be called anything novel in screen entertainment. However, it does afford the spectator a satisfying hour, what with its modern version of the Montague Capulet feud, in "Romeo and Juliet"—a version treated with just enough satire to provide a happy balance. The title is rather misleading since the spectator is led to believe that he is in for a slice of Italian life on the lower East Side. It seems to us as if the director might have injected some local color, such as was used in "Humoresque" without sacrificing any incident pertaining to the plot.

The forepart of the story overshadows the latter reels because of the humorous touches and the development of the romance. When the heroine is ejected from her house by a cantankerous father, cleverly played by George Fawcett, the plot falters because the director has not made the most of his scenes. For instance, he allows the hero to make a convenient entrance when the priest is hunting for him to marry the girl immediately. And his punch scene which shows the dejected lover employing a mad mob in his attempt to square accounts with the hero may be called "movieish," although it does provide some melodramatic substance. The feud is abolished when the two sweethearts marry and a little child scatters the shadows.

The authors and the scenarist have incorporated good atmosphere and their characterization, plot and incident are entirely convincing. Tom McNamara's titles are praiseworthy—all being in harmony with the spirit of the story. Norman Kerry is hardly the type for the hero. His performance is mostly negative because he never suggests the Latin temperament. Luis Alberni, as the volcanic villain, is more in character. Miss Brady is on the right track now with these studies. She should keep on playing them.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Brady, the Realart star, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in "Little Italy," a character study dealing with the feud and romance of a beautiful Italian girl. The Mascani family have brought their feud to America and the sight of a Tumullo or the utterance of that name is exceptionally distasteful to the family in general and to pretty Rosa in particular. "Tony" Tumullo has but lately returned from the Italian front and as soon as he sees Rosa and she returns his glance both make up their minds that the feud should be abolished since both feel the call of love.

Rosa's father is desirous of having his volatile, unmanageable daughter married, but she has a mind of her own in the proper choice. When Ricci attempts to encourage her she dismisses him. Finally Rosa and "Tony" are married, and when a child blesses the union, the feud is abolished. The picture is an adaptation by Peter Milne of Frederick and Fanny Hatton's story, and has been directed by George Terwilliger. It is excellently played by the star and a clever supporting company.

PROGRAM READER

Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see Alice Brady as the fascinating heroine of a story of Italian love and vengeance. Come and see the clever Realart star in a story written by the clever authors, Frederic and Fanny Hatton, and which has been adapted by Peter Milne, one of the most competent scenario writers of the screen. Come and see the star in a story which permits her to flash her remarkable talent for character expression. Miss Brady plays the volatile daughter of an Italian who lives not far from the Statue of Liberty. Her family is engaged in a feud. Is it abolished? The answer is found in "Little Italy." Come and be genuinely entertained.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a story of local color dealing with the Italian race. You can put over scenics of Italy and arrange a prologue which features a single soloist, a quartette, or an ensemble. The soloist can sing, "O, Solo, Mio," the quartette can sing the Quartette from "Rigoletto," and the ensemble can put over the Italian atmosphere with Neapolitan songs. Your ushers can be garbed correctly after the fashion of Italian girls. You may describe the picture as a fascinating comedy-romance of Italian love and vengeance. Tell that it affords the star a role in which she gives her best performance. Play up the authors.

"GREATER THAN LOVE"

(J. Parker Read-Asso. Producers)

Human Document on Mother-Faith Theme

J. PARKER READ presents his star, Louise Glaum, in another elaborate production, entitled "Greater Than Love." This is the work of C. Gardner Sullivan, who has used a theme of great uplifting force. He treats the mother-love formula in a refreshing manner, tells his story in a straight-forward manner, and demonstrates again that he has no equal in the construction of screen drama. He is such a master at situation and climax and captioning a story that what may be considered as a preachment never becomes one at all. There is a message written into the picture which carries a spiritual motif and it acts as an inspiration. The star in her characterization of the unregenerate has a role similar to others of recent issue in that she plays a woman of shady reputation.

As the action starts Miss Glaum presides over a lavish apartment occupied by five other young women all of whom are members of the oldest profession. The director has caught the background from several angles and the interior decorations are marked for their splendor. J. Parker Read certainly spends money with the Glaum productions. All the settings and appointments spell a prodigal check-book. There is an exceptionally faint note of romance injected into the story, but its place is merely to emphasize the theme and characterization. One of the young women reaps the harvest and dies. Her last words were, "Don't let mother know how I've lived." The old lady resides in a small community and when the sad news reaches her she refuses to believe her daughter dead, but just moved onward.

From this point the picture projects its spiritual motif—the material element being swept aside. The old lady visits her daughter's companions and talks to them in a friendly, cheerful fashion, with no taint of malice or condemnation in her conversation. The faith of the mother is brought home as transcending all loves—love of self and the love of dress. She believes in the enduring goodness of every one with whom she comes in contact, and so strong is her influence that the unbeliever is regenerated. The transformation is effected a trifle too quickly to be entirely effective, but there is no denying that this feminine version of "The Miracle Man" carries tremendous appeal.

The action never drags. Indeed, it grips throughout a majority of its scenes. Sullivan has spared the spectator the obnoxious moral leper whose appearance is flashed for a brief instant or two. The logic is sound and convincing. The picture offers a symbolic introduction in order to emphasize the influence of fate in moulding character. Gertrude Claire as the mother shares honors with the star.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Louise Glaum, the emotional star, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in "Greater Than Love," a powerful photoplay written by the gifted C. Gardner Sullivan, which exploits a theme of great uplifting force. The subject deals with the Faith that transcends all earthly emotions—the Faith of mother love. In this picture in which the spiritual note is convincingly triumphant Miss Glaum appears as the unregenerate, the unbeliever whose heedlessness and selfishness disappear before a great love which, in turn, gives way to the "Greater Than Love" element personified by frail Gertrude Claire, the mother, and which is shown to be Faith.

There is a message in this picture. It exposes the recesses of sham, deceit and evil, the faith of the mother in the play transcends all loves—the love of self, the love of dress and the love of love. Her creed is belief in the enduring goodness of all. The picture is magnificently mounted and finely acted. Fred Niblo directed.

SUGGESTIONS

You have a number of angles to exploit in this picture. You can concentrate upon the theme and make it prominent in all your advertising. You can talk of the inspiration it offers, and the element in life that transcends all loves. You can talk of the evils of divorce and the material life led by the majority. You can cooperate with the clergy, and exploit the offering as the loftiest, most entertaining dramatic motive ever projected upon the screen. Play up Miss Glaum and feature the cast. And tell that C. Gardner Sullivan wrote it. His name will be remembered. Your patrons are assured of fine entertainment from one of his stories.

"MAID OF THE WEST"
(Fox)

A Weak Eileen Percy Comedy

WHY it is that the Fox forces insist upon starring Eileen Percy in supposedly comical stories which are thread-bare with age, forced, and without a human note of appeal, is hard to conceive. This is a comedy drama idea developed along farce lines—a queer combination. The characters, none of them burlesque types, are made to talk on the screen in cheap puns, inserted solely for the sake of the pun. For instance, a roomful of people are being searched for a stolen necklace. "Everything will come out all right," a girl assures her nervous companion. "That," comes the answer, "is what the man said when he sat on his wife's knitting needles." And the search for the necklace goes on.

It is a case of mixing straight comedy action with burlesque titles. We do not think an audience will get much entertainment out of it. The star is cast as a whimsical, impetuous orphaned girl of the West, who goes airplane riding with her sweetheart. This machine is so well behaved that it never swerves from its course even when the pilot neglects the controls to make love to his passenger. The girl comes to New York to live with a wealthy aunt. But the birdman has flown before her, and upon her arrival, she finds him employed as her aunt's chauffeur. Then comes the trouble over the $40.000 necklace. Two thugs are in the house trying to steal it, the maid and the butler are conspiring; the hero is suspected, and a boobish detective is brought in to clear the matter up. This situation has been much better worked out in the past. It is the case of slipping the stolen goods into the other fellow's pocket just as you are about to be searched. This is the whole picture. When the real crooks are apprehended by the girl, who used her fists and a six-shooter to do it, the story is over. The girl and her sweetheart fly back to Texas to get married.

William Scott is opposite the star as the aviator. The remainder of the cast have little to do, because of the sudden change in the location of the story. The Western characters drop out as soon as the action shifts to New York. There are one or two titles which are good in themselves and able to supply a laugh, but the most of them are similar to the one which tells of the aviator being "a plane case of love at first sight."—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Eileen Percy, the pretty Fox star, plays the leading role in "Maid of the West," which the ———— theatre will offer as the feature attraction on ————. Miss Percy is cast as a girl of the West, who, through the terms of her father's will, is forced to come to New York to live with her wealthy aunt. The story is a rollicking, good-natured one, with plenty of action, romance, and an abundance of comedy. It proves conclusively that the Western girls are not willing to have their husbands chosen for them by any relatives. "Betty" is in love with an aviator and means to marry him. And she does. But there is plenty of excitement and adventure before she does so.

Supporting Miss Percy in this picture is an excellent cast headed by William Scott, Hattie Burkirk, June La Vere and Charles W. Meakin. The story is the work of W. E. Spencer, and Philo McCullough, a popular actor himself, directed the picture.

Miss Percy, one of the younger generation of screen stars, has already won for herself an unusually strong following. She is dainty, pretty, vivacious and an unusually clever actress. She has never appeared to better advantage than in "The Maid of the West."

PROGRAM READER

It is difficult to make a wild flower grow in a hot house. "Betty" was a girl of the West—impetuous, carefree, and not used to the binding conventions. Then they took her to the City. But it did not change her nature, and there is no end of humorous situations as the result. The picture is "Maid of the West" and Eileen Percy, as pretty and as vivacious as ever, is the star. We will offer it for your entertainment as the feature attraction on ————. We think you will like it. Audiences in other theatres throughout the country voted it one of the most entertaining and humorous light comedies of the season, and the American people are united in their movie tastes as well as in a good many other instances.

Miss Percy is supported by a capable cast, with William Scott as her leading man. There are any number of thrilling scenes of a daring aviator doing "stunts," plenty of humor when the aviator turns chauffeur to be near his heart's desire, and not a little romance. The date is ————. The place—right here in this theatre.

CATCH LINES

She was from the West and of the West. Putting city clothes on her did not change her much. That is why Betty caused so much excitement when she came to live with a wealthy New York aunt. Do not fail to see Eileen Percy (who is Betty) in "Maid of the West."

To be near his sweetheart, the aviator became a chauffeur. He flew from Texas to New York to get the job. And he could see her dancing eyes through the mirror in front of him, even when she rode in state in the rear seat of the limousine.

A story of an aviator in love, and a little Texas girl in the same condition. The romance started in the West and ended in New York. But it ended happily, thanks to the daring of Betty, who is Eileen Percy. The picture is "Maid of the West."

"THE SIGN ON THE DOOR"
(First National)

Famous Stage Melodrama Retains Dramatic Strength on Screen

"THE SIGN ON THE DOOR," as a stage play current on Broadway two seasons past, was a particularly compact and well constructed melodrama about a jealous husband who committed a murder and his wife who successfully tried to take the blame knowing that her claim that she was protecting her honor would get her off with a jury.

As a motion picture "The Sign on the Door" is largely what it was on the stage, Director Herbert Brenon having, possibly from necessity, literally transferred the original play to the screen, using the speaking lines as titles. The result is a production that runs exceedingly to dialogue with most of the important action taking place in a single setting.

However, in spite of what in the past has been considered bad construction, the picture is deserving of praise and will without doubt, especially since it has Norma Talmadge as a star, and a carefully selected and most competent supporting cast, find favor with high class audiences. Its plot is too strong and the development too logical to suffer greatly by a technique that would have ruined most stories.

"The Sign on the Door" is a picture that stakes its all, successfully too, on plot development. After the characters are planted and reasons given for the husband and wife being in the philanderer's rooms, the interest centers on the murder and how the police will get the real truth from the statements of the two people, each claiming they committed the crime. As a matter of fact, the wife's story is accepted, circumstantial evidence apparently proving that the husband is lying to protect his wife. It is in this connection that "The Sign on the Door" differs from a flood of "who killed the man?" plays and pictures of the past few seasons.

In the matter of acting the picture is exceedingly well done. Miss Talmadge does some of the best emotional work of her career as the misjudged wife. Charles Richman is quite as good as the husband and Lew Cody back once more to the "he-vamp" roles in which he belongs is a convincing villain.

Adapted from the stage play by Channing Pollock
Directed by Herbert Brenon.
Presented by Joseph M. Schenck.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Sign on the Door," an adaptation of Channing Pollock's successful melodrama which enjoyed a long run on Broadway a few seasons past, with Norma Talmadge in the leading role is the principal picture attraction on the ———— theatre bill for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The picture is the ideal feature attraction being in plot one of the most logical and well constructed dramas ever written. The role of the misjudged wife, who successfully takes the blame for a murder on her shoulders that she may shield her husband, is one of the best that Miss Talmadge has ever had. It gives this talented star an opportunity for the display of her emotional acting and also presents her in a most sympathetic part.

In the supporting cast is Charles Richman and Lew Cody, both stars in their own right. The balance of the cast has been carefully selected as to types and professional ability.

"The Sign on the Door" is a melodrama in which a man is killed and the police attempt to discover who did the deed. Both the husband and wife confess that they did the shooting, although the wife is not guilty. How circumstantial evidence supports the wife's claim, frees her from punishment since she states that she fired the shot to protect her honor and saves her husband makes an interesting and thrilling story. The picture is in seven reels. It was directed by Herbert Brenon.

PROGRAM READER

Norma Talmadge in her latest starring vehicle, "The Sign on the Door," is the feature picture at the ———— for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————. The picture is an adaptation of the Channing Pollock play in which Marjorie Rambeau was starred on the New York stage and which had a long run. In adapting the production Director Herbert Brenon has practically transferred the big dramatic scenes of the play to the screen. The picture is lavishly produced and in support of the star a fine supporting cast has been secured.

Charles Richman is the husband and Lew Cody the villain. Others who appear in good roles are Helen Weir, Paul McAllister and Augustus Balfour. The feature screens in seven reels and is a straight melodrama with excellent heart interest.

SUGGESTIONS

The fame of the play from which this was adapted, the author's name, the star and the director, all deserve billing. We would make much of the fact that the play as it was in the original is virtually presented in its entirety. You can promise a flawless plot, fine acting, a splendid production and excellent photography. Use stills in plenty especially of the scenes in the villain's room.

CATCH LINES

"LURING LIPS"
(Universal)

Interesting Little Picture Offers Human Touches

AN interesting little picture is offered in Edith Roberts' latest, "Luring Lips," adapted to the screen from a story which won a scenario contest in one of the popular film magazines. It provides the piquant star with opportunities to flash her charm and talent and offers the spectator a slice of life a great deal more genuine than many pretentious subjects which are "ballyhoo-ed" to the skies for their realism. It makes no demands, but conquers because the characterization is appealing and sympathetic and there is enough dramatic substance to give weight to the romantic scenes. "Luring Lips," the title is misleading, is another of the stories dealing with frenzied finance as it flourishes in Wall Street.

The onlooker sees a young bank clerk and his wife seemingly living beyond their income in a suburban home. This is an effective plant for subsequent events in that the development of the action is shrouded in mystery. A time comes when the clerk is suspected of stealing $50,000 from the bank. This is logical in view of the pretentions of his life. The story progresses, furnishing the spectator with some good incident which is always in place, although the director has held the scenes too long on Miss Roberts. And Mr. Baggot allows the tempo to drag just a trifle. But these are minor faults in a story which, while of an obvious design has enough in reserve to spell adequate entertainment. The clerk is sent to prison on circumstantial evidence—which is pretty flimsy on the face of it. His sentence is light owing to his good reputation.

While in the recreation room he notices a view of Wall Street in a news strip on the screen and discovers his wife resting in the graveyard of Trinity during lunch hour and receiving the attentions of his erstwhile employer. He is inclined to believe his wife faithless. By this time it is certain that the picture will flash a surprise finish because the hero has asserted his innocence time and again. It arrives when the heroine keeps an appointment with the bank official at the docks to accompany him to South America, and turns him over to the authorities as the guilty party. The spectator is forced to jump at conclusions over the methods established in arresting him. Evidently the girl discovered enough evidence to convict him. The news strip at the prison may seem far-fetched and the detective may appear over-zealous in his attention to duty. Aside from these little errors the picture is genuine throughout. King Baggot has stressed every point that would lead to putting the spectator on the wrong track. Ramsey Wallace is good as the bank official and Darrel Foss plays the clerk in a natural manner.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Edith Roberts, the piquant Universal star, who will be remembered for her appealing performances in "Lasca," and a score of other pictorial successes, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "Luring Lips," written by John A. Moroso. The original story won a scenario contest in one of the popular screen magazines and it affords the attractive star with a vehicle that brings forth her talent in an admirable manner. The picture is rich in human incident and is entirely convincing in its development.

The star is a wife of a bank clerk who seemingly lives beyond his income. A time arrives when he is suspected of embezzling funds and is convicted of the crime of which he is innocent. While serving his term he notices a strip of news weekly upon the canvas in the recreation room—a strip showing Wall Street, with his former employer paying ardent attention to his wife. He believes his wife is faithless until she brings the real culprit to justice. It is a picture of frenzied finance and is rich in pathos and sympathy. The star is supported by a clever cast that includes Darrel Foss and Ramsey Wallace. King Baggot directed.

PROGRAM READER

She was the wife of a bank clerk and her happiness was complete, so enduring were the honeymoon days. The happy couple lived in the suburbs of New York. The young man was deeply in the confidence of the bank officials, who never suspected him of any ulterior motives. Then one day a shortage of $50,000 was discovered in the books. The evidence pointed strongly at the young clerk and he was railroaded to prison because he was suspected of living beyond his income. How he fared in prison—how his wife was determined to solve the mystery—how the young couple found happiness again—is told in five reels of clever entertainment—a story which carries human touches throughout. The picture is "Luring Lips," and Edith Roberts is the star.

SUGGESTIONS

You can exploit this picture as a clever little human picture which radiates a deal of charm. Play up that it sends out a note of pathos and rich sympathetic characterization. Tell that it is a picture of frenzied finance as it flourishes in Wall Street. Play up this street of a thousand sorrows which has a church at one end and the river at the other—as if symbolic of fate. Treat the picture as a human document of frenzied finance and romance. Play up the star and exploit her piquant appeal. You can exploit some of her other successes such as "Lasca." Play up that the story won a scenario contest in a popular film magazine.

CATCH LINES

He lived beyond his income and because of it he was railroaded to prison. See "Luring Lips" with Edith Roberts.

"THE FACE OF THE WORLD"
(Willat-Hodkinson)

Overdrawn and Develops Wild Melodrama

THIS picture is a variation of the domestic triangle which starts out with a flourish and offers some real human touches, but which develops into a hap-hazard jumble of melodramatic incident before the conclusion is reached. The title can mean anything or nothing, and certainly gives no indication of advising the spectator of its place except as a medium of decoration. Irvin Willat has taken a story by a successful novelist of Norway, Johan Bojer, transplanted the scenes to America, and given the characters appropriate names. But the story is overdrawn and far-fetched after it once swings into its tempo. There is some stress placed upon the appealing wife whose husband is neglectful of her, but in view of subsequent events there seems to be no reason for this emphasis.

It is as if this situation appealed to the director to make dramatic substance from it. The young couple migrate to the city where the wife, eager to find expression, caters to a wild set in Greenwich Village, and encourages the advances of a moral leper because he advises her that her husband pays more attention to his studies than to providing happiness for her. He is studying to become a skilful surgeon, and when a subtitle states that he is having a hard time keeping the wolf from the door, or words to that effect, the subsequent scene gives it the lie through the furnishings of the home and the wardrobe of the characters.

The picture is genuine enough until the third reel after which it develops an anti-climax. There is much counter-plotting with the idea going astray to give emphasis to the punch scene. The young doctor is appointed as head surgeon at a state hospital. The subsequent scenes present a crazy inmate who keeps one in suspense because one is never certain whether he will release millions of germs or burn the building. He finally sets fire to the hospital. Meanwhile there are a couple of superfluous characters, a shyster lawyer and a hokum doctor, who act very movieish. It is their object to make trouble for the young surgeon. The wife is almost neglected in these scenes and only comes back into the plot for the final reconciliation. The husband has effected a thrilling rescue in the burning hospital, after performing an operation on his rival, the moral leper. So they return to the country and patch up their far-fetched quarrel. There is no character development and very little display of incident. In reality there is no need to make a fuss over the "neglected wife idea" since there is no motive established for its place in the story at all. The picture carries a thrill or two and some effective backgrounds, but the acting is inadequate for the demands of the story. Mr. Willat looks better in the homespun or sea story.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story of marital misunderstanding—a story of adventure and romance which is strongly tinctured with mystery and melodrama is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Face of the World," an Irvin Willat production. The director will be remembered for his under-sea stories and for the clever ability he has shown in depicting small town life. Mr. Willat has selected one of Johan Bojer's tales. Mr. Bojer is considered one of the leading novelists on the European continent, being a native of Norway. The director has simply moved the characters to America and changed their names.

The body of the story remains as Bojer wrote it. It is a story of marital unhappiness because of a neglected husband, the young unsophisticated wife encouraging the advances of a moral leper when they move to the city. Her husband is a young surgeon who secures the position at a leading hospital. Eventually he shows strength of character in adversity and a reconciliation takes place. The picture is acted by Barbara Bedford, Edward Hearn, Lloyd Whitlock and other competent players and offers interesting entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

They were a happy, devoted couple while they resided in the country, but as quickly as they migrated to the city, the young, unsophisticated wife soon realized that her husband neglected her. She encouraged the advances of a moral leper because of her loneliness. She never appreciated the fact that her husband was wrapped up in his studies—his determination to become a successful surgeon. A time arrives when she learns his strength of character. Is there a reconciliation? See "The Face of the World" at the ———— theatre next ————. This is an Irvin Willat production well acted by a competent cast. The picture carries dramatic moments and several thrills aside from its romance and adventure.

SUGGESTIONS

The name of Irvin Willat seems to be your principal angle of exploitation here. He will be remembered for his under-sea pictures as well as a sponsor of the home-spun story. So play up his name. Tell that he is one of the leading directors of the screen. If you played "The Last of the Mohicans," your fans will remember Barbara Bedford, who enacted the part of the English girl who was in peril through the Indian massacres. Play up Edward Hearn and Lloyd Whitlock who have appeared in enough pictures to excite comment. Play up the picture as an interesting story which offers a deal of drama, moments of adventure, an appealing romance punctuated with a note of pathos, and several thrills. Play up the author, one of the leading novelists of Europe.

CATCH LINES

See "The Face of the World," a picture of striking scenes and situations. A strong melodrama flavored with adventure and romance and directed by Irvin Willat.

"THE MONEY MANIAC"
(Leonce Perret-Pathe)

"The Money Maniac" Is Leonce Perret's Best

IT is evident in viewing this production that Leonce Perret has endeavored to make it his masterpiece. As far as the production qualities are concerned, which take in the direction, the east, the selection of interiors and exteriors, etc., the picture is in the A1 class.

And this is not all for the producer has dovetailed the action of the story into the scenes until in many instances the observer might be led to believe as the beautiful tinted backgrounds flash before his eyes that he is witnessing something "genuinely real."

The picture seems to falter a bit, however, in having a story which is rather jumpy in that, the locale is laid in Spain and America. In the introductory sequences and in fact throughout the five reels one can easily see that Leonce Perret had a very difficult feat to perform. And he has done it as far as good entertainment is concerned. But the gap between the important incidents which crop up here and there is too big to jump and at the same time keep the story well connected.

In viewing the exteriors, especially those laid in Spain, one is impressed by the beauty and grandeur of the surroundings when the scenes lie in the distance and by the romantic interest which hovers about them when the "close-up" appears.

The story in general leans more to the plotting and planning of the serial and to dare-devil, reckless, than to the dramatic. It has its bold, bad, villains, whose scheming cannot be denied and for contrast its heroes and heroines who are on the job when the opportune moment arrives.

By a strange pact, five emigrants become the only shareholders in a tract of land that many years later was found to be rich in oil. The group had separated and some had died. Hoggart, one of the five, and his henchmen, Shopps, plot to secure the certificate and reap all the riches. —Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— is "The Money Maniac," a Leonce Perret production, which features a well balanced cast of players that includes Robert Elliot, Henry G. Sell and Lucy Fox. It is a production which is marked for its splendid appointments, there being an air of refinement and exceptionally good atmosphere in the scenes and situations. Mr. Perret scenarioized and directed the offering from the original story, "Rolande, La Divine," by Louis Letang.

The plot concerns five emigrants who by a strange pact become the only shareholders in a tract of land that proves to be rich in oil eventually. The group has separated, and some had died. Hoggart, and his henchman, plot to secure the certificates and reap the riches. The other holders are the Garros sisters, living in Spain, Bouchard, living in New York, and Toto, an acrobatic clown. Shopps travels over the two continents in pursuit of the certificates. He brings about unhappiness by separating the Garros sisters and spreading the rumor that Rolande is dead. The tables are turned eventually and the villains become the victims of their own plotting. The picture has a strong romantic flavor.

PROGRAM READER

A picture of frenzied finance which carries a strong note of originality and a fine romantic flavor is "The Money Maniac," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— as a Leonce Perret production. The story is quaint and concerns the pursuit of certificates which entitle the owners to share equally in a valuable tract of land. The plotters follow their victims over two continents and spread disaster although they are foiled. The picture is charged with effective mystery, melodrama and romance and is excellently acted by a competent cast. A point in its favor is the exceptional background, there being a wealth of atmosphere and color. Remember at the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

A Perret production may not mean anything to your patrons. So it is up to you to exploit the fact that the producer is responsible for many screen successes. Tell that he formerly presented Dolores Cassinelli as a star in worth while pictures. Bring forth that "The Money Maniac" is an interesting picture of frenzied finance, which is balanced with a fine romantic flavor. Bring out that it furnishes a satisfying hour. The title is meaningless, and the plot should not be detailed, since it does not carry much substance. The best angle is to treat it with mystery. Use catch lines and teaser ads. Any conventional prologue would be effective, such as a vocal number, an ensemble number or a musical act.

CATCH LINES

Most everyone is just a little crazy after money. Some, however, become money maniacs and sooner or later find themselves in jail. See "The Money Maniac."

See "The Money Maniac," a picture with plenty of thrills and romance.

"THE MARCH HARE"
(Realart)

Not Up to Bebe's Usual High Standard

"THE MARCH HARE" isn't half as wild as it is silly, which statement may be construed to mean that the feature does not measure up to the previous Bebe Daniels starring vehicles.

The plot is too trivial to be taken seriously and has too few humorous possibilities to make entertaining farce comedy. Bebe is cast as a Los Angeles tom-boy who comes to New York to visit her aunt. Before she gets to her destination she makes a bet with her chaperone that she can live a week in New York on seventy-five cents. The rest of the picture shows how she does it, with side excursions into a melodramatic plot having to do with a crooked butler and his "sweetie," who try to sell Bebe's aunt some wild cat stocks, the girl impersonating Bebe at the aunt's home.

The action and incident is exaggerated most of the time and the titles for the most part are forced, although occasionally one gets over.

Bebe doesn't get the acting opportunities by any means. In fact Harry Meyers as a young Westerner overshadows her work, and Helen Jerome Eddy has a better part, in which, however, she is unable to make any great hit owing to the fact that she is a very bad type for the "villainess" role in which she is cast.

The picture probably will get by with audiences who aren't too critical, for it keeps going, has lots of nice clothes, pretty exteriors, good photography and has been produced with care, with no stinting in the matter of costs. As a comedy, however, it doesn't register, and as a serious production certainly has great faults. It will also suffer in comparison with most of Bebe's previous pictures, which have been exceptionally good.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Bebe Daniels, Realart's irrepressible and undeniably clever comedienne, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "The March Hare," written by Elmer Harris, an author who has contributed many fine stories to the screen, and which has been directed by Maurice Campbell, one of the most capable directors for the silversheet. The magnetic star is supported by an unusually able cast that includes the nonchalant comedian, Harry Myers, Maym Kelso, Melbourne McDowell, Sidney Bracey and Helen Jerome Eddy. It was Elmer Harris who provided the star with the memorable "Ducks and Drakes," and "The March Hare" may be said to be equally amusing and entertaining.

Miss Daniels, as usual, plays the role of a fascinating little madcap who drives everybody to distraction with her pranks. In this play she is cast as a dashing young heiress who makes a wager that she can live for a whole week in New York on seventy-five cents. Many amusing episodes develop from this capricious whim. The picture is lively with incident and breezes through a winner.

PROGRAM READER

The high cost of living successfully put down by a little daughter of the rich who undertakes to live for a whole week in New York on the modest sum of seventy-five cents, will interest many a housewife when Bebe Daniels' latest picture, "The March Hare," is shown at the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. It is an original story written by Elmer Harris, the author responsible for "Ducks and Drakes," a previous Bebe Daniels success, and directed by Maurice Campbell. The irrepressible, magnetic star plays a mischievous madcap whose object in life is to drive everybody to distraction by executing several novel pranks. Her whims and caprices are a joy to behold. Remember next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that this picture is cut from the same cloth as "Ducks and Drakes." Which means that it is a rapid-fire comedy with the irrepressible Bebe Daniels displaying her pep and personality in attractive colors. Tell that she is the capricious mad-cap who delights in tormenting everyone with whom she comes in contact. Play up Elmer Harris as the author of "Ducks and Drakes," a previous Daniels release, and that he also wrote "So Long Letty." Put plenty of pep and punch in your copy and treat it through snappy teasers. You can present an all-comedy bill. Your prologue can feature some light musical number, either a soloist or an ensemble.

CATCH LINES

See the mischievous, capricious mad-cap of the screen, Bebe Daniels, in her latest gloom chaser. See "The March Hare."

She delighted in tormenting her friends and relatives. See Bebe Daniels in a mischievous role in "The March Hare."

A PERFECT POSTER PORTRAIT

THERE are few motion picture actors whose face is better known to the American public than is Jack Hoxie's. For that reason the portrait one sheet, executed by the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP., for the Arrow release—"The Broken Spur"—had to carry an exact likeness. As far as the resemblance is concerned the above reproduction speaks for itself—but to fully appreciate the depth and beauty of the coloring it is necessary to see the poster itself. Which will be a relatively easy matter as it is bound to appear in the lobby of every alert exhibitor in these United States.

THINK of "Male and Female", of "Why Change Your Wife?," of "Forbidden Fruit."

Then try to imagine a story greater than all these—stronger, more unusual, more thrilling.

Imagine scores of settings, each one of them more elaborate, more daring, more luxurious than anything you have ever seen on the screen.

If you can imagine one superlative picture with all this—and more—you will have a slight idea of "The Affairs of Anatol."

People have been talking about it a year in advance. They'll be talking about it for ten years after.

Well, remembering George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man," you'd pick a story with an underworld element, wouldn't you? And a role which would give the star a chance to portray the gradual growth of spiritual understanding?

And you'd have color and dash and melodrama—and dozens of strong emotional situations. With enough of the spectacular, and enough variety, to set off the star's beauty and versatility.

You Will Be Sure To Remember

Under hot suns in many sections it is hard for some exhibitors to feel, months in advance, that the Fall and Winter season in the motion picture theatres of America is going to be one of the highly prosperous periods of the past four years.

But—

In the Fall, when big pictures are causing your theatres to fill, you will be sure to remember that months before the great business revival the F. B. Warren Corporation stood almost alone in forecasting:

1. Big business for exhibitors
2. Still bigger business based upon the careful selection of pictures
3. Solid and evenly-sustained patronage for theatres protected with contracts for the individual work of the best independent producers.

There is nothing the matter at base with the picture business except with certain weak-kneed directors making inferior pictures that do not deserve to find a market. One big producer-distributor recently said "The American public is bilious on pictures." Absurd! Bilious on bad pictures—that is unquestionably true!

The independent producers not tied to dry-rotted machines will make most of the big sucessful pictures of the season of 1921-1922.

ALL-STAR CAST

"NOTHING LIKE IT"

ALL-STAR is the way to describe the cast in "NOTHING LIKE IT," the first of the new series of CHRISTIE COMEDIES.

As much money was spent on "NOTHING LIKE IT" as is usually spent on five-reel features.

The costumes are a new departure in film comedy. Not the usual "funny" clothes you generally see—old worn-out clothes, worn in some comical manner—

BUT garments and jewels that might well turn Cleopatra herself green with envy.

AND—when the borrowed fire-horses run away—off the stage and pell-mell down the street with the hero—your audience will shriek!

Dear Mr. Johnston:-

As you may have noticed I have confined my Affiliated Distributors advertising, with the exception of the Minneapolis Convention, to the pages of the Motion Picture News, and while I always claimed that the 'pulling power' of the News from the inquiry standpoint was remarkable I was surprised this morning to get an inquiry from Japan on a comparatively recent advertisement, and I am herewith enclosing the envelope.

VOL. XXIV AUGUST 6, 1921 No. VII

The Big Picture

THE season of 1921-22 will offer more so-called big pictures than any previous season—considerably more. The outlook in this respect is exceedingly encouraging.

Among these exceptional pictures will be many that have either had or could have Broadway runs at advanced prices.

Which raises an interesting and perhaps an all-important question: whether the big picture should have a Broadway run in a legitimate theatre followed possibly by one or more road show seasons in the first and second class cities—all this previous—to its release to picture theatres; or whether it should be released first hand to picture theatres through the regular channels of distribution.

The answer, of course, is another query: which way is more profitable to the producer? He is entitled to his biggest possible profits, and he'll take the more profitable course.

But which IS the more profitable? We have heard several counter opinions on the subject.

And if the road-show way is the more profitable, what is the matter with our picture theatres? They are the largest, most costly, most beautiful theatres in the country, with large seating capacities and advanced methods of presentation. Must they give way to legitimate theatres when the big picture comes along? Can the picture industry afford to let a considerable number of millions of dollars go out of it each year in the way of percentage receipts for legitimate theatres?

" 'Way Down East " closes its first season—a New York showing followed and paralleled with road shows in the principal cities—with a gross intake of admissions, we are told, of about $4,200,000, and a net profit of about a million dollars.

The percentage arrangement with the theatres, we understand, was around 65% (to the picture) and 35% (to the theatre).

Presentation costs were evidently high; but advertising must have played a very prominent part in exhibition expense with the result that the picture can now look forward, if it so decides, to another successful and perhaps even more profitable season in the second-class cities. And after this, there remains the untouched field of picture theatres.

Had " 'Way Down East " been released first hand to picture theatres what would it have grossed in theatre rentals the first year? (Bear in mind the fact, of course, that the $4,200,000 gross thus far of " 'Way Down East " is in theatre admissions not in picture rentals.) What the second year? And thereafter? Taking out the cost of distribution what profit would the producer make?

We leave the settlement of this question up to the sales managers. We will be glad to print some figures, pro and con, if they care to supply them.

We are content to raise the larger question: if the former method is the more profitable then what of the motion picture theatre—and its future? We are going to have more and more of these big pictures. We need them. Are we to be unable to handle them in picture theatres?

It may be an epochal one—to this industry.

The fact that the road show gets higher admission prices has considerable to do with the problem. But, apparently, the large situation is that the first-run picture theatre today is unable to meet, or even begin to meet, the long run requirements of the big picture—so that advertising may get its full results and in general a full and sufficient gross taken in.

The first-run house today, in most every instance, is committed to a picture a week. It is furthermore committed by contract to fifty-two pictures a year. If weekly contract pictures are shelved for the larger runs of any one picture they must be paid for—and out of the rental of the long-run picture.

There, in a nutshell, it would seem, is the solid wall against the big pictures. Our theatres are simply not geared up to take care of them.

We will all recall a previous and similar epoch in the industry's history.

When the Strand theatre, New York City, opened with "The Spoilers" the picture theatres had been geared up to a daily change. The Strand's success with week-runs then and there set the pace for a new order of production, distribution and exhibition—a brand new and completely different era in this industry.

Are we now approaching another?

We already have a few picture theatres throughout the country able, apparently, to house the big picture and return its deserved rental; able, in other words, to give it all the run it can make. They are houses of limited seating capacity, like the Rialto and Mission of Los Angeles, and the Imperial, San Francisco. More exist, or have just been built or are contemplated in other centers, such as Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Baltimore. We believe that many more will follow, that this style of house, in fact, will set the theatre building pace of the immediate future.

If not, what is the answer?

How, otherwise, are we to take care of our big pictures, encourage them, keep them within the picture industry?

The Censors as Viewed by New York's Press

THE attitude of the New York City press with respect to the appointment by Governor Miller of the three New York State censors may be summed up in this way: censorship in principle is flatly disagreed with. A waiting and somewhat hopeful shoulder is turned toward the censors, hopeful in that the appointees seem to be people of common sense.

The New York Times says: "No matter how disappointing the Governor's appointments to the commission for licensing moving pictures may be to those who do not believe in censorship of the arts, they are likely to be still more unpleasant to the professional reformers whose zeal brought about the passage of the Censorship law. When it is a question of great moral issues the reformers are heard with respect and deference; but when it comes to passing out jobs worth $7,500 a year there are others who have to be remembered. * * * There is no evidence that any one of them has any particular familiarity with the motion picture industry or any special understanding of the relation of the arts to culture. It may be that the people who would make the least unsatisfactory censors are all hostile to the idea of censorship, and would not serve in any case; but it is difficult to regard these as anything but political appointments. * * * They are presumably all persons of common sense; and common sense could save censorship boards from most of their errors. * * * Much of the work will have to be left to subordinates."

The New York Globe says: "The effect of this censorship will depend entirely upon the good or bad sense of the censors. The law which creates it is only a pious aspiration, for no law maker has the least notion what an appointee will consider obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious, or tending to incite to crime." The Globe then goes on to attack Mr. Levenson for his statement that he intends to suggest methods and policies to combat socialistic, communistic, and Bolshevistic propaganda.

Heywood Broun says in the New York Tribune: "No one had much right to expect that Governor Miller would choose his film censors intelligently. Censors of anything never amount to much because the belief in censorship is in itself unintelligent." Mr. Broun takes the stand that a censorship board should include an artist, an author and somebody with a working knowledge of production and distribution and that obviously the appointees are purely political in character. He also attacks Mr. Levenson for his statement against socialism, stating that there is at present no legal obstacle to prevent anybody advocating socialism in speech or writing and that it is unfair to the motion picture to force it to suppress such statements.

Two members of the board, Mr. Levenson and Mrs. Hosmer, have given out interviews. Mr. Levenson states that he considers his job to be that of seeing that films live up to the laws which plainly cover the dissemination of any matter that is destructive of public morals and welfare. Mrs. Hosmer states that the work of the board will be constructive in character. It might seem that Governor Miller himself had taken a hand in the policy of the board in an effort to hew straight to the legal line and to avoid individual preferences, and other vagaries. Mrs. Hosmer, in her interview, stated, "like everything else motion pictures are both good and bad." F. P. A., the columnist of the New York Tribune, replies: "Not like everything else, Mrs. Hosmer, there is onlyone kind of censorship." W. A. J.

Motion-Picture-Day Movement Progressing

B'way Houses in Tie-up; F.I.L.M. Club Gives Support; National Campaign Launched

THE movement to effect a nation-wide observance of August 25th as "Motion Picture Day" is progressing very satisfactorily, according to advices from the New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Day Committee. The outstanding developments of the past week have been the successful tie-up with three of the biggest motion picture theatres on Broadway, the decision of the New York F. I. L. M. Club to support the movement, and the receipt of news from Boston that New England is preparing to participate actively in the plan.

A list published in the July 30th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS gave the names of the producing and distributing companies actively supporting the Motion Picture Day movement. By an oversight, the names of the Selznick and Select organization were omitted from the list of endorsing companies. The name of Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general-manager of the Selznick Corporation, was likewise inadvertently omitted from the list of general-managers and sales-managers reported to have been in attendance at the meeting in New York City during the preceding week, when a uniform campaign plan for producers and distributors was agreed upon.

Sam W. B. Cohn, well-known advertising and publicity man, has been appointed to the post of director of publicity for the National Committee by Edward M. Saunders, chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee. Mr. Cohn has established his headquarters in the Metro Pictures office, located in the Loew Building, New York City. He has already inaugurated a nation-wide publicity campaign in promotion of "Motion Picture Day," and reports that assurance of co-operation are being received from all sections.

Among the first theatres to sign agreements to co-operate with the National Picture Day Committee, in the matter of establishing August 25th, 1921, as "Motion Picture Day" throughout the United States, were the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion of New York City. The management of these theatres, together with hundreds of other exhibitors the nation over, have pledged themselves to cooperate with the National committee in making Motion Picture Day an unqualified success, declares a statement from Publicity Director Sam W. B. Cohn.

The action of the Broadway exhibitors, in signing the agreements to turn over fifty per cent of their gross receipts on August 25th, Motion Picture Day—to the general fund being raised for protective and charitable purposes, was announced at a meeting of the National Committee held during the week at the Hotel Claridge, at which time Chairman Edward M. Saunders reported that every present indication pointed toward an unprecedented success for the big event. He outlined the work that was being accomplished by the State committees in lining up the exhibitors and exchanges declared that the Motion Picture Day plan was being universally adopted by the most progressive of the exhibitors.

Representatives of the leading motion picture interests in attendance at the meeting made reports on the individual work being done by their respective offices in the matter of organizing their branches for the campaign.

In every state, committees are being organized to take over the promotion of the big idea in their respective territories and in many localities these committees are already functioning. All committees are working independent of any other organization or association as Motion Picture Day is an event promoted for, and by the allied motion picture interests, and without ulterior motives or for selfish reasons.

Among the distributing companies reported to have agreed to supply film to participating exhibitors free of charge for exhibition on Motion Picture Day, are the following concerns: Associated First National, Associated Producers, Educational Pictures, Famous - Players - Lasky, Fox Film, Goldwyn, Metro, Realart, Robertson-Cole and Selznick Pictures Corporations.

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York, went on record last Tuesday night, July 26th, in support of Motion Picture Day—August 25th, 1921—when Edward M. Saunders, Chairman of the committee promoting the event, appeared before the organization and addressed that body in the interest of the project. President I. E. Chadwick, of the club, immediately appointed a special committee to actively support and cooperate with the Motion Picture Day national committee.

Chairman Edward M. Saunders of the National Committee in charge of the drive wired during the week from Boston that Massachusetts is lining up solid for the plan and that assurances have been given him that all New England will co-operate.

M.P.T.O. Not a Party to "Motion Picture Day"

A STATEMENT issued during the week from the national headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America sets forth the attitude of that organization towards the movement now under way to observe August 25th as "Motion Picture Day" throughout the country. According to this announcement, "all statements purporting to commit the organized exhibitors to the promotion of this scheme are wholly unauthorized," as far as the M. P. T. O. of A. is concerned. The salient paragraphs of the statement follows:

"The first intimation we had of 'Motion Picture Day' was from messages of inquiry coming to our headquarters from our leaders who questioned the so-called 'Motion Picture Day' arranged by the tools of certain interests hostile to the independent exhibitors.

"The trade paper announcements of 'Motion Picture Day' state that a prospectus has been issued stating that the fund being collected from the public will be used for two purposes: to finance the necessary co-operative work for the protection of the industry and to contribute to worthy charities and humanitarian relief funds, thus avoiding, as far as possible, solicitations for such purposes in motion picture theatres.

"What is to be the scope of this co-operative work? Who is to direct it? Who is to supervise the expenditure of these moneys, all of which are to be collected entirely through the exhibitors? The prospectus is distinctly silent on these points.

"If the producer and distributor wish to create a war chest fund, let them take any day they wish and place in the treasury of their association half of the film rentals which they collect for that day from the theatre owners of America. This would be their own money. Let them create their own fund and use it for their own purposes. We do not ask them to contribute to our treasury.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are, of course, glad to co-operate in any honest and sincere movement for the benefit of the industry and to the advantage of the public. They are willing to do their full share and a little more, if need be. They have proven this in the past on many occasions. As the work in this case involves the use of their theatres, they feel they should have been consulted. They are intelligent men, quite capable of guiding themselves, and they very strongly resent this dictation coming from self-appointed saviors outside their own ranks.

"Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

Warren Discounts Talk of "Unhealthy Conditions"

IN the course of an interview given a press representative last week in Los Angeles, Fred B. Warren, president of the F. B. Warren Distributing Corporation, expressed his surprise over the prevalence of opinions that the film industry was in an unhealthy condition. His declarations were strongly to the contrary, and he submitted a long series of figures to support his contention that the industry is flourishing.

"During the twelve months ending May 31, 1921, the government received as its tax upon admissions and upon the film rentals that the theatre owners pay to the distributing companies, $15,779,710 more than for the corresponding year ending May 31, 1920," declared Mr. Warren.

"During March, April and May, 1921, the government took in from $400,000 to $800,000 more each month than it received for the corresponding months of 1920."

In 1921, new theatres in various stages of construction will increase in a short time by 20 per cent the total number of motion picture houses already in operation in the United States, said Mr. Warren. Taking Los Angeles first-run theatres as an example, Mr. Warren declared that the local houses "need on the basis of their present and future requirements 784 pictures in a year, and the market from all sources promises to produce not possibly in excess of 550, with one-fourth of the output unfit for the larger institutions."

This means prosperity for motion picture producers, said Mr. Warren, and for the individuals and institutions financing their productions.

Ray Gallagher, News Staff, a Benedict

Raymond E. Gallagher, well-known in the motion picture industry since his affiliation with Vitagraph some years ago, was married on July 23rd, to Miss Elizabeth N. Woodburn, of Brooklyn, New York. The couple are now on a vacation-honeymoon.

Mr. Gallagher was entertained by members of the Old Guard, an organization of Vitagraph former employees, at a dinner on the Thursday previous to his wedding day, the dinner being held at the Green Room Club.

Having been a branch manager, and also connected with the advertising department of the Morning Telegraph, Mr. Gallagher has made many friends in the film business who will be interested in this important step of his career. Upon leaving the Telegraph, he joined the staff of Motion Picture News, representing the Studio Directory. Upon his return, he will renew his efforts in connection with Motion Picture News publications.

Missouri-Kansas Exhibs. to Convene September 12th

The date of the Missouri-Kansas joint convention of exhibitors, to be held in Kansas City, was fixed for September 12 and 13, at a meeting of the joint convention committee in Kansas City on Wednesday of last week.

Associated Not Affected by Strike, Says Lichtman

General Manager Al Lichtman, of Associated Producers, Inc., made the following statement during the week in regard to the West Coast strike and its effect on Associated's schedule:

"The strike will have no effect upon our production schedule. Mack Sennett, Maurice Tourneur, J. Parker Read, Jr., and Allan Dwan are engaged upon forthcoming productions and are doing no actual studio work. Thomas H. Ince finished the actual 'shooting' of one of the greatest pictures he has ever produced the Saturday before the trouble developed, and the cutting and titling will engage his attention for some time. J. L. Frothingham is engaged in writing the continuity for his third production."

New York's Censors Engage Office in Candler Bldg

The Motion Picture Commission of the State of New York, named by Governor Nathan L. Miller last week, announced Wednesday that it had engaged offices and projecting rooms for the examination of films at the Candler Building, 220 West 42nd St., New York City. The offices will be open for business next Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Under the provisions of the law which created the board, it is not legally operative until August 1st.

Secretary of State John J. Lyons has been swamped during the past week with requests from all parts of New York State, as well as adjoining states, for copies of Chapter 715 of the laws of 1915, under which the commission was created. An additional supply has been ordered to meet the demand.

Zukor Agrees to Meet M. P. T. O. of A. Committee

In a letter addressed last week by Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky, to Sydney S. Cohen, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Paramount executive agreed to meet the same week or any day of the week of August 1st the committee of the M. P. T. O. of A., appointed by Mr. Cohen to confer with him. Mr. Zukor's letter was in reply to one from Mr. Cohen advising of the appointment of the conference committee.

Joe Merrick Resigns from R-C's Sales Department

Joe L. Merrick, who for the past two years has served as general sales manager for the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, will be busied for the next week or more in assisting the new sales administration to take over control of the branches. Mr. Merrick's resignation comes at a time when the business had been built up to a high mark through his initiative and energy.

No General Curtailment of Production by Strike

The strike of painters, carpenters and electricians at the West Coast studios has not curtailed production, generally. Walkouts occurred at practically all the lots, but the strikers' places were promptly taken by non-union men, and in many cases union men have come back to work. The labor leaders claim that 2,100 men are now out.

Those who have returned to work have accepted the new scale of wages, seven dollars a day. The former price before the cut was announced, was eight dollars.

Production at Universal City is being curtailed, feature companies as fast as they complete a production being laid off. It is planned to have all pictures now in the making completed by August 15th. Production, however, will be resumed full blast September 1st. The companies making serials and comedies on the Universal lot will continue without a break.

The Hal Roach studio resumed production Wednesday, July 27th, after a two weeks' close down occasioned by the strike, and a vacation extended to all other employes who were not in the walkout.

Al Christie has arrived at Hollywood and the Christie studio after a five weeks' visit in the East, especially New York.

Will Rogers whose contract with Goldwyn was previously announced as expired has started the production of a series of pictures to be directed by Clarence Badger. The productions will be made at Hollywood. The type of subjects, length and the releasing medium is to be announced later.

It is reported that a story for a new Von Stroheim picture has been accepted by Universal and that the continuity is now being prepared. Neither Universal officials or Von Stroheim, however, will confirm or deny the rumor.

Pennsylvania Exhibs. Plan for Independence Month

Elaborate preparations are being made by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware to make Independence Month a huge success. Plans include co-operation with the local exchanges of the independent companies, national and state-rights; pledge cards for exhibitors providing for at least fourteen days of independent bookings; a roll of honor, prominently displayed in front of the League headquarters in Philadelphia, which will carry the names of those exhibitors signing the pledge cards.

A joint committee composed of three men from each group, the national independents, the state right independents and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, has been appointed with executive powers to carry the campaign through to a successful conclusion. The chairman of this committee is John Gill, of Robertson-Cole, and the secretary is George F. Aarons, of the Theatre Owners. A fund has been subscribed to defray the expenses.

The climax of the entire affair will be a convention of the independent film men in Atlantic City on August 21, 22, 23 and 24 simultaneously with the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

St. Louis Paramount Houses to Change Hands

FRED L. CORNWELL, president of the Famous-Players Missouri Corp., announced early this week that earnest money of $10,000 had been paid by a syndicate, composed of Harry Koplar, Sam Hamburger, Jr., and Ben S. Cornwell for the purchase of all the St. Louis neighborhood theatres of the Famous - Player - Missouri Corporation. The company will retain the Missouri, recently built at a cost of $1,250,000, the Criterion, the Delmonte, and the Kings.

The deal which is to involve approximately $1,000,000 is to be closed on August 15, Cornwell announced. The $10,000 earnest money was paid at a conference of Fred L. Cornwell, Hamburg and Max Goldstein, real estate officer of the Famous Players Lasky Corporation at Hotel Astor, New York, last Friday. Adolph Zukor, president of the major company, has approved the plan to sell.

The syndicate which has agreed to buy the theatres will be known as the Mound City Amusement Company. Hamburg, Koplar and Cornwell each own one-third in the new concern.

Under the terms of the agreement, $150,000 in cash is to be paid on or before August 15. The syndicate will give a second mortgage of $250,000 to the Famous Players Missouri Corporation and assume first mortgages amounting to $530,000 or $560,000 in payment. The first mortgages which are held by five or six interests are subject to adjustments to be made later.

The theatres included in the deal are the Shenandoah, Novelty, Juniata, Pershing, Arco, Lafayette, Gravois, Royal, Lindell, Maffit, Lowell and Grand-Florrisant. Mr. Cornwell said that under the terms of sale the theatres will retain the Paramount picture service. Mr. Cornwell also declared the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation would hold a large share of the first mortgages through the Missouri organization.

The Missouri Corporation since its organization has built the Missouri theatre, the Criterion and the Del Monte, reputed to be the largest one-floor picture house in America with its three thousand seats. The Kings theatre was recently leased to Loew theatrical interests. The theatres involved in the pending deal were formerly owned by Koplar and his associates in the Greater Amusement Company.

When the Mound City Amusement Company is fully organized, it was learned by a representative of the Motion Picture News, Hamburg will be president, Cornwell vice-president and Koplar secretary and treasurer.

The return of Harry Koplar as a dominant figure in the local theatrical field marks another step in one of the most remarkable careers in local amusement circles. He started with a five-cent show in North St. Louis ten years ago. Within a few years he began taking over other theatres leading to the formation of the Greater Amusement Company. At one time he controlled seventeen theatres. Early in 1920 Koplar entered into a deal to sell his theatres to the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, which had been organized by Fred L. Cornwell. Following the sale several suits were filed by the parties to the agreement, the litigation being settled in January of this year.

Under the terms of the settlement Koplar is said to have received approximately $450,000 for his interests in the theatres.

Film circles and all Minneapolis movie fans were aglow with excitement the past week following a newspaper story to the effect that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation had purchased property and were contemplating building a new theatre here.

The property said to have been purchased is located a block from the new State theatre and, while on the edge of the present downtown business and theatrical district, it is conceded to be very desirable for it is predicted that in a few years the location will be in the center of the business district.

Later, however, this rumor was squashed by district manager Phil Reisman of Famous Players who announced he had received a wire from Adolph Zukor denying any intention of invading Minneapolis.

Screen Writers' Guild Elect New Officers

Frank E. Woods Chosen President; Membership Now 115; Guild Opens Club House

THE officers of the Screen Writers' Guild of Authors' League of America elected July 18th at the Writers' Club House, 6716 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, are as follows: Frank E. Woods, president; June Mathis, vice-president; Eugene W. Presby, treasurer and secretary, and Dwight Cleveland, recording secretary.

Other members of the executive council, who with the four officers above serve as the executive committee of the organization were elected as follows: Thompson Buchanan, Elmer Harris, A. S. LeVino, Jeanie McPherson, Elmer Rice, Frederick Palmer and Robert Wagner.

The officers and members of the executive council with eleven others constitute the council of the organization who conduct all affairs of the Guild. The other nineteen members are: Ruth Ann Baldwin, Jack Cunningham, Marion Fairfax, Percy Heath, Lucien Hubbard, Charles Kenyon, Sir Gilbert Parker, Julia Crawford Ivers, Monte Katterjohn, Eugene B. Lewis, Bernard McConville, Mary H. O'Connor, George Pyfer, Luther Reed, Edna Schley, Doris Schroeder, Rex Taylor, Bayard Veiller, and Waldemar Young.

At the annual meeting of the Guild on the evening of July 14th the election of the thirty members of the council was held, and at the same time reports were made by the officers for the past year together with reports by chairmen of all the executive committees. These reports show the Guild, now one year old, to be in excellent financial condition; to have a membership of 115, and with the purchase of a club house consummated, and negotiations perfected for the expense of furnishing, redecorating, and enlarging the attractive quarters at the corner of Los Angeles and Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood.

At the annual meeting, the members voted on the question of enlarging the membership to include various people who are successful in the four arts, music, painting, architecture and acting as well as all members of the Lambs Club now in Los Angeles and various other people identified with the film industry who have achieved success.

During the past year of the club, Thompson Buchanan acted as president and the members gave him a rising vote of thanks for the very efficient manner in which he had performed the duties of his office. Other retiring officers were Jack Cunningham, secretary; Eugene B. Lewis, treasurer, and the various chairmen of the ten different committees.

The new home for the Guild was made possible by the formation of Los Palmas and Sunset Corp., capitalized at $50,000, of which more than $30,000 has been paid up. Elmer Harris has been elected president of this holding company, and it is expected the balance of the capital will be subscribed within the next few weeks. The quarters consist of a commodious residence occupying one of the most desirable lots in the better residence section of Hollywood, centrally located with respect to the studios and the business district and in every way favorable as a home for the club. With slight alterations it can be materially enlarged to meet the later needs of the organization and its enlarged membership.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Lost Romance—

Finely produced, plausible play that pleased the few, very few, who were inveigled into coming in to see it. (West.)

A great picture, giving fine entertainment. Good box office value. (West.)

A DeMille picture always has so much to recommend it that they can't fail to draw. Think this one scarcely worthy of his talents, but it drew very well and seemed to please. (East.)

City of Silent Men—

Strong picture with story well told. Story appealing and "gets under your skin." Business good and patrons well pleased. (Middle West.)

White and Unmarried—

Good comedy which drew fairly well despite extremely hot weather. (Middle West.)

The Wild Goose—

One of the very best to be seen in a long, long time. Receipts fair. (East.)

A Wise Fool—

A medium show, with fair receipts. (East.)

Business so poor on this that it had to be taken off after three days tho booked for a week. Think it failed to appeal because the locations and costuming did not appeal to my clientele of "flappers" and young matrons. (South.)

Red Trail's End—

The Woman God Changed—

Very good show and business was quite up to the average, at least, despite inclement weather and the fact that so many people are out of the city on the Gulf beaches. (South.)

Ran with Harold Lloyd's "Among Those Present" and held 'em out every night and every matinee. Result big week and satisfied crowds. Holding second week. (West.)

Title has box office value. Did good business. Audiences liked it. (East.)

One a Minute—

A snappy title, linked with the name of Douglas MacLean, and a picture which gave the audiences what they expected to see. Good business all week. (Middle West.)

Behind Masks—

Just fair. Poor title to begin with. Think original title would have drawn much better, but picture was just fair. So was business. (South.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Sky Pilot—

Very good. Minor defects lost sight of because of the qualities of the story. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

Fine production and one which pleased my patrons very much. Fine box office value. (West.)

The Great Adventure—

Very well liked by both men and women. An unusual picture, the acting in which was commented upon by patrons very favorably. (Middle West.)

Scrap Iron—

Charles Ray is a big favorite and this picture offers some splendid opportunities for exploitation. A good business during the entire week's run. (Middle West.)

Old Swimmin' Hole—

Nineteen and Phyllis—

Not a very great picture, to speak frankly. Attention was not held so well and business was somewhat off for the week. (South.)

Peck's Bad Boy—

A splendid picture and the show went over well. It proved strong with the grown-ups as well as the kiddies, the latter of whom turned out in big numbers and the former also turning out well. (South.)

The Woman in His House—

The ancient eternal triangle plot but with little in the way of variations. Picture is saved by some fairly good acting. On the whole it did not please. (Middle West.)

In the Heart of a Fool—

Not bad. Just an average program picture. Title draws well. Played in conjunction with cracker jack comedy, and it went over surprisingly well. (South.)

GOLDWYN

The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari—

An unusual production, different from anything ever shown before, queer settings, but did the best week's business in some time. (Middle West.)

Guile of Women—

Not Will Roger's best picture, but pleasing summer entertainment. (Middle West.)

Tale of Two Worlds—

Officer 666—

The Great Lover—

Roads of Destiny—

Fair business attracted because play appeared on stage a couple of seasons ago. Opinions about only mildly favorable, however. (East.)

Voice in the Dark—

REALART

She Couldn't Help It—

Splendid picture. Was a good drawing card. Business was right good, despite the hot weather and general dullness. (South.)

It was just a cigarette—but a man's fate depended upon being able to prove that he had not smoked it—and with the aid of a woman he played his last card.

Good Women—

Very poor. Time-worn theme, poorly developed. Poor interest thruout and business was bad. (East.)

The Kiss—

STATE RIGHTS

Headin' Home—

General opinion that Ruth is far better as a ball player than actor. Attendance poor. (Middle West.)

Good picture which brought fine business. (West.)

Treasure Card Works Well for Sweeney

Mr. Sweeney appealed to the curiosity of his patrons. In the first place he had printed a little card about double the size of the ordinary theatre ticket worded as follows: "Attention—People of St. Louis. Dr. Caligari will arrive in St. Louis with his mysterious cabinet, Saturday, June 25 and by Tuesday of next week he will be the most talked of person in your city. Watch Saturday's newspapers for particulars."

This card was distributed by the thousands, in cigar stands, hotels, restaurants, in the theatre's correspondence and wherever else an opening presented itself. Mr. Sweeney also used big newspaper space in which the keynote of the selling talk was that the film was a novelty.

The ballet figured artistically in "Irene" while Miss Poli with the ensemble sang "Irene" and "Skyrocket." Walter Smith, basso, sang, "We're Getting Away With It"; Jackson Kinsley, baritone, was heard in "Castles of Dreams," while Miss Poli and Mr. Soule sang "To Love You."

Nelson Builds "Old Swimmin' Hole" Window Display

A window of a hardware store was utilized for the exploitation. A layer of cut green grass was laid over the floor of the show window to serve as a setting for the hard sand of the beach and the pond of real water that were the features of the exploitation. An old mill, made of beaverboard and appropriately painted, stood on the edge of the pond, and to add further realism a red waterwheel, operated by an electric motor, but seeming to be impelled by the force of a winding stream, was placed at the edge of the pond.

The bottom of the pond was of zinc, giving the effect of a limpid pool that reflected the sky, and there was no one who stopped to look who did not envy the little celluloid dolls illustrating the advantages of the swimming hole. As lacking in bathing suits as are most of the inhabitants of the swimming holes of America, the dolls lay in the water or poised on the springboard ready for a dive.

There was not much in the way of signs to detract from the interest of the pool itself. One placard explained the purpose of the exploitation; a second was hung in a conspicuous place, containing only the two words "Let's Go."

Through the co-operation of the hardware store for its own purposes, the expense of the exploitation was materially lessened. Using the suggestion that summer time is fishing time as well as swimming time, the store showed some fishing tackle, and the lure of the shady pool and the clear water flowing over the clean pebbles appealed to the sportsman and resulted in good advertising for the store. The work was for the most part done by the clever young men of the Majestic force, and Manager Nelson estimated that the expense of the exploitation, one of the most successful in his experience was 8 passes and $3.25.

Queen, of Houston, Has Clever Lobby Front

A novel display arranged by Manager H. A. Brownlee of the Queen theatre, Houston, Texas, for "Through the Back Door" resulted in increased box office receipts.

The girl ushers were dressed as Belgian girls with blond wigs and the boys represented the two children brought to America by Jeanne.

Montreal Risks an Eye on "Short Skirts" Exploitation

W. J. Stewart, exploitation man for the Holman theatre, Montreal, caused a general eye-straining among the male members of the population of Montreal, by his recent exploitation for "Short Skirts."

He hired four pretty girls and costumed them in period costume, all of the same material. One wore the styles prevalent in 1900, another those of 1905, the third showed the dress of 1910 and the fourth was right up-to-date with short skirts, roll down socks, etc, etc. Each wore a brassard on her left arm, indicating the date she represented.

During certain hours of the day, they promenaded along a balcony in one of the leading department stores obtaining one of their best windows, in which was placed a display of models with short skirts. Stills from the picture and caption cards tied up the display to the showing at the Holman.

A stand of models garbed in short skirts also was placed in the theatre lobby.

Stewart reports he had no trouble whatso ever in selling the department store on the idea of the co-operative display. The exploitation was a winner for the picture, and resulted in excellent business, despite the heat wave that hovered over the city.

Post Cards Advertise "Through the Back Door"

Joe Doherty, manager of the Palace theatre, Cleburne, Texas, had some postal cards printed which read, "Will arrive at 12 noon, Palace Theatre, 'Through the Back Door,' Sincerely Mary Pickford."

Uses Circus Methods in Circus Communities

Oxford, O. is one of those communities that regards the circus as the great event of the year. So Messrs. William E. and E. A. Keen bill their Oxford theatre programs just like Ringling Bros. Norman M. Dixon, the Paramount exploiteer who has been helping them on their summer campaign, says that this flooding of the billboards in Oxford—a town of 2,500—and the surrounding country has been all that is necessary to fill the house.

Atlanta Book Stores Aid Schmidt of the Strand

"Zane Grey Week" was properly celebrated in Atlanta, by the co-operation of the bookstores, when Manager George Schmidt, of the Strand theatre, played "The Man of the Forest."

Various bookstores in town featured portraits of Zane Grey, with effectively arranged displays of his books. One bookstore which is just across from the Strand, arranged a "Man of the Forest" window—a number of copies of the book, in the paper jacket ,and without it. Some of the books were opened at illustrations, with good results. The center of the window was occupied by a lobby-frame of scenes from the picture, with the play-date and the theatre name.

But perhaps the best stunt of the whole campaign was the lobby of the Strand for that week.

An enormous book, tall enough to reach nearly to the top of the theatre, and wide enough to completely fill the lobby, leaving only a narrow path on either side for entrance and exit, was the feature of this display. The book was colored a dark green, lettered in gold, "The Man of the Forest" at the top, and, at the bottom, in small gold letters, "by Zane Grey."

A great jagged hole had been torn in the cover of the book, the edges curled back, to reveal a painting of one of the scenes from the play, which was copied exactly after the illustration in the book. This scene showed a number of men, dressed as lumbermen, with a battering ram, trying to break down the door of the little forest shanty. Along at the bottom of the scene, were lines taken from that page of the book, which the scene illustrated.

The whole scene was one of tense excitement, and foretold some violent bit of action. Artfully arranged lights at the back of the scene illumined it with a sort of red glow that gave one the impression of a forest fire, in twilight woods.

It was a most unusual and most effective display, tending to create interest in the picture, and to express something of the spirit of the picture.

Musical Director Arranges Overture for Kiwanis

Last week was Kiwanis week in Cleveland. Over five thousand representatives of the organization attended the national convention. They came from all over this country and Canada. Mr. Spitalny knew that the State theatre would get a lot of Kiwanians during the week, so he arranged his overture to appeal, not to a few but to all of them. His overture was an exceptionally well arranged medley of northern, southern, eastern, western and English airs. Symphonic effects were gained by combining some of the airs, and having the string instruments play one air while the brasses played another, obtaining an harmonious and artistic whole. In this way Mr. Spitalny had his whole audience with him all the time, and the overture acted like a magnet, for anything that sounds like "home" will draw the crowds any time.

Young Puts Over "I Am Guilty"

Edwin F. Young, exploitation manager for the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, used a number of stunts to advertise "I Am Guilty," both previous to and during the showing at the Lyric.

Practically every restaurant in the downtown district distributed paper napkins among their patrons on which was printed in large red type, "See, 'I Am Guilty' at the Lyric Theatre."

Printed yellow flyers offering a reward for the capture of the "guilty" woman were handed out at the Latonia race track as the racing season was on. The Cincinnati Enquirer printed daily stories pertaining to this stunt and offered a prize to the one who captured the "guilty" woman.

Every automobile attending the races was tagged with a court citation, stating that the owner's arrest was due for not appearing at the Lyric theatre to see "I Am Guilty."

A sign in the lobby which read, "During the last fifteen minutes of the show no one will be admitted owing to dramatic tension," also excited the curiosity of those who passed the theatre.

Meyer Pulls Stunts for "Now and Never"

A clever tie-up executed by Manager Fred S. Meyer, of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, O., during the showing of "Now or Never" drew good business.

He consulted with the proprietors of the various business concerns who were about to hold special sales and arranged for a double page display in the daily paper. The advertisement, which was headed with the title "Now or Never," also showed a likeness of the star in the center of the layout surrounded by the various sales announcements, all of which were captioned "Now or Never."

Boy Scouts Aid "Bob Hampton" at Harrisburg

Every Boy Scout in the city of Harrisburg, Pa., in which there are eighteen troops with an aggregate enrollment of 150 members, has been transformed into an enthusiastic rooter for the Colonial motion picture theatre, Third and Market streets, that city, as a result of a clever exploitation stunt executed by I. E. Sanders, the Colonial's manager. "Bob Hampton of Placer" was booked at the Colonial for the week of July 4 to 9, and Sanders, making use of the boys' knowledge of scouting and woodcraft, invited the whole eighteen troops to engage in a scouting expedition into Wildwood Park, a thickly grown forest on the outskirts of the city, in quest of four genuine Redmen, who were imported for the occasion.

Running Elk, a real chieftain of the Blackfoot tribe, and three companions, were sent into the forest at 6 o'clock on the morning of July 5 with instructions to hide themselves from the boys, but to blaze a trail into the forest to give the youngsters a chance to do some genuine scouting in an effort to round them up. A prize was offered to the troop doing the most effective work in "capturing" the redskins, and the boys were given until 1 o'clock in the afternoon to complete the job. The scouts were sent to the woods at 9 o'clock and before noon, a scout of Troop No. 7, had hunted out Chief Running Elk and led him back to the city a "prisoner." Another scout, and a scoutmaster, rounded up the rest of the aborigines and the prize was awarded to their unit. After the hunt the boys were all guests of the Colonial at an exhibition of "Bob Hampton of Placer," and that theatre now has acquired the everlasting friendship, not only of these 150 pepful youngsters, but of their parents and all their youthful acquaintances as well.

When a rubber bathing suit style show was put on by the Grand theatre, Madison, Wis., a considerable number of people left the waters of the Four Lakes surrounding that city and went to see the show—and "Jim the Penman."

The apparel and professional models were brought to Madison from Marshall Field's by a local pharmacy and the style show promoted jointly by the theatre and pharmacy. The expense was borne by the latter.

This was the first rubber bathing suit show to be presented in any theatre in the country, according to the backers.

The novelty of the affair, the timeliness of it, and fact that swimming is the chief summer sport in Madison all contributed to the success of the stunt.

Statuettes Advertise "Deception" at Seattle

A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, attracted a lot of attention for "Deception" by using statuettes in co-operative windows. These were modelled by Archie La Ferniere, of Seattle, for the run of the picture at the Strand theatre, and based on the stills, showing Henny Porten as Anne Boleyn, clinging in despair to a balluster. Several of the miniature statues were executed as direct copies of the stills, others as imaginative studies with the figures in nude. There was one copy of Henry VIII, bowing sardonically. Another materially aided an outfitting company, in whose window the display was showing. It showed a nude female figure clinging to a rod which was the stem of an electric lamp shade.

The statues were worked with astounding success for "Forbidden Fruit."

Johnstone Varies His "Buried Treasure" Stunt

The "Buried Treasure" hunt which John LeRoy Johnston, the Paramount exploiteer worked successfully in both Los Angeles and Pasadena was elaborated into the best tie-up that picture has ever had through the joint services of Johnston A. G. Pickett, manager of the Rialto theatre, Tucson, Ariz., and the Tucson Citizen, newspaper.

Pickett's influence with the Tucson merchants resulted in donations of everything from soap and knives to collars, ties and summer bonnets for the women. These contributions, coming from practically every important dealer in town, made up the chest of the buried treasure hunt.

Instead of burying one box with all the valuables, Mr. Pickett buried envelopes which contained tickets entitling the finder to some part of the treasure. In that way everybody was satisfied for a reward of some kind was given to every one of the 200 contestants.

The hunters for the treasure were registered at the Tucson Citizen office. During their wanderings in search of the envelopes, they wore large identification tags which also gave away the name of the picture and its run. The Citizen ran stories of the hunt for five days prior to the showing. The merchants were delighted with the advertising that resulted from the donation of some small article of merchandise.

Mr. Pickett made an attractive lobby by planting an old trunk in front of his box office. The exposed corner revealed a skull and cross bones.

Tie-ups of this kind work both ways. They please both the patrons and the merchants.

Broadway Theatre Has Fine Lobby Display

Once in a while even Broadway sees a lobby display of a decorative nature exploiting a motion picture. One of these transformed the entrance to the Astor theatre prior to the opening of "The Old Nest."

This display consisted mainly of two apple trees in full bloom. At night a soft pink light was thrown against the blossoms from the rear so that the lobby looked for all the world like an apple orchard. In each tree was a bird's nest, symbolical of the title and the story of the picture.

The trunks of the two trees, one placed on each side of the lobby entrance, were made of papier mache; real apple branches were fastened to the trunks and artificial blossoms to the branches. Crowds filled the Astor lobby day and night so restful and attractive is the display.

Easily Executed Exploitation for "Deception"

"Deception" successfully bucked the warm weather when it played at the Orpheum theatre, Roundup, Mont., due to exploitation which was within the means of the manager. Co-operating with the theatre was Rick Ricketson, the Paramount exploiteer from Salt Lake City, and William Anderson, a local artist with something more than a sign painter's ability.

The vest-pocket lobby was dominated by a banner in bright blue and gold. An artistic combination of a block one-sheet and stills were hung on the panels of the doors. The window displays boasted of especially artistic window cards lettered in colors and acted as mountings for carefully cut-out stills.

"Ten Dollar Raise" Stunt Is New

The California theatre, Los Angeles, and the Los Angeles Record recently put over a novel exploitation stunt for the engagement of "The Ten Dollar Raise."

Readers of the Record were invited to send in letters relating to any acts of unusual courtesy of which they had been a recipient from employees of Los Angeles stores.

The most courteous employee written about was to receive a prize of a ten dollar raise for ten consecutive weeks—a prize entailing the expenditure of $100. The writer of the letter about the prize winner was to receive a cash prize of $25. In addition to this the Record undertook to publish the best letter received daily for a period of two weeks and two complimentary tickets were given to the writers of each of the letters published.

The idea of the contest made every clerk in Los Angeles a booster of the "Ten Dollar Raise."

Pratt Originates Lobby Front for "Man Tamer"

C. C. Pratt, manager of the Strand theatre, Tacoma, Wash., strives to build lobby displays that will make friends. How well he succeeds is shown by the accompanying cut showing a display on "The Man Tamer."

Mr. Pratt started by dressing up his box office to represent a circus ticket wagon, and his entrance doors to represent the Main Entrance of a circus tent. Along the back wall of his lobby he painted a canvas effect, resembling the "big top" of a circus. Around his exit doors he painted the canvas to look like it had been raised, showing the interior of the tent. For this interior he used the six-sheet supplied by the picture, showing Gladys Walton, in circus attire, fighting with a charging lioness. The effect was startlingly artistic.

On one side of his lobby he constructed a stand such as is seen in front of the freak shows at a circus. Mounted on this stand were painted cut-outs representing such freaks as the "fat lady," the "human skeleton," the "snake charmer," and others. At the front corners of his lobby were constructed little square stands such as barkers use. Humorous cut-outs of circus barkers were set up in these stands pointing the way into the theatre.

In the center of the lobby Pratt had a platform erected, upon which he placed a ballyhoo consisting of a young boy and a young girl. They were dressed as acrobats and amused a large crowd constantly by their stunts.

San Diego Originates "Dream Street" Prologue

The setting for the prologue represented a street in "Limehouse," London, and local players played the parts of the music hall dancer, the violinist and the Chinese heavy of the picture story.

Some of the outside publicity in connection with the showing was the use of placards placed in many sections of the city, with the words "Dream Street—Straight Ahead," and an arrow pointing in the general direction of the Plaza.

Old Time Movie Show Stunt Invades Canada

"An Old-Time Movie Show" was the unusual attraction which was arranged by Manager Oral D. Cloakey for the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, during the week of June 27. This stunt consisted of the presentation of two moving picture relics which were produced in 1904. One of these releases was the production which was considered a sensation at that time, namely, "The Great Train Robbery." The other was originally a very special feature, a one-reel picture, "A Trip to the Moon." Both are to be shown in conjunction with the presentation of a recent release, "A Message from Mars," to demonstrate the progress that has been made with pictures in seventeen years.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

Division Manager Stern of Universal set the pace for Universals Chicago personnel on a trip to Cedar Lake, Ind., last week. A real southern chicken dinner was enjoyed following the motor trip over the Indiana highways which are at least as smooth as those in Illinois.

Robert Lucas has assumed his new duties as general manager of Harry Gramp's Illinois circuit of theaters and will make Chicago his permanent headquarters. Mr. Lucas resigned the managership of Robertson Cole's Chicago branch to become associated with the Gramp interests and is one of the most widely known and popular members of Chicago's motion picture colony.

Floyd Brockell, superintendent of exchanges, spent several days in Chicago last week conferring with Manager Seery and other First National officials.

Frank P. Ishmael has resigned his position as city salesman with Robertson-Cole to accept a similar position with Metro's Chicago office. Mr. Ishmael was winner of Robertson-Cole's "Wonder Man" contest, making the highest record of any salesman in the United States and taking the prize, a trip to New York and a ring side seat at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. He is widely known in Chicago film circles having been connected with the industry here for many years.

E.C. Jensen Field Representative of Robertson-Cole is in Chicago and is supervising the office pending the appointment of a local manager to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Robert Lucas.

Max Slott, for the past two years house manager of the Woodlawn Theatre has been appointed manager of the Stratford Theatre at 63rd and Halstead Sts. and has assumed his new duties. He will have entire charge of the house and look after all bookings. Mr. Slott plans to exploit all feature pictures playing at the Stratford extensively and will make frequent use of presentations. He, although one of the youngest managers in Chicago is widely and favorably known and previous to his connection with the Woodlawn was assistant manager at the Jackson Park for two and one half years.

Douglas D. Rothacker is vacationing in the north woods. S. J. Stoughton of the Rothacker Industrial division is making a sales tour in Ohio and George Kilgore is operating in Iowa. William H. Strafford, also of the industrial division has returned from Oklahoma and Texas where he directed the shooting of a two reel practical picture which visualizes the extraction of gasoline from natural gas.

Camera man Harry Birch has returned to Chicago from the Dalles of Wisconsin a full fledged Indian Chief and is entitled to the tribal name of Chief Little Birch Tree. He went through the ceremonies incidental to adoption into the tribe, including taking three draws at the peace pipe which he declares left him "Cuckoo" for two hours, so that he could shoot the Indian harvest and war dances for the Fox News reel, none but an "Indian" being allowed to participate. Hundreds of aborigines participated in the historic annual festival and some very spectacular and interesting pictures were secured by "Little Birch Tree."

The Dixon Theatre Company, Ill., have had plans drawn for a moving picture theatre and hotel which is to cost $100,000 and it is reported that work is to be started immediately on the new structure.

Fred Schaefer of United Artists publicity department is touring the central west in the interests of the fall releases scheduled by United and stopped off in Chicago for a few days. He reports the feeling among exchangemen and theatre owners is optimistic and that good pictures will find a big market this winter.

A steady improvement in the accessory business has been noted for the past three weeks, according to Manager Benson of the Amusemen Supply Company, who states that in his opinion the low ebb has been passed and a safe and steady business revival is under way. Mr. Benson made this statement after a careful review of his books for sometime past and his optimism is based on figures which it is impossible to dispute.

Joe Trinz left for the east last week in his motor car and while there expects to attend some of the big race meets. He was accompanied by a party of four friends.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have completed arrangements to give Chicago its first view of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers" the widely heralded super feature picturing Dumas' famous novel of the same name. This feature will be shown at the Randolph Theatre. Charlie Chaplin's "Vanity Fair" also has been booked by Jones, Linick & Schaefer for its Chicago premier and a large number of other important pictures will be seen early during the fall season.

W. D. Burford of Aurora is planning to spend part of August vacationing at Macinac Island. Mr. Murford is one of the hardest working members of the industry as aside from looking after his extensive theatre interests he is secretary of The Illinois Exhibitors Alliance and is extremely conscientious and active in working for and promoting the interests of that organization.

On August eighth an election will be held at Piper City, Illinois, at which the question of Sunday movies will be voted on. The Illinois Exhibitors Alliance has tendered its services to Clarence E. Rice, manager of the Opera House at Piper City, to aid him in fighting the Sunday closing proponents and is also preparing to take an active part in fighting the Sunday closing movement in other Illinois towns where similar elections are expected to be held in the near future.

Balaban & Katz have definitely decided to name the magnificent moving picture palace which they are erecting at State and Lake Streets "The Chicago" instead of the Ambassador, as previously announced. A number of prominent business leaders of the Windy City had made the suggestion that as the house was to be the finest in the country that a local name be given it and when this was backed up by a letter from Mayor Thompson Messrs. Balaban & Katz as loyal Chicagoans decided to name it after the home city. Work is being rushed so that "The Chicago" may open its doors early in September.

"Where Lights Are Low" was directed by Colin Campbell and Hayakawa is supported by a splendid cast, most of the members of which are Orientals. It will be released on August 7.

Music and the Picture

Some Midsummer Thoughts for the Picture Musician

By Charles D. Isaacson

YOU who have the opportunity during midsummer to get a little closer to nature, who can dip in the sea or the inland lake, who can climb to the summit of heaven-turned mountains, or meander through the quiet of cool, sweet forests—listen to our round-table chat on some midsummer motion picture thoughts.

You who get closer to nature are moving close to the original sources of creation—you are touching the well-springs which inspired the composers of music and the painters of canvases.

You are listening to the music of the woods, of the sea, of the rivers; you are moving into the atmosphere of the mountains and the forest—"Can't you hear the paddles chunkin' from Rangoon to Mandalay?"

Not that I would grow sentimental or poetic, but there is an object lesson to which I would call your attention.

When you are preparing to score a picture—to add to it the proper musical setting, you are wondering always just which is most appropriate in your library of compositions. Now the musician or the manager who is not a technical musician but who feels music is better equipped to sense what is just right, if he has himself caught the original voices of nature.

As you wander along the forest road, it seems a shame to drag in your business, but once or twice give a thought to this suggestion.

What are the woods singing? If this were a motion picture instead of the real thing, and you were trying to select your music, what would be in tune with this singing you hear in the soughing boughs and the dancing leaves and the voices of birds and animals? Strain your ears. Listen tightly. Hear the pulse of the silent woods, catch the color of the harmony that is all about you. Now, if your soul has a wee bit of the divine impulse, you are in the same communion with creation that has inspired Mendelssohn, Beethoven, Schubert, and every master composer.

Listen again! What familiar composition seems to fit in with this unseen orchestral performance of the woods. Remember Liszt's "Forest Murmurs" and Sinding's "Murmurs of Spring" and Beethoven's "Pastorale" and Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun." They are not out of tune, are they? Oh, no. And now you can hear for yourself why it is that the picture representation of this forest in the theatre calls for a voice which is music to make it more real and atmospheric.

Now think of the ocean. You are at the beach, the waves rolling in, there is a soft splashing on the sands and a swishing as the water retreats. Perhaps a boat digs its nose into the beach as it gains the shore, or perhaps out upon the surf, when the great steamer is rolling and tossing—listen! What do you hear? What are the wild waves saying? What is the keynote of the harmony? Say it! Think now of the music which is supposed to give the atmosphere of the ocean. Remember it now, and say for yourself if it is in tune with the real sounds!

It seems to me always that if our motion picture musicians could occasionally themselves feel the impulse to creation of music that fits the situations they are seeking to color with harmony, they would make fewer blunders, and more than that, be themselves attuned to the spirit of the thing they are seeking to accomplish.

So these wandering midsummer thoughts are passed on to those who have the opportunity during this season to get a little closer to nature and humanity in its more native moments.

MUSIC FORUM.

Before my association with the theatre I was a concert pianist, organist and instructor. My piano I studied under the tutelage of Mr. Constantin V. Sternberg, and with earlier assistance of my father, a musician of wide-known reputation. Have appeared as soloist in numerous recitals with various orchestras, with marked success, having obtained favorable comments from the press and my many audiences. I studied the organ under the late Mr. David D. Wood, and held positions as organist in several large churches in this city.

When I decided to enter the art of motion picture playing, it was with a sincere desire to do justice to the photo play, organ, audience and my musical reputation.

Music for the photo play is a new and valuable field for music students. To search out and make available selections which actually stimulate the mood of the scene, harmonizing with the theme of the scenario, deepens the appreciation and increases the value for better music for the film. This is the most interesting work the musician can attempt. An absolute essential factor of the musical score arranged for motion pictures is "Synchronization," i. e., exact timing of the accompaniment to the scene of action. It is something which everyone in the audience senses and recognizes as the feature which eliminates sudden disjointed stops and jarring changes in musical settings.

It has always been my aim to arrange my programs embracing music ranging from the popular selections of the day to movements from the world's greatest symphonies, so all patrons may have an opportunity of hearing the music of which they are the most fond.

137 South 56th St., Philadelphia.

Dear Sir:

If you will, tell me where I can get a music book specially for motion pictures, pieces that suit and changes for different scenes.

I am yours very respectfully,

(Signed) D. T. Edwards,
Musical Director.

STILL THE MUSIC TAX

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

The News carried a few weeks ago a very illuminating article on the activities of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in their relation to the Motion Picture theatres. There are some points, however, which were not cleared up specifically and I am writing you in the hope of obtaining further information. If you cannot give me this information may I ask you to refer me to someone who can?

Do the activities of this society cover such works of its composer-members as are published by persons or companies not members of the society when the copyright is held by the publisher? For instance, the Friml numbers copyrighted by Schirmer.

Can this society or its members prevent the use of an old song by copyrighting a new version? For instance, the copyrighted version of "Nellie Gray" recently put out and included in the press book of the "Testing Block."

For what period of years does a copyright hold good? Can numbers be used without the payment of a tax after the expiration of this period? For instance, some of the old Sousa marches and Herbert musical comedies.

Can the list of members, as published by the society, be considered authentic and complete? The May number of "Melody" looks very much like Walter Jacobs is a member of this society or at least in sympathy with their aims, but his name is not included in their list of publishers in the same issue.

In explanation of the foregoing let me say that the manager of the theatre where I serve as organist has refused to pay any fee to this society. I wish to say further that I am in accord with his decision, not because he is manager of the theatre where I happen to be employed but because this seems to me to be the right and just course. It is possible to have every legal right to do a thing and no moral right whatever.

There can be no question but that the performance of the numbers controlled by this society brings far greater profit to the members of the society than to the persons responsible for the performance. Public performance is recognized as the one great factor in the popularizing of music while the difference in profits to a theatre through using taxed and fee free music is practically negligible, in fact the elimination of a large percentage of the numbers controlled by this society will usually result in better musical programs. The composers of merit who have lent their names and influence to this movement are comparatively few.

The members of this society have long realized the benefit to themselves of the performance of their works as is evidenced by the amount they expend in furnishing professional people with copies and urging their use. Taking into consideration the quality of the stuff produced under the "staff writer" system, it seems like adding insult to injury to follow up a bunch of these professional copies and letters asking performers to use them with a demand that a fee shall be paid for their use.

It is a significant fact that the society went to the managers rather than the musicians to collect their fee. It is much easier for the musician to advise the manager to pay the tax than to go through his library and separate the wolves from the sheep and then procure numbers to fill the gaps. However, if he were asked for the fee the chances are that he would soon find means of presenting creditable programs without standing the "jip."

I ask your pardon, Mr. Isaacson, for the length of this letter.

Permit me to thank you for the good I have gotten from your department in the News. You are doing a considerable service to the industry—musicians and managers.

Yours very truly,

Ralph M. Howell,
1700 Villa Ave.,
Sioux City, Iowa.

Christie Plans Expansion

Contemplates "Greater Series" as Result of New Educational Contract

WITH the signing of a new contract which will give to Educational Film Exchanges the exclusive distribution of Christie Comedics for a long period of time, Al Christie, president and producing head of the latter organization, has already made far-reaching plans for a greater series of Christie films to follow those which Educational has distributed with eminent success.

"Educational has given a fresh impetus to quality production of comedy in the past year," says Al Christie. "While we previously distributed our own product through the medium of the independent exchanges, we were reaching the best of theatres. But it remained for Educational with its 36 offices in the United States and Canada, selling short subjects exclusively to give a 100 per cent distribution of our product. The film business men at the head, were doing their utmost to call the attention of the exhibiting world to the fact that Educational stands for the best in comedies and other short subjects, gave us an enthusiasm for doing our share and holding up the producing end as never before.

"Now that we are to be associated for a long-term contract with Educational, we are going to make greater efforts than ever to lead the two-reel comedy field."

Gottschalk to Do Music Score for Pickford

The music for Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" will be written by Louis Gottschalk, now preparing a synchronization for Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers," according to an announcement from the United Artists Corporation.

Gottschalk has been busy for the past two weeks with the instrumental arrangement for the Fairbanks production and will undoubtedly be occupied for at least another fortnight with this task, but because of the fact that the Pickford picture will be released a month later than "The Three Musketeers," Gottschalk finds that he will have ample time in which to handle both productions.

BarrettMcCormickHost to Thos. Mott Osborne

Thomas Mott Osborne, who is the author of the big picture, entitled "The Right Way," which deals with conditions as they exist today behind the prisons of the United States, is in Cleveland this week as the special guest of Mr. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the handsome Allen Theatre, the Osborne production being the main attraction at the Allen for the ensuing week.

Mr. McCormick is showing Mr. Osborne how special exploitation can be given his picture by a local crew of publicity experts and special stunt creators.

"Quality to Bring Response"

S. R. Kent Says Fall Business Will Respond Only to "Quality" Films

"THE motion picture business is not going to rebound from its present depression like a rubber ball. It is going to respond, however, to the kind of pictures given the public this fall, and it is nothing but super-quality productions that will enable the box-offices of the country to register a story of profits in the face of general conditions which may continue for some time to be unsatisfactory."

In the furnishing of such pictures by producers during the next few months lies the surest hope of a strong revival in the industry, in the opinion of S. R. Kent, Famous Players-Lasky's General Manager of Distribution, who has just returned from a business trip of nearly a month which took him all the way to Los Angeles.

"There is nothing so necessary at the present time as confidence," said Mr. Kent. "The pessimists, the yellow-streakers, are going to be eliminated during the coming year, without any question. This business cannot carry as many quitters as I have seen in all branches of the business during the past few months. In spite of the present depression, this industry today stands heads and shoulders—as far as condition is concerned—above any other national industry of any consequence that I know of, and there is no other industry so fortunately situated to reap the benefits that will accrue through a sane deflation and sane re-organization in the business world.

"I find that the public is more critical than it has ever been before regarding the quality of its picture entertainment. It continues to shop for value in its pictures as it is shopping for value in every other line of merchandise for which it is spending its money. It does not object, even today, to paying the fullest price for the picture that gives real entertainment and real value."

"The Idle Class" Ready Soon

Chaplin's Sixth Subject for First National Shows Star in Dual Role

"THE IDLE CLASS," a travesty on the weaknesses of the wealthy, will be Charles Chaplin's next contribution to the gayety of the nations. After five months' work the picture has reached the editing and cutting stage, and will soon be ready for release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc. This is his sixth production for First National. The picture was originally titled "Vanity Fair," but because there was another of the same name, Chaplin selected "The Idle Class" as the permanent title.

"The Idle Class" is described to be a departure from anything Chaplin has ever done before. While it is a short length production it is declared by those associated with Chaplin that it will meet with the approval of the amusement loving public just as much as did the star's feature play, "The Kid."

Among the outstanding features of "The Idle Class" is the presentation by the comedian of himself in a dual role, something he has never before attempted. Not alone is Chaplin seen as the beloved tramp, but he also offers himself as an up-to-date swell.

"The Idle Class" is, as have been all of this star's productions, an original story written by Chaplin. The film was likewise produced under the comedian's personal direction and he is now devoting his efforts to the cutting and assembling.

Edna Purviance, the leading woman of the Chaplin organization, is reported to have the biggest part of her entire screen career in "The Idle Class." With the presentation of "The Idle Class" comes the return of Mack Swain as the chief foil for Chaplin. Swain is a giant in size, standing six feet and three inches in height and boasting of a weight in the neighborhood of 360 pounds.

The balance of the supporting company is made up of players who have long been identified with Chaplin. Among those who stand out prominently are Henry Bergman, John Rand, Allan Garcia, Loyal Underwood and Lillian Parker, the last mentioned having been placed under contract by Chaplin following her excellent work in "The Kid" as the "heavenly vamp."

Educational Closes Meeting

Managers Express Full Confidence in Chief at Chicago Convention

THE first annual convention of the Educational Films exchange managers was brought to a close on Wednesday evening of last week with a grand banquet. Fifty persons attended the dinner, which was held in the Congress Hotel, in Chicago. They included E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, four members of the headquarters staff from New York, the branch managers and several producers, among whom were Al and Charles Christie, and C. C. Burr.

Henry Ginsberg, domestic sales manager, presided as toastmaster. Mr. Hammons addressed the gathering, basing his remarks on his faith in the organization and their faith in the industry.

Then Mr. Ginsberg called upon I. M. Schwartz, manager of the Chicago branch exchange, and resident host to the convention. Mr. Schwartz spoke feelingly of the confidence "the boys" had in Mr. Hammons and of their loyalty to the branch of the industry espoused by Mr. Hammons—specialization in short subjects.

At the close of his talk Mr. Schwartz presented Mr. Hammons with a beautiful desk set as a token of the esteem of the members of the organization. Mr. Hammons, deeply moved by this expression of regard, arose and briefly thanked the assemblage for their token of esteem and confidence.

A theatre party was held at the Tivoli theatre for the convention delegates Tuesday evening. Following the dinner Wednesday evening, the men departed on night trains for their homes.

Ingram to Film Stage Play

Rex Ingram returned to the Metro studios in Hollywood this week from the east and will begin immediately plans for the motion picture production of "Turn to the Right," the great stage success by Winchell Smith and Jack Hazzard.

Metro purchased a half interest in "Turn to the Right" from John Golden, producer of the spoken play. Arrangements were made with Mr. Ingram to do the Golden success during his recent visit to New York to attend the presentation and what proved to be the clean-cut triumph of his newest film play, "The Conquering Power," which is Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet," in celluloid.

At the time of his departure for the West coast, Mr. Ingram's plans had not crystallized to the extent of announcing a probable cast. It is understood, however, that Alice Terry, leading woman in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Conquering Power," will have the principal feminine role in "Turn to the Right."

The picture will be made entirely in California and not partly in the East.

"Four Horsemen" Lauded by Texas Critics

Special pre-release exhibitions of the Rex Ingram production, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in Dallas and Waco, Texas, have brought forth much praise from the local press critics. The Dallas press remarked:

"Such a story, dealing as it does with world movements and universal passions, seems to call for the camera rather than the printed page. The procession of great events, the rising of cities, the obliterating progress of war, are portrayed much more vividly on the screen than in words."

"It is not the number of men involved, the stupendousness of the production, the thousands of dollars spent in scenery, the artistic unity of the scenes, nor the reality with which the characters are portrayed—not these that rouse the heart. . . . It is that the pictures, marvelously perfected as they are in detail, become but the vehicle through which great truths are revealed. . . . The men and women who take the parts in the play are unbelievably true to the types of the novel. . . ."

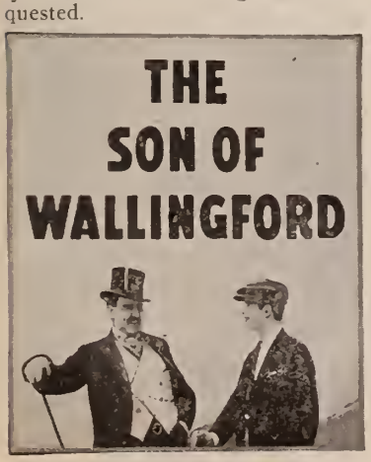
"The Journey's End" Off to a Flying Start

"The Journey's End" was given a most favorable reception during its week's engagement at the Capitol theatre, New York City, during the week of July 17th. Mabel Ballin plays the leading feminine role in this picture. Wyndham Standing and George Bancroft also appear in important roles. The picture was made by Hugo Ballin and is being released by the Hodkinson organization.

The Home Office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation reports that bookings on "The Journey's End" are coming in at a very great rate from every section of the United States.

"Four Horsemen" Given Extended Runs

The unusual appeal which "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Rex Ingram production for Metro Pictures Corporation, possesses for all communities was again strikingly demonstrated when in both Montreal, Canada, and San Francisco, Cal., extensions of the regularly scheduled showing were requested.



Fox Gives August Releases

"Over the Hill" Among Releases to Go to Exhibitor Direct

CONFIDENCE in the swift and complete recovery of the motion picture industry from the depression in which it has shared in some degree with all other industries, is expressed in Fox Film Corporation announcements. Releases of new productions for August include pictures starring Shirley Mason, William Russell, Buck Jones, Eileen Percy, Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker. In addition comes the announcement that "Over the Hill" will go to exhibitors throughout the country, without waiting for the termination of its Broadway run, which already has continued for nearly a year.

The Shirley Mason release for August is a romantic mystery story which provides the popular Fox star with excellent opportunities for the display of her artistic and dramatic ability and personal charm. It is based upon Joseph Ernest Peat's popular novel, "Concerning Chickine," and bears the title "Ever Since Eve."

William Russell is happily cast in the stellar role of "Singing River," a stirring story of adventure and love in the West. Lang Push, rancher and prospector, is the sturdy type of upstanding, hard-fighting young American that the athletic Fox star portrays most effectively.

Buck Jones appears in a fighting role in "To a Finish," a melodrama of love and perilous adventure in the cow country, which is characterized by fast and exciting action.

"Play Square" is the title of the vehicle for the co-starring of Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker. It is a story presenting marked contrasts in social conditions, purposes in life, and in scenery. Some of the scenes are laid in the criminal underworld of a great city, and others in the peaceful calm of a rural community. The co-stars are cast effectively.

Communications received by Fox Film Corporation display extraordinary interest in the announced August release to exhibitors of "Over the Hill," the Fox feature which has been so long a sensation in New York City. Applications for booking by mail and wire are pouring in from all sections, the Fox offices report.

August releases also include two Sunshine Comedies, "Ain't Love Grand?" and "The Devilish Romeo," which are declared by those who have seen the picture to be infallible laugh-provokers. These avowedly comic pictures, however, do not enjoy a monopoly of humor in the Fox Film Corporation August releases. It is stated that many laughable situations arise in each of the four feature releases. In "Ever Since Eve," the Shirley Mason photodrama, these flashes of humor relieve situations of tense suspense. Miss Mason's support includes Herbert Hayes, Eva Gordon, Mrs. Vin Moore, Charles Spere, Frances Hancock, Louis Ring and Ethel Lynn.

In the William Russell picture, "Singing River," a temperamental white horse known as Cecil provides most of the laughs. Cecil is not given a place in the cast, but will be remembered by those who see the picture. Among those supporting the star are Vola Vale, Jack Rosleigh, Clark Comstock and Jack McDonald.

There is some fun-making even in the exciting Buck Jones picture. The strenuous star is supported by Helen Ferguson, G. Raymond Nye, Norman Selby (Kid McCoy) and Herschel Mayall. Bernard Durning directed the production.

The Eileen Percy photodrama, written and directed by Carl Harbaugh, is entitled "Hickville to Broadway." It is a story of interesting phases of New York life, following village scenes and social customs. The popular Fox star is strongly supported by William Scott, Ed Burns, John Lockney, Rosemary Theby, Margaret Morris and Ray Howard.

Pathe's Short-Subject Schedule

For Coming Year to Include at Least 450 Subjects

THE extent to which Pathe Exchange, Inc. has entered into the field of "short subjects," is indicated in an announcement by Elmer Pearson, Director of Exchanges, that during the coming year, Pathe will have at least 450 releases in this department. The tremendous nature of this schedule can best be figured by the fact that there will be a Pathe subject for every day in the year, and two for some days. Mr. Pearson made it very plain in his statement that even this elaborate schedule will be expanded.

Serials do not come under the general classification of short subjects in the Pathe ratings, and consequently are not numbered among the 450 releases contracted for the season beginning in September.

The statement from the Pathe headquarters announcing the short-subject releases follows:

"Among the established series of short subjects figuring in this Pathe showing are the semi-weekly issues of Pathe News and the weekly issues of Pathe Review—and both of these essentials on all well-arranged programmes have benefitted by the added impetus contributed to short subjects in general.

"Pathe Review not only has broadened its scope of beautiful Pathe-color offerings to include more charming scenics characteristic of this country, but already has begun to include in its reels special material on social, art and scientific subjects which require the cooperation of the leading authorities and institutions fostering them. The weekly issues of "Topics of the Day" are included in the list

"The list also includes some highly original productions, as, for example, the wild animal trapping and taming series called "The Adventures of Bill and Bob," which enjoyed such hearty acceptance everywhere that a new series was promptly contracted for and is now being produced by Cyrus J. Williams. It appears that neither young nor old patrons of the silver sheet are able to resist the realistic, breezy and thrilling, yet humane and wholesome appeal of these intensely dramatic episodes of real boy life in the wilds.

"Of similar fascination are the pictures in the new series which carry you into the jungles of Asia with the celebrated Major Jack Allen, who makes a profession of the capture alive of elephants, lions, black panthers and other highly-prized menagerie exhibits. The skill and the whirlwind speed with which the doughty Major builds his snares on the spot, captures his dangerous and surprised four-footed antagonists and carries them off helpless but uninjured, leave you quite breathless.

"The Hal Roach comedies, featuring such favorites as Harry "Snub" Pollard, Marie Mosquini, Eddie Boland and Sunshine Sammy, and Gaylord Lloyd, will come along at the rate of one a week and in all probability will average two a week, including the Harold Lloyd reissues.

"While Harold Lloyd continues to make his point with his multiple-reel comedies, the exhibitor demand for reissues of some of his exceedingly comical early one-reelers with "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels has become so pressing that Pathe has responded by announcing a long list of the Lloyd reissues for the ensuing year.

"A new series of the virile and popular Tom Santschi Westerns are now being produced. In this general vein of most effective outdoor material are included the Holman Day short pictures dealing with life in the Maine woods.

High Tribute to Rothacker Laboratory Work

The following from David M. Hartford was placed with past prizes in the Rothacker letter files: "I have just witnessed a running of the print 'The Golden Snare' and while the idea is fresh in my mind I want to compliment you upon the excellence of your laboratory work in this connection."

Strong Cast for "The Rosary"

Selig-Rork's Six-Reel Feature is Directed by Jerome Storm

IN the cast presented in the Selig-Rork six-reel feature, titled "The Rosary," there will be seen Lewis Stone, Jane Novak, Wallace Beery, Robert Gordon, Eugenie Besserer, Dore Davidson, Pomeroy Cannon, Bert Woodruff, Mildred June and Harold Goodwin.

This production has been under way for three months under the direction of Jerome Storm. According to word from the Selig-Rork headquarters in Los Angeles, more than ordinary care has been exercised in the selection of the cast with a view to securing exact types to fit the roles found in Edward E. Rose's stage classic. As a result considerable time elapsed before the entire cast was completed.

Bernard McConville, who wrote the continuity for "The Rosary," is quoted in the Selig-Rork statement as expressing the opinion that his work for "The Rosary" represents "his greatest screen achievement." McConville's work during the past year has been of an unusual character. Among the successes, chalked up to his credit, are "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Will Rogers' "Doubling For Romeo," Charles Ray's "The Ol' Swimmin' Hole," and many others.

Lewis Stone, who is portraying the role of Father Brian Kelly, the priest, is noted for his screen portraitures. His recent successes are James Oliver Curwood's "The Golden Snare" and "Nomads of the North," Marshall Neilan's "The River's End," by Curwood, "Beau Revel," and many others.

Wallace Beery's screen-villain roles are well known. Jane Novak has long been recognized as one of the potential stars of the silver-sheet, her work with William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Hobart Bosworth, Marshall Neilan, and in the Curwood stories and all-star productions having brought high recognition.

Selig and Rork brought Robert Gordon to the Coast from New York to appear in the cast. Mr. Gordon has been starred for the last two years in Blackton productions. Dore Davidson, who acquired fame as the father in "Humoresque," was also brought to Los Angeles from New York.

Among the other members of the cast, Eugenie Besserer was a favorite mother of such D. W. Griffith pictures as "Scarlet Days" and "The Greatest Question." Pomeroy Cannon attracted praise for his portrayal of the old Argentinian cattle king in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Bert Woodruff was a leading character man of many Charles Ray pictures directed by Jerome Storm. Mildred June is a recent Mack Sennett discovery who appears to advantage in "Heartbalm," and Harold Goodwin has just completed a starring engagement with Fox.

The dramatic action of "The Rosary" is now being filmed at the Selig studio, and within the next month Director Storm will take the entire company to Monterey for the exterior scenes.

The Moving Picture Age, published in Chicago and covering the non-theatrical motion-picture field, includes in its July list of approved pictures "not only suitable for adults but wholesome for children of all ages" the Hodkinson release, "Keeping Up with Lizzie," the Rockett Brothers' screen adaptation of Irving Bacheller's comedy. This endorsement is an unqualified one; the other fourteen pictures listed are conditionally recommended, says the Hodkinson statement, that is, recommended with the suggestion that various cuts be made before exhibition.

Fox Announces "Queen of Sheba" for Release

WILLIAM FOX announces that "Queen of Sheba" has been placed on the list of special productions to be released direct to the exhibitor through the Fox Special Features Department. According to the statement from the Fox headquarters, this decision was reached because of the unusual interest displayed in this subject as shown in the flood of inquiries reaching the Fox Film home-office during the last few weeks following the announcement of the special releases for the coming season. These releases will include "Over the Hill" and "Connecticut Yankee."

The Fox statement further declares that many theatrical engagements have been cancelled for "Queen of Sheba" in view of the new releasing arrangement.

Use Six Producing Units to Make One Picture

Several complete units of production entered into the making of Cecil B. DeMille's all-star production, "The Affairs of Anatol," which will be released in the Fall. In the first place, in addition to Mr. DeMille's own organization, five other separate units are represented by the presence of Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Wanda Hawley and Agnes Ayres in the cast.

The story of the picture, which was suggested by Arthur Schnitzler's play and the paraphrase thereof by Granville Barker, was written by Jennie Macpherson, who deserves perhaps the lion's share of the credit. Yet Miss Macpherson was ably assisted in the preparation of the scenario by Beulah Marie Dix and Elmer Harris, both regular members of the Paramount scenario staff, who ordinarily work independently for different stars.

Goldwyn's Accessory Plans

Special Aids and Posters for "Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead"

Reproduction of a one-sheet which Goldwyn has ready for exhibitors who play "The Old Nest"

WHAT is described by Goldwyn officials as "the most complete line of accessories ever issued for productions sponsored by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation" will be available for exhibitors who will book the Rupert Hughes photoplay, "The Old Nest," and "Dangerous Curve Ahead." These pictures are announced for release September 11th and October 22nd, respectively.

Concerning the accessories to be made available for "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curves Ahead," Goldwyn announces four 24-sheets have been prepared for each of these pictures. It is expected that these posters "will cause a sensation," says the Goldwyn announcement. "Each of them is different, and all present a selling appeal that never before has been used in out-door motion picture advertising.

"The old poster appeal was based on showing a scene from the picture. The Goldwyn idea for 'The Old Nest' posters is not only to do this, but also to show the effect the picture has on people who have seen it."

Beautifully colored lobby cards, 8 x 10, 11 x 14 and 22 x 28, have been made for both "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead," declares the Goldwyn statement.

The special roto window sheet is 14 x 36. "The Old Nest" window sheet is an attractive arrangement of three beautiful scenes from the picture, done on heavy paper in the rotogravure process. The lobby cards are also executed in the most modern manner.

Among the exploitation novelties to be received by exhibitors running "Dangerous Curve Ahead" are traffic stanchions four feet high which may be placed in the theatre lobby, or at any other point of vantage that the house manager may select. The stanchion carries a circular red card with lettering on both sides, reading "See Dangerous Curve Ahead."

Excellent Support for Mary

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" to Show Talent of Unusually High Calibre

AT no time in her career, says a statement from United Artists, has Mary Pickford given more care to the choosing of a cast or to the assembling of suitable types than for her next United Artists film offering, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," now in process of preparation at the Brunton studio in Los Angeles.

The leading character role is played by Claude Gillingwater, footlight veteran whose most recent success was as the grouch in "Three Wise Fools." Gillingwater has many other triumphs to his credit, having been on the speaking stage for more than twenty-five years. This represents his first venture in pictures.

Joseph Dowling, who registered the pinnacle of cinema fame in "The Miracle Man," is playing the part of Havisham, the dignified, understanding and shrewd solicitor whose analytical mind does much to help solve the great difficulty which forms the climax of the story.

Those three lovable characters, the grocer, the applewoman, and the bootblack, are portrayed in their respective order by James Marcus, Kate Price and Fred Malatesta. Marcus played Hobbs, the grocer, in the original Fauntleroy cast on the stage in 1888. Kate Price is recognized as one of the greatest delineators of Irish character parts on the screen. As the mother in Mary Pickford's "Amarilly of Clothes-line Alley" she was a tremendous hit. She also appeared in Miss Pickford's last production, "Through the Back Door;" also with Douglas Fairbanks as Mrs. Canby in "Arizona."

Fred Malatesta has shown up to good advantage in the following recent features: "The Mask," in the part of Enrico Koralio; "Big Happiness," as Raoul Bergerac, and "The Sins of Rosanne," in the role of Revanal.

Rose Dione will play Minna the adventuress who challenged Lord Fauntleroy's claim to the title. The role of The Stranger, husband of the adventuress, will be taken by Arthur Thalasso.

Selznick Has 6 Specials on Producing Schedule

OUT of the forty releases planned for the picture showmen who display Selznick features, six will be special offerings and of that number four are ready to be announced as a definite part of the offerings during the next few months of the new season. These specials will be sold as independent products to exhibitors; they must not be confused in any way with the contracts issued for the Selznick star series.

"A Man's Home," "Conceit," John Galsworthy's "Justice," and Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," are the four specials announced for production during the next eight months. Of this number "A Man's Home" and "Conceit" are finished, cut and ready for distribution. Every essential for producing the other two has been provided and the two unnamed specials will be determined in time to produce and distribute them within a twelve-month period.

Virginia Faire Leads in "Omar the Tentmaker"

Virginia Faire, who won the Fame and Fortune competition conducted by Motion Picture Classic in 1919 has been selected by Richard Walton Tully to play the leading feminine role in "Omar the Tentmaker." Produced in 1913 for the speaking stage, "Omar the Tent Maker" made a fortune both in America and abroad during the last eight years for Mr. Tully and Guy Bates Post who played the title role.

Lawson Butt, Otto Matiesen and other photoplayers whose names will be made public later have been selected by Mr. Tully for important roles in "Omar."

Hulsey, Lynch & Saenger Book A. P. Releases

General Manager Al Lichtman, of Associated Producers, Inc., approved and closed contracts this week with the three greatest chains of theatres in the south. The theatres are those known as the Hulsey interests in the Southwest, the S. A. Lynch Circuit in the Southeast, and the Saenger Chain in Louisiana and Mississippi.

All together the three contracts call for nearly two thousand individual theatre playing dates. The Hulsey and the Lynch circuit contracts cover the entire output of Associated Producers from the initial release through the current for all of the theatres under their control. The Saenger contract covers the first nine releases of Associated Producers schedule.

'Mother o' Mine" One of the Season's Hits

"Mother O' Mine," Thomas H. Ince's dramatic production for Associated Producers, Inc., is establishing itself as one of the big motion picture hits of the present season according to reports which have reached General Manager Al Lichtman from various exchanges. Since its opening at the Strand Theatre in San Francisco when it is said to have done over $2,000 gross on the first day, smashing all existing summer records for the house, the bookings on it have come in so rapidly that many of the exchanges have requisitioned more prints.

Screen Has Advanced Music

Present-Day Popular Interest in Music is Traceable to Pictures

STATISTICS prove that during the past two or three years, opera, concerts, and other forms of high class musical entertainments have enjoyed more than usual prosperity. With the American public's advanced understanding of music, a movement is on foot for the promotion of better music wherever music is played.

"The American public's present day interest in music can be traced to the motion-picture theatre," said Arthur J. Abrams, president of the Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of 64 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill. "Exhibitors all over the country have had a difficult time educating their public to appreciate good music when they heard it. Now, however, with music holding its place on the program of every successful motion picture theatre, a further development has come to the aid of exhibitors.

"Synchronized Music Scores, the industries latest development for the improvement of motion picture presentations, have won exhibitor interest wherever they have been used. Specially compiled for each standard production made, their perfect blending with the action on the screen, has done more to stimulate increased interest in music than any other single item in the theatre.

"When the exhibitor made it a point to secure the best talent available from a musical standpoint he did one thing to improve his presentations and add to his patronage. But good music, played by competent musicians alone was not enough. Unless that music synchronized perfectly with the screen action, it not only was wasted effort but served merely to distract an audience rather than entertain it.

"With that in mind I set about the task of evolving a method to prepare a perfect score for each big picture made."

"Half-Breed" Released Soon

Morosco's First Screen Version of His Plays in First Nat'l's Hands

FOLLOWING the decision of Oliver Morosco, for more than a score of years one of the foremost stage producers, to enter the motion-picture field, there has been much speculation as to what this master of the spoken drama would bring to the screen. The answer soon will be seen for "The Half Breed," the first picturization of the Morosco stage successes for Associated First National release, has been delivered by General Manager George R. Bentel of Oliver Morosco Productions, Inc.

Reports indicate that Morosco is adhering to his ideals in his pictures. Following "The Half Breed," Oliver Morosco Productions will present "Slippy McGee" which is declared to be one of the most artistic triumphs of the year. In "The Half Breed" Morosco is declared to have shown not only his typical artistry but he is said to have given full rein to the thrilling big action which necessarily has been curbed by the limitations of the stage. There is a marked strain of originality also in the breaking away from the conventional in the surprise denouement.

Although "western" in its title and vigorous action of the ranges, "The Half Breed" is given the toning and dress of an Eastern society drama in many of its scenes. Elaborate sets with society functions add striking contrast to the Western action.

The title role of the college-trained youth battling against his heritage is filled by Wheeler Oakman. Ann May, who has created a popularity in girlie roles, is seen in her most serious screen effort. Mary Anderson too gives a new interpretation. There are Joseph Dowling, Hugh Thompson, Stanton Heck, Lew Harvey, Sydney DeGrey, Eugenia Gilbert, Dorris Deane, Albert S. Loyd, Herbert Prior, Evelyn Selbie, Leela Lane, Nick F. DeRuiz, and five-year-old King Evers, who is catalogued as a Morosco "find."

Saengers Establish Employees' Camp

In the show shop world of "everybody for himself and the devil take the hindmost" the occasional firm like the Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans which has gone in for a higher type of business success than is to be found in catering to the public with no thought further than the profits accruing, is a matter of more than current comment.

The Saengers operate some half hundred picture theatres in and about New Orleans. They have a big organization that has been welded by fine treatment into one big family; a family that swears by and not at the bosses, President Julian T. Saenger and General Manager E. V. Richards.

Many of the Saenger innovations have been related in the News. Many more are deserving of space and praise. Among the latest "big family" stunts that the Saenger organization has worked out for the benefit of its employees is a vacation home, Elmwood Manor, located at Bay St. Louis on the Gulf, a two hours' ride from New Orleans.

A century old mansion house for ten days or two weeks some time during the vacation season at the expense of the company to the tune of about $25,000. One year's service entitles an employee to ten days' vacation at half salary with mileage allowance of two cents per mile. Two years' service, full salary, two weeks of fun and three cents per mile make vacations free of all cost to the workers. Longer vacations and more liberal mileage allowance go with longer terms of service.

The vacationers are charged a nominal sum for board and room. Fifteen cents buys a square meal even for a hungry back to naturite. Ten cents a day gets a bed in a big airy room of a big Southern mansion shaded by giant oaks and facing an ideal beach. Broad verandas, spacious grounds, combine with all the play spell implements to keep everyone, grownups and kiddies, happy and contented. Close to the main building is a special cottage for married employees and their children. There is a launch big enough for an excursion. Rowboats, fishing, bathing and all the vacation stuff is all to be found.

The father of the vacation home idea, as have been many of Saenger Company's innovations, is Mr. Richards. It has worked out wonderfully well and Elwood Manor is an institution.

Lehrman Is to Direct Owen Moore

As the result of an arrangement made by Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, with Henry A. Lehrman, the first of a series of four comedy features in which Owen Moore will star is to be written and directed by Mr. Lehrman. Mr. Lehrman is now busy with the preliminaries and the production will be put in work in the near future.

David Smith Goes North to Film Exteriors

David Smith, Vitagraph director, has again taken his company north for special exteriors on "Flower of the North," which he is filming from James Oliver Curwood's widely read novel.

Henry B. Walthall of "Birth of a Nation" fame, is playing the male lead in this rugged story of the North, and Pauline Starke, who starred in "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," and other big specials, plays the title role.

New Holman Day Series for Pathe Releease

A new series of Holman Day two-reel dramas of life in the Maine woods has been contracted for by Pathe and production is reported to be progressing rapidly under the direction of Phil Carle. Huntley Gorden and Mary Astor are playing the leading roles in the new series, and their experienced support includes Bradley Barker and Charles Slattery.

"SlippyMcGee" Nearing Completion

Use Photos Instead of Sets

IN the production of "Pilgrims of the Night," which is being made by J. L. Frothingham for release by Associated Producers, Mr. Frothingham has applied an idea which has resulted in an immense saving without detracting, it is declared, from the realism of the finished scenes. The picture is based on E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "Passerby." Accordingly, many of the scenes of the photoplay are necessarily laid abroad in France and England, and in several instances, with buildings of international fame in the background of the action. To have sent a company abroad to take the scenes in the original locales would have entailed tremendous expense. To have built sets reproducing accurately and in detail the famous structures would also have been a costly, and, perhaps ultimately, an unsatisfactory task.

Mr. Frothingham, instead, employed enlarged photographs for the back drops of the foreign scenes with the foreground built up by studio mechanics in duplicate of the foreground as shown by the photograph itself.

A process which has recently been perfected by which a photograph may be enlarged up to a size measuring twenty by thirty feet without losing any of its detail or contrast was utilized by Mr. Frothingham in the preparation of the back drops for the foreign scenes. A special location guide was prepared from the completed continuity of the story and still photographs were made on the actual locations. The still camera used was set in the same position as would have been occupied by the motion picture camera if the cast had been taken abroad for the filming of the scenes and focussed at the same angle and distance which corresponded to the figures worked out by the chief cameraman of the Frothingham forces.

The small cost of these photographs made abroad and shipped to the Frothingham studio made it possible to keep in every scene in which any action takes place in the novel. The enlarged photographs carried such a wealth of detail that the building up of the foregrounds was a simple matter for the scenic artists and artisans.

Keaton Finishes Comedy

Is the First Subject Completed for Release by First National

BUSTER KEATON has completed his initial two-reel comedy for release under his new contract with Associated First National. The mirthquake, which at present is without a title, is being assembled and cut and will be forwarded to Joseph M. Schenck sponsor for the Keaton films, within another week.

The fun film, replete with novelty and new "gags," is said to be superior to any yet produced by the frozen-faced Buster. No expense was spared in its production and Lou Anger, general manager of the studio, believes that the picture will prove more successful then those that have preceded it.

The same organization that has been with Keaton since his advent into stardom more than a year ago remains with the comedian. There has been no change in its personnel, which is an assurance to exhibitors that there will be no let down in the calibre of pictures that come from the star's Hollywood studios. Buster was willed Roscoe Arbuckle's comedy organization when the rotound comedian deserted slapstick. And he guards his heritage zealously.

Eddie Cline, who has been collaborating with Keaton in the direction and preparation of the scripts, continues to be Buster's chief lieutenant. The "gag" department is in the hands of Joe Mitchell and Lou Anger while Elgin Lessley handles the Bell Howell. Virginia Fox is the ingenue with big Joe Roberts as the foil. Mal St. Clair, former Sennett director, also is a member of the Keaton staff of laugh manufacturers.

"We will continue to make the style of comedies that have made Keaton the most successful of mirth provokers," said Mr. Anger after the completing of the first two reel for Associated First Nation. "Buster is established, and our new comedies will place him in front of all other comedians. The best available talent is surrounding our star and exhibitors can rest assured that when booking one of our films they will be certain of having a film second to none of its kind."

Selznick-Talmadge Revivals Prove Popular

THE motion picture trade and that part of the public that accepts the photoplay as its chief form of diversion, has long since claimed the Talmadge sisters, Norma and Constance, as two of their favorite entertainers, and the manner in which the Selznick revivals in which these stars appear are being received by exhibitors and public alike indicates very clearly, says a statement from the Selnick headquarters, that the pictures they made for Selznick during 1917 and 1918 are still regarded as supreme achievements of the famous pair.

Will Release "The Lost Romance" July 31st

"THE LOST ROMANCE," William DeMille production from a story by Edward Knoblock, is the Paramount feature release scheduled for July 31.

Mr. Knoblock, one of the greatest of the world's dramatists and one of the group of celebrities whom Jesse L. Lasky prevailed upon to apply their talent to the screen via Paramount, wrote "The Lost Romance" as an original screen drama. The scenario was written by Olga Printzlau, who has furnished the continuities for nearly all of Mr. DeMille's productions.

Lord Northcliffe Visits Fox's New York Studio

Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Times and other English newspapers and periodicals, visited Fox's New York motion picture studio, Tuesday, at the invitation of William Fox. When he arrived with several New York friends he was met by William Fox and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company.

After seeing the executive offices of the company, Lord Northcliffe was conducted to the stage floor. He saw Harry Milaro, director of "Over the Hill," at work on another big picture as yet unnamed.

The English visitor expressed himself as highly pleased over his visit to the big Fox plant. He spent two hours in all inspecting the various departments.

Cabanne Starts New Film

"The Barricade" by Author of "The Wonder Man" Due for R-C Release

WILLIAM CHRISTY CABANNE has begun work at the Victor Studio, New York City on "The Barricade," his forthcoming R-C Pictures Corporation production. "The Barricade" was written by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodwin who has to his credit "The Wonder Man," in which Georges Carpentier made his American screen debut, and many other notable photoplays.

The new Cabanne production will have a prologue and will be based upon an intensely human theme, it is declared. Many of the scenes are laid in the slums of the metropolis and for that reason most of the picture will be made in New York City. Later scenes, however, will be "shot" at the R-C Studios in Hollywood, Cal., where most of Mr. Cabanne's future work will be done.

Among those who will appear in "The Barricade" are Kenneth Harlan, who has won a high position in picturedom through his skilful acting in Constance Talmadge subjects; James Harrison, Eugene Borden, who played skilfully in "The Stealers," also directed by Mr. Cabanne; Charles Craig, William Strauss, Katherine Spencer, Nina Cassavant, Dorothy Richards, who appeared recently in Belasco's production of "Deburau;" John O'Connor and Peggy Price, a prim little miss of four years who will take part in the prologue.

The central character of the story is that of an elderly Jew, interpreted by William Strauss. Mr. Strauss has been a familiar figure on the American stage for many years. He was understudy for David Warfield and appeared in Warfield parts in road productions of "The Music Master" and other noted plays in which the famous star appeared on Broadway.

"Play Ball" Sketchograf of National Game

EDUCATIONAL Film Exchanges begin this month the release of a series of entirely new one-reel novelties, called Sketchografs. The first subject, "Play Ball!" is a story in sketches of the progress of the great national pastime from its earliest days down to the present time.

Before he began work on "Play Ball!" Mr. Ollendorff read everything he could find about the history of baseball. He studied all the pictures he could get of the old players. Then he took his camera out to the Brooklyn ball field and made pictures of modern players in action.

The result is a reel of sketches that will have a strong appeal to all, whether ball fans or not. There is keen humor in the pictures of old-time players, with their long whiskers and comical poses, as compared with players we all know now.

Announces Re-Issue of "Three Musketeers"

A statement from the Alexander Film Corporation, New York, advises that the Film Distributors League is about to release a reissue of the Thomas H. Ince production, "The Three Musketeers," in which Orrin Johnson, Dorothy Dalton, and Louise Glaum play the principal parts. This picture is an adaptation of Alexander Dumas' famous novel.

The Film Distributors League takes in 80 per cent of the United States and covers the entire country with the exception of the exchange controlled by S. A. Lynch in the South. The officers of the League are Morris Fleckles, Pres. representing Illinois, Indiana, William Alexander, Sec. representing New York district, Harry Lande, Treas. representing Western Pa. and Ohio, Herman Rifkin, Vice Pres. representing Eastern Pa. The Film Distributors League has a bid in the market at all times to purchase the best of the independent productions. In conjunction with the Triangle output they contemplate releasing one new feature per month along with some short subjects.

THE following statement was issued recently by Lewis J. Selznick, president of Selznick Enterprises, on the occasion of an interview with a representative of the trade-press. The primary subject of discussion was the crying need of some plan for the distribution of motion-pictures which will eliminate the waste of millions of dollars each year. Mr. Selznick introduced the subject in this manner:

"A chap I used to know in Cleveland came in to see me the other day. He knows a lot of people I know, and, as we got to 'fanning' about old times, two things impressed me. The first was that a number of our mutual acquaintances had died during the past years, and the second was that about the only time this old Cleveland friend of mine had met up with our mutual acquaintances recently was when both he and they got together at the funeral of some person all of them knew.

"You've asked me to talk on some important angle of the business as I see it now," continued Mr. Selznick. "After what I had to say at the recent exhibitors' convention in Minneapolis you know pretty well that a new and more efficient distribution plan is the thing in which I am most interested at the present time. What I've told you about the man from Cleveland and the gatherings of old friends at funerals I have meant to have a somewhat grim significance. A great getting together is necessary in the motion picture industry. Let's not wait for a funeral.

Lewis J. Selznick

"One might go back almost to the beginning of the motion picture industry for the explanation of how the present business situation, as it applies to pictures, originated. Briefly, a lot of people who have been active in the industry seems to have gotten the idea that the motion picture goose is so full of golden eggs that it requires no care or attention. They apparently think that it will thrive forever on a diet of waste and extravagance and that the motion picture industry is strong enough to stand for the kind of manhandling which they know perfectly well would paralyze any other industry in the world. Their only possible argument in favor of this stand is that 'we've gotten away with it.'

"Producers and distributors, each of whom maintains a separate organization to deal with identically the same market, know better than any others in the industry the need for a marketing system that will cut the industry's tremendous overhead in this important department. They know the tremendous waste which comes from a dozen different organizations treading on each other's heels. They know that any one of these organizations, slightly expanded to meet the new conditions, could get the same results for each producer and distributor in the field—and they are alive to the enormous sums of money which could be saved for every person concerned in the industry.

"At Minneapolis I outlined a plan whereby this big problem of distribution would be worked out and controlled by exhibitors throughout the country. The wishes and best interests of the exhibitor appears to be the only grounds upon which there is a chance of producers and distributors getting together. Despite their little quarrels and bickerings, I still think the exhibitors are further away from the idea of 'getting at the funeral' than the distributors.

"The centralized distribution plan is practicable despite all arguments to the contrary and despite all failures which have been made of plans more or less similar. The best argument that it can be done is the fact that it is a logical thing to do and—it has to be done. I'd like to have it happen now. The idea is not a new one with me. I've advocated it for years, and its reception, I'll admit, has been discouraging. Nevertheless, I'm going to keep at it in the future even more strongly than in the past. Regardless of what others may think or do I'm going to keep on working until this waste of millions of dollars annually is eliminated from the budget of the motion picture industry as a whole. I figure it's a lot better to operate in a less bombastic way, safely and surely, than it is to be a part of a business system which is so sinfully wrong that it is constantly calling to people on the outside to come in and correct it. And remember, it just has to be corrected!"

Sam E. Morris

IN reply to a question as to what, in his opinion, was a "notable change" in recent years in the operation of any branch of the motion picture industry, Sam E. Morris, vice president in charge of distribution for the Selznick organization, expressed himself as follows:

"It strikes me that one of the most noticeable changes in recent years in the conduct of the motion picture business is the growing disposition of the exhibitor to apply good, sound common sense to his own particular business. Less and less from year to year, I believe, is the exhibitor being influenced by the old hurrah methods commonly identified with the show business.

"At the risk of being sadly misunderstood I might say that the exhibitor is slowly but surely adopting the practices of the level headed merchant as opposed to those of the more or less hectic and excitable showman in the conduct of his business. But let me make it perfectly clear that I do not mean that exhibitors seem to show any inclination to discard showmanship in every branch of their business. What I mean is this: Exhibitors seem to be doing a lot more thinking for themselves than they used to and are analyzing their business according to common sense ideas and are not accepting as freely as they once did all kinds of hurrah advice merely because there seems to be a precedent for practically any old kind of practice in the show business from which, it is contended, the motion picture business sprung."

The rise of the "merchandising exhibitor" has led, in the opinion of Mr. Morris, to the success of the "star series plan of distribution" which the Selznick organization was among the first to adopt. It is this "star series" plan that enables the exhibitor to sell his particular community the same standard brand of merchandise, says Mr. Morris.

Selznick Among Last of Eastern Producers

Lewis J. Selznick remains almost alone among the large providers of moving pictures who create their product east of California. His studios in Fort Lee have for several months been the sole scenes of production activities in a community well dotted with structures where, in the earlier days of the industry, practically all of America's output of film originated.

Mr. Selznick maintains that his years of experience have taught him that the dictates of true economy and expedition in picture-making give to the East advantages that the Pacific section cannot duplicate. Artificial lighting has become so general that "California sunshine" is now augmented by the skill of the light experts while interiors are just that no matter where they may be made.

Selznick News Provided for in New Plans

The year's productions which the Selznick organization have to review in announcing their plans for the forthcoming season have included the "putting over" of Selznick News in its present form. Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, and David Selznick, secretary of the Selznick Corporation, have taken an active personal interest in the news reel. E. V. Durling is the editor. Larry Darmour, widely known in news reel circles because of his long association with the Gaumont Weekly, is Mr. Durling's chief assistant.

Selznick to Start Work on Two Productions

Still going strong at their studios in Fort Lee despite the hot weather and a somewhat general lull in the business of producing motion pictures, the Selznick Corporation next week will put two new pictures in work. One will be "The Way of a Maid," starring Elaine Hammerstein, under the direction of William P. S. Earle. The other will be "The Man of Stone," starring Conway Tearle, under the direction of George Archainbaud.

Warner Oland to Leave Serial for Feature

WARNER OLAND, associated for the past five years with Pathe serial productions, will leave the Pathe organization about October 1st, it is announced, upon the expiration of his present contract. He has appeared in more than eight serials for Pathe, which include "Hurricane Hutch," "The Third Eye," "The Lightning Raider," "The House of Hate," "The Yellow Hand" and "Phantom Foe."

Under his own trade mark, Mr. Oland plans to produce a series of features each year for one of the big releasing companies. These productions will be built from stories of either books or plays. A series has tentatively been written by one of our best known authors.

Forty Feature Releases on the Selznick Schedule

WITH exhibitors throughout the country discussing the great and growing movement for complete independence in the matter of conducting their theatres and sometimes wondering just where their attractions are to come from in the event of their determining to assert themselves as fully as they would like to, the announcement which is just being made by Lewis J. Selznick, President of the Selznick Corporation, as to the plans of his company for the ensuing year, is timely and of particular interest.

The Selznick organization, according to announcement, will have forty feature releases during the year, and these releases will be sufficiently diversified as to nature to make them a pretty fair backbone upon which to construct an entire season's bookings for the average theatre.

Leading off among the "Forty from Selznick," in accordance with the firm's policy of featuring star series pictures, will be six productions starring Elaine Hammerstein, six productions starring Eugene O'Brien, and six productions starring Conway Tearle, all of these to be sold on the star series plan. Owen Moore, the other of widely advertised Selznick stars, will be presented in four releases to be sold individually. There will be six specials during the year—and only six, the firm's idea being to concentrate upon the production of these pictures and to make each one of them special in every sense of the word. And finally, there will be a selection of the twelve best features made by Norma and Constance Talmadge for distribution by the Selznick organization; these will be revivals, carefully re-edited and re-titled, which will more than hold their own in the company of any collection of photoplays of the year. There will be six of these revivals starring Norma Talmadge and six starring Constance and each block of six will be sold as a series, just as the production of Miss Hammerstein, Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. Tearle will be sold.

Other Selznick product for the forthcoming year will, of course include the semi-weekly releases of Selznick News which has been so firmly established as a preferred attraction in leading theatres in so short a period of time.

New Gaits for Stars

The work which the well established Selznick stars will do during the forthcoming season, according to Myron Selznick, Vice President of the Selznick Corporation and directly in charge of the producing end of the business, will be a furtherance of the general policy which was adopted a couple of years ago when the names of Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien, and Owen Moore began to burst forth in electric lights along Broadway and first screamed from the billboards throughout the country. Their productions will be bigger and better and of a more diversified nature than ever before. Constant application as to advertising and follow-up in the form of uniformly good pictures has established a following for each of the stars and the Selznick company feels that they are now in a position to develop a lot of still more or less latent acting ability possesed by their players through casting them in roles of inherent strength disregarding to a greater extent than ever before the question as to whether or not the admiring public wants this star or that star in just the particular kind of picture which it seems best to produce from the boxoffice standpoint. The development of this plan will be quite noticeable when the first of each star's new series is shown. Miss Hammerstein's first release, "Handcuffs or Kisses," will be found entirely different from any in which she has yet appeared and Mr. O'Brien's first, "Clay Dollars" is utterly devoid of ballrooms and full dress clothes.

Policy of Concentration

Selznick plans as regards special productions will be of particular interest for the reason that, up to the present time, the Selznick organization has been chiefly concerned with the development of the star series idea. Selznick Specials, like William Faversham in "The Sin That Was His," a Hobart Henley production from the Frank L. Packard story of the same name, and "Red Foam" from the smashing story which ran in the Saturday Evening Post, have shown the company's capabilities along these lines. With the star series plan running like clockwork Myron Selznick and his producing crew, according to announcement, are going to take up seriously the matter of creating real photoplay specials. Four of the six to be released during the season have been announced. "A Man's Home" which has been completed and will be released early in the Fall, will serve as a good sample of what exhibitors may expect. This production from a play by Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese, seems certain to rank with the leading photoplays of the year. "Conceit" will be the second special, John Galsworthy's Justice" the third and "The Easiest Way," from Eugene Walter's famous play produced by David Belasco, will be the fourth.

Not Mere Paper Plans

The Selznick announcement for the season of 1921-2 is given added interest for the reason that it is not made up of visionary and indefinite promises. There has been no putting of the "cart before the horse." For the past month or more the executive heads have been carefully going over every detail of the plans for the coming year.

HAL ROACH COMEDIES

Hal Roach is the man who has made laughter a habit instead of a luxury.

He doesn't copy. He creates.

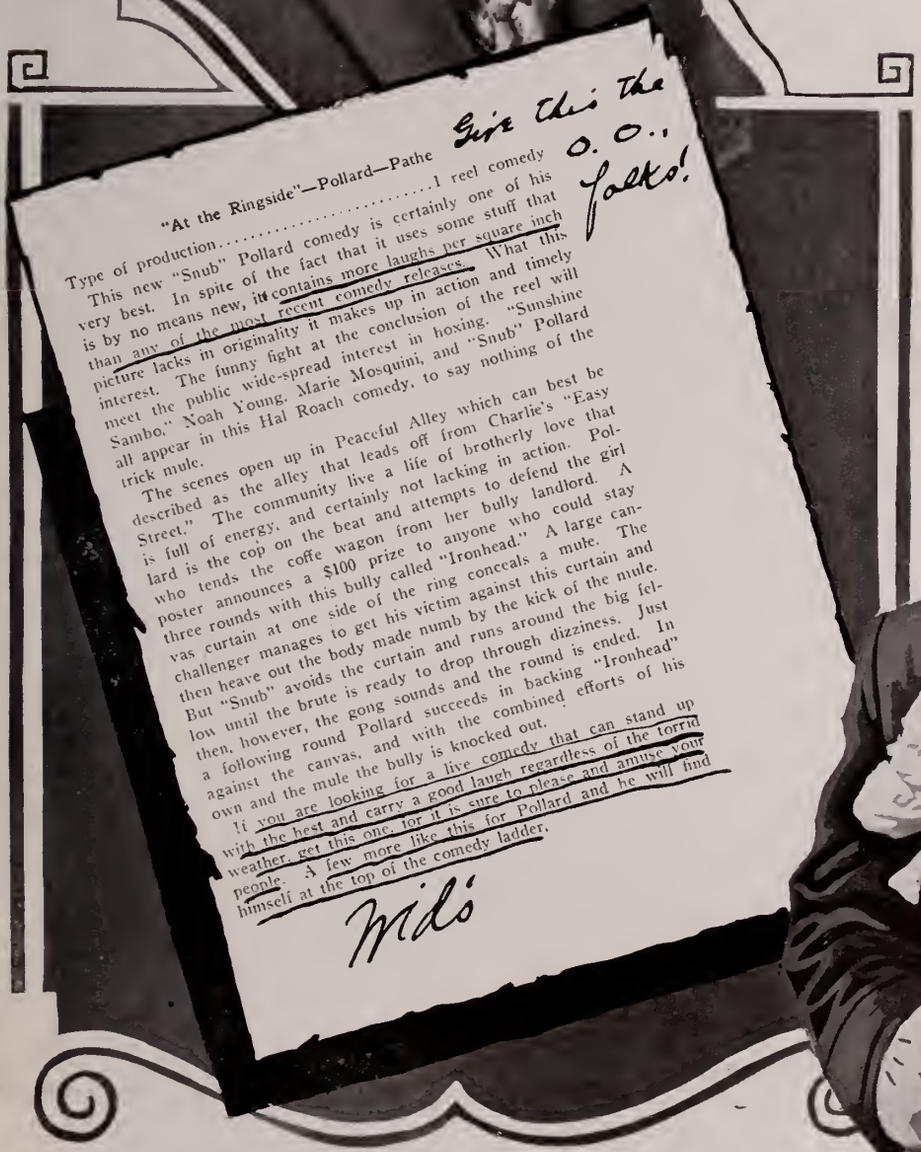
He has shown that it is possible to be funny without being vulgar; and that laughter doesn't depend upon legs.

The one reel "SNUB" POLLARD, EDDIE BOLAND and GAYLORD LLOYD comedies are incomparable. They make friends for the man who shows them.

One Reel, Every Week



"At the Ringside"—Pollard—Pathe

Type of production.....1 reel comedy

Give this the O. O.. folks!

This new "Snub" Pollard comedy is certainly one of his very best. In spite of the fact that it uses some stuff that is by no means new, it contains more laughs per square inch than any of the most recent comedy releases. What this picture lacks in originality it makes up in action and timely interest. The funny fight at the conclusion of the reel will meet the public wide-spread interest in boxing. "Sunshine Sambo," Noah Young, Marie Mosquini, and "Snub" Pollard all appear in this Hal Roach comedy, to say nothing of the trick mule.

The scenes open up in Peaceful Alley which can best be described as the alley that leads off from Charlie's "Easy Street." The community live a life of brotherly love that is full of energy, and certainly not lacking in action. Pollard is the cop on the beat and attempts to defend the girl who tends the coffe wagon from her bully landlord. A poster announces a $100 prize to anyone who could stay three rounds with this bully called "Ironhead." A large canvas curtain at one side of the ring conceals a mule. The challenger manages to get his victim against this curtain and then heave out the body made numb by the kick of the mule. But "Snub" avoids the curtain and runs around the big fellow until the brute is ready to drop through dizziness. Just then, however, the gong sounds and the round is ended. In a following round Pollard succeeds in backing "Ironhead" against the canvas, and with the combined efforts of his own and the mule the bully is knocked out.

If you are looking for a live comedy that can stand up with the best and carry a good laugh regardless of the torrid weather, get this one, for it is sure to please and amuse your people. A few more like this for Pollard and he will find himself at the top of the comedy ladder.

Myron Selznick

VARIETY will be the outstanding feature of the Selznick Pictures output for the coming year, according to the plans of Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, who has furnished the following outline of the general policy.

"The production plans now completed for the 1921-22 releases to be made at our studios show greater variety than ever in the past. In the last two years the public has shown very clearly just what sort of pictures are wanted from each of our stars, and we can go ahead with a certainty of knowing what will prove successful.

"First of all, we will concentrate every energy upon the half dozen specials, to make them the big events of the year in the entire industry. Beginning with 'A Man's Home,' we will establish a standard for strength in both story and cast that will set the pace for the entire six. The unique creation, 'Conceit,' with one of the most interesting themes ever put into a picture, will be another, while 'The Easiest Way,' the famous Belasco success, will be a brand new production with distinguished array of noted players. These, with the Galsworthy drama, 'Justice,' starring William Faversham, are sufficient to indicate our policy as to specials.

"The Elaine Hammerstein series will be made up of de luxe comedy dramas, containing the highest type of romance, and portraying the typical American girl. Youth and beauty will always be the keynote of the Elaine Hammerstein productions. Sensationalism will never be permitted to mar their wholesome vitality. The pictures in which this star appears will prove in the future as in the past that it is possible to provide punch without offending the most sensitive censors.

"The Conway Tearle productions will be made from dramas of a heavier type. The story of virile strength, vivid action, and all that goes to make intense dramatic power, is the ideal vehicle for Mr. Tearle's talents, as we have proved in his most successful offerings of the last year. Romance that struggles up through perils and vicissitudes brings out his strongest qualities, and will characterize his forthcoming productions.

"The Eugene O'Brien series will take a somewhat lighter vein. The secret of Mr. O'Brien's appeals lies in what can best be described as comedy romance. Stories of the sort that I mean are very difficult to find, but we have a number scheduled which will show a new O'Brien to the world. The notable point about this type of picture is that while the romance or heart interest is always in the foreground, it is never sentimental and is told with a smile.

"Owen Moore has struck his stride so tremendously that nothing need be said about his coming offerings except that they will be right along the same lines as his recent comedy hits. Mr. Moore now stands among the very strongest drawing cards in the business, and every picture brings him thousands upon thousands of additional admirers.

"Censorship is becoming a more and more general problem, as the number of states placing restrictions upon pictures increases. This is something which need worry no one. We have had little difficulty in the past with censors and there could be no censorship more rigid than that which we have already encountered. We have proved, as I have already stated, that we can make powerful pictures which are immune from this interference.

"This will give a fairly comprehensive idea of the broad scope of our plans. The quality of production that we have established will be more than maintained, and with the variety of offerings listed it should be a most attactive list to place before any exhibitor."

Advance from Ranks—Selznick's Promotion Policy

A YEAR in any big business organization under perfectly normal conditions usually brings its full measure of changes. In this period of readjustment following the World War, which seems still to be continuing, changes in personnel of the various motion picture organizations have been numerous. These changes—how to make them and how to land right side up and best prepared to get away to a flying start when new lines of business conduct are firmly established—have called for a great deal of thought on the part of executives who had this particular problem to face.

Exhibitors throughout the country have watched this process of change with interest in its application to all of the companies and some of them have remarked about the rhyme and reason of the general policy which has been followed by the Selznick organization, particularly as to Select Pictures Corporation, the distributing branch of the business over which Vice-President Sam E. Morris holds the reins. There are new occupants of the manager's chair in a number of the thirty offices which Select operates throughout the country. A number of times during the past year circumstances have made it necessary for Mr. Morris to fill important gaps which have either been made or have made themselves. The thing that has excited comment on the part of those who have been keenly observant is that, while the man may be new to the manager's job, rarely, if ever, is he new to the bigger job, namely, looking after the Selznick organization's interests. In a general way, the new managers in the Select organization have been merely moved up from the ranks. There has been little, if any, of the customary plan of placing men in important positions merely because of their general reputation for ability. The thing that has been kept uppermost in mind has been the employee's fitness as it applies specifically to the peculiar needs of the Selznick-Select organization.

"This policy which we have followed," says Mr. Morris, "is one on which Mr. Selznick has operated in every business which has ever claimed his attention. He has always liked to say, 'Outgrow your job. I have a bigger one waiting for you.' On the face of it this statement might almost seem philanthropic. But Mr. Selznick has never aspired to shine as a philanthropist. His stronger inclination is to the belief that most red-blooded men are better satisfied when they get merely what is coming to them and what they can win from the world under fair rules of competition. Mr. Selznick would readily confess that his conception of the thought back of this epigrammatic promise is that both the man outgrows his job and the man who hands him the better one, profit materially in the exchange.

"By following this policy in the business of keeping our exchanges, sometimes thousands of miles removed from the direct influence of the home office, in smooth running order, we feel that we scarcely ever take a step backwards in the standing and prestige which we are constantly aiming to create among the exhibitors, our customers. We have always advocated a highly developed spirit of co-operation in each branch office. Our managers invariably depend upon their subordinates to offer real help in the problems they are being constantly asked to solve. The result is that practically every employee in any Select branch is always training for the job or jobs higher up. Another result is that there is considerably more contact between the exhibitors in the territory and even the minor branch employees than would be the case if a different plan were followed.

"Admittedly, each organization operating in the motion picture industry has its own little methods which have been found best suited to the organization's needs. In a general way every distributing organization aims to distribute as many pictures as possible for the greatest possible amount of money—in the long run—and at the least possible expense. But the nature of the product, the peculiarities of the territory in which the work is being done, and a number of other things of a similar nature, bring about the little peculiarities of operation which I have in mind. A good salesman may be able to sell anything but the good salesman who has sold shoes all his life is likely to sell a lot more shoes than he will pianos.

"The choice of motion picture men who have been identified with the Selznick organization for some time rather than better advertised men who have operated in the given territory for other companies or would have to be summoned from another territory has seemed to us the perfectly logical thing to do. We have our own peculiar methods of doing business and our customers and prospective customers know us by these methods. The men who have worked with us are familiar with these methods. When we elevate employees from the ranks to occupy important positions, we are merely standing by our convictions that the manner in which we have chosen to conduct our business for a number of years, is right. We're taking the chance that we are either all right or all wrong—and past successes of the Select selling force are rather convincing that we are more likely to be right than wrong."

"Remorseless Love" Set for Aug. 10 Release

With a number of productions completed from which to make a selection, Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, has chosen "Remorseless Love" as the next Selznick-Elaine Hammerstein release. It is scheduled for August 10th.

Cuneo Starts Producing for Irving Lesser

Producing activities are hitting a fast pace according to Distributor Irving M. Lesser. Mr. Lesser states that three producing companies, whose products he intends distributing, are all at work and will continue to produce pictures throughout the summer months.

Chief among these companies are the new independent Jackie Coogan productions with Coogan, Sr., producing special five reelers starring his son. David Butler will commence work on a third production immediately, and the latest unit for which Mr. Lesser will distribute is the Lester Cuneo Production, "Blue Blazes" which features Cuneo. One of the Cuneo specials is already produced and work on the second will take place within a week or ten days. Cuneo is making five-reel Western products.

Levey Opens Offices in Mid-West and South

Harry Levey and his right-hand man, Henry Clay Grant, have returned to New York from their tour of the Middle-West and Southern states. They are enthusiastic over the prospects held out for educational and industrial pictures in the Mid-West and the South.

As a result of this business tour, exchanges of the National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., have been established in several centers of the South and the Mid-West, Mr. Levey announces, and these will serve as a working nucleus sufficient for present needs. The names of the exchange managers appointed in charge of the various offices will be announced shortly. Two new films were added by Mr. Levey to his non-theatrical film library. They are "Sweden in Summer and Winter" and "Sunlit Norway."

R. Wm. Neill Filming "The Iron Trail"

R. William Neill, who is directing "The Iron Trail," a Rex Beach production, adapted from Mr. Beach's story of the same name, has gone to Lake Denmark, New Jersey, to "shoot" the exteriors of the picture.

The company left the Whitman Bennett studios in Yonkers early in the week and will remain at Lake Denmark for about two weeks.

Accompanying Director Neill are Wyndham Standing, Thurston Hall, Reginald Denny, Bert Starkey, Del Beggs, Harlan Knight, Alma Tell, and Betty Carpenter, who makes up the cast.

"Tarzan" Serial In Demand

Flood of Requests for Territorial Rights on Elmo Lincoln Production

ACCORDING to Louis Weiss, secretary of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation, this organization is being flooded with requests for territory from the leading distributors of the United States and Canada. In commenting on this remarkable activity in the state right field at the present time, Weiss recently had the following to say:

"Despite the undeniably poor conditions existing at the present time, coupled with the customary summer slump, due to hot weather and the strong competition of outdoor amusement, we have received an amazing number of applications for territory for 'Adventures of Tarzan,' starring Elmo Lincoln, which is now nearing completion at the Great Western Studios in California. Daily our mail is augmented by letters from every territory, together with wires and radiograms.

"In addition to this correspondence I could mention the names of at least fifteen leading buyers who have made a special flying trip to New York from points as far away as Kansas, Texas, Minnesota, Illinois and Georgia for the express purpose of viewing this serial.

"We attribute this remarkable interest on the part of the leading exchanges solely to the tremendous box office power of Elmo Lincoln as the creator of the character of Tarzan in "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan." We are strengthened in this belief by the growing number of letters and wires, mention of which has been made before, received from exhibitors in every part of this country and Canada, requesting immediate bookings for this serial.

"In fairness to the independent distributors and exhibitors, we have decided to withhold the release date of "Adventures of Tarzan" until the middle of October, as it is our belief that this fall will see the entire motion picture industry in excellent condition once more."

Filmart Co. to Install New Producing Unit

Filmart Productions, Inc., with producing studio at Fresno, California, will shortly add a second producing unit to their organization, according to announcement made by B. G. Biggerstaff, the supervising director.

Contracts have been consummated with a very well known Western serial star, whose name cannot be given at this time because of his present affiliations and unexpired contract. Mr. Biggerstaff said, "Our contract with this western star becomes effective late in August and we plan to make seven five-reel length western subjects for which we are now negotiating for distribution."

Hoxie Pays High Praise to Ritchie Litho

Jack Hoxie, at present engaged in a national tour of personal appearances, has written the following letter to the Ritchey Litho. Corporation in New York. He says:

"Having just finished a tour of inspection of your wonderful plant, it occurred to me that you might be interested in knowing how popular your posters are among the exchangemen and exhibitors throughout the country.

"I have just completed the first lap of my tour of the United States and in every city where I have been, the exchange managers and exhibitors whom I have met, have expressed their pleasure that my productions all have Ritchey posters, and from what I have learned, I believe that the use of your posters has been of material assistance in making my pictures the success they are."

DeVry Representatives Hold Convention

PORTABLE projector distributors from all parts of the country gathered in Chicago for the annual convention of the DeVry Corp. representatives.

The convention was held at the Hotel LaSalle although the opening day luncheon was spread at a north-side summer garden near the DeVry factory. A. Rothacker, cameraman, was present and a film of the diners later played a prominent part on the entertainment program of the banquet which closed the convention.

Herman A. DeVry, inventor of the first portable projector and president of the corporation, expressed his gratitude for the splendid cooperation which the corporation had received from distributors in the past year. He told of big plans for future expansion of the business. A. E. Gundellach, salemanager, made important announcements regarding sales policies for the ensuing twelve months. R. J. Waymel, advertising manager, outlined the future advertising program.

So States Franklyn Backer After Noting Response to Ad Campaign

FROM the sudden flood of inquiries from almost every section of the country which are declared to have been received this week at the offices of Horizon Pictures Inc., in answer to a carefully planned mid-summer advertising campaign started by Franklyn E. Backer a few weeks ago and arranged so it will be in full swing by the middle of August, the President of Horizon finds himself in a position to announce a revival of buying in the state rights field.

The middle of August was the time set for definite results and he resolved to withhold judgment until that time. What was his surprise, when after exactly six weeks of advertising, he suddenly received on one day as many inquiries as he expected over a term of weeks. He now admits that his calculations were wrong but he excuses himself in the following statement:

"I am still convinced that the middle of August is the logical time for the renewed activity which marks the opening of the theatrical and picture season. There will always be a number of exchange men who will be wise enough to use the hot weeks of July to prepare for doing big things in the Fall. All of the depression talk that has been hurting every industry has had its effect on the state rights men, but they have suddenly awakened to the fact that they must come to life if they are to be ready for the rush of Fall business.

The sudden response to my advertising is, I believe, due to two things: the well known result of advertising a good product sufficiently and correctly, and a sudden and unexpected, on my part, revival in the state rights market. On the one day of this week which showed me such surprising results I received inquiries from Boston, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Atlanta, Dallas, Milwaukee, Chicago, Los Angeles, and many others.

Texas Guinan In New Series

Forms Her Own Producing Company; Western Characterization Her Aim

THE Texas Guinan Productions was organized this week to produce a series of twelve two-reel Western dramas. These attractions will be released by way of the independent or state-right market, commencing September 15.

When it became known that Miss Guinan severed her connections with Victor Kramer she received several offers from national producers and distributors to star in a series of Western dramas, it is declared, but, being anxious to form her own producing organization, Miss Guinan declined these offers.

The productions to be made will be adaptations from authors of prominence who have specialized in Western characterization and the departure from the so-called stock Western drama lies mainly in the fact that Miss Guinan's productions will be portrayal of the true Western character, supported by story-themes embracing heart interest and pathos. In other words, as Miss Guinan stated, "My new series of attractions will not consist of a reel and a half of cowboys chasing one another on horseback, plus a half-reel of close-ups, but will involve true, deep story characterization and material.

Mitchell Buys Pearce Office in Atlanta

MR. M. MITCHELL, owner of the Quality Film Service of Atlanta, Ga., this week, purchased the Atlanta office of the Pearce Films, Inc., which included the exclusive Southeastern franchise for Federated Film Exchanges of America, and all products released by this concern.

Mr. Mitchell in consolidating the two film exchanges has selected a new name, that of Federated Films of Atlanta, with headquarters at 146 Marietta St.

He intends specializing on "Miracles of the Jungle," the Warner Brothers' serial, in addition to the new series of Chester-Snooky two-reel comedies, the one-reel Chester-Animal comedies and the new series of the Hall Room Boys two-reel comedies.

E. Van Pelt Leaves for Coast for New Films

After a two weeks' vacation spent at summer resorts along Long Island shores, E. O. Van Pelt, the Eastern representative for the Hugh E. Dierker Productions, departed for Los Angeles last week upon business.

Mr. Van Pelt, who came East about a year ago and devoted his energies to exploiting "When Dawn Came," a Dierker "special," expects to bring back several pictures that will be marketed on the same lines as "Dawn." Mr. Van Pelt will also confer with Mr. Dierker regarding a new production that the latter has just announced as in the making.

On the eve of his departure Mr. Van Pelt confirmed the report of the sale of "When Dawn Came" in southern California to the Richard Kipling Exchanges. He will visit Kipling during the trip West.

Pittsburg Buyer Closes for "Tarzan" Serial

A. A. Weiland, manager of the Standard Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been in New York during the past few days. Among the business transacted by the Pittsburgh manager was the acquisition of the new Elmo Lincoln serial, "Adventures of Tarzan," for territorial distribution from the Pittsburgh office. He closed this deal during the week with Louis Weiss of the Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation.

Brody of the Sonora Film Corporation advises that Sonora is shortly to bring from abroad a new picture production of a highly dramatic type, in the cast of which will be presented a number of players now appearing in "Tradition," Sonora's first release which has been showing at the Hippodrome, New York.

Arrow Film Chief Returns from Convention

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, has returned to New York from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Convention at Minneapolis. Ben Wilson, Ann Little and Eddie Lyons, who were members of Dr. Shellenberger's party, at the convention, bade him adieu at Minneapolis and started in the opposite direction for Los Angeles where they will resume production work for Arrow's fall program.

Urban Preparing Third Kineto Series

Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, is having prepared the third series of Kineto Reviews for release as soon as the second series completes its schedule. The first release of the third series will be the first Monday in September.

Each series of the Kineto Reviews is arranged so that variety will be paramount. This is comparatively easy for Mr. Urban to do, because he has such a tremendous number of subjects to pick from.

Reelcraft Opens Sales Drive

Cropper Plans to Make September Red-Letter Month for Reelcraft

THE greatest month's bookings in the history of the company is the objective of a special sales drive which R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, will inaugurate on Monday of next week. The month of September, which has been set aside by the industry in general and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in particular as "Independence Month," will constitute the period during which each Reelcraft exchange manager will assert his best efforts towards signing up the largest number of exhibitors for Reelcraft service.

R. C. Cropper this week sent out a memorandum to the Reelcraft exchanges, outlining to the managers and salesmen the salient details of his plan to make the month of September a red-letter month for the Reelcraft distributing organization. Special sales letters now in the course of preparation will be subsequently sent out; and each letter, it is said, will contain at least one idea, the employment of which will result in additional bookings.

The special sales drive in behalf of the series of Aladdin, Sun-Lite and Mirth Comedies, which comprise the product controlled by Reelcraft Pictures Corporation for national distribution, will be augmented, it is declared, by a special advertising and publicity campaign to be conducted by A. L. Feinman, the company's director of Advertising and Publicity. Literature consisting of broadsides, filler, folders, etc., will be part of an extensive direct-by-mail campaign designed to engender greater interest in the Reelcraft product.

Bill Fairbanks Newest Picture Being Cut

The concluding scenes for "Go Get Him," Western Feature Productions, Inc., latest picture starring Wm. (Bill) Fairbanks, have been shot and the production is in the process of cutting.

Alter Exhibition Values Because of Hot Wave

Announcement has been made this week by Playgoers Pictures Corporation that the national exhibition values placed upon all their product distributed through Pathe had been adjusted to meet the special conditions created by the unprecedented warm weather throughout the country and the falling off in theatre patronage in some sections of the country. This adjustment of exhibition values is for the summer months only, it is emphatically stated, and is for the sole purpose of reaching out the hand of co-operation to the thousands of exhibitors who require product at a price that will permit them to meet present business conditions with a profit.

The pictures now available under this plan are: "The Butterfly Girl," "Women Who Wait," and "They Shall Pay."

Crandall Scores Another Story for Equity

According to word from the Equity headquarters, Milton D. Crandall, the Equity exploitation man, has landed on the front page of the Seattle papers again. This time, however, it is not Clara Kimball Young who breaks into the headlines but Sada Cowan, Miss Young's scenario writer. The stunt involved two "detectives" and two "jailbirds long sought by the police." The locale was the Pullman on which Crandall and Miss Cowan were journeying to Seattle. One of the "prisoners" was induced by Crandall to tell the story of his life to Miss Cowan. Among other things they told her they would "escape" that night at "midnight" from the train. They did, amid much confusion. Business of Crandall rushing to Associated Press office at Seattle on the arrival of the train; story of the "daring escape" and especially story of how one of the "prisoners" had predicted that very same day the exact time of his escape to a "noted scenario writer," one Sada Cowan. And the result, according to the Equity report describing the "stunt," was that Sada Cowan and her photograph broke liberally into print in the Seattle papers. Crandall had scored again.

ABOUT PLAYERS

AFTER a trip to Boston where some beautiful exteriors were made for "The Young Diana" which she has just completed Marion Davies, star of Cosmopolitan Productions, left last week for California for a vacation.

All through the hot summer this young star has worked as few have worked in New York City without stopping even a day between pictures. In fact she worked right up until train time for several days of bad weather had necessitated postponement of scenes on the Massachusetts coast so that even her last minute in the East had to be utilized. She boarded the train at Boston.

Great interest centers about this last and very unusual and original picture. "The Young Diana" is one of Marie Corelli's best stories. In it, for the first time, Miss Davies plays a character role in which she has been greatly praised by all who have seen it.

Tooker's last role was that of a bootlegging lumberjack in "God's Country and the Law," the Pinetree picture finished by Sidney Olcott but in this, he plays a part that is almost the exact opposite.

Mary Alden, whose skilful impersonation of the mother in "The Old Nest" has been receiving wide comment, has been cast for an important part in another Goldwyn picture. "The Man With Two Mothers." This is Alice Duer Miller's first original for Goldwyn.

Cullen Landis has been chosen to play the leading role. One of the best parts Mr. Landis will have had. His first success as a Goldwyn player was in Rex Beach's photoplay, "The Girl from Outside," followed by "The Old Nest."

Little Rita Rogan, the six-year-old child star, who began her screen career just one year ago and since that time has appeared in eight big screen plays, will be seen in a prominent role in "The Treshold" produced by the United States Moving Picture Corporation.

The part which the tiny actress plays in "The Threshold" gives her ample opportunity to display her talents and magnetic personality which have won for her a host of admirers, in the short time she has been on the screen.

"The Threshold" is an original story by Garfield Thompson, and was directed by Joseph Levering in cooperation with the author and Herbert L. Messmore, the technical expert of the United States Moving Picture Corporation.

The cast includes, besides Little Rita Rogan, Walter Ringham, Belle Bennett, Jean Robertson, Logan Paul, May Kitson, James McDuff, and Denton Vane.

Work begins in a few days on the next Vera Gordon production, sponsored, as was "The Greater Love," by Harry Rapf. The biograph Studio is clearing the decks for action, and, while neither the director nor the title of the picture is yet announced, it is said that the director is one well calculated to direct the mother of "Homoresque" and "The Greater Love" in a special different in theme and development from her previous cinematic successes. Mrs. Gordon has just returned to New York, following a special engagement as a headline attraction on the Keith circuit in Atlantic City.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

AFTER air flight from London, William D. Taylor was forced to abandon his German trip at the last moment. After getting his passport vised, which "took some arranging," he writes from the Hotel Meurice in Paris, the motion picture director found that sleepers to Germany were booked three weeks ahead, while he already had passage engaged on the Olympic from Cherburg in six days.

"I might fly as far as Strasbourg," he wrote, "but they can't tell me when I can get on to Bellieu, so I am not going to take a chance."

However, he had ample opportunity to study the film situation in England and in France, and he hints of much to divulge on his return.

He saw Donald Crisp and John Robertson and other friends at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in London.

"Personally I can't see where the British-made picture is going to pay for some time to come," comments Mr. Taylor. "They cost too much.

"Saw the polo, last day of Ascot and three days of the Horse Show, and a lot of shows, but no pictures. Only a few old ones and 'Connecticut Yankee' running.

"I am feeling wonderfully fit and having a most enjoyable time. Flew over from London yesterday. Sat in front with pilot. Blowing like blazes, had a lot of fun. She sure stood on her ear. Took us nearly three and a half hours, instead of two and a quarter.

"I am going to meet some French cinema people tomorrow."

When William D. Taylor arrives in Los Angeles next week he will be welcomed by a delegation from the Motion Picture Directors' Association.

Not only has Ferdinand Earle copyrighted his dramatization of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, but he has filed separate papers for the continuity, so the research and labor of years on the part of the artist-director is well protected from infringement.

"California is good enough for me," declared Reginald Barker, denying a rumor that he had arranged to produce his own pictures in the East, which arose from efforts to re-establish Santa Barbara as a motion picture producing center. Business interests there are negotiating for the purchase of the idle American studio. The first J. Warren Kerrigan productions will be made in Santa Barbara, and a strong effort is under way to induce three other companies to share studio space and expense. Reginald Barker, Maurice Tourneur and Allan Dwan were named as those approached but, a news story erroneously stated, Mr. Barker had already made arrangements to produce in New York.

"I certainly will make my independent pictures in California," declared Mr. Barker at his home in Los Angeles. "Most probably I will make them right here in the motion picture capital, where my family is, and where I have made my most successful productions hitherto."

When Mr. Barker's term in that office expired a few months ago, William D. Taylor, who has been senior past director since the death of Otis Turner, was elected to a third term.

During Mr. Taylor's illness Charles Giblyn, second past director, took the chair. Shortly after Mr. Taylor sailed for Europe to recover his health, Mr. Giblyn was called to New York, and Reginald Barker, the remaining past director, stepped into the place he vacated last April. When Mr. Taylor returns from abroad, he again will take the reins.

Scandenavish Film Centralen, Swedish producers, would make things pleasant enough for Anna Q. Nillson as to induce her to remain in her "homeland" and be the center of attraction in some two reelers in Denmark, but with due respect to the land of her birth Miss Nillson has put in writing: "To tell the truth, for all Sweden's particular style of beauty, and the wonderful welcome accorded me. I am longing for 'home'." So it would appear that before long, America may welcome the Swedish picturegale.

Vignola Picking Locations

The next production which Robert G. Vignola will make for Cosmopolitan promises to eclipse anything this director has yet done with particular reference to exterior scenic beauty. For more than a week Director Vignola has been touring New York state in search of the rare locations for which the story calls.

The main part of the story is laid amid the rugged beauty of the Adirondacks and Mr. Vignola's trip to the mountains was made principally because he wants to find locations that are distinctive.

South Has Wonder Show House in Million Dollar Palace Theatre

Dallas, Texas Takes Place with Cities of Famous Houses

When the new Palace theatre opened its doors on the night of June 11th, the public of Dallas, Texas, was amazed at the magnificence of the theatre which Messrs. Hulsey and Lynch and associates of the Southern Enterprises Association had given the city. This superb playhouse seating 3,000 and costing a million dollars, places Dallas in the forefront with our famous motion picture theatres, such as the Capitol, Rialto, Circle, Newman and Grauman's. Situated in the most valuable block in Texas the house is ideally located. It fronts on Elm street, near Ervay and goes through to Pacific avenue.

The equipment of the Palace is most complete from the cigarette stands in the ladies' lounging room, to the efficiently equipped projection rooms. No detail has been overlooked in making the Palace a perfect example of modern moving picture construction.

Realizing that no one theatre in the world has as yet been constructed absolutely one hundred per cent perfect and that it is a decidedly difficult task to erect such a theatre, the architects of the Palace, felt that it would greatly assist them in producing a model theatre, if they might embody in their plans, ideas and features that are a part of the leading theatres of the day.

With this idea in mind, the architects of the Palace theatre made several very extensive trips throughout the country, picking up bits of valuable information from each of the cities visited. On their return to Dallas, they were in possession of a vast quantity of valuable data, which they set to work with and designed a composite theatre that embodied features found in the leading theatres of the country.

When the crowds had lined up at the entrance of the Palace on the opening night the curiosity of the spectators were aroused to a high pitch by the beautiful delicate design of the lobby. When the pretenious interior of the theatre was at last disclosed, Dallas marveled. Never before in the South had moving pictures been housed in a place of such magnificence. Dallas had made a wonderful step onto the heights of photodrama presentation.

The actual structure of the Palace is a notable one and one that is destined to be reckoned with wherever great theatres are discussed. Like its prototype, the Capitol, New York, it is a superb type of the Adam period of design. From the vestibule to the proscenium and the jewel-like dome this one style has been utilized in its highest sense. Its greatest asset or feature is its extreme beauty and richness of design and color without being gaudy or freakish, making for a restfulness that is all too rare in our native theatres. The motif is "Cafe au Lait" in three shades. Ingeniously introduced into the design there are cameo-like wedgewood plaques of classical subjects, such as "Priam At The Feet Of Achilles," Orpheus and Terpsichore. In the dome a frieze similar to the one in the Parthenon at Athens has been adopted, while from its center there hangs a massive chandelier of extraordinary beauty. But in all the design what, perhaps, receives the greatest attention is the use of scagliola Italian art marble. It is said that the Palace contains the finest example of the use of this marble in this country. It has been generously, yet judiciously, applied throughout the whole theatre, from the lobby to the mezzanine. It is in the main auditorium, however, that it is seen at its best. Here, on each side of the orchestra floor a series of six tall, graceful columns of scagliola form a colonnade of rare charm, silhouetted against the cobalt blue and old gold of the wall tapestries. This one touch of the classic Roman, so deftly adapted to the Adam, gives the auditorium a sense of dignity and refinement that balances gloriously with the soothing quietness and softness of the "Cafe au Lait" motif.

One of the most interesting sections of the Palace is its splendid equipped projection room. Three motor driven type "S" Simplex Projectors finished in battleship grey with nickel-plated mechanisms, a special Simplex spotlight, two 110 ampere Westinghouse motor generators and three Robin speed indicators, make the main projection room one of the most important units in the operation of the Palace theatre.

Not only can the new Palace theatre boast of such an efficiently equipped main projection room, wherein all new pictures booked at the Palace theatre are set to music, cued, cut, if necessary, also measured and timed, in order to perfectly synchronize the picture with the music, by means of Robins speed indicators. In this reviewing room are two motor-driven Simplex Projectors, equipped with two Robin speed indicators.

The $30,000 Hope-Jones organ is one of the interesting features of the Palace theatre with its movable organ console. The console is placed on a small elevator that raises it to specified positions, necessitated by the varying conditions, under which the organist may be placed.

For solo work the organist and console are raised high into full view of the audience. For orchestra work, the console is lowered to a level with the orchestra. When the organ is not in use, the console is lowered into a small separate pit, which can be covered over, thus providing more room forthe assembled orchestra.

Have Optimistic Outlook for Raw Negative and Positive Stock

New York Firm Claims Depression Talk Unjust

While the sale of raw negative and positive film stock in large quantities is by no means the only barometer of trade activity in the field of motion picture production and distribution, it nevertheless is a factor whose all-importance is not to be lightly treated in taking an inventory of present film conditions. The fact that the months of June and July have been red-letter months in the history of the Bay State Film Company—manufacturers of raw positive and negative film stock, as far as shattering sales records are concerned, confirms in a large measure the widely-circulated report that the period of activity both in motion picture production and distribution is at hand.

The Bay State Film Company, with New York offices in the Candler Building, in a statement issued to the trade press the early part of the week, seeks to prove by a comparison of figures that the talk of business depression is not alone unfounded but unjust. In a statement which clearly shows that there is brisk buying of negative raw stock for motion picture production and large quantities of positive stock for developing and printing purposes, the company nails all rumors with respect to the curtailment of production.

The company's statement follows:

"Contact with numerous film folk during the past three months has convinced us that there is a vast army of 'knockers' prowling about our industry, whose chief occupation is to talk and think in terms of depression. Unfortunately their talk, like the measles, is contagious. But unlike the measles, their continued talk may lead to dangerous conclusions.

"If the people thus engaged in the dissemination of such propaganda were speaking the truth perhaps we would not rise on this occasion and give vent to our pent-up feelings. But their tongues are saying things without rhyme or reason. Conditions are not as bad as they are painted, and what is more, the regular summer slump was to be expected.

"The knockers are continually talking depression, and thereby discouraging any real attempt at production. The actual period of business depression, foreshadowed two years ago by an era of readjustment has passed away, and now we are riding on the crest of a summer slump which most people are prone to link up with this talk of depression.

"Our business is primarily the manufacture and distribution of negative and positive raw stock. We believe that when large quantities of this stock are sold to producers and laboratories that conditions are good. They cannot be otherwise. A producer buys negative stock only for the production of motion pictures. On the other hand a laboratory purchases positive stock only for printing purposes. Activity by both of these important branches in this industry indicate a healthy business sign.

"During the months of June and July we transacted a greater volume of business in the manufacture and sale of our product than at any other period in the history of our company Added importance attaches itself to these sales when one compares our volume of business to the statements credited some of our chief 'knockers.' Both stories conflict, but we feel certain that our story is correct.

"With the purchase of negative and positive raw stock in large quantities we cannot but help feel that conditions are on their way to normal. In this connection we pledge ourselves as ready at all times to cooperate with the industry in general and the producer and laboratory in particular towards a better business and a bigger business."

Projectionists Hold Annual Meeting

L. M. Andler, projectionist of the Liberty theatre at Houston, acted as chairman at the opening sessions of the annual convention of the Sixth District of the I. A. T. S. E. and the M. P. M. O., held at the Jefferson Hotel, Dallas, Tex., on July 4. The district comprises Texas, Oklahoma and Western Louisiana. C. N. Fox, of the Queen theatre, Forth Worth, was re-elected secretary. Future agreements to be entered into were discussed but no action was taken.

Charging 10 Per Head to See Picture

The Okla theatre at Bartlesville, Okla., has inaugurated a policy of showing pictures at 10 cents per head, whether old or young heads, and are said to be coining money as a result. The same class of pictures is being run as before, including Paramount, Select, Peacock, Universal, Selznick and other well known pictures.—Noble

Among the attractive theatres that are expected to open this season is that of the Traco Amusement Co. in Toms River, N. J.

This house is handsomely laid out and will be an attraction to the town.

The building was designed by Gregory B. Webb, of the Sheridan Building, New York, who has produced some very handsome theatres during the past few months and is now working on several others for theatre owners in different parts of the country. While no elaborate period design was followed out in planning or construction of this theatre, at the same time a very handsome appearance was obtained and the final result is most pleasing.

This theatre is being equipped with everything new and modern in the equipment field and all of the various devices were selected after a very careful examination of what the market has to offer.

For cooling and ventilation the Typhoon Cooling System was decided upon and two huge 7-inch fans mounted one on each side of the screen and taking the air from the rear of the building, will provide cool and refreshing breezes throughout the summer months. Each individual fan is operated by a 5 h. p. motor and forces the air through grilles on each side of the screen. By this arrangement it is possible to secure an even distribution of the air and, at the same time, provide each and every seat with a cool, refreshing breeze.

During the winter months it is possible by reversing the direction of the fans to secure proper ventilation.

At an interview Mr. Webb stated that contrary to general opinion building activities in the theatre field are showing a decided improvement and he has had numerous requests for plans and other information pertaining to new construction within the last few weeks. It is further reported that some sections of the country already indicate an improvement by the resumption of building activities in the theatre field.

Exchanges Organize

All of the independent exchanges of Oklahoma City have combined in a crusade for business and for recognition of the independent distributor by the State theatre managers. A letter has been sent out from independent exchanges bearing the slogan, "Open time for the independents means independence for you," a stamp having been made out and all stationery so marked. In other ways the independents are giving notice that they do not propose to be left out in the broiling sun of neglect, and that they are here doing business right along and expecting to get their share.—Noble

Million Dollar Rialto a Classic Temple of Silent Drama

Louisville Ky., Now Boasts of Largest House in South

With the recent opening of the Rialto million dollar theatre, Louisville, Ky., now boasts the largest and most beautiful theatre picture house in the south. Complete in every detail, it stands as a monument of the modern achievements of the motion picture industry. The Rialto is indeed a magnificent and wonderful temple of the silent drama. The house, seating 3,500, is owned by the Majestic Amusement Company. Louis J. Ditmar who is president of the association of Kentucky exhibitors is manager. J. E. Firnkoess, formerly with Paramount, is house manager. Joseph and Joseph were the architects and C. A. Koerner & Company, all of Louisville, were the contractors.

The first lobby is large and handsomely finished in Caen stone, with wainscoting of Parayazzo marble and Rookwood pottery, with large mirrors imported from Belgium, set in antique gold frames. The ceiling is done in cream with delicate shadings of rose. The grand lobby is impressive and beautiful with more big mirrors and marble panels, and graced with several immense but exquisite crystal chandeliers, imported from Czecho-Slovakia, each containing a thousand crystals and requiring twenty-four hours for one man to put together. The centerpiece of beauty here is the grand stairway, all of marble, the balustrade pure white, flanked with stately columns of the same material. It is doubtful if this lobby will soon be exceeded in America for classic beauty and magnificence.

The broad promenade opens to right of the grand stairway, and is one of luxury and quiet elegance, Italian renaissance in treatment. Candle chandeliers and brackets rule here. The walls are panelled in gum, with silk damask of gold and blue. Eight-foot torchieres ornament special niches. Velvet carpets are used, the furniture is upholstered in silk velour. The men's smoking room opens off one end of this promenade, and both a lounge and ladies' rest rooms at the other. The latter is exquisitely done in gray and gold with blue and gold upholstery.

A small corner, now used for checkroom, will be used in the winter to serve tea and sandwiches; artistic, collapsible chairs will be placed in the promenade

Having 3,500 seats, the auditorium is of great size. It is 160 feet from the projection room at back of balcony to the screen. This balcony extends 110 feet without support, said to be an engineering feat second only to the Capitol in New York. There are no boxes, but a luxurious loge occupying four rows. The proscenium arch is of artistic grill work, through which is forced 30,000,000 cubic feet of fresh air per hour, by the American Blower system, the two largest fans being 14 feet in diameter.

The stage draperies are of rich plush, blue and rose, appliquéd in gold, and with gold fringe. A gold fiber screen is used. Several large fixtures light the auditorium, the largest in the dome being 26 feet in circumference and weighing a ton. Probably no theatre has a more complete lighting system, modern to the last degree. From the big majorboard backstage, the theatre can be painted in any color, the X-ray Cublenz reflector accomplishing these wonders of tone poems. No expense was spared in this feature.

The Rialto has an orchestra of twenty-five pieces, led by R. Gratz Cox, formerly conductor of the Louisville Symphony

Demand for Beautiful Houses Can Be Easily Met

Movie Theatres Can Be Made Artistic at Nominal Cost

By F. W. JELLISON, Sales Manager, NATIONAL PLASTIC RELIEF CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO

Many theatre owners and exhibitors who have been considering alterations to the lobby and interior of their theatres, keep putting it off, awaiting prices of materials to come down, as they are under the impression that the change or alteration they have in mind will be too expensive to carry out. This is especially true with the owners and exhibitors who have theatres in the smaller towns and cities, and have in mind interior alterations and changes of an ornamental nature.

This impression is wrong, however, and the owners and exhibitors of such theatres are doing their patrons,—as well as themselves, an injustice to continue with the dismal and unornamented walls and ceilings, and shabby lobbies, when these same walls, ceilings and lobbies can be made beautiful by the use of plastic relief ornaments, mouldings, and decorative pieces; giving an artistic and inviting appearance to the lobby and interior and all at a very nominal cost.

The theatre, nowadays must be a place of beauty; the public has become educated to expect it, and the exhibitor who continues to keep putting off for tomorrow what can be done today to beautify his house at little expense, is driving away his trade, as this is the age of the theatre beautiful in movie houses; and, a nominal sum spent today to beautify the theatre and make it attractive and inviting means tenfold returns to the exhibitor.

Architects are today, more than ever before, specifying staff work and plastic relief ornamentations in the most modern houses in the large cities. Why? Because it gives a more beautiful ornamental effect than can be attained by other methods of treatment, and is less expensive.

What is more restful and inviting than the many different effects that can be had by the use of beautiful ornamental designs of mouldings, ornaments and decorative pieces for walls, ceilings, columns, etc., than plastic relief work The relief stands out in life-like beauty, and lends an atmosphere of grandeur to the house. The various unique designs of figures, musical instruments, caryatides and cartouches and the many curvatures and odd shapes made of this material in the theatre interior and lobby, which makes its magnificence a permanent invitation to the theatregoer.

Ornamental mouldings, cornices, architraves, friezes, panels and rosettes, all go to make the walls, ceilings, proscenium arch, box and balcony fronts things of beauty.

Ornamentations of this nature can be painted or colored the same as wood, and can always be changed for new designs or repaired at little expense.

Amusement Company to Erect Large Annex

To meet its rapidly growing requirements the Saenger Amusement Company, Inc., of New Orleans, is building a two-story structure which will cover two lots and make available 12,000 more square feet, which it will use as additional office space. Work already has begun on the space adjacent to the present big structure on Tulane avenue and it was stated that the work would be rushed with the hope of having the space available by September 15.

The structure will be built of brick and stucco. Space will be left for a driveway between the two buildings, but they will be connected above the first story. The mailing activities of the company will be carried on in the new annex, as also will all its mechanical appliances and supplies will be stowed away in it. Also, the Metro and First National Film Exchanges, which occupy space in the present Saenger office, will be accommodated in the annex. The Saenger Amusement Company, Inc., has its own construction superintendent, P. W. Nix, and its own architect, Charles E. Davis, and they are looking after this and all other building operations of the company.—GREEN.

Dear Sirs:—I am glad to notice the number of Projectionists in Texas, who have joined the N. A. M. L. lately and I only hope more will do so, as it certainly does help the other fellow out. I wrote in and got one of your handbooks on "Motion Picture Projection" from the Theatre Supply Company which I saw recommended in the NEWS some weeks ago, and I must say it has some very useful data in it.

Please send me a batch of N. A. M. L. labels as I am almost out.

Install Giant Motor-Generator Set in Los Angeles Studio

Largest Ever Constructed for Motion Picture Use

The Louis B. Mayer Studios of Los Angeles, which houses the producing forces of the Anita Stewart and John M. Stahl companies, the Carter De Haven company and Oliver Morosco's new film contingent, recently became the home of what is said to be the largest motor-generator set ever constructed for motion picture use. It is a 400-kw., two-unit motor-generator set consisting of one 580-hp. three-phase, 2200-volt, 50-cycle synchronous motor direct connected to a 400-kw., 250-volt, 600-r.p.m., six-pole compound wound interpole generator, rated at 1500 amp. It has supplied 3000 amp.

Direct connected to the generator shaft on an overhanging bracket is a 125-volt, 7-kw. inter-poled exciter for the motor. The motor has drawn as high as 1105-hp. for one-half periods with very little strain.

The balancer set for the machine consists of two 25-kw. four pole, compound wound, 125-volt, 1800 r.p.m. generators direct connected. These machines take care of current per side of line when unbalanced.

There also is a three-unit set consisting of one 300-hp. three-phase, 2200-volt, 50-cycle G. E. induction motor direct connected to two 100-kw., 125-volt 720 r. p. m. four-pole compound wound generators, connected in a series for 110-220-volt, three-wire service, 1000 amp. output per generator.

At times for very short periods such as ten or fifteen minutes, the above described machinery is forced to an output as high as 1050 kw.—800 on the large set (100 per cent overload) and 250 on the small set, or at 115 volts, close to 8700 amp.

The A. C. stage lighting consists of three three-phase 100-kw. transformers connected closed delta for 110 volts. This is to care for the ever necessary Cooper

New York City, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my satisfaction with the new U. T. E. Moving Picture Projector that we are using on the Million Dollar Pier. In view of the fact that the picture is thrown upon a screen 217 feet from the machine, the longest throw we believe in the world, while 5,000 colored electric lights are burning, the resulting good picture produced is remarkable. The picture is steady, clear and bright, in fact we are obtaining better results with your machine than any other we have had.

Any time you are in Atlantic City, I would be glad to have you come to the Million Dollar Pier and see the results yourself.

Yours very truly,

C. A. Hill

Hewitt equipment which furnishes the soft, though highly actinic, light so important in the production of artistic photoplays. In this particular case the equipment consists of sixteen eight-tube floor stands, each consisting of eight 400-watt tubes, or a total of 3.2 kw. only for each stand, supplying the major volume of Cooper Hewitt illumination, while sixteen special two-tube outfits are used for special effects and back lighting.

Some half dozen Cooper Hewitt title outfits have been made to do service as footlights and are supplied from the same transformers.

The power for the carpenter shop is supplied by two 220-volt, three-phase transformers, connected open delta. One 110-220-volt, single-phase transformer supplies the current for lighting (incandescent) the stages. The current for the production room is furnished by a 15-kw. four-pole compound wound 125-volt generator direct connected to a 25-hp., 220-volt, three-phase 50-cycle motor.

Outside electrical engineers would probably consider such loads as those mentioned above impractical. But necessity, the mother of invention, is a constant visitor in motion picture studios, and when electrical emergencies arise during the making of a picture there is nothing to do but meet them. Experience has taught R. E. Naumann, the chief engineer at the Mayer Studios, tricks of lighting and current control that are not written in books, and many times under emergency he has accomplished feats of stage illumination that he would have labeled impossible had not necessity made an insistent call.

The grand total of all current, both A. C. and D. C., in this studio, reaches 1450 kw. This is enough to light 24,167 60-watt lamps, which are just a little larger than the ordinary house lights. With everything up to maximum, this current would equal 2,030 hp., enough to illuminate a city of twelve or fifteen thousand inhabitants.

Richmond Preparing Fire Prevention Code

With a view to providing every possible safeguard against fire in theatres, the Building Code Commission of Richmond has practically completed its work of revising the building code, which is now ready to be presented to the subcommittee and subsequently offered for action in the Common Council.

Theatres will not be required to have fireproof roofs, but the ceilings are to be of fireproof material, and every precautionary measure is provided against possible fires at any point behind the stage. Exits are to be provided designed to clear the auditorium of crowds within two or three minutes. The aisles are to be of in clined rather than step style construction. All "prop" rooms, electrical, carpenter, and paint shops and other accessories to the make-up of the motion picture and legitimate theatres will be surrounded by every conceivable fire safeguard.

Electric Indicator Board Devised to Eliminate Confusion in Locating Seats

With a capitalization of $500,000, a new industry to be known as the Guerin Theatre Seating System, Incorporated, is being organized in New Orleans, La., for the manufacture of electric indicator boards to designate vacant seats in theatres and public meeting places.

Morinville J. Guerin of New Orleans heads the new company as president, and announced recently that the system, which is his own invention, has proved workable and that he intends to place it on the market nationally within a short time. A large theatre chair manufacturing concern and one of the large electric companies, he stated, are co-operating with him in the manufacture and marketing of his novel device for indicating vacant seats in theatres.

The system indicates the vacant seats in the theatres by means of an indicator board to be placed at the entrance of the theatre. The board shows with small lights the exact position of every seat. When a seat is vacant, its corresponding light on the board appears lit—when occupied, the light becomes extinguished. By this means, the patrons can, at a glance, ascertain just where the vacant seats are; whether single, or two or more together and in just what row and section. Motion picture exhibitors say that by means of this new device they should not only be in a position to facilitate their patrons, but that its use should result in a goodly saving to them in the form of ushers' bills.

The company has opened offices on Iberville street near Chartres where the device is on exhibit on a small scale. The new device, said the president, was effected as the result of a demand by theatre operators here and elsewhere for a method of keeping in close touch with the positions and numbers of vacant seats during the rush hours.—GREEN.

Remodel Cincinnatti House

The Lyric theatre, which has been operating since the close of the theatrical season as a picture house, will be closed in a few weeks for remodeling, according to an announcement by McMahan and Jackson, who have purchased the property. When the house reopens late in August or early in September it will feature Pantages vaudeville and first-run pictures. A new marquee will be erected across the front of the building, a contract having been let for the erection of a large and elaborate electric sign with the daylight lighting system, and artists have been engaged to redecorate the interior of the theater. New chairs, carpets and scenery will replace the old furnishings, and arrangements have been made to install a large organ. A new ventilating and heating system will be installed, and the lighting system of the theatre will be entirely gone over, so that the remodeling process will make of it practically a new house.—Adams.

One of the most novel picture theatres of the West is the Hippodrome, Okmulgee, Okla., which seats 1,200 picture fans, has a big dance hall on the third floor, and roof garden above that, with natatorium in the basement. There is no need to go out of the building for change of amusement, but none conflicts with the others. Work Progressing on South Orange House

Work is well underway on the new $150,000 moving picture theatre that is being constructed by Louis V. Aronson, president of the Art Metal Works, on property on the southeast corner of South Orange avenue and Morris avenue, South Orange, N. J.—in accordance with plans drawn by Architect Frank Grad, of the firm of Hooper & Grad. It is expected to be ready for occupancy and operation in the early fall. It will provide for a seating capacity of 1,200 and its appurtenances will be the last word in moving picture theatre construction.

The building will have a frontage of sixty-five feet on South Orange avenue and a depth of 175 feet on the Morris avenue side. Negotiations have already been completed by Mr. Aronson for the leasing of the theatre to a large New York film producing corporation. The rental period is twenty years and the approximate rent for the term is $400,000. Immediately upon completion of the building it will be turned over to the lessees, who will install their own seats and who will also provide all other furnishings and equipment. These will be first-class in every particular and are expected to reach an outlay of between $40,000 and $50,000.

Orchestra. The organ was specially designed by Henry Pilcher & Sons, of Louisville, at a cost of $30,000, the largest in the south. It has 100 stops and accessories, 1,796 pipes and the latest improved electrical action. Special attention was given to the acoustics of the house. Carl Wiesman is organist.

The concrete projection room is modern and fireproof, with a battery of three machines, spotlight and stereopticon. Though having a throw of 160 feet, perfect projection is secured. The projection room is equipped with a battery of three type 6B Power projectors.

Louisville is to be complimented on this modern and complete picture theatre. While no expense was spared to make it perfect in beauty, it is in no sense gaudy, but of serene and classic magnificence, a fitting home for the great successes of the screen.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Sunless Sunday"
(Mermaid Comedy-Educational)

JIMMIE ADAMS sets a pretty fast pace in this two-reeler which abounds with action and at times bursts forth with good comedy situations. The story or whatever it may be called is not of the gentler sort, but resorts for interest to the bold, bad villains who try to steal the pretty young heroine, with the star doing the heavy honors as the rescuer and protector.

Throughout the run of the comedy, Adams does some difficult and dangerous work in the role of a dashing young police reporter. He is ably assisted by Lillian Biron, a pretty little ingenue.

It would be an impossibility to describe the various scenes in which the star participates, so rapid is he in action but sufficient unto the moment is one scene which may illustrate his ability as a juggler, acrobat and quick thinker.

When the villains have trapped and caged the pretty heroine in a dungeon-like celler, Adams in his wanderings enters and engages in a fight which is "spread" all over the place.

"Spiking the Spooks"
(Vanity Comedy-Educational)

THIS comedy has a rather trite idea running through it but is worked up with plenty of novel situations, which are sure proof when it comes to amusement value.

"Spooking the Spooks" tells the old story of "spooks" in the house with the principal characters dodging about in a frantic effort to escape the evil one. Now they are near him for they have heard a sound which is above or below them as they enter a room, or they are far away, as they think, only on close observation to find that he has just closed the door at their backs.

Four characters participate in this "spooky" stuff, with the burglar (there is always a burglar introduced to give impetus) doing the heavy thinking in his desire to escape. When the characters get through chasing one another and doing the "shakes" the comedy comes to the usual happy ending.

"Spiking the Spoks" will amuse when it doesn't make them laugh.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Nothing Like It"—"In for Life"
(Two Two-Reel Christie Comedies)

THESE latest comedies from the Christie lots start off with a biff, bing, bang, sending forth an assortment of amusing high lights which are certain to please any audience, anywhere. Both are clever satires, the first mentioned burlesquing amateur theatricals as they are found in small town community life. Director Al Christie has injected a deal of pep and ginger into the action which starts on high and moves with ever-increasing speed. The entire floor of the studio is used to put over a travesty upon a Roman play. Dorothy Devore is the leader of the movement and naturally enacts the part of Cleopatra, while Earle Rodney and Gene Corey are Antony and Brutus, respectively. It is the latter's idea to seek revenge because Earle steals his girl away from him and he executes his villainy by knocking the play for a goal.

It is a ludicrous touch when a fire team is attached to Antony's chariot and the property man hammers the gong. The horses race out of the building. The audience out front is having an uproarious time. They have come to see REAL horses and REAL water for the river Nile. The curtain is down an extraordinarily long time before it rises upon the barge scene. Cleopatra sails forth but Brutus has tied one end to a rope and the property men are unable to pull it. It is good for continuous laughter, because the comedy is spontaneous and means something. Al. Christie has caught the spirit of the travesty perfectly.

"In For Life" is a favorite Christie pattern since it revolves around the young man intent upon matrimony with the prospective father-in-law attempting to keep his daughter safe by the fire-side. They have spent some money in this comedy, in sets and costumes and extras, a fact noticeable in the elaborate church ceremony which is disrupted because the groom cannot keep his dog tied outside. This is the last straw and father locks the door. The subsequent scenes offer the w. k. chase with Jay Belasco and Viora Daniels eluding papa by a hair's breadth as the pursuit takes place in and out of the house. The sweethearts finally succeed in eloping. This comedy is a variation of a familiar formula, but it has been dressed up with acceptable gags and incident.—LAURENCE REID.

"I Do"
(Harold Lloyd-Pathe)

HAROLD LLOYD is at it again—at it with a new line of comedy tricks which will make any animal or human laugh on the face of the earth. How he or whoever is responsible for this new masterpiece ever thought of the numerous comedy situations which are continually bursting forth is an unsolved mystery in the writer's mind.

From the opening scenes, which are introduced in a novel way, to the first big situation and then to the second and so on to the closing scenes the comedy is one round of spontaneous laughter.

To illustrate, as the comedy opens Lloyd is seen with his pretty young wife, pushing a baby carriage down the main street of a small town. His neighbors greet him with a smile as he passes along until he comes upon the minister, when a surprise is sprung. For this honest young gentleman and his young wife are not pushing a baby but a big demijohn of something that didn't look like milk—as the minister observed.

When the comedy gets into its swing the star introduces a novel piece of business. In attempting to cross the street with a baby carriage he becomes confused, the director having introduced about a thousand autos which continually pass and repass and just seem to miss that 'lil old carriage. In the middle of the street Lloyd gives the high sign, advances in front of an ambitious chauffeur, high signs again and crossing over in front of another auto, comes back and when he is ready hurries for the sidewalk. A very clever piece of business and one that will increase Lloyd's popularity with the patrons.

The principal scenes are played in the home of the young couple where the star gets more comedy out of the situations than he has in any of his late two-reelers—and this is saying something.

From the time he gets mixed up with baby's milk bottle and gets into a lot of amusing situations until the final scenes which would take Mark Twain to explain, they are so full of humor, the comedian has set a pace for himself that will be hard to beat—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Sailor"
(Clyde Cook Comedy-Fox—Two Reels)

CLYDE COOK, Fox's clever comedian, certainly believes in variety of characterization for his releases. He has been a jockey, guide, Alpine climber, huntsman and numerous other figures and now he comes forward as a sailor in as amusing an effort as has been thrown upon the screen in some time. A sailor's life may be said to be replete with adventure and incident. The rollicking son of the billowy sea is always adding to the gaycty of nations. And Clyde Cook makes him stand out unduly picturesque and funny.

The forepart of the comedy presents him having some fun on the dock, attempting to fish and work as a jack-of-all-trades. There is a longshoreman who acts as a foil. They succeed in putting over a rich assortment of intimate and amusing gags. The following scenes find Cook as an ordinary seaman on a regular, deepsea schooner. There is a lot of fun on deck and below. A squall come up and the melancholy comedian takes to his umbrella. A sailing vessel certainly carries enough properties to provide stunts. The boat dives beneath the waves, and the chief members of the crew are washed up on a cannibal isle. Cook comes into the scene carrying a huge anchor.

The succeeding action is highly humorous what with the hula dances, the spear-throwing, and the drill maneuvers put on by the native sons. The star might be a member of some prize Zouave team so intricate are the steps, the marches and counter-marches. He finally rescues himself and the captain and his daughter by winning all the paraphernalia of the cannibals with a pair of loaded dice. A snappy piece and no mistake. Cook is still batting 1,000 in the comedy league.—LAURENCE REID.

"In the Bonnie Brier Country"
(Bruce Scenic-Educational)

WHEN one views pictures of Scotland the romantic interest seems to be lost. This gap is well filled, however, by the comedy interest which is ever cropping out when the stolid Scot is introduced.

This one-reeler gives us a general view of the Scottish country with its broad heathers, its lakes and rivers and its mountains.

The highlands and lowlands far and near are brought to our close observation, making one feel that it would be a pleasant place to spend a summer vacation.

For contrast the natives, their homes and their methods of making a livelihood are all introduced with the lonely shepherd and his flock playing the principal role.—FRANK LEONARD.

"THE GREAT MOMENT"

(Paramount)

First Rate Entertainment in Gloria Swanson's Stellar Vehicle

GLORIA SWANSON'S dominant personality and peculiar fitness in interpreting the picturesque roles of the De Mille photoplays has earned for her a stellar position in the Paramount gallery of players. The new star has had her name featured before, a fact that those exhibitors who catered to Triangle releases a few years ago will remember. She has rapidly forged to the front since joining Cecil De Mille's productions, and "The Great Moment" is something she may well feel proud of in serving as her first Paramount offering.

Written by Elinor Glyn, the story may be said to contain dramatic conflict, effective and picturesque characterization, acceptable incident, and a fine flavor of romance. Indeed the latter element is particularly fascinating and provides most of the dramatic substance. The idea involves a rather unusual situation—that of a man and woman who separate even when desperately in love with each other, because each believes that the other wants freedom. While the pattern has seen some service on the screen it has never been overworked, consequently it appears almost refreshing, particularly in the attention given to the incident, situations and climaxes by Sam Wood, the director. The heroine belongs to English aristocracy and her father is desirous that she marry the man of his choice. When the latter makes his appearance the girl is disillusioned and holds herself aloof. She has seen her ideal, an American mining engineer at a distance, and when the English family travel to America, the father to look over his property, she encounters the hero and falls deeply in love. The action here precipitates a deal of novel incident at this point, one situation standing out conspicuously when the engineer rescues the girl from a rattlesnake. The reptile has bitten her, but the hero renders first aid with the old-fashioned remedy. He has carried her to his shack and her father places a wrong situation upon the scene when he follows to find out her absence. It may be that certain red-blooded spectators will fail to approve the hero's lack of initiative when he consents to being called a blackguard and refusing to fight for her. She is lugged off to Washington and soon carries on a flirtation with a gay bounder to spite her father. Eventually the latter sees the light and recognizes that the girl will marry her ideal—the engineer. The hero enters rather conveniently and the happy reunion brings the conclusion. The picture is interesting throughout—not only because of its wealth of incident, which is worked out quite logically, but because it is also well acted by the star, Milton Sills and Alec Francis. There is no doubt that it is going to please the majority of audiences everywhere.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Gloria Swanson's first starring vehicle for Paramount is "The Great Moment," an original photoplay written by Elinor Glyn, author of the unusual novel, "Three Weeks," which created a literary furore some years ago. The picture will be presented at the ———— theatre next ————. Miss Swanson deserves stellar position on the screen through her admirable work in Cecil De Mille's special productions, and the role of the half-gypsy girl and daughter of an English aristocrat, is one that fits her personality to a dot.

The picture offers a love story—a story involving a most unusual situation—that of a man and woman who separate even when desperately in love with each other, because each believes that the other wants freedom. The heroine is an irrepressible girl who is strong-willed, and who demands the right to choose her own romances. It is her independence in these affairs which spell the conflict between father and daughter, and between the lovers and the girl. The picture is well acted by the star and a supporting cast that includes Alec Francis and Milton Sills, and is marked for its artistic production.

PROGRAM READER

Gloria Swanson, the beautiful Paramount star who won fame by her impersonations in "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Wife?" and other notable successes, will make her debut as a star at this theatre next ———— in "The Great Moment," a powerful photoplay of love and adventure specially written for her by Elinor Glyn, autbor of "Three Weeks." The story treats of a girl with a wild gypsy song in her heart. Her youth had been wasted in sheltered luxury. Then she met the MAN who was blazing civilization's path through the wilds—a MAN of the great outdoors—a MAN totally unlike the pampered sons of society who paid homage at her shrine. It is a tingling story which fascinates through its clever scenes and exceptional acting. Milton Sills is the leading man.

SUGGESTIONS

The star in this picture has reached stellar heights and it would be a good plan to concentrate upon her name. State that her work in the previous pictures, "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Wife?" and other successes was of such a superlative character that she was elevated to stardom. So present her name and run stills of her, telling that it is her first starring vehicle. The other angle is to play up the author. Tell that Elinor Glyn wrote this story specially for Miss Swanson. Play up her "Three Weeks," which had such a wide popularity a few years ago and is still in demand. You can bill the picture as a most fascinating romance which is rich in adventure and dramatic situations.

"SINGING RIVER"

(Fox)

Ordinary Western Makes Weak Offering for Russell

THE rugged Fox star, William Russell, must have photoplays which provide him with unusually vivid characterizations, and which also must be packed with highfalutin incident and crisp action. "Singing River" does not measure up to the star's requirements since it is unduly orthodox of theme and develops a conventional array of scenes. True there is an element of suspense, but it is introduced in an arbitrary fashion and destroys much of the logic. Also there is a conventional twist to provide a touch of surprise. The star has forsaken the "big business" roles which featured some previous releases and returns to his first love the western.

The offering carries a picturesque title—which may be said to furnish the only colorful note in the production. A few rugged backgrounds have been caught—yet these are expected when the photoplay is taken out under the vast canopy of the West. It is mostly a character study—this "Singing River" and fails to develop much incident. The plot revolves around the efforts of a young "homesteader" to keep from being captured by the minions of the law and a group of vicious outlaws because of a murder he is supposed to have committed. He has made his escape from the saloon in a mining camp and staked out a claim in a distant community. There are two sheriffs involved, one who pursues him in a flivver, the other, the father of the girl who provides the romance.

Vola Vale is the only feminine figure in the picture and the romantic element seems wholly unnecessary because of the convenient episodes in which she is placed. A character known as the Drifter comes to Russell's shack for the purpose of capturing him and winning the $5,000 reward. And when the story peters out a couple of outlaws are introduced to enliven the action. There is a brawl or two with the hero emerging successful. The logic falls down in the offered reward and the determination to capture him when there has been no murder at all. The sheriff of the first camp must realize that the outlaws deserved their punishment. The surprise comes when the Drifter returns after he has been suspected of going after the minion of the law, and the real criminals are caught. There is a faint effort to provide conflict with the figure of the Singing River sheriff who forbids his daughter to entertain the stranger. The scene of the silver strike is poor hokum and smacks of the story-book. "Singing River" is hopelessly conventional and rather tiresome, because of the lack of novelty and incident. And it fails to carry a very hefty punch.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

William Russell, the vigorous and popular Fox star, has returned to the type of picture for which he is famous—namely the western. "Singing River," written by Robert J. Horton, scenarioized by Jules Furthman, and directed by Charles Giblyn, is a story which carries a deal of melodramatic substance, presents colorful and picturesque scenery and offers the spectator a charming romance. The characters are vivid enough to excite attention, and the figure of Lang Rush, played by Mr. Russell in his usual vivid manner, is certain in its appeal.

The opening scene presents him at odds with a money lender who is about to foreclose a mortgage. Sam Hemp, a vicious character, offers to help Lang burglarize the loan shark but the cowboy refuses. Hemp calls him a coward and there is a brawl. Thinking he has killed Hemp, Lang makes his escape to Singing River, a mining camp some miles away. His life is lived in fear that he may be ultimately captured, but the sheriff's daughter and a certain ne'er-do-well come to his rescue. The picture offers a deal of adventure and romance and is capitally played.

PROGRAM READER

The cowboy thought he had killed the vicious roustabout of the community. He made his escape and learned that a huge price was on his head for his capture. He settled in a distant camp and warned everyone to keep without the deadline. Then he met the ONLY GIRL who proved her loyalty toward him on several occasions. The cowboy was a picturesque figure and he led an adventurous life. Follow his active career in "Singing River," the enjoyable western which comes to the ———— theatre as a Fox attraction starring the vigorous William Russell. The star is eminently fitted to enact the part of the adventurous cowboy and the picture entertains throughout its five reels. Vola Dale is the leading woman.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that William Russell returns to the western here—that he has given up, temporarily, at least, the society or frenzied finance stories to enact the part of an adventurous cowboy in a story which calls for a deal of melodramatic action. Tell them that the picture abounds in picturesque atmosphere. The title is colorful. You can put over a prologue featuring a male quartette attired in cowboy regalia. This would be a big hit and the selections can be songs of the plains. Bill it as a moving western with the vigorous Russell at his best. Tell them that Vola Dale is the leading woman. Many of your patrons will remember her as the leading woman for Bill Hart in many of his pictures.

CATCH LINES

He was a cowboy who led an adventurous life. There was a price on his head. See William Russell in "Singing River."

"DON'T NEGLECT YOUR WIFE"
(Goldwyn)

Historical Picture of Doubtful Entertainment Values

"DON'T CHANGE YOUR WIFE" violates most of the accepted principles for making good motion pictures. The story is told entirely by titles of which there are a multitude, although all of them are very well done. There is no plot complication, the whole story being episodic narrative. It is a costume bill of the period of crinoline and flowing ties, beaver hats and frock coats. There is no villain except a scandal mongering scrimp who appears in two or three scenes. The hero is an editor who falls in love with another man's wife. The wife (the heroine) falls out of love with her husband and in love with the editor because said husband treats her pretty much as husbands, taking them as an average have been treating their better halves some two thousand years. Both the editor and the wife start in to drink themselves to death because divorces weren't tolerated in 'Frisco in those days but finally after each has picked out a favorite dive in which to drown their respective sorrows the wife decides it is her moral duty to reform the editor. She leaves her 'Frisco "bucket of blood" and comes to New York where the hero is still holding out in his dive and fights with another dame for his hero-ship. Friend husband is announced as having secured a divorce in the meantime so it is assumed the pair will look up a J. P.

This last is revolutionary. This having a heroine a divorcee just isn't done in the best movie society.

As may be imagined it is a pleasant (?) little story. Gertrude Atherton, who wrote it (Goldwyn proudly proclaims, by the way, that it is her first original screen script) must have had a free hand to ever get it by the scenario department.

In looking for good things about the production, one finds a wonderful cast striving with commendable sincerity to make a favorable impression, fine sets correct in every detail, a certain historical value in the story told, very fine costuming, excellent lightings and photography and capable direction so far as the limitations of the story would permit.

Lew Stone does all that any actor could do with the role of the editor and Mabel Julienne Scott portrays her role most capably. It is hard, however, to work up any amount of sympathy for either character.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Don't Neglect Your Wife," the Eminent Authors-Goldwyn picture, which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— is Gertrude Atherton's first original screen story. This popular and talented author has contributed a score of interesting novels to the fiction reading public, and turning her attention to the screen has demonstrated that she has lost none of her skill at situation, climax and characterization. The picture is a dramatic offering which involves a domestic theme and is said to contain several unique and novel twists.

A remarkable cast has been chosen to interpret "Don't Neglect Your Wife"—a cast that includes such competent and popular players as Mabel Julienne Scott, Lewis S. Stone, Charles Clary, Kate Lester, R. D. MacLean, Arthur Hoyt, Josephine Crowell, Darrel Foss and Richard Tucker. Many of these players have been stars. In fact the picture presents an all star company. The heroine is neglected by her husband and, seeking companionship, accepts the friendship of another man, who brings happiness. The offering is marked by appropriate atmosphere and settings and has been directed by Wallace Worsley.

PROGRAM READER

How many husbands do you know that neglect their wives? Perhaps their domestic problems are given the spotlight of publicity so that they become the property of their neighbors. Again there may be many neglected wives who never complain but accept their misfortune uncomplainingly. When you come to the ———— theatre next ———— you will see an interesting picture based upon a neglected wife who finds happiness in her own way. It is a picture especially written for the screen by Gertrude Atherton, the successful and popular novelist. A remarkable cast of clever players interpret the picture—a cast including Mabel Julienne Scott, Lewis S. Stone, Charles Clary, Kate Lester, R. D. MacLean and many others.

SUGGESTIONS

In this picture you have a title which should stimulate you into extra endeavor to put it over. It is a title which will arouse a deal of thought. In fact the title alone, on a big twenty-four sheet, will excite curiosity. You can exploit it far in advance. Then you have the author's name and what it means to literature, to put forth in special advertising. Tell them it is her initial contribution to the screen, and carries the same novel and interesting situations and characters as are found in her novels. Play up her name in big letters. Then tell something of the remarkable cast—the members of which are all well known and competent. Bill the picture as a dramatic offering based upon a domestic theme.

"NOBODY"
(Roland West-First National)

Good Murder Mystery Picture Evidently Based on Elwell Case

IN "Nobody" Roland West has most assuredly taken the Elwell murder mystery and solved it a la Sherlock Holmes. In plot construction Mr. West, he is the author as well as director, has done a very good job but in the production end his efforts are less praiseworthy. The picture drags in places, has many loose ends and altogether too much of Jewel Carmen, in private life Mrs. West, in close-ups and unnecessary scenes.

Miss Carmen's characterization is also rather faulty. For no apparent reason she chooses to effect a childlike manner in the early scenes that reacts on her work later when she is supposed to be a victim of aphasia, thereby destroying the effect of a contrast needed to carry out the idea of the role.

However, there is much merit in the plot and enough novelty in the way it is presented to carry the picture over with the average fan, especially since mystery stories are always favorites and nobody ought to kick at "Nobody" as entertainment. It holds interest most of the time which is more than a good many current features do.

It would seem as if a judicious cutting, especially in an entirely unnecessary gambling house scene, would improve the picture a lot. There are many titles of a "crucify the idle class" type that could be dispensed with also.

Mr. West's fictional murderer of Elwell was one of his woman victims whose mind had been disordered by his treatment of her while under the influence of unaccustomed liquor. Complications to the plot are built on a trial for murder of the wealthy clubman's ex-butler, with the husband of the wronged woman, telling the story as a member of the jury called upon to decide whether or not the butler is guilty.

From the standpoint of settings, lightings, photography, etc., "Nobody" is up to standard. The picture attempts to justify its unusual and rather unmeaning title through titles that refer to the "Smiths" of the story as social climbers, "nobodies" who went to Palm Beach on a shoe string just to be among the elect. It seems as if a good old-fashioned melodramatic name for the picture would have been a lot better. "Nobody" don't mean nothin' to nobody nohow.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Nobody" is the intriguing title of a new mystery melodrama directed by Roland West and distributed by First National which is scheduled to play the ———— theatre as the feature attraction ———— days beginning ————. The star of the production is Jewel Carmen playing the role of a young wife who is a victim of aphasia following a horrible experience on a yacht.

The story has a striking resemblance to the celebrated Elwell murder mystery in so far as the facts of the death of the New York clubman are known. A man is mysteriously killed and his ex-butler is indicted for the crime. A juror in the trial, however, proves that the man is innocent and explains how the murder was committed.

The picture has been elaborately produced and is enacted by a strong cast. Many pleasing scenic locations in the South have been shot as backgrounds. The offering screens in seven reels and has been voted an unusually pleasing bit of entertainment wherever shown. It is offered at the ———— as one of the best features of the year.

PROGRAM READER

The good mystery story is always welcome in motion pictures and as "Nobody" coming to the ———— for a ———— days engagement beginning ———— is one of the very best of this class of productions, it promises to be exceptionally popular.

Jewel Carmen is the star of "Nobody" and the production was written and directed by Roland West. It is presented to the public as a First National picture.

The story of "Nobody" begins with the trial of a man, formerly a butler, for the murder of his employer, a rich New York clubman. Evidently Mr. West has taken the Elwell murder mystery and solved it fictionally a la Sherlock Holmes. Anyway, the story told is an interesting and at times thrilling one and the climax is logical and well worked out.

In support of the star, Mr. West has secured a strong cast of well known players. The production is elaborate in every way. The exteriors were taken in Florida and show many beautiful tropical shots.

CATCH LINES

Do you remember the Elwell murder mystery? Confidentially this picture is alleged to be the unpublished solution of the incidents connected with this famous New York crime. Anyway, it is an absorbing and thrilling well-told photoplay that defies the wisest fan to guess its outcome.

"Nobody" is a murder mystery story presented in a new and novel way. It is alleged that the Elwell murder mystery is the basis for the feature. See how the New York clubman met his fate.

"A HEART TO LET"
(Realart)

Light and Sugary Entertainment Here

IT is an exceptionally mild and sugary photoplay which is offered in Justine Johnstone's latest release, "A Heart to Let." How it ever appealed to the sponsors as picture material is difficult to explain since it fails to carry any substance or incident. Compressed into two reels and given to the film public as a polite comedy it would probably prove far more entertaining. In the first place it takes a real comedienne to get away with the role of the poverty-stricken young aristocrat of the South who "doubles even triples in brass" as it were, because there is so much shading in it. The star is certainly attractive to look at, but she loses her naturalness in attempting to add Billie Burke or Mary Pickford touches.

The piece is not in the same class as a previous offering, "Sheltered Daughters." It is not Edward Dillon's fault that the entertainment values are missing. The story should not have been selected in the first place for it bears all the characteristics of the "weak sister" type of subject. There is evidence that those in charge realized its short-comings since much of the comedy relies upon subtitles. It is as if some expert was called in to doctor it up a trifle. The plot involves the above-mentioned heroine who takes in boarders to keep the wolf away. Comes to the old manse a young man who had visited there when a little child, and he is desirous of improving his health in general and his eyesight in particular under the gentle ministration of the kindly aunt of his memory.

This is the occasion to introduce the heroine in disguise. She puts on the old-fashioned clothes and passes herself off as the aunt to please the youth, though there is no logical reason to go to so much trouble in view of the fact that he is blind. He has brought a pal along and to fool the latter she masquerades as a maid. This is the sum and substance of the frail plot. As it happens in the movies, the youth's eyesight is restored without the usual operation and the subsequent darkroom treatment. It is then that the picture offers its one highlight. He does not let the girl know that he has recovered his sight and has a lot of fun in watching her attempt to fool him. It is a picture devoid of interest—sustaining moments, although Mr. Dillon has done the best he could under the circumstances. The picture should be played during exceptional hot weather because of its light character. It will probably please the sentimentalists.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Justine Johnstone, the Realart beauty and star, who will be remembered for her clever picture, "Shattered Daughters," is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "A Heart To Let," a picture which is considered a worthy companion piece to the above-mentioned attraction. Like "Sheltered Daughters" it has been directed by Edward Dillon, a director who is exceptionally talented in heart interest and romantic-comedy stories.

The star portrays the role of a young, southern aristocrat who owns a large and decaying mansion, but has no money. She therefore decides to take "paying guests," and she masquerades first as an elderly woman, the supposed hostess, and also as the house-maid who waits upon the guests. The action calls for rapid changes from one role to the other, and whether as herself, the shabby young aristocrat, or the lady and the Irish maid whom she chooses to impersonate, Miss Johnstone does very effective acting. Harrison Ford is the leading man. The picture is thoroughly appealing and affords clever entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

"A Heart To Let," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Justine Johnstone, the noted beauty and Realart star, is a wholesome comedy-romance of a girl who pretended to be an old lady and an Irish maid and fooled her boarders successfully—for a while. There was a reason for her masquerade. In the first place she did not want her guests to discover that she was poor, having come from an old aristocratic family. The story progresses and furnishes happy surprises. "A Heart To Let" is of the same high calibre as "Sheltered Daughters," and affords the beautiful star with a part which sets off her remarkable personality. Edward Dillon directed.

SUGGESTIONS

If you played "Sheltered Daughters" you discovered that Justine Johnstone had a picture for which she was ideally suited. You can tell them that the present vehicle is of the same high calibre, that it was directed by Edward Dillon, the man in charge of the first-mentioned offering. Bill it as a comedy-romance and which gives to Miss Johnstone a part which calls for real impersonation. You can tell them that the beautiful star sacrifices her youth—gives up her desire to be herself and plays the art of an elderly woman and also an Irish maid. Your prologue can be conventional, featuring some vocal number—or a duet—a boy and girl number, with a garden wall figuring as the background. A Benda mask dance would be appropriate.

CATCH LINES

Lots of girls pretend to be younger than they are, but Agatha, a young and beautiful girl, pretended to be old and decrepit. See "A Heart To Let." There's a reason.

"THE MYSTERY ROAD"
(Paramount)

Dull and Uninteresting Society Drama

THE latest British-made Paramount picture featuring David Powell is below par from an entertainment angle. Judging from the product manufactured in the English studios, the fault must rest with the stories, since capable and experienced directors have journeyed over to the British Isles to make photoplays which would stand comparison with the American market. E. Phillips Oppenhiem, who wrote "Behind Masks" as well as "The Mystery Road," has either become a "pot-boiler" or else the subject matter of his recent stories is not adaptable to the screen. This society drama presents a deal of useless complications concerning a gay philanderer who seeks adventure and finds it by falling in and out of love.

There is an endless array of scenes which show the characters standing about, making entrances and exits, sitting down at gambling tables, indulging in teas and cabarets and what not. One sits back waiting for something to happen and nothing occurs to indicate any semblance of action or incident. The dull introduction and planting of characters proceeds to a considerable amount of posturing on the part of the players. There is no outstanding situation or climax. In fact "The Mystery Road" is much ado about nothing. The director has apparently followed the text faithfully judging from the amount of extraneous detail which is incorporated. Every little point is stressed to the limit. The players move around principally in evening dress, although there is some variation to afternoon styles. In fact the picture is more of a Dame Fashion-Beau Brummel show than it is a play.

However, unlike "Appearances" the picture does present some captivating backgrounds. English country life is reflected in scenes of charming appeal. There has been no expense spared to make the subject worth while. Which, of course, reflects upon the weak and uninspired story. The name of a popular author does not mean much in this example and "The Mystery Road" will not add to the Oppenheim reputation. There are some shots of Nice which are apparently real and these serve as a background for the latter reels. The picture lacks vigor and vitality and fails to develop one sustaining point of interest. The characters become confusing because one is never certain what the plot is all about. There does not appear to be any motive for the mysterious conduct of the three feminine figures. The players have failed to inject any color or warmth into their impersonations. Which emphasizes the tedium of the drama. But the atmosphere, settings and backgrounds—these are exceptionally fine.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

What is considered one of the most dramatic and thrilling pictures issued by Paramount in many months, is "The Mystery Road," a British-made production featuring David Powell, a well known American screen player, which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The story written by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the novelist, specially for Paramount, deals with a young Englishman who travels the mystery road of life without giving a thought to the end thereof until too late to retrieve his error and to discover that he who fails to cherish the love of a trusting woman, is bound to be the loser in the end.

The theme is one of uplift and throws unexpected sidelights upon the problem of present day human existence that probably will serve as a guide to many as they travel the mystery road of life. The picture develops a series of tensely dramatic scenes which are capably enacted by Mr. Powell and a clever company. Paul Powell directed.

PROGRAM READER

David Powell, the American actor, who contributed such a memorable performance in "Idols of Clay," is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in a British-made Paramount production entitled "The Mystery Road," adapted by Margaret Turnbull from E. Phillips Oppenheim's popular story of the same name. The picture has been directed by Paul Powell and furnishes the clever star and his fine supporting company with a play which enables them to reveal their histrionic gifts at their best. The offering may be described as a tensely dramatic slice of life—a drama which carries a great uplift and teaches a lesson without once sacrificing its vital action. Remember next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a British-made Paramount production. If you have no fear of the source—that it has been made in England (a good many pictures made in Europe do not get over in some communities) then feature it in big lights. Play up Powell's name and tell that he created a memorable performance in "Idols of Clay." You can feature E. Phillips Oppenheim, too. His stories are widely read. Bill the picture as a tensely dramatic offering on a most vital subject—and play up Mary Glynne, the beautiful leading woman. For a prologue, you can feature music. Treat your copy with plenty of mystery and use all the mats and two-column cuts furnished by your nearest exchange.

He traveled through tingling adventures to find life's meaning. And found in the end ————. See David Powell in "The Mystery Road."

"MOONLIGHT AND HONEYSUCKLE"
(Realart)

Frail and Conventional and Carries No Sparkle

THE very title of this picture suggests frailness of plot and it hardly suffices to extend through five reels of polite comedy. In fact its slight thread of story would look a great deal better compressed into two or three reels. Having no substance the director has a pretty hard task keeping it moving without adding a series of repetitious details. The picture is an adaptation of George Scarborough's play of the same name in which Ruth Chatterton starred. Upon the stage the piece had a fair run though there was nothing to indicate that it provided good film material —either from a box-office angle or from the plot itself.

"Moonlight and Honeysuckle" may be classified as a pretty picture—one that caters to a sort of summer sentiment and romance. Joseph Henebery, the director, has succeeded in making it as entertaining as possible under the circumstances. However, five reels is too much to keep the spectator constantly interested. There is not enough incident, although some high lights are furnished through a few polite comedy scenes. The backgrounds compensate a good deal for the slight material since most of them are decorative and charming. In fact they are ideal for the expression of romance. The plot itself concerns a senator's daughter who puts over a love test in deciding her final choice for a husband. There are three entries for the love-stakes. To see that everything is O. K. the heroine selects her nurse as chaperon and her aunt's cabin is chosen as the background for the test.

It may be said that the obvious conclusion is anticipated—that the girl chooses the "diamond in the rough" played by Monte Blue. This role is not very conspicuous and is dominated by the figures played by William Boyd and Guy Oliver. There is one scene connected with the latter which might arouse some comment in the "why do they do it" columns in the fan magazines—a scene which shows Oliver falling into a pond and emerging with his clothes perfectly dry. In other respects the picture does not offer any errors of omission or commission aside from the big error of making screen material from an exceedingly frail idea. "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" is a sort of first cousin to "The Cinderalla Man," with none of the spontaneity of the latter. Mary Miles Minter is attractive as the heroine and plays the part in an easy, natural manner. The other members of the east play their parts in an acceptable manner.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The latest Realart picture to reach the screen at the ———— theatre next ———— is "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," adapted from George Scarborough's successful play of the same name and which stars pretty and talented Mary Miles Minter. In the original production Ruth Chatterton made a decided hit. The picture is said to be even better than the play and Miss Minter duplicates the success of her stage contemporary. The clever and popular Monte Blue appears opposite the star and other well known players are Willard Louis, Mabel Van Buren, Grace Goodall, William Boyd and Guy Oliver.

The star appears as a hoydenish miss whose "test for husbands" proves to be a boomerang. It is one of those vivaciously youthful roles in which the Realart actress is always at her best. "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" is a sure-fire comedy-drama which is chock-full of funny situations not the least of which is the heroine's attempt to manipulate two trial engagements at the same time. Joseph Henebery directed the picture, a sure enough guarantee of itos excellence.

PROGRAM READER

A rollicking comedy is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," adapted from George Scarborough's successful play in which Ruth Chatterton created a decided hit upon the stage, and which presents Mary Miles Minter, the pretty and talented Realart star. The Realart favorite is said to duplicate Miss Chatterton's fine performance in the role of the irrepressible hoyden who acts upon the wildest impulses. It is a role which might have been conceived with Miss Minter in mind so well does she fit the buoyant role. Monte Blue plays opposite the star. The picture is a breezy comedy which crackles with humor from start to finish.

SUGGESTIONS

You have a Broadway reputation to bank on here in the exploitation of this picture. It had a decided success upon the stage and Miss Ruth Chatterton scored a big hit in the role which is equally well filled by Mary Miles Minter. Play up the history of the picture and tell that George Scarborough is one of the most gifted playwrights of the stage. Tell that the picture is a rollicking comedy which crackles with funny situations and affords the pretty star a role for which she is ideally suited. Play up the title and treat your copy in a light, humorous fashion. You can put over a pretty prologue using flowers and a garden set for a background with a musical number being featured. Tell that Monte Blue appears opposite the star.

"DANGER AHEAD"

Average Program Picture on a Heart Interest Theme

THIS latest Universal featuring Mary Philbin, a newcomer to the screen, and who gives promise of going far, so certain is her appeal and so engaging her style of expression, is a lively melodrama on a heart interest theme which can be played by any exhibitor as an average program offering. "Danger Ahead" presents nothing new. The characters are varied, though familiar. There are the old settlers, the wistful-eyed heroine who lives with them in a fishing village, and the summer boarders, mostly rich people. For contrast a flash is given of some wicked spot in the artistic quarter of a metropolis where a he-vamp plays the old game of attracting the innocent.

The introductory scenes are given over to planting the sympathetic interest for the heroine. The players are good types. Comes a wealthy member of society with his son, the latter responding to the unaffected charm of the little drudge who is employed in the kitchen. This romance is appealing because James Morrison in the opposite role can still put over the juvenile interest in first rate fashion. Comes to the boarding house a scheming mother and her marriageable daughter—two characters not entirely convincing. It is their plan to capture the young man for the matrimonial stakes. Meanwhile the touch of pathos is beginning to be felt because of the heroine's disillusionment over the turn of events—the ensnaring of her ideal by the mercenary visitor. There is some humor in the scene which shows the flirtatious mother endeavoring to capture the father. Her tactics are those of the silly school girl.

The picture builds quite consistently up to this point after which a touch of melodrama is added to give it substance—a touch which is more fiction than the truth. However, it serves in giving balance to the story. The lounge lizard comes to the village and plays his patient game and is rewarded when he makes the girl believe that he saved her life in a railroad accident. This scene carries a mild thrill, though the train was far enough away for the engineer to slacken speed before hitting the buggy. The adventurer takes the girl on a cruise and a fog develops which causes their boat to be capsized when a freighter strikes it. This scene is well tinted and may be called the big punch. They are rescued and taken to the city. Here a note of wild melodrama creeps in when the villain attempts to dishonor the girl. It is rather crudely developed. The heroine picks up the telephone receiver at the exact time that her frantic lover is trying to get the studio. So he comes to the rescue. There is a humorous twist when a jealous admirer of the adventurer gives him a Dempsey punishment for betraying his love. The picture is adequately staged and directed—Laurence Reid.

PROGRAM READER

The picture you have been waiting for has at last arrived. It's a Universal by the name of "Danger Ahead" and tells one of those simple, homey tales that always interest and bring back to our memories the things that are strongest and foremost.

Tessie Harlow, a girl of seventeen, lives with her aunt Deborah and her uncle Nate in a little fishing village. The family has met with reverses and they are obliged to take boarders. Mrs. Minot and her son, the first of the boarders, arrive and Norman Minot brings into Tessie's life the first happiness she has ever known. She falls quite in love with the boy, and he finds her quite amusing in her childish way.

Mrs. Mayhew and her daughter, Dora, also take rooms at the Harlow home. Mrs. Mayhew is a woman of the "newly rich" type and is constantly scheming to get herself and her daughter into society. She has come to the boarding house with the express purpose of making a match between her daughter and Norman Minot.

Bob Kitteridge, an artist and acquaintance of Minot's, rents a cottage in the village. He looks with desirous eyes upon Tessie and manages to meet her frequently. Quite a little friendship develops between the two.

As the story develops it grips the heart strings as the spectator sees these two young men struggle for the hand of the young girl.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Universal's latest feature, "Danger Ahead," will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of next week.

It is a picture that will attract those who love the simple tale with its thrills ever cropping out to arouse the heart throb or its dramatic moments serving as a balance for its ever interesting love tale.

Tessie Harlow, a girl of seventeen, lives with her aunt Deborah and her uncle Nate in a little fishing village. The aunt is a sour, crabbed woman and nothing either Nate or Tessie can do pleases her. The family has met with reverses and they are obliged to take boarders. Mrs. Minot and her son, the first of the boarders, arrive; and Norman Minot brings into Tessie's life the first happiness she has ever known. She falls quite in love with the boy, and he finds her quite amusing in her childish way.

Mrs. Mayhew and her daughter Dora also take rooms at the Barlow home. Mrs. Mayhew is a woman of the newly rich type and is constantly scheming to get herself and her daughter into society. She has come to the boarding house with the express purnose of making a match if possible between her daughter and Norman Minot. By Mrs. Mayhew's contrivance, Norman Minot and Dora are thrown much together. Believing that Norman has fallen in love with the other girl, Tessie avoids him and grieves her little heart out.

"LIFE'S DARN FUNNY"
(Metro)

Fairly Good Entertainment Here

VIOLA DANA as star and Gareth Hughes in the opposite role, keep this picture entertaining most of the way because they have such a sure grasp upon the art of correct impersonation. These players will be remembered for their fine performances in "A Chorus Girl's Romance," a picture which still stands out as one of the brightest in a season or three. In "Life's Darn Funny" they have a story which, while obvious and quite movieish, carries enough substance, high lights and incident to satisfy seven out of ten patrons. True it develops an arbitrary conclusion as if the director hastened the scenes to release it on schedule.

There is much which is left out. For instance, the two leading characters have been living under false pretenses. They have taken a studio vacated by a rich friend of the heroine and being without funds have opened charge accounts in her name. A collection agency has been put on the track to recover the goods, which violates logic since the woman of the studio would certainly have her accounts investigated by the store because of being a good customer. A telegram informs them that she is expected back, but nothing comes of it. So the spectator must jump at conclusions and accept the fact that she straightened out the difficulties and recovered her own goods. The two sweethearts have been liable to arrest with their daring escapade.

The plot revolves around finding one's destiny. The hero is a gifted artist who has a knack for designing milady's wardrobe. When the talented violinist, played by Miss Dana, realizes that her costume has made a bigger hit than her concert work, she enters partnership with the youth and they open a tailoring and dressmaking establishment. Both have been living in a cheap tenement. The early scenes present the usual incidental conflict between the landlady and the poor tenants—with some fair touches emphasized in bringing forth the heroine's volatile nature. The expensive Strad is pawned to pay some of the debts, and the young lovers are up against it for fair until a typical movie rescue is established—a rescue which features a bewhiskered Russian nobleman who buys the youth's paintings, orders a dress for his daughter and puts them on their feet financially. The picture is really single-track in character and revolves around the two lovers for most of its action. Some of the incident is far-fetched and quite removed from realities, yet it carries enough sparkle, charm and sentiment to please the majority of patrons. While the star does well in her role, her forte is really zippy comedy romances in which she can display her pep and personality.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

One more evidence of Viola Dana's versatility is found in her newest picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. It is entitled "Life's Darn Funny," and is adapted from a popular magazine story. The petite Viola is seen for the first time as a violinist who, falling in love with an artist, finds a unique method of furthering his interests. Incidentally, Miss Dana offers her admirers another evidence of her rare taste in wearing apparel in her new production.

As the story develops the world refuses to participate in the young violinist's kindly interest. Then, by chance, his feminine sponsor discovers that he possesses a genius for the designing of gowns. How this gift is used by little Zoe, the part enacted by Miss Dana, to bring success to the pair, is a story that permits the gifted Viola to use all of her unquestioned ability as a delineator of girlish roles. Gareth Hughes, who has furnished the screen with some exceptional interpretations plays opposite the star. Dallas M. Fitzgerald directed.

PROGRAM READER

"Life's Darn Funny" is the expressive title of the comedy-drama in which petite Viola Dana is starring and which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. The screen production is an adaptation of a popular magazine story and affords the versatile star with a role in which she demonstrates her histrionic gifts at their best. Playing opposite is the talented Gareth Hughes, who has created several fine characters on the screen. The star enacts the part of a young violinist who after many trials and tribulations, sacrifices her ambitions to attain success in order to find happiness in another way. It is a bright and fascinating picture and is certain to interest every type of patron.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that Viola Dana has a picture which shows her wonderful versatility. Tell that she has had several unique roles in the past and the role impersonated here is unduly colorful and picturesque. Tell them that the picture is of the same high calibre as "The Chorus Girl's Romance," and shows that the star is talented in other ways besides expressing her gift at toe-dancing. Emphasize the title in all your copy and feature the star and her leading man, Gareth Hughes, who will be remembered for his many fine performances. Play up the picture as a most interesting little comedy-drama. Use a musical prologue, featuring a girl violinist.

CATCH LINES

She sacrificed a career upon the musical stage to find happiness in another way. What was it? See Viola Dana, the petite and versatile Metro star, in "Life's Darn Funny."

"Falling for Fanny"—"Oh, Buddy"
(Two Two-Reel Christie Comedies)

THERE is no question that Christie is batting a high average with its output of late. Certainly there will be few who fail to testify to the merits of "Falling for Fanny," which in the writer's opinion is the cleverest Christie ever released. There is a real farcical idea here which is mighty close to the truth, and it scintillates with exceptionally amusing satire and humor. There is not a weak spot visible. The acting, direction and technical details being in perfect order. The idea concerns a timid young man who, despairing of ever having a romance, seeks advice from his best friend. The latter tells him to follow the same plan as he used to—flirt with the first pretty girl, follow her home and work fast. The clever twist arrives when the begoggled hero (Eddie Barry plays the figure, giving his best performance without once stepping out of character and resembles Ed Wynn in his disguise) follows the wife of his friend without knowing her identity. She has him arrested for his mad attempt to flirt. In fact he is arrested three different times.

Helen Darling is the wife in question and she calls a "cop" on the street, sends for one at the entrance to her home, and finally she encounters her determined Nemesis in her husband's office. Eddie is quite resigned after the third arrest and plays solitaire in the cell as if unwilling to have his freedom. The friend bails him out after each arrest. Eventually the complications are scattered and the forlorn Romeo is invited to court the sister. This comedy is unusually rich in humor, moves with splendid tempo, and carries real, live electric sparks.

William Beaudine directed the piece as well as "Oh, Buddy!" which is a "take-off" on the efforts of a war hero to get a job so as to be near a pretty girl who vamped him selling doughouts back of the line. She presides over an employment bureau, although she is a society girl. The ex-dough-boy gets a job as butler in her home and has a lot of fun with some former officers before he is recognized by his father, one of the guests. This is an original idea, and worked out with plenty of comedy situation and incident. There is no repetition of scenes, the action speeding from one amusing gag to another. The titles in both comedies are zippy and to the point. Neal Burns and Vera Steadman are the featured players.—LAURENCE REID.

"What a Whopper"
("Snub" Pollard-Pathe)

"SNUB" POLLARD hasn't quite as much to do in this one reeler as he has in his former releases but it doesn't matter for the story is one that will interest once it gets started.

It has many amusing moments and develops gradually until it explodes with a bang, which means that the plot is carefully concealed until the opportune time, when a surprise is sprung.

In "What a Whopper," Pollard is a fisherman and his friend a hunter. Neither seems to have any luck and they hie themselves to a game market where "Snub" buys a good sized fish and his friend a duck. A rather funny piece of business is introduced here when "Snub" refuses to take the fish from the salesman's hands but stands at a distance and asks him to throw it. "Snub" catches the fish and then announces "now you can't say I didn't catch it."

When the two "sportsmen" arrive at their homes and tell the wonderful tales of their prowesses to their wives, a flashback being brought into play, they are confounded by the fact that their stories do not run true.

Thus when "Snub" finishes his tale about the wonderful fish he has caught and then finishes up by producing a duck, the result may be imagined. His friend finds himself in the same predicament. An amusing comedy with a few good laughs.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Love's Outcast"
(Two-Reel Mack Sennett Comedy Starring Ben Turpin—Released by Associated Producers)

"LOVE'S OUTCAST" presents the handsome Ben Turpin as the defendant in a suit for divorce and the testimony of the various witnesses is illustrated by fade outs showing what they relate on the stand.

The picture is an undeniably funny two reels of nonsense in which the action and titles about split even. All the Sennett fun-makers are present or accounted for. While the production is slap-stick there is nothing vulgar about it and taken as a whole it ranks with the best of the day. —J. S. DICKERSON.

"The Spirit Wrestlers"
(Kineto Review)

THIS picture introduced the reviewer to a group of people known as Russian Doukhobars. It seems that these Doukhobars were a kind of Russian Pilgrim Fathers who have not as yet become quite as famous. They are religious fugitives who live in British Columbia. Their religion prohibits them from killing anyone or anything—even an animal. As a result, they live by their farming. The reel shows scenes of their village, and some of the most unusual characters. It can hardly be said to be of universal interest.—LAURENCE REID.

The verdict

Distinctive and Worth While —

"'Mother O'Mine' is distinctive and worth while for several pleasant reasons. It is a melodrama, produced with fine dramatic insight. It runs a direct tale, happily minus the usual meanderings of films. It has a splendid cast of players in roles always human. It has been produced and photographed with rare charm. There is wide variety in the story's background."

NEW YORK AMERICAN.

Sure to Please You Anyway —

"Here's a picture that's bound to prove popular because of the sheer lovableness of everybody in the cast. If you like tears and dramatics 'Mother O'Mine' will please. Chances are it will whether you do or not."

CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

One of the Season's Best —

"'Mother O'Mine' is fully entitled to be called one of the season's best photoplays. There seems to be nothing in this production that would prevent one from calling it a good picture, for it offers an interesting story, it has been skillfully directed, the photography is excellent and the all star cast gives a remarkably fine performance. The picture contains suspense, excitement, love, action and pathos."

ST. LOUIS GLOBE-DEMOCRAT.

Adds to Ince's Reputation —

"'Mother O'Mine' is the second important work Ince has done for Associated Producers, whose stock goes up with each picture that comes from his studio. 'Lying Lips' put the seal of fineness on his work and 'Mother O'Mine' carries it further in popular and artistic appeal."

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS.

Made for Critical Audiences —

"With maternal devotion as the theme and a cleverly involved melodramatic plot as its moving factor, Thomas H. Ince has woven with characteristic skill in his latest production, 'Mother O'Mine,' a motion picture fabric that should stand the wear and tear of the most exacting and critical screen audiences. Adding materially to its excellence and strength, are five strikingly contrasted characterizations, intelligently interpreted."

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN.

Brief Film Masterpiece —

"On the principle that the simplest things in life are the most intrinsically dramatic and the most powerful, Thomas Ince has produced a brief film masterpiece in 'Mother O'Mine.' He has used a theme that is not new to the screen; but he and his uncommonly capable cast have given it a convincing realism and a sincerity that few similar efforts have touched."

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE.

of the press

Thrills and Plenty of Them —

"The plot is full of compelling action, thrilling suspense and dramatic situations. Worked out to a fine detail are the scenes and the character work on the part of the Ince cast is exceptionally good. The climax of the picture, which depicts a race with death, is one of the most exciting ever shown on the screen. It keeps the audience on the edge of the seats with suspense. The producer believes in the theory that the public wants action, and he has supplied an abundant amount of it in his latest photodrama."

ATLANTA JOURNAL.

Quickens Blood Pressure —

"There is a tremendous thrill and tug to the latter episodes of the story and a sweeping on of interest and action that is really amazing. It is the type of film that should have a gallery. If you like quickening of your blood pressure to a near bursting state, you will admit the last two reels of the picture to be quite remarkable examples of dramatic suspense and climax."

NEW YORK JOURNAL.

Picture to be Proud of —

"Thomas H. Ince has woven his materials for 'Mother O'Mine' into a powerful drama of strikingly contrasted characterizations intelligently interpreted. It is a picture the Associated Producers may well be proud to exhibit."

SAN FRANCISCO CALL.

Fairly Has Audience Standing —

"Thomas H. Ince has turned out a picture called 'Mother O'Mine' that for sheer play on the human emotions does more in an hour's time than probably has ever before been accomplished since the invention of the cinema. Dramatic situation follows dramatic situation until a climax is reached with as desperate a race with death in as sublime a thunder storm as the camera ever ground upon. The race fairly has the audience standing. Its story is as grippingly told by the pictures as Dickens told of the pursuit of 'Lady Dedlock,' which is about the final word in graphic description."

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

Great Even for Ince —

"The picture unfolds as a thrilling, rapidly moving tale with enough action to keep your eyes wide open every minute and enough heart-tugs to send tears to the same eyes. Seldom has an audience been held as thoroughly wrapped up in a story. The picture is shown for the rest of the week; unfortunately a longer engagement is not available. More intensely dramatic situations have been provided than one would expect even from Tom Ince—two stirring fights, a race with death, the suspense of the death cell and the horror of the death chamber. The picture is worth a visit."

A Bigger, More Human Heart-Story Than "HUMORESQUE"

LOS ANGELES, August 1.—D. S. Perrin, General Manager:—Please tell the Exhibitors of the country through our Managers and Salesmen and through the national and regional trade journals that the

Lois Weber Production

is, in our belief, the most appealing and human story of America's plain people ever made by any director. It makes you swallow your Adam's apple. It is close to the ground; close to the hearts of the masses. It is romance. It is a story of pride and love; a story of loyalty and sacrifice; a story enacted in the homes of sixty millions of the 105 millions of American people. It tells a bigger, more human heart-story than "Humoresque."

Please tell the Exhibitors it will be in all of our branches August 10, available for pre-releases August 21 and released nationally as the first great production with which we open our career as the industry's one genuinely independent distributing company.

There isn't today a director who has the command over pathos that "The Blot" reveals. It is the finest thing Lois Weber has ever done. Only once before in six years have I said the equivalent of this about a picture. The other one grossed over $500,000. "The Blot" will exceed that record, based on its worth and its power. F. B. "I Take the Occasion of Independence Month to Announce the Establishment of the

HODKINSON BACKBONE SERVICE CONTRACT"

Wm. W. Hodkinson.

A Statement by Mr. Hodkinson

"I would be failing in what I conceive to be my duty to the Exhibitors of America, if I permitted Independence Month to pass without sending some message to the motion picture theatre owners of the country — a message not only urging their observance of the spirit of Independence, but a helpful message, in that it opens the way to a ready acceptance of the principle of self-selection.

"To Independence Month, I owe the inspiration for one of the most important announcements I have ever made affecting the distribution of independent pictures. I refer to the establishment of a new service plan which I have perfected, to be known as the

Merit-Tested Productions

"This BACKBONE SERVICE CONTRACT has been developed to meet the urgent needs of the Exhibitor for a steady, dependable supply of merit-tested features. He needs these features more today than ever before in the history of the industry. Only by giving his audiences better pictures and doing it consistently, can the Exhibitor stem the tide now flowing away from his theatre!

Two Big Features Every Month

"Beginning in September (Independence Month) the Hodkinson Corporation will release an average of two pictures a month. Exhibitors who sign a BACKBONE SERVICE CONTRACT will thus be assured, whatever the source of their ordinary supply, of a big feature, measuring up to the highest Hodkinson standard of quality, every fortnight.

Exhibitors' Business Insurance

"I offer the BACKBONE SERVICE as the Exhibitors' business insurance, and I will include in it only such features as my fourteen years' experience as Exhibitor and Distributor justifies me in accepting as box-office winners from every standpoint of public appeal."

Wm. W. Hodkinson.

"I Believe These Fifteen Productions Represent the Highest Type of Motion Picture Features Now Available for the Exhibitors of America"

Wm. W. Hodkinson.

Available for early release, as units of the

Hodkinson Backbone Service

are the fifteen features listed on this page. Every one of these pictures is a Hodkinson-tested feature, independently produced and sold on a merit basis.

They are the very type of productions which even the Producer-Controlled Theatre has been glad to go out and buy in the open market, because of the rapidly failing supply of worthwhile features made under the present factory system.

With a steady supply of first-grade pictures of this scope and pulling-power, the Exhibitor may enter upon his new season's bookings with full confidence that his feature requirements are assured on the only equitable basis possible, the basis of merit-selection.

Ask the nearest Hodkinson Representative to explain the BACKBONE SERVICE CONTRACT in detail.

VOL. XXIV AUGUST 13, 1921 No. VIII

Where's the Slump?

WE print, in this issue, the complete internal revenue receipts—November 1917 to June 1921—(1) from "admissions to theatres and other places of Amusement" and (2) from motion picture films, negative and positive" under provision of the revenue acts of 1917 and 1918.

These are the government war taxes.

The admission Tax is 10%. The film tax is 5% on rental moneys collected — by the distributor.

The figures which we give by months and the totals by years, will merit the close study of exhibitors, producers and distributors. They furnish, in fact, the only barometer we have of trade conditions past and present.

In particular they throw some light upon our so called business slump which was supposed to have set in last winter and just recently passed its low mark.

The Admission Tax figures, DO NOT, as frequently indicated in the trade press, refer only to picture theatres.

Picture Theatres furnish the bulk of this revenue (probably upwards of 75%) but this is a general amusement tax applying also to legitimate and vaudeville theatres, baseball, racing and sports in general, roof gardens, cabarets, carnivals, etc.

The figures are therefore indefinite so far as judging picture theatre receipts are concerned. For instance, baseball cuts a considerable figure during the summer months. This present season, we are told, is an exceptionally good one. Again, during the war, baseball was off, especially with the minor leagues.

And, in a general way, those who go over these figures thoughtfully will find other influences from other quarters.

But at least, when the gross figures are compared, year by year, they must indicate volume of business done and as such they are significant.

The five per cent film tax IS definite, however. It relates only to the film business. It is collected ONLY on rental moneys PAID by the exhibitor to the distributor, and consequently, it is a definite marked index.

Now, let us see, what the figures say.

1918	$47,150,652.48
1919	85,686,170.66
1920	86,889,075.58
1921 (first five months)	37,355,411.88

Note that the receipts for the first five months of this year, January 1st to June 1st—average nearly seven and a half million dollars which, if business were to keep up at this rate, would make the total for 1921 nearly ninety million dollars, or ever ten millions more than the banner years of 1919 and 1920.

Of course business hasn't kept up. The early hot weather ushered in a slump in June and today nearly 30% of the picture theatres of the country are closed. The new government tax reports will tell the situation.

But on the other hand, where is the widely heralded slump of last winter and spring, when production all but ceased, and there were alarming reports of declining theatre patronage here and there.

The figures don't indicate it. On the contrary the first five months of the year are ahead of those of 1920, and away ahead of those of 1919. Certainly no other amusement field, other than pictures, could have made this situation.

Now, let us compare the 5% film rental receipts.

1918	$3,167,051.42
1919	4,614,749.53
1920	5,372,612.61
1921	2,543,527.21

Here again, is shown about the same trend of business, a steady and heavy increase, RIGHT UP TO JUNE 1ST this year. The first five months average business, if the average could be kept up, would give 1921 over six millions, or more than 1920 and 1919.

Note also that the trend in rentals corresponds pretty well with the trend in admission receipts, which would indicate that picture theatre receipts was the determining factor right along in the Amusement Tax receipts—BECAUSE THE 5% RENTAL FIGURES RELATE WHOLLY TO THE FILM BUSINESS.

To sum up, the distributing business and the exhibiting business have had no slump whatever up to June 1, 1921, but on the contrary and unlike any other business in this country have maintained their war prosperity and long after other businesses had all but gone under in the after war depression.

It is high time to brighten up!

It has been said that the picture business has more quitters and pessimists and less excuse for them than any other present field of activity.

Whether the accusation is right or wrong the time has certainly come to right about face—and march forward!

And lest anyone think that this is merely an editor's academic optimism may we remind each and every one in this trade that, first, this editorial is based only on hard figures and secondly that the trade press today is taking a loss as heavy, pro rata as anyone's, and without closing down altogether, growling its head off, or even cutting off any essential expense.

Sensing the Censor

IT is rare, in this or any other trade field that one company does an enterprising act that meets with spontaneous approval from everyone.

That seems to be the case with the decision of the Universal Film Company to take the official censors of this country and Canada to Los Angeles to see and know production by actual contact with it.

The general idea seems to be that the enterprise is not only a happy one for Universal but for the production industry in general—in fact for the entire industry.

It should be productive of great good.

The saying is old and true that strangers naturally distrust and dislike each other.

Much, if not all, of the antagonism of the official censor toward the picture producer has been due to utter lack of knowledge of picture aims and practices—and probably the reverse of the situation is just as true.

We have often advocated that exhibitors could go far with local boards as well as Women's Clubs and like organizations by explaining the commercial fabric and problems of the business—public taste, theatre costs and rentals, the high cost of production and distribution, etc., etc.

We believe that the Universal Company will do well, also, to bring these commercial facts before the visiting censors.

They will not merely want to know how pictures are made but also why they are made and how and why they are handled from the studio on to the theatre. A good dissertation by a practical man of the difficulties and expense attendant upon the whole commercial life of a picture—of the strenuous effort made to the end of even balancing up the ledger will, we believe, be an eye-opener to the official censor.

Give Them the Facts

THE Convention of the American Bankers' Association, in which 20,000 of the 30,000 banks of the country hold membership, will be held in Los Angeles in October of this year. A large representation of the money power of the nation will be gathered there.

The film colony of Los Angeles has a good organization of its own and we have no doubt that the visiting bankers will be made well acquainted with the scope and activities of this producing center of the industry.

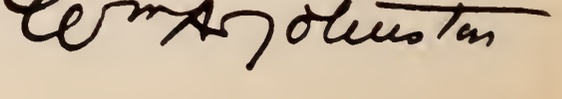
We suggest, however, that the event is important enough to enlist the interest of New York and the National Association.

Also we suggest that the opportunity be made more than a sightseeing trip through the studios and a gala reception affair.

Banking finance is of the utmost importance to this industry today. We need it, and we are, in fact, on the threshold of such a financial era.

On the other hand bankers will ask questions and want facts and figures. They will want to know about the motion picture business, not merely see its stars and studios.

Why not have a booklet prepared for distribution at this time which will answer definitely the questions that will be asked, and which many banks are now asking, and why not have this booklet prepared by a committee of executives able to give facts and give them authoritatively for the entire industry?



Proposed Film Tariff Raises Lively Arguments

George Eastman Denies Company Seeks Protection in Order to Raise Prices

NO question seems to be agitating the industry at present as is the proposed tariff on foreign-made film raw stock. No sooner had the Fordney bill, proposing a 20 or 30 per cent ad valorem duty on raw stock been made known in Congress than the pros and cons began to make their arguments known in vigorous, emphatic manner. The press of the country, notably the Hearst papers, have expressed their disapproval of the tariff; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at their recent convention, after condemning "the attempt to exclude foreign films," have been active in circularizing Congress, pointing out their opposition to the raw stock tax; while the Eastman Kodak Co. and the Bay State Film Co., manufacturers of raw stock, have answered pro-tariff editorials with lively arguments as to why a 20 or 30 per cent tax on importations was essential to their well-being and existence.

Editorials in the New York American and The New York Evening Journal of July 22nd started the argumentative ball a-rolling. The Journal stated bluntly that the proposed tax was "for the sole benefit of the Eastman Kodak monopoly." Continuing the paper states: "The word monopoly, with respect to the Eastman Kodak Co., is advisedly used. It is a monopoly and has been denounced by the courts. Not only have its profits been enormous under the duty-free importation of this raw material, but it has been able practically to maintain its monopoly in the United States and to sell in the rest of the world against European competition millions of its products."

The paper states that the Eastman Co. desires tariff protection in order to increase the price of this raw material, and secondly that it wants to destroy the independent makers of these raw films.

George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Co., answers this editorial personally in a letter to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "I desire to say as emphatically as possible," writes Mr. Eastman, "that this company has no intention, if a duty is placed on films, of advancing its price of motion picture film and no desire to do so. There can be no better evidence of our policy in this respect than our action during the Great War. From Fall of 1914 to the Fall of 1918, or even later, practically all foreign-made motion picture film was kept out of the American market. No possible tariff could equal the embargo of the war conditions. Yet during that period this company not only did not advance the price of motion picture film to American consumers but actually reduced it five per cent.

"Neither is it true that foreign producers of motion picture film could not compete with this company at its present prices under the tariff imposed by the so-called Fordney bill. The latest figures at hand show that the largest manufacturer of motion picture film in Germany, which is a part of the German Chemical & Dye Trust, can pay the duty imposed by the Fordney bill, and easily compete with this company at its present prices. And this they will undoubtedly do, but, if film were left upon the free list, they would very largely take the manufacture of motion picture film to Germany.

"The object of the tariff imposed, therefore, is strictly in line with the protection of an important American industry, and at the same time the rate imposed is not prohibitive and therefore will be a very important revenue producer."

The Bay State Film Co., in favor of the raw stock tariff, argues that while the Eastman Kodak Co. has manufactured the greater amount of film to date, there are three other American manufacturers of raw stock. "There are two ways of breaking down this 'monopoly,'" states this company. "Either permit foreign

"Way Down East" Ready for Release to Exhibitors

D. W. GRIFFITH has decided to distribute "'Way Down East" to the motion picture theatres through the United Artists Corporation. This action was taken, Mr. Griffith explains, because he felt that present conditions persuade any producer to tax a troubled public as lightly as possible for his product. "We feel," states Mr. Griffith, "that by charging one dollar for the best seats we are making a major reduction. We shall insist that the same standard of exhibition be maintained.

Last year the gross takings of "'Way Down East" amounted to $4,225,726.20.

Allen Houses, in Toronto, Are Consolidated

Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen, Toronto, have carried out a merger of Allen theatre interests in Toronto by means of which the nine local Allen theatres have been consolidated, according to announcement made by J. J. Allen, vice-president of the consolidation which will be known as Allen's Toronto Theatres, Ltd. The new company has been incorporated with an Ontario Provincial charter with a capitalization of $4,000,000. One quarter of this capital is in preferred shares with a par value of $100. The common stock also has a par value of $100.

The purpose of the merger is to reduce administration expenses for the nine local theatres and it will also have the effect of improving the market position of local Allen securities, it is stated.

Wm. Fox Protests Tariff on Foreign Pictures

The Fox Film Corporation, announces William Fox in a statement recently issued, in its efforts to allow the free importation of foreign made pictures, has presented, through Saul E. Rogers, its general counsel, a petition and brief to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, requesting that no additional tariff be placed on foreign film productions. Mr. Fox believes that the American market should be thrown open to the art of the world, and that the American public should have the best motion picture production from all countries.

Universal Sales Manager Addresses A.M.P.A.

Harry Berman, general sales manager for Universal, was the speaker at a luncheon of the Motion Picture Advertisers' Association in New York on July 28. Mr. Berman stated that the business had reached its lowest ebb, and that in August there would be more theatres opening and operating than the most optimistic reports have led to believe. Speaking of "Foolish Wives," the Eric Von Stroheim production, Mr. Berman said that the picture had already cost Universal $1,200,000.

Universal to Have No Part in Motion Picture Day

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. will have no part in the proposed Motion Picture Day, according to an announcement from R. H. Cochrane, vice president of the company, and executive head in the absence of Carl Laemmle. Mr. Cochrane states that neither the exhibitor or distributor are sufficiently prosperous at present to give up one day's receipts for the Motion Picture Day Fund. He also believes that the large sum collected would result in adverse legislation being introduced in many states by crooked politicians who would expect to be "bought off" by money from the national fund.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., Announce New Theatres

Within the past week officials of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., have announced a trio of important theatrical expansions in their Southern California territory.

A 2,000-seat house will be erected at San Pedro, Los Angeles' harbor city, at Seventh and Beacon streets. The building involves an expenditure of $500,000. In Ocean Park, the concrete dance hall known as the "Dome" has been acquired by this company and will be transformed into a 1,400-seat cinema palace. A new neighborhood theatre will also be erected at 60th street and Moneta avenue in Los Angeles. It will seat 1,100.

Kansas City Orchestras Refuse Wage Cut

Kansas City downtown houses were without orchestras this week, as the result of the rejection of the exhibitors' terms by the musicians. The musicians' contracts expired on August 1, and a 20 percent reduction in the wage scale, a six-hour day instead of five and a half, and a nine months' contract instead of twelve, were rejected by them.

Australasian Film Issues Folder

The Australasian Films, Ltd., distributors of the Simplex Products in Australia, the headquarters of which are located in Sydney, have recently compiled for distribution throughout Australia, a neat twenty-four page two-colored folder which contains a number of suggestions that could be used to advantage by the American distributors of projection equipment, when compiling advertising matter, which appeals to the inexperienced prospect.

The cover contains a reprint of a recent Simplex ad of an architect in an idealistic way, meditating upon his work while visualizing a new theatre which he is planning, and which he intends should be the "last word" in modern theatres.

The second page is devoted to questions about the conditions under which the prospect desires to show motion pictures and are answered on the same page so that the prospect can place his order for just the equipment he will need without a lot of useless correspondence. For a complete description of the equipment recommended, the prospect is told in the answers to refer to certain pages in the folder which describe the equipment in detail.

On the inside of the back cover page will be found a plan showing the proper place for installing a projection room either in the rear of the balcony or on the main floor.

Sunday - Closing Ordinance Ruled Unconstitutional

After months of bitter court wrangles stretching over a period of weeks, including the municipal election in Pomona, Cal., when the Blue Law advocates by a majority of 49 votes closed the theatres of the Gore Bros.-Ramish & Sol Lesser combine, the attorneys of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., Schweitzer and Hutton, put the finishing touches to the ordinance when granted an injunction by Judge Burnell, of Los Angeles, who declared the ordinance was unconstitutional on the ground that it was discriminatory.

Allied Laboratories Ass'n Stand by Its Guns

THE ALLIED LABORATORIES ASSOCIATION, INC., of New York, have issued a statement in which they deny that false rumors have been circulated by its members concerning Jules Brulatour, of Eastman Kodak Company.

"Several months ago," reads the statement, "Mr. Brulatour stated before members of the Laboratory Division of the N. A. M. P. I. that he had nothing to do with the control or management of the G. M., San Jac and Paragon Laboratories. Mr. Eastman advised us that he was not interested in these laboratories and that Brulatour had advised him many times that he had nothing to do with their control or management.

"Later we had the situation thoroughly investigated with the result that we were convinced beyond reasonable doubt that Brulatour controlled and managed the G. M., San Jac and Paragon Laboratories and we so charged in our brief to the M. P. T. O. A., at their Minneapolis convention and that we were ready to furnish proof."

Film Company with Arctic Expedition

Rare views of the frozen North as well as a photoplay of dramatic interest with the ice-bound Arctic serving as a background are promised as a result of a film enterprise already launched by a Danish corporation, known as the Aktieselskabet Fotorama, with headquarters in Copenhagen. Schnedler-Sorenson, of the Copenhagen film corporation, is accompanying the expeditionary forces of the famous Danish explorer, Knud Rasmussen. The Danish actor, Carl Hillebrandt, is also a member of the filming company with the Arctic explorers.

The itinerary of the expedition includes the exploration of Greenland, Davisland, and the Arctic regions of North Canada. It is expected that the Danish party will reach New York about November 1st before returning to Copenhagen.

N. Y. Censors Explain Method of Labeling Film

Pending the delay in promulgating rules and regulations governing the New York State Motion Picture Commission, the attention of the industry in New York is called to the fact that after being given a serial number, such number must be made a permanent part of the principal title portion of the corresponding film and every copy thereof for which a permit or license is applied, in such style and substance as the Commission shall prescribe.

Following the main title the producer must insert the word "License" to be followed by the serial number, or, in the case of a permit, the word "Permit," followed by the number.

Coast Producers Planning Reception for Censors

IRVING THALBERG, Universal's West Coast manager, is making arrangements for the entertainment of the censors who are due to arrive in Los Angeles on August 15, as guests of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, in order to learn how motion pictures are made. According to wires from the Coast co-operation will be extended by all of the West Coast producers. The party will be entertained at the Beverley Hills Hotel.

The censors will leave Chicago by special train on August 10, accompanied by Harry Berman, Universal's general sales manager. Delegates from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Toronto, Vancouver, Kansas City and Kansas, numbering fifteen, have already accepted the invitation of Universal.

Universal Announces Release Plan for "Foolish Wives"

To Go Direct to Exhibitors Following Big City Runs

IN deference to a flood of inquiries from exhibitors from all sections of the United States asking how "Foolish Wives" is to be released, and when and how they will get it, Universal, through R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, has made the following important statement. Although the picture itself is not entirely ready and the date of its release not definitely set, Mr. Cochrane feels that it is high time to let the exhibitors know just how Universal is going to release the greatest production it has ever made.

"Hundreds of people," said Mr. Cochrane, "have asked me how we ever expect to make a profit, or even to get our money back, on a production in which we will sink a million and three quarters of dollars before we get back a nickel. Some of these people thought that Universal was crazy to put more money into a production than anyone ever did before in the history of the business: some of them could not see and cannot yet see how we got the money to put into it at a time when many other companies were cutting down or temporarily discontinuing production altogether. But we had the money. We did not have to go out and get it. And every bit of it will show in the film when 'Foolish Wives' is released.

"How are we going to get $1,750,000 out of 'Foolish Wives'? There is no doubt in the world that it could easily be done by playing it in the legitimate houses of the country for long runs. With the high cost of routing traveling companies the big theatres out of New York are hungry for big attractions like "Foolish Wives." But there are several good and sufficient reasons why Universal is not going to get its money out of the production in this way, though several very tempting offers have been made to us looking to such a form of release.

"In the first place, we are not in the theatrical business. We have no desire to get into it. It would be inevitable under this plan. We are in the moving picture business and we are going to stay in it.

"In the second place, this plan would place 'Foolish Wives' entirely out of the reach of exhibitors of moving pictures, possibly for years. This is the furthest thing from our intention. We would not feel that we had kept the faith if we ever consented to do such a thing. 'Foolish Wives' was made for moving pictures and we feel that it will prove the best picture ever made for moving picture audiences.

"In the third place, this plan would virtually make us exhibitors ourselves and place us in competition with the very people to whom we wish to sell our product. We have steadfastly refused to become exhibitors except for exploitation purposes, even in the face of severe provocation from competitors and the lack of support in quarters where it would have been most natural to expect it.

"Universal's success in this business has been due to its recognition of several basic principles. One of them is that if exhibitors are not making money, we are not making money. And conversely, if we give exhibitors the productions and the exploitation material with which they can make money, we make money, too. We can't for the life of us figure any way to make money on 'Foolish Wives' or any other picture unless the exhibitors make money also. We have always followed out that principle and we are still going to follow it or bust.

"We have a wonderful exploitation proposition in 'Foolish Wives,' better than we have ever had before in any of our memorable successes. And there is scarcely a person in the business or out of it who does not know that there is a tremendous production coming by that name. The sincere flattery of imitation has been accorded to the 'Foolish Wives' title in a measure never approached before. But even with a full year of advertising, unprecedented expenditure, marvelous cast and story, audacious reconstruction of Monte Carlo, the magic of the von Stroheim name and reputation for success, exhibitors tell us that such a production requires the prestige of big-city runs.

"We have decided, therefore, to exploit 'Foolish Wives' in several of the larger cities of the United States, and in them only. Then we will turn it over immediately to exhibitors. We feel and have been assured that this will be the most acceptable method of delivering one thousand per cent of money-making picture to exhibitors.

"I cannot put it too strongly that we are not interested in this exploitation for the money we may make out of it. We are not concerned about that in the least. Even if it were necessary to lose money in some instances for the necessary exploitation we will be ready to make the sacrifice. If we can exploit the picture widely enough and cleverly enough to make it of the utmost interest to exhibitors and thereby make it possible for them to make money, a whole lot of money, we will be perfectly satisfied.

"In order to do this, we are now making plans to play it in the finest legitimate or moving pictures theatres of such cities as New York, Chicago, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle. But our arrangements are being made in such a way that in case any exhibitor in one of these cities makes us a proposition attractive enough to fulfill our object and give sufficient number of weeks' exploitation to the picture in the territory, we will be only too happy to cancel our arrangements and meet him half way.

"Erich von Stroheim has been working twenty hours a day with a corps of assistants to cut the negative to the required length and it will be ready to show to the combined censor boards of the country on August 13. Any suggestion they have to make will be embodied in the picture before it leaves the studio. At the same time the exploitation department is working just diligently on exploitation material, and Universal exploitation is one of the by-words of the trade. Nothing is being spared to give the most costly and elaborate picture ever produced the most appropriate and effective advertising accompaniment which can be devised. It is our sincere belief that exhibitors will be able to retrieve some of the losses they may have sustained this summer with the money they will make on 'Foolish Wives'."

Rialto, Boise to Open

The Motion Picture Theatre Company of Salt Lake has now invaded the Boise, Idaho, section, and will open the Rialto in that city on September 1. R. W. Cort, who has been with the Majestic Amusement Company, will be the manager. After taking a five-year lease on the old Isis theatre building the Salt Lake company planned the remodeling at a cost of $18,000. A $10,000 Wurlitzer organ will be installed. The seating capacity is 500.

Censors from all parts of the United States and Canada where official censorship exists will gather in Chicago August 8th, 9th and 10th preparatory to making a trip to Universal City, California, as guests of Universal Film Co. The Chicago headquarters of the censors and the Universal officials, headed by Harry Berman, who will accompany them to the coast will be the Blackstone Hotel and while in Chicago the visitors will be given an opportunity to see some of the leading picture theatres and the city's principal points of interest. It is the hope of Mr. Laemmle and Universal officials that the trip will bring about a better understanding between the censors and all producers and that the personal contact will convince the men who pass on the pictures that people connected with the motion picture industry do not all have horns or cloven hoofs.

Charles Goetz has arrived from New York and taken charge of Associated Producers local exchange, the position of manager having been made vacant by the recent resignation of Ben Beadell, Mr. Beadell is expected to announce his new connection within a few days.

"Headin' Home," the Babe Ruth feature released in this territory by Greiver Productions has been booked into Barbee's Loop theatre, opening August 14, and is the first of thirty feature pictures which the Greiver organization will release during the fall and winter, according to Si Greiver, who in common with many of the film row colony looks for the return of good business at a very early date.

Manager Henry W. Peters of Pioneer has made a rapid recovery following the operation which he recently underwent and was scheduled to be back at his desk this week.

Director Emmett Flynn stopped off for a few hours enroute to the west coast after a visit at the Fox headquarters in New York. He stated that he would get work started on a new production immediately on his arrival in California and that while he could not reveal details that it would be even a bigger production than A Connecticut Yankee which has been one one of the sensations of the year.

Robert Lucas, now associated with the Harry Grampp interests, has opened offices at 1503 Mallers Building, which will be Grampp's local headquarters. Harry Grampp operates sixteen theatres and it is understood that plans have been made to add several important houses to his string at an early date. One of Mr. Lucas' duties will be to book pictures for all the houses and also take care of the purchasing department.

Manager Clyde Eckhart called in all his salesman for a convention at Fox Chicago headquarters this week at which the fall sales campaign was outlined. Mr. Eckhart is enthusiastic over the outlook for fall business and states that practically all the Chicago and Milwaukee first runs already have been set. He states that he is much gratified over the interest shown by exhibitors in Fox week, September 11 to 17, and that numerous pledges to use only Fox releases during that period have been made by exhibitors. After studying conditions carefully Mr. Eckhart is convinced that all that is needed to get the public in the "Movie" habit again is some moderate weather and big pictures and is assured that the exhibitors and producers both will have a prosperous fall and winter season.

Rothacker produced practical pictures are playing an important part on the film program of Chicago's pageant of progress. A number of educational pictures made for the Bureau of mines are being shown daily and industrial subjects made as long as two years ago are being screened by Illinois manufacturers. Five films were produced specially for the pageant, they were directed by E. O. Blackburn, Jawn Freese, Harry Brown, Tiry Miller, William Abbe and Verne Blakely.

Arthur Schoenstadt and Carl Newhouse are vacationing in the west and expect to be joined at Billings, Montana, by J. D. Silberman. The trio expect to view the Grand Canyon and the Yellow Stone Park, as well as several other points of interest before returning to Chicago.

Charles Rogers, general manager of Robertson Cole was a Chicago visitor this week and before he returns to New York it is expected that he will appoint a manager for the Chicago branch of Robertson Cole to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Robert Lucas.

The big Fox feature "Over the Hill" will open at the Woods theatre on September 3d for an indefinite run and will be followed by other Fox specials, the theatre having been leased by the Fox interests for a period of thirty-two weeks. George K. Robinson will have charge of the house and Lloyd Lewis well known Chicago publicity man will have charge of the publicity and exploitation work. The schedule of admission prices will be from fifty cents to two dollars.

Harry Berman of Universal has returned to New York after a brief visit at Universal's Chicago headquarters. He is scheduled to return here on August 9 on his way to Universal City, California.

D. M. Vandawalker, who recently sold his interest in the Doll-Van Film Co. to Jack Graumont has been appointed special representative of the Fox Film Corporation with headquarters in Chicago and will sell the Fox "big specials" in the large cities of the central west. Mr. Vandawalker has a wide acquaintance and many friends in this territory, having been connected with the industry for several years through the Doll-Van Film Co. of Indianapolis and other concerns.

Publicity Director Walter L. Hill of Universal brings back encouraging reports from Indiana where he made a trip last week in company with District Manager Stern. Mr. Hill states that where the exhibitors are live wires and are offering the public good entertainment business is good and that the outlook for fall bookings is excellent.

Morris Hellman is remodeling his Erie theatre and installing a fine new canopy, new seats, battleship linoleum as a floor covering and numerous other improvements. The work is being done by a large crew of men which gets on the job at eleven o'clock at night and works right through until noon next day, laying off just in time to open the house for its first regular performance. The night work while more costly enables Mr. Hellman to keep his house in operation, which he was determined to do, business this summer showing to date a 25 per cent. increase over that of one year ago. Asked how he increased his business when many exhibitors were complaining of poor attendance Mr. Hellman stated that he did not lay down when general conditions showed signs of a slump but started to fight for patronage, booked in big pictures, largely increased his advertising among other things sending out 20,000 pluggers instead of from three to four thousand as formerly, and using every available means of exploiting the pictures and the Erie.

Charles Donald Fox, widely known publicity, advertising and exploitation expert, has removed his headquarters from New York to Chicago and is located at 64 East Jackson Boulevard in the offices of the Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of which he is director of publicity. Mr. Fox has been closely associated with the motion picture industry for years and in addition to the Synchronized Scenario Music Company's work will continue to look after the publicity and advertising for certain of his old New York and California clients.

"The Golem" has been booked to open at Orchestra Hall on August 14th and will be given an elaborate presentation and musical accompaniment by a symphony orchestr

Chicago as Distributing Center Urged

CHICAGO'S advantages as a film distributing center are emphasized in publicity material of the Chicago Boosters Club. Watterson R. Rothacker is the motion picture representative on the club's advisory council.

This publicity contains a reminder that 50,000,000 people live within one night's ride of the Windy City. This means that a photoplay printed in a Chicago laboratory by quitting time of one day could be viewed at the next day's matinee by nearly one-half of the American fans.

The publicity goes on to point out that the selection of a Chicago laboratory is delivery insurance. The producer who sends a negative to a Chicago plant is providing an exhibitor with insurance on the arrival of his program during abnormal times.

Should there be a railroad strike, the releases could be shipped by truck from Chicago to the exchange cities, and from those points distributed by auto.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Idol of the North—

Satisfied good houses for full week. (West.)

Good average picture. It drew fairly good business, considering very warm season when so many of this section find it convenient to be out of the city on the Gulf beaches. Dorothy Dalton has unusually good reputation with our fans, anyhow. (South.)

Life—

Fine business to satisfied audiences. (West.)

Not such an exceptionally strong picture, but it has a "snappy" title which attracted the public. A good week's run. (Middle West.)

Drew good business in hot weather. (Middle West.)

The Woman God Changed—

Did very well at the box office and satisfied. (West.)

We are having too many productions on this same subject—why not a change. An average week's attendance. (Middle West.)

The Love Special—

With Wallace Reid showing up to good advantage, "The Love Special" left good impression. Good drawing card and attendance was quite up to the summer standard, despite the heat. (South.)

City of Silent Men—

Nothing extraordinary. Business was somewhat below normal, but in justice to Thomas Meighan, should be borne in mind that weather has been extremely inclement. (South.)

The Traveling Salesman—

Excellent comedy. Arbuckle and the salesman role fit each other nicely. Drew big. (Middle West.)

Wealth—

Audiences liked this picture. Did fair business. (East.)

Behind Masks—

Sham—

Just a fair picture that drew average business. (West.)

White and Unmarried—

Not as good as other Meighan pictures. Business was fair. (West.)

Crazy to Marry—

Best picture Arbuckle has ever made. One long laugh from start to finish. House in an uproar all the time. Excellent business.

FIRST NATIONAL

Wedding Bells—

Average feature to usual business. (Middle West.)

Playthings of Destiny—

A good production which proved to be a good drawing card, doing a brisk week's business. (Middle West.)

Splendid picture. Big houses at every performance.

The Girl in a Taxi—

Extra big in every way for us. (Middle West.)

The Golden Snare—

Not up to usual Curwood standard. Business not as good as it should have been for people like Curwood productions here. (Middle West.)

Book for week, played three days. Business terrible. Picture not so bad. (South.)

The Sky Pilot—

Very satisfactory. Comment all good. Very enthusiastic in cases. (Middle West.)

Not Guilty—

"Just fair. The atmosphere was well maintained, and this pleased. Business, fair." (South.)

Trust Your Wife—

A splendid picture and a good business getter. Our patrons enjoyed "Trust Your Wife" very much and it was a good business getter. Katherine MacDonald scored another decided hit. (South.)

Love's Penalty—

Poor picture and did very mediocre business. (East.)

The Great Adventure—

Good picture and went over big. (East.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

The Ten Dollar Raise—

Good business and pleased audiences for two week's run. (West.)

"Tiresome, long-drawn out, with many discrepancies. Just cleared expenses." (South.)

Foolish Matrons—

"Business good on this, and picture held up well." (South.)

I Am Guilty—

Our audiences called this picture and the attendance was satisfactory. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Fighting Lover—

Only a fair picture. Business the same. (West.)

Went over fairly well with business so so. (West.)

Luring Lips—

Fairly good story, but why the title? There is no connection between the two. (Middle West.)

Man Trackers—

Fine—fine business. Everybody liked it.

GOLDWYN

An Unwilling Hero—

Fair picture. Played to full houses.

Song of the Soul—

First class in every respect, and a good box office attraction. Fritz Leiber is excellent as the male lead, and Vivian Martin does well. (Middle West.)

Just Out of College—

Fairly amusing in spots, but nothing to get excited over. (Middle West.)

Bunty Pulls the Strings—

One of the most delightful comedies seen here in a long while. Leatrice Joy is excellent as Bunty, and the remainder of the cast is very capable. (Middle West.)

METRO

Life's Darn Funny—

"Viola Dana would draw anywhere, in anything—but this picture is far and away below her standard. Her name drew and business was good—but many expressed disappointment." (South.)

Uncharted Seas—

Very good picture. Had the biggest Sunday of the summer and holding up exceptionally well. (East.)

The Misleading Lady—

A fair picture, nothing out of the ordinary, yet it proved as good as the average and did a fair business. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Among Those Present—

Not the best comedy Lloyd has put out, but it stands head and shoulders over the average run of comedies. Fine summer box office attraction.

What Women Will Do—

Patrons did not like objectionable features, picture somewhat entertaining, attendance fair. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Carnival—

Rather disappointing but did fairly good business. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

The Scarab Ring—

Ordinary mystery story. Played to fair houses.

EDUCATIONAL

The Trail of the North—

Reminiscent of the old days of melodrama. Acting is good, but the story is awful. Stringing this out another reel might have helped some; as it is, there is too much compression. (Middle West.)

REALART

Such a Little Queen—

"Terrible. Sugary, impossible stuff, done to death. Business was very bad." (South.)

The March Hare—

Don't Call Me Little Girl—

A production which was popular with patrons and did a good business all week. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Divorce of Convenience—

Not up to the mark. Did what is known as "summer business,"—meaning many empty seats during the week. (East.)

Is Life Worth Living—

ROBERTSON-COLE

Salvage—

A poor melodrama which is saved by Pauline Frederick's acting. The old double role shows up once more. Picture holds interest, but is not much for the summer months. (Middle West.)

Black Roses—

Very good. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Kazan—

"Business was just fair on this, though the picture is a good one." (South.)

Taxicab Aids Circle Theatre

Indianapolis Exploitation of "The Girl in the Taxi" Is Novel and Effective

The Circle theatre, Indianapolis, which uses only the most dignified of advertising and exploitation methods, tried some additional outdoor exploitation with "The Girl in the Taxi," and it achieved results, despite the fact that the mercury was making a desperate attempt to jump out of the top of the tube.

In the first place the Yellow Cab Company, which operates more than thirty taxi-cabs in Indianapolis, co-operated in every possible way.

A card was placed in every cab, reading: "Watch for the Girl in the Taxi."

It was fixed so that it could be seen both from the inside of the cab and from the street, giving service two-fold. Another cab was used, which was decorated with balloons and bunting so that it would attract attention.

A girl was dressed in a startling dress and carried a walking stick with a small birdcage on top, in which was housed a canary. The girl also wore a mask. She would walk through the business parts of the city and as soon as she attracted enough attention, the taxi, all decorated, would draw up and she would step in and pull the curtains down on which were printed "I am the Girl in the Taxi," at the Circle.

The machine and the girl were kept on the streets continually throughout the week and it is certain that there are few people in Indianapolis who did not see them.

This is one stunt that can be worked in any town, no matter how large or how small—and it will get results.

The taxi-cabs cost nothing in Indianapolis, although, out of courtesy, a small advertisement was placed in the Circle News, a house organ, for them. In addition the Circle backed up their campaign with 300 one sheets, 200 window cards, newspaper advertising, newspaper publicity and several window displays, which are worked each week.

As a result of the cooperation with the taxi company the Circle hereafter will be allowed to place a card in every machine each week—which is well worth while when one considers that it costs nothing and reaches more than 8,000 persons weekly.

Newman Does Things for "Too Much Speed"

Big splashes of advertising and a "revue de luxe" packed the Newman theatre, Kansas City, for the celebration of its second anniversary.

"Too Much Speed" was the feature. The revue was a special number with twenty musical comedy stars appearing, among which was Roland Grimes.

Three "Monks" Used in Lobby Ballyhoo

Three live monkeys chained to the tops of palm trees transplanted for a half week to the lobby of the Victoria theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., proved to be effective exploitation for the first episode of "The Son of Tarzan."

S. R. Filson, the Victoria house manager, borrowed the monkeys from a horse dealer who had just acquired them from a traveling carnival that went to smash.

On the Saturday prior to the opening of the serial, the monkeys were placed on the top of a wagon, liberally plastered with placards announcing the coming of "The Son of Tarzan." The wagon paraded the central business streets, and later stood in front of the theatre where large crowds gathered to see the monks. Later, when the monkeys were transferred to the palm tree tops in the theatre lobby, they were chained securely and far enough away from the crowds to prevent their annoying or being annoyed by the theatre patrons. Mr. Filson says it is one of the best advertising stunts he has pulled at the Victoria.

Prescription Blank Herald Advertises "Sick Abed"

A regular druggist's prescription blank on which was printed "Patients name—'Wally Reid'—Address—'Sick Abed' (prescription) Tincture of romance—3 parts, Essence of romance—2 parts, Spirits of youth, 3 parts, dissolve with two quack doctors and a jealous wife; the forest of Arden; a rainstorm and a roadhouse; the law, a detective, a saxophone and a beautiful nurse before, after during and between meals. Bottle it all up and shake well with laughter; office address—'Bebe Daniels' Kozy Theatre," was used by Manager L. W. McCuan to exploit the above mentioned picture when it played his theatre.

Female Impersonator Assists Manager Bennet

Stanley Representative Accompanies Touring Elks

While the Philadelphia Elks, numbering five hundred and more, are making their trip across the continent to California for the National Convention of that order, the city of Philadelphia and the Stanley theatre will be well advertised. The Elks started July 4th and with them went a representative of the Stanley Co. of America, whose purpose is to boost the fair name of the city, and also put in a word or two for the Stanley theatre.

The Elks will be gone twenty-nine days and in every hamlet, town or city through which they pass the Stanley representative, garbed as a Quaker will distribute pamphlets extolling the many virtues of Philadelphia as a place to visit and especially during the big exposition which will be held here in 1926 and at the same time a pretty card bearing the caption, "A visit to Philadelphia is incomplete without a visit to the Stanley theatre," will be given to everyone.

When the Elks arrive at the convention city, this method of boosting will be continued with redoubled efforts and the same plan will be followed on the homeward journey. By this means it is expected that practically every state in the Union will be reached by the cards boosting the city and the Stanley theatre, a unique and most effective advertising stunt.

Waco Theatre Minimizes Heat with Lobby Display

Abe Levey, manager of the Strand theatre, Waco, Texas, watched the thermometer jazzing upward just prior to his showing of "The Rider of the King Log," with misgivings.

If he let the picture ride he knew what would happen. "The Rider of the King Log" would go down to defeat before King Hot Weather.

Thus it was that an extra big exploitation campaign was inaugurated. Mr. Levey sent out a float, which, in an artistic fashion, informed the public that "The Rider of the King Log" had been filmed when the thermometer was below zero and that the temperature inside his theatre was not much higher above it.

Many a heat-ridden Texan mopped his streaming brow when reading this bold assertion and decided to play Missourian.

The lobby of the Strand theatre looked inviting enough. By means of glue and artificial snow it had been transformed into a very natural landscape, with gigantic logs and artificial icicles and specially decorated one-three and six-sheet posters. But the most attractive item in the lobby was the huge cakes of ice, behind which electric fans had been placed and which it was inferred cooled the lobby so very considerably that people crowded it constantly. And, wherever the eye looked it beheld posters which informed the reader that the temperature inside the theatre was just as cool.

"County Fair" Exploitation Still in Vogue

Paper with stripes painted to resemble walls formed a background for the lobby display consisting of corn stalks, tomatoes, peaches and watermelons arranged in a novel way.

Two wholesale houses loaned the sacked bran, flour, etc., and also ran ads announcing the display in the lobby of the theatre.

Albany Strand Plays American Legion Benefit

Manager Uly S. Hill, of the Mark Strand theatre, Albany, N. Y., effected a tie-up with the American Legion, whereby the Legion received a percentage of the receipts in return for aiding in the advertising of "The Woman in His House" and "The Jack Knife Man," which were being shown at the Strand.

The Legion caused special readers to be inserted in the daily papers, posters displayed in the various stores and also personally urged their relatives and friends to attend the showing. In addition to this David Lithgow painted an art prologue entitled, "Zero Hour in No Man's Land."

Goldman Makes His Own Fight Pictures

Initiative on the part of the exhibitor which occasionally takes him off the beaten path is one of the prime requisities of successful showmanship, according to William Goldman, director of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis. And it was in following out this theory that the Missouri offered the citizens of this city one of the most clever and original bits of variety immediately following the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

To show the actual pictures taken of the battle was an impossibility in view of the interstate commerce regulations, so Goldman conceived an idea which would permit his audiences to see the next best thing.

Accordingly he made special arrangements with photographers, to supply him immediately after the fight with as many photographs which they might take during the action. He then arranged to procure as many scenes contained in the various weekly strips as were shown that week of the preparations for the fight.

With these and with movies taken of the stills coupled with artistic wordings, Goldman was enabled to offer his patrons one of the best fight movies shown outside of Jersey State. Much credit is due the staff movie photographer of the Missouri and the Missouri art department. Goldman also shows each week several hundred feet of film concerning local events. These are regular features.

Philadelphia "Too Much Speed" Campaign Continues

A "Too Much Speed" accident traffic division has been established by the Philadelphia Police Department as a result of the "Too Much Speed" campaign which the Keystone Automobile Club has been conducting all month in conjunction with the picture.

The tie-up, engineered by Eli M. Orowitz, the Paramount exploiteer, has reached unexpected proportions. The several street car companies of Philadelphia have fallen in line and every car has the warning hand pasted on the front window. This is the first time the street railway companies have ever co-operated with a theatre.

The Automobile Club has been so pleased with the campaign that they have prolonged it for another month—July.

Novelty Cards Used to Advertise "Dream Street"

Two of the Colonial's recent novelties have been forwarded for our inspection.

One is a card about two inches square on which was printed, "Wanted—500 of the prettiest girls in Phoenixville to attend the opening of 'The Charm School,' at the Colonial Theatre," etc.

The other is made out in the form of a physician's prescription blank on which was the announcement of the engagement of "Dream Street" for July 4 and 5.

Part of the "prescription" read: "Dose —see it either Monday or Tuesday, July 4 or 5."

Johnson Holds Children's Matinee for Coogan Picture

A special children's day was the tribute to the kiddies during the run of "Peck's Bad Boy" at the Luna theatre, Lafayette, Ind.

The little inmates of three orphan homes were Manager Herbert H. Johnson's guests for the first matinee on the opening day. At later shows a special reduced price was made for the children and many extra treats furnished.

Each little boy and girl upon entering the theatre was handed an ice cream cone and soon after they were met by little urchins, bare-footed and clad in picturesque overalls, who escorted them to their seats. Then just before the screening of the film a local school teacher stepped upon the stage and introduced the picture with an interesting little story about "Peck's Bad Boy." As she completed her narrative, the picture came into view and her story blended magnificently with the pantomime until she quietly stepped aside leaving the children enthralled in antics of the "bad boy" himself.

Fully three thousand children were entertained during the afternoon and after the conclusion of each performance, the little guests found trucks and automobiles awaiting them and were hauled to the city park where a fine picnic supper was served them and where they had the time of their lives on the slides, merry-go-rounds and other toy contrivances placed in the park for childish diversion.

Insomuch as Manager Johnson entertained the orphans free of charge, he received splendid co-operation from Sunday school and other women's societies in the city, who acted as patrons for the event and contributed much toward the picnic lunch and in providing conveyances for the kiddies.

Before being taken home, each kiddie was presented with a toy balloon.

G. A. R. Veterans and their wives and daughters who attended a special showing of "Held by the Enemy" at the Majestic Gardens theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., and aided managing director W. Griffith Mitchell grab off a lot of free publicity in the newspapers

"Road Demon" Stunt Gets 'Frisco's Attention

Considerable publicity was attracted to the showing of "The Road Demon" at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, recently through the use of a world famous racing car and a small "bug." There was a special invitation opening matinee to a boys' orphanage whose band played in front of the theatre, carrying a banner reading: "We are going to see Tom Mix at the Strand."

Manager Frank R. Neuman of the Strand, was "arrested" for starting the racing car in front of the theatre preparing to race Merwyn W. Jackson, the Strand's publicity man, in the baby auto, and charged with violation of "Ordinance title B9,999,999½."

A large crowd had collected and the Fox News incorporated the scene in its weekly. Banners were attached to the racing cars which were driven at regular intervals about the busiest section of the city with exhausts wide open. For this, of course, a special police sanction was necessary. The whole thing only cost about $35, according to Jackson who engineered the plan and the theatre played to a record business throughout the week.

Minneapolis Bakers Help Advertise "Mother O' Mine"

An advertising campaign to popularize a new brand of bread at first blush does not offer much of an opportunity to exploit a dramatic production. It might be utilized, if the situation was not analyzed, by a pie throwing slapstick comedy advertisement, if the bakery could be convinced that it would do their business any good.

The advertising department of the Blue Mouse theatre in Minneapolis, however, never passes up anything as impossible. The Federal Baking Co. operates seven stores there and is a great advertiser. When the theatre booked "Mother O' Mine," the advertising department developed the idea that the title of the picture would be a mighty fine trade name for a loaf of nice light home-made bread. The bakery company agreed.

As a result the bakery company announced through extensive advertising mediums the creation of a new bread under the title of "Mother O' Mine Buttercrust Bread," and began the sale of it the same day that the feature opened at the Blue Mouse. The advertising campaign on the bread had been so extensive that combined with the theatre advertising that every medium in the city seemed to be devoted to "Mother O' Mine."

All through the engagement of the picture every employe of the bakery wore a hat band with the inscription, "See Mother O' Mine at the Blue Mouse Today." The same inscription was carried on big banners on both sides of every one of the trucks operated by the baking company.

Hill's Stunts for "Outside Woman" Go Big

As a publicity feature leading up to the showing of "The Outside Woman," Dwight L. Hill, manager of the Pickwick theatre, San Diego, Cal., placed in the windows of fifteen different local business houses models of old Aztec gods, to which he gave the name of "Izajinx." With the idol in each window was a card bearing one letter. The fifteen letters were announced as spelling the name of the coming attraction, and as a prize for the first person turning in the correct name and also the locations of the stores where the idols were on view, Manager Hill offered one of the hideous idols. The scheme created much interest and proved a good stunt. The name of the attraction was not announced in the Pickwick's display columns until the final day of the Izajinx hunt was over.

Hicks Pulls Many Stunts for "Go and Get It"

Verner Hicks, manager of the Family theatre, Marion, Ill., literally went out and got business for "Go and Get It."

Mr. Hicks' exploitation campaign consisted of the reliable newsboys special show, a buried treasure hunt with a five-dollar gold piece and passes to the theatre as the treasure, that have been described numberless times in these columns and also show, a buried treasure hunt with a five-some original stunts, one of which was an arrangement with the Marion Republican to print a review by each of the newsboys who saw the picture.

The paper gave the show a lot of free space and also co-operated in other ways.

This shows a window display for "Held By the Enemy," playing recently at the Majestic Gardens theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Special Service Section on "Over the Hill"

"OVER THE HILL" has at last completed its New York engagement and is to be released to the picture houses. The sensational run of 46 weeks achieved by this beautifully told story of mother love stands as a monument to the industry. Only two other pictures have equaled its record and no film production has ever enjoyed a more prosperous season nor achieved a greater success on its merits alone.

"Over the Hill" had its opening without any great blare of trumpets. Exploitation, famous names or stars are not responsible for its success. Modest newspaper displays announced months ago that the feature could be seen at the Lyric theatre. First week audiences came in about the numbers that can be expected for any picture sponsored by a reputable producer that goes into a Broadway theatre. In a week however, "Over the Hill" was selling out at every performance and seats were being gobbled up weeks in advance. The reason was that the picture was getting exploitation which only the great attraction can command, word of mouth advertising from those who had seen the show and went away so enthused that they sounded its praises to their friends.

This narrative of a fact may seem to have no bearing on what purports to be an exploitation section. However it is in the remarkable history of the New York run that the basis for every exhibitor's campaign is to be found.

"Over the Hill" will be sold to every picture patron in your city if you will give it an opportunity to introduce itself to all classes and cliques, creeds and nationalities. The exhibitor who is able to give it a good start will reap a rich reward. Plans for exploiting the production therefore should be centered on the opening days.

It is also perhaps advisable to warn exhibitors that "Over the Hill" is not a picture for ballyhoos or any form of exploitation that tends to create in the minds of prospective patrons anything but that the picture is to be taken as one of the great films of all times. To resort to cheap stunts would be to cheapen the feature and that would be fatal in connection with a long run.

SINCE this production will come to you lacking a number of the exploitation angles that a starring vehicle contains it will be good policy to start your campaign well in advance of the first showing.

The newspapers are of course the place for your first gun. For those who are not prejudiced against teaser ads. a series of blind readers scattered in the best locations the editors will give you and modeled along the following lines are suggested.

"When did you write to mother?" "How old is your mother? Do you know?" "When is mother's birthday?" "Have you answered mother's letter?" "Have you been out to see mother lately?"

Exhibitors who see no connection with "Over the Hill" in advertising devoted to "mother" are advised that it is the mother part of the production that puts the feature over. The devotion to or memory of each person's mother is the keynote of the picture's success. Therefore it is essential to drive home this theme.

The fact that the picture is titled "Over the Hill" and that most people will connect this title with the famous poem by Will Carleton "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" is not of particular exploitation value to the picture. In fact it seems advisable in the average case to go some lengths to explain that the production is not an adaptation of the poem but is only suggested by it. Reason for this is to be found in the theory that most people are familiar with the poem and will conclude that any adaptation could not contain sufficient dramatic ingredients to make the picture of more than ordinary importance.

Therefore "suggested by" should be hammered home in all advertising from the time the engagement is announced. In announcing the feature, it should not be hard to break into the news columns for your advance notices. These should go into detail concerning the New York engagement. It is not sufficient to simply say "played so many weeks on Broadway." That sort of thing means nothing to the average person of some other city besides New York. However if you make an interesting story of the fact that the picture opened at the Lyric on a certain date and for an engagement that was thought to be of sufficient length to accommodate all the people who were expected to see it, figuring averages, and that when the time came to give up the theatre to a legitimate attraction, the picture was going better than ever: that the production was moved five times with full houses following it wherever it went; that finally the attraction went up to the Park theatre, at Columbus Circle, blocks away from the theatrical district where no other film had ever succeeded and where few shows of any kind ever went over, there to play to the same phenominal business, you will have a story that will carry conviction as to the merits of the film.

Other stories, about Mary Carr, her career as a character woman of supposedly ordinary ability until her chance came in this production can be made valuable aids in selling the essential idea of the pictures exceptional qualities.

It might not be a bad plan to sell the idea that the producers did not dream they had made so tremendously popular a picture. The public likes to think and showmen know that the hit is often produced when least expected and such a story makes good reading.

"Over the Hill" Ready for General Release

"OVER THE HILL" opened to a New York engagement September 17, 1920, at the Lyric theatre and has played to practically capacity business for 46 weeks in various theatres.

The picture is now ready for general release to the picture theatres throughout the United States. That the production is destined to break all attendance records elsewhere as it has in New York seems a forgone conclusion.

Motion Picture News advises all exhibitors to neglect no opportunity to book this picture and to discard all tradition in fixing the number of playing days.

Newspaper Ads

WE would be extremely liberal with our newspaper display space and extremely careful with the copy used therein.

Cuts of the players rather than scenes from the picture are advisable. Following this suggestion, will also mean that Mary Carr in her role as the mother is to come in for the best end of the space. In captioning such a cut or in any catch lines, drive home the personal equation by such sentences as: "Is she like your mother?" "Is your mother gray-haired, wrinkled and bent like this mother and does she love you and your brothers and sisters as does this little old lady, her children?" If you have the facilities for getting out any sort of a display you can originate, nothing would be more effective that an ad with Mary Carr's picture in the center of the space and cuts of her children down each side, each captioned to give an idea of the sort of role being played.

"Isaac" could be identified by something like this. "The first born, a hypocrite by nature, a skinflint by instinct and a scoundrel in his heart, who sent his mother to the poor house with never a regret." "Thomas" might be sketched as follows: "The second son who soon outgrew his mother's arms and left the home nest to try his wings in the outside world. He was just careless and selfish."

For "John" this might do: "The black sheep of the family. Always in trouble, always the one to be punished, always the wild Indian and always unlucky but the one with a heart and a soul, who loved his mother as did none of the rest of the brood."

"Charles" might be captioned like this: "The baby of the boys, and as often happens pampered too much. Spoiled by too much love, too little discipline. He too forgot mother in thinking of his own affairs." And so on with the two daughters and the wives of the sons.

In all your advertising do not dwell on the story of the picture itself or on the plot. Neither is it advisable to bill "Dad Benton" to any great extent. Stick to mother and the children with generalization as to the ground covered.

It is to be assumed that "Over the Hill" is to be booked for unusually long runs. If this is the case the use of billboard paper is to be especially recommended since the expense involved in posting will be lessened as a daily expense and the number of the days service the paper will give, will be materially increased.

Lobby Exploitation

IN lobby exploitation extreme care should be taken not to sell the picture as something it is not. In using scene stills be careful to select nothing that will suggest melodrama. It is safest to stick to the cast of characters in various poses.

If a lobby display is desired outside of the ordinary decorations, the suggestion for some sort of a floral display is presented.

A "mother" picture suggests "Mother's Day" and "Mother's Day" suggests carnations. Therefore white artificial carnations artistically arranged would be suitable.

If you go in for a scenic lobby the title of the production may be used to advantage. Suppose you have your artists paint a rural scene with a hill in the distance and a country read winding to its top. A minature stage following out the same idea could be easily built.

Prologue Suggestion

FOR a prologue number we borrow an idea from a stage play the title of which has been forgotten.

The set to be used is a child's bedroom. The room is furnish with a bed placed down stage and at the right. Doors lead off right and center. A table some chairs and other articles likely to be found in a boy's room are placed about, to dress the stage.

On the bed clad in pajamas are two boys about ten and twelve. They are seated with their backs braced against the head board propped up against pillows. About the room is scattered their wearing apparel. No two articles are in the same place.

One of the boys is reading from a paper covered novel. For identification purposes, they may be labelled "Jimmy" and "Johnny."

As the curtain rises they register intense excitement:

Johnny (reading)—And then Diamond Dick rushed to the rescue. Drawing his trusty six shooter from his belt, he——

Jimmy—Sh-h (listens).

Johnny—What's the matter?

Jimmy—I thought I heard mom comin'. Go on.

Johnny (reading)—Drawing his trusty six shooter——

Jimmy—You read that.

Johnny—Shut up. (Reading.) Drawing his trusty six shooter from his belt, he threw down——

Jimmy—What does "threw down" mean?

Johnny—How'd I know. Wait and see—— Threw down on the burly ruffian. It was an—an—an ——

Jimmy—Go on. Why don't you read?

Johnny—Well, I am, ain't I? It was an—an——

Jimmy—Give me the book. I can read better'n you can. (Takes book.) It was an—an——

Johnny—Why don't you read it, your so smart. (Snatches book from Jimmy's hand.) It was an—(spells) i-n-a-u-s-p-i-c-i-o-u-s moment for Black Tom.

Jimmy—What does that mean?

Johnny—Darned 'f I know. Wait and see.

Jimmy—Cheese it. Mom's comin' (Johnny hastily tucks the novel under the mattress on the audience side of the bed while Jimmie runs hastily to the table and grabs a bible. Both resume their former positions and Jimmy begins to read.) "And the Lord said let there be light and there was light." (A middle aged woman enters and comes down toward the bed, picking up the scattered garments as she goes.)

Mother—Ready for bed, boys?

Boys (in unison)—A-huh.

Jimmy—Mom, how could the Lord turn on the juice just by saying so?

Mother—Why—— Well, I guess that is pretty deep for a boy to understand.

Jimmy—Well, I think it's the bunk.

Mother—Why, Jimmy. You mustn't talk that way about what you read in the bible.

Jimmy—Well, I do.

Mother—Hark. Not another word. Did you take your bath? (No answer.) Skip now. It's bed time.

Johnny—Aw, dog gone it. What's the use of washin' all over every night. You only get dirty again in the morning.

Mother—Come now. (Jimmy goes through door right and the sound of water pouring into bath tub is heard.) Johnny, hurry.

Johnny—Well, I'm hurryin', ain't I? (He slides off the bed and wanders over toward the table.) Mom, what does i-n-a-u-s-p-i-c-i-o-u-s (spells) mean?

Mother—Unlucky, I guess.

Johnny—Gee, you bet it was unlucky.

Mother—My land if you had a gun in your hand I'd throw you down over my knee. Don't ask foolish questions.

Jimmy—Well, it said——

Mother—What said?

Jimmy—Nothin'.

Mother—Jump into bed now and go to sleep. (Mother's back is to Jimmy as he jumps in bed with a bump of the springs. Mother turns at the noise and sees Jimmy crawling under the covers.) Jimmy, you didn't say your prayers.

Jimmy—Aw, darn. (He rolls out on the audience side of the bed, kneels in prayer, hands clasped for a moment, but soon one is hastily used to scratch his ankle. Mother has taken the bible and seated herself in a chair near the table. As Jimmy jumps in bed again, Mother calls off to Johnny.)

Mother—Hury up and take your bath, Johnny.

Johnny (off stage)—I'm all done.

Mother—All done. I didn't hear you let the water run.

Johnny (entering)—I used Jimmy's. He didn't hurt it none.

Mother (laughs)—All right. Say your prayers and climb in bed.

Jimmy—Mom, can I go to the ball game to-morrow?

Jimmy—Mother!

Mother—Hark!

Johnny—Say, how's a feller goin' to pray with you talkin' all the time. Amen. Mom, make him get on his own side of the bed. (Jimmy rolls over taking all the bed clothes with him. There is a scramble for a moment while the bed spread is being adjusted.) Mom.

Mother—Yes.

Johnny—You goin' to sing to us to-night.

Mother—Do you want me too?

Both—You bet.

Mother—Will you stop talking and go to sleep.

Boys—A-huh. (Mother sings appropriate song or songs, then goes to bed and kisses the boys, saying goodnight. The boys answer sleepily.)

Pioneer Has Big Product for September

Pioneer Film Corporation is another company which intends to make September, the "Independent Month," an epoch making one. On September 1st, the New York Exchange of Pioneer will release "Indiscretion," in which Florence Reed is starred. Supporting the star are Gareth Hughes and Lionell Atweill, both popular stars themselves.

On September 15th, "Beyond the Crossroads," starring Ora Carew, will be offered. "Out of the Dust," with Russell Simpson, Robert McKim, and Dorcas Matthews, will be another September release. It is in seven reels and was made by J. B. MacCarthy. "The Hope Diamond Mystery," a serial, will be released next month in the New York, Albany and Buffalo exchanges of Pioneer.

Shirley Mason Starred in "Ever Since Eve"

In "Ever Since Eve," a late August release by Fox Film Corporation, starring Shirley Mason, occurs the unique and interesting situation of a man finding himself in love with a girl he believes to be his adopted daughter. The development of a four-cornered romance results in various amazing complications, it is declared, all of which, however, are finally cleared. The play is based on Joseph Ernest Peat's novel, "Concerning Chicine."

Miss Mason's support includes Herbert Heyes, Eva Gordon, Mrs. Vin Moore, Charles Spere, Frances Hancock, Louis King and Ethel Lynn.

Vitagraph Has New Serial

Production of "Breaking Through," Starring Carmel Myers, Started

"BREAKING THROUGH," a serial of a new sort with Carmel Myers as the star, is under way at Vitagraph's Hollywood studio with Robert Ensminger as the director. The production, especially the earlier chapters, is being rushed as rapidly as perfection will allow and the first installment completed in ample time to be released early in the coming fall. This is the first Vitagraph serial in several months.

"Breaking Through" is a serial said to be different in type and story from any hitherto produced by Vitagraph or any other company and is the first Vitagraph serial with a woman star. "Breaking Through" is Carmel Myers' first Vitagraph picture. In addition to her beauty and acting ablities, she is a thorough sportswoman and athletic, which led to her engagement for this new serial, which was written, both story and continuity, by C. Graham Baker.

A part of the action of each episode takes place in the West and there is much wild riding and physical combat and a continuous grim struggle to gamble everything on the one long chance to win. It is a real, shouting action serial. A strong love story is injected at just the right time, but unlike many other serials, the result of the love tangle is not obvious from the start. There is also a wide vein of comedy through some of the episodes which serves to make the serial's intense dramatic action stand out the more boldly.

"Breaking Through" is to be thoroughly advertised and exploited. One of the features will be the aids to exhibitors. Instead of a press book, covering the entire fifteen episodes, a press sheet will be issued on the first three chapters, to be followed by others on succeeding chapters.

"Disraeli" Is Completed

United Artists to Release George Arliss Production in the Fall

AFTER eleven weeks of studio activity, George Arliss's "Disraeli" has been filmed, and Director Henry Kolker has begun his task of cutting and assembling the picture, which will be released by United Artists in the early fall.

The work that remains to be done will be hurried to completion as rapidly as is consistent, with special care being shown at every turn to maintain the highest standard in production.

One of the chief features of the production is the exceptional cast of well-known motion picture and stage stars that support Mr. Arliss in this picture, including Louise Huff, Mrs. Arliss, Frank Losee, E. J. Ratcliffe, Henry Carvill, Margaret Dale, Grace Griswold, Reginald Denny, Noel Tearle and Fred J. Nichells. This is one of the greatest casts ever assembled for a photoplay.

"Disraeli" is not an historical play, despite a popular idea. The drama, by Louis N. Parker, shows the life and times of sixty years ago together with something of the opposition encountered by the Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, M. P., the great statesman, who on two occasions was designated by Queen Victoria to be her Prime Minister.

The plot carries two love stories, for the attachment between Disraeli and his wife is one of the great love affairs of the ages. The second love story develops between "Clarissa," played by Louise Huff, and "Charles Viscount Deeford," played by Reginald Denny, and some of the scenes between these two young people are among the most charming ever screened.

It has been pointed out that Mr. Arliss and his art remain the outstanding feature of this picture. Mr. Arliss has given his screen version of "Disraeli" the closest attention, and it is safe to assume that in its completed state the picture represents the best treatment that could be accorded to it. No detail has been omitted that would help to strengthen the picture.

Warner Oland Receives Serial Offers

The news that Warner Oland, who for so long has been identified with Pathe Serials, intended to desert this field, has brought three offers to him from as many concerns to remain in serials to be manufactured under their trademark but to be given the Warner Oland brand name.

While Mr. Oland has not completed plans for formation of his own producing company, he has definitely decided to turn to the feature field after the expiration of his present Pathe contract.

Progress is Made on "The Iron Trail"

Five hundred players, including the star, supporting cast and extras of the Rex Beach picture "The Iron Trail" took possession of the deserted village of Oreland, N. This big company probably the largest ever taken away by a motion picture company, will be held on the location and housed and fed for over ten days.

Maxwell Karger will direct Alice Lake in that star's next Metro picture, "The Golden Gift," a story of Mexico and New York, which will be made for the most part at the Hollywood studios. June Mathis and Florence Hein collaborated on the continuity.

Wesley Barry Will Be "Penrod" for Neilan

Marshall Neilan's next production, now that he has completed "Bits of Life" for First National, will be "Penrod," Booth Tarkington's famous boy character, with Wesley Barry in the title role. Neilan is due east soon to confer with the author on details, incidentally, to get his boy star and take him west for work in the picture.

Select Managers from the Ranks

IN the past year of readjustment Select Pictures Corporation, the distributing branch of the Selznick organization, there are new occupants of the manager's chair in many of the thirty cities which Select operates throughout the country.

A number of times during the past year circumstances have made it necessary for Vice-President Morris to fill important gaps which have either been made or have made themselves. The thing that has excited comment on the part of those who have been keenly observant is that, while the man may be new to the manager's job, rarely, if ever, is he new to the bigger job, namely, looking after the Selznick organization's interests. In a general way, the new managers in the Select organization have been merely moved from the ranks. There has been little, if any, of the customary plan of placing men in important positions merely because of their general reputation for ability. The thing that has been kept uppermost in mind has been the employees fitness as it applies specifically to the peculiar needs of the Selznick-Select organization. It has followed quite naturally that the man with Selznick experience, even though in some minor capacity, has been given abundant opportunity to win his spurs. And the proof of the soundness of this policy, originated and strictly adhered to by Select—a proof which will be attested to by exhibitors in all sections of the country—is indicated by the fact that, almost without exception, the men who have been elevated from the Select ranks have made good with a vengeance.

"This policy which we have followed," says Mr. Morris, "is one on which Mr. Selznick has operated in every business which has ever claimed his attention. He has always liked to say 'Outgrow your job. I have a bigger one for you.' On the face of it this statement might almost seem philanthropic. But Mr. Selznick has never aspired to shine as a philanthropist. His stronger inclination is to the belief that most red-blooded men are better satisfied when they get merely what is coming to them and what they can win from the world under fair rules of competition. Mr. Selznick would readily confess that his conception of the thought back of this epigramatic promise is that both the man outgrows his job and the man who hands him the better one, profits materially in the exchange.

"By following this policy in the business of keeping our exchanges sometimes thousands of miles removed from the direct influence of the home office, in smooth running order, we feel that we scarcely ever take a step backwards in the standing and prestige which we are constantly aiming to create among the exhibitors, our customers. We have always advocated a highly developed spirit of co-operation in each branch office. Our Managers invariably depend upon their subordinates to offer real help in the problems they are being constantly asked to solve. The result is that practically every employee in any Select branch is always in training for the job or jobs higher up. Another result is that there is considerably more contact between the exhibitors in the territory and even in the minor branch employees than would be the case if a different plan were followed.

"We have our own peculiar methods of doing business and our customers and prospective customers know us by these methods. The men who have worked with us are familiar with these methods. When we elevate employees from the ranks to occupy important positions, we are merely standing by our convictions that the manner in which we have chosen to conduct our business for a number of years, is right. We're taking the chance that we are either all right or all wrong—and past successes of the Select selling force are rather convincing that we are more likely to be right than wrong."

"Cabiria" for First Nat"

Italian Spectacle, Revised, to Be Offered on Independent Basis

"CABIRIA," the spectacular drama written by Gabriele d'Annunzio, Italy's soldier-poet, around the gigantic struggle between the empires of Rome and Carthage for the mastery of the ancient world, will be presented in a new and revised version upon the screens of the United States next season.

The Italian spectacle, which was two years in the making and was the film sensation of America on the eve of the great war, will be distributed on an independent basis by the exchanges of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., instead of as a sub-franchise attraction. This is a result of an extensive referendum conducted among the First National Franchise holders and sub-franchise holders of the country, as to most satisfactory method of handling the production.

"When Cabiria" was first presented on Broadway, New York, in the Spring of 1914, it was revolutionary in its effect, both in the motion picture fans of the period and on the coterie of highbrow critics who, up to that time, had frankly regarded the picture as a cheap interloper in the realm of drama. When first presented, "Cabiria" ran to twelve thousand feet—an unheard of length in those days of transition from the locked-reel program of short subjects to the five-reel feature—and furnished an entire evenings entertainment. In the 1921 edition, it will probably not exceed 8,500 feet, enabling those exhibitors who wish to do so to include one or two short subjects, or run it as an entire program, according to their desires.

For two things has "Cabiria" been famous ever since its American premiere—the massiveness of its great settings and its spectacular scenes, and for Mciste, the Genoese giant, a superman in strength and physique.

General Revival Predicted

Elmer Pearson Says Fall Will See Industry on "Road to Prosperity"

IN a statement issued during the week from the Pathe headquarters in New York, Elmer Pearson, director of exchanges, expresses the opinion that the film industry is rapidly approaching "a general revival of activities that will bring us again to the road of general prosperity." Mr. Pearson also takes occasion to compliment the trade press for its ready support of the "Independence Month" plan. The statement continues:

"Speaking of healthy signs, have you noticed how the atmosphere has been clearing in the past couple of weeks. Have you read what Mr. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation said the other day with reference to "an unparalleled period of prosperity coming to the United States?

"Many of the most pessimistic leaders in the world of finance are changing their indigo hue and now are sharing the viewpoint expressed by Mr. Gary:

"Gold attracted by the security and big income of our investments are coming to our shores in millions and millions of dollars until call money is at from 4% to 5%, time loans at from 5½% to 6%; an extraordinary reserve in the Federal Reserve banks; preferred stocks and bonds being gobbled up as quickly as offered, an enormous crop to market at what is almost certain to be steadily increasing prices. How then can the return of splendid prosperity be denied?

"All along we have held the view that the United States was too all powerful to be swamped by a wave of false depression."

Dallas Fitzgerald Will Direct for Universal

IRVING G. THALBERG, general manager at Universal City, has signed Dallas M. Fitzgerald, one of the best known directors of the motion picture industry, to produce Universal photodramas.

His first work will be to guide Gladys Walton through the star's forthcoming story, "The Guttersnipe," a comedy-drama by Percival Wilde, in which she is expected to give a fascinating performance of a little Irish guttersnipe.

Among the Metro releases which Dallas Fitzgerald has directed are "Blackmail," "The Offshore Pirate," "The Price of Redemption," "Cinderella's Twin," "Puppets of Fate," and "Life's Darn Funny,"—all starring vehicles for Viola Dana with the exception of "The Price of Redemption," in which Bert Lytell was starred.

Bert Lytell to Have Ora Carew as Leading Lady

"Unaffected by Hysteria"

Al Lichtman, of Associated Producers, Talks on New Pictures

AL LICHTMAN, general manager of Associated Producers, makes the following statement in announcing seven new Associated Producers pictures:

"The hysteria of doubt which has pervaded the motion picture industry for six months past has been totally without effect on the producers who make up Associated Producers. They have felt that there could not be anything very serious the matter with a business which supplies a basic demand so economically sound. They have gone ahead completing their productions for the coming season just as though there had never been this epidemic of cold feet.

"Conditions during the coming season will be better than they have ever been for the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor of big pictures. One of the troubles during the last summer has been that a lot of houses tried to cure their cold feet with an overdose of poor film.

"If we want to get at the very bottom of things the trouble hasn't been too many pictures. Instead it has been too many poor pictures and not enough good pictures. The whole future of motion pictures depends on enough good pictures.

"Every stage of development of the motion picture has been a step upward—not down or across. Pictures have been so popular that the world public has kept the business on the jump to meet its taste. You can't sell 1914 pictures to a 1921 audience any more than you could sell gowns and hats of 1914's vintage on Fifth Avenue. And the tanks have kept up to the minute on pictures just as much as the big towns have.

The pictures referred to are J. Parker Road, Jr.'s "I Am Guilty," Mack Sennett's "Home Talent," Allan Dwan's "A Broken Doll," "Doll" "Devotion" by A. J. Bimberg, Maurice Tourneur's "The Foolish Matrons," J. Parker Road, Jr.'s "Greater Than Love," "The Ten Dollar Raise," produced by J. L. Frothingham, Thomas H. Ince's "Mother O' Mine" and "The Cup of Life."

New Block Booking Plan

Paramount Offers Seven Biggest Productions to Counteract Slump

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed whereby exhibitors will be enabled to book in block and at an early date seven of Paramount's biggest fall releases, according to an announcement just made by S. R. Kent, Famous Players-Lasky's General Manager of Distribution.

The productions selected by Mr. Kent for this offering are "The Affairs of Anatol," "Experience," "Peter Ibbetson," "Ladies Must Live," "The Great Moment," "Don't Tell Everything!" and "At the End of the World."

"We are making this unusual offer," said Mr. Kent, "in recognition of the extraordinary period of dullness which has pervaded the exhibiting end of the business for the past many weeks and is likely to continue in greater or lesser degree throughout the month of August. With the advent of Paramount Week and the new season, starting the first Sunday in September, there is every indication that there is going to be a decided change for the better.

"So we have picked out these seven productions, all of them among the very strongest box-office attractions of our fall releases, and are giving exhibitors the opportunity of showing them successively, without regard to the scheduled release dates, provided they book all seven of them together. This will enable any exhibitor booking them to give seven good hard wallops at the retreating figure of Old Summer Slump right where it will do the most good, recoup whatever losses he may have suffered during the hot spell and put himself more solid than ever with his public for the long strong pull during the season of 1921-22.

Contrast of Settings in in Fox's "Play Square"

Marked contrasts in ways of life and the settings characterize "Play Square," an August release announced by Fox Film Corporation, starring Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker. Many of the scenes in this melodrama are laid in the underworld of a great city; others in the peaceful environs of a village. The co-stars are supported by Hayward Mack. Laura La Plant, Jack Brammall, Nanine Wright, Harry Todd, Wilbur Higby and Al Fremont.

New Company to Star Dorothy Philips

ANNOUNCEMENT is made from the Pacific Coast of the formation of a new producing company, directed by Allen Holubar and starring his wife, Dorothy Phillips.

Backed by San Francisco capitalists, the new corporation will be known as the Exploitation Company, Inc., and will release its productions through the First National according to an announcement just made public by Jefferson W. Ascher, secretary of the San Francisco and New York Amusement Co. This company controls the San Francisco Strand, where the Phillips—Holubar productions will probably be given their premiere on the coast.

Educational to Aid in Independent Month

Headquarters and branches of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., all over the country are cooperating with the independent theatre owners in their plans for making September "Independence Month."

"We are friends of the independent exhibitor," said E. W. Hammons, president of Education, "and are glad to cooperate in making Independence Month all that it should mean to this class of theatre owner."

Managers of all the branch exchanges and their assistants have been advised to exert every effort from September 1 to 28 toward helping the owners of independent houses to make a real success of their special month.

Lehrman-Moore Comedy Combine Appeals

The association that Myron Selznick has arranged between Owen Moore, as a comedy star, and Henry A. Lehrman, as a comedy director, bids fair to awaken an exhibitors interest that has seldom been equalled in the comedy branch of motion picture production, states Selznick.

Since the announcement was first made that Mr. Lehrman would write and direct an Owen Moore comedy the Select organization, through branch managers and salesmen, has expressed a lively interest in the prospect of having two such names of recognized standing to couple with their sales talks.

Kipling Views "Without Benefit of Clergy"

Rudyard Kipling has seen his own screen version of "Without Benefit of Clergy," and authorized a cable to Pathe Exchange in which he pronounces the picture "a great artistic achievement." The cable adds that Mr. Kipling is especially pleased with the "remarkable work of Virginia Faire."

The private performance was given at the Alhambra in London. Lord Beaverbrook was among the invited guests—incidentally representing important cinema and newspaper forces throughout Europe. Many of the leading social, literary and artistic celebrities of England also were present, it is reported.

Story by Cynthia Stockley for Miss Dean

Universal has purchased "Wild Honey," a story by Cynthia Stockley, as Priscilla Dean's next Universal-Jewel starring vehicle.

Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, is writing the continuity so as to have the script ready when the star has finished "Conflict," the super-feature which is now being filmed in the British Columbia woods under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Vignola, who directed "The Woman God Changed," will direct.

3 Fox Specials on B'way

"Shame," "Thunderclap," "Virgin's Paradise," Supplant Other Specials

THREE striking motion picture changes in Broadway theatres took place within the last three days —"Over the Hill" at the Park giving way to "A Virgin Paradise;" "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," at the Central, yielding to "Thunderclap;" and "Queen of Sheba," at the Lyric, being replaced by "Shame." The momentous decision to effect these sweeping changes was made in fulfillment of the promise given by William Fox in his recent announcement that each of a series of twelve stupendous special productions would enjoy a Broadway run before going to exhibitors throughout the country.

The first change took place at the Central, beginning with the matinee Saturday afternoon, July 30, with the departure of "A Connecticut Yankee" and the opening presentation of "Thunderclap," which thereafter will be shown twice daily throughout the run. The second occurred with the farewell of "Queen of Sheba" at the Lyric and the opening, with the Sunday matinee, July 31, of "Shame." The third marked the temporary passing of "Over the Hill" from Broadway and the appearance of "A Virgin Paradise," at the Park theatre, at the Wednesday matinee, August 3. "Over the Hill" will not bid a final farewell, but merely "Au revoir," to the world's premier entertainment thoroughfare, as it will open a new engagement at a Broadway theatre in the near future.

The opening in New York of "Thunderclap," "Shame" and "A Virgin Paradise" gives six of the twelve William Fox specials to Broadway. Three others have been announced by name, and will take their turn as rapidly as occasion permits, and the remaining three are in process of preparation.

Synchronized Wins Tribute

Conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Praises Music Scores

WITH the Ravina Park management offering motion-pictures once a week in Chicago's world-famed open air operatic center, lovers of the highest form of musical entertainment are being introduced to the pleasures of motion picture entertainment. Ravinia Park, the stronghold of summer opera in America, offers screen attractions every Monday night, and Mr. P. A. Cavallo, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, probably the leading symphony of the Middle West, in speaking of his organization's participation in the program on these special "movie" nights, said:

"My experience with Synchronized Music scores prompts me to express my appreciation of these splendid scores, from the conductor's standpoint. Their coming marks a great epoch in the art of motion picture presentations. Through their use with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, I am enabled to offer Ravinia Park's patrons the very highest form of musical entertainment.

"We have what is undoubtedly the most critical audience in Chicago and in deciding to adopt a policy of motion picture nights, which we felt answered the demands of thousands of Chicagoans, it was our decision to offer them, that same standard of music which has made them such enthusiastic supporters of Ravinia Park. The absolutely perfect synchronization, the many beautiful themes and the extraordinarily simple scoring makes them adaptable not only to a symphony orchestra, such as the Chicago organization, but insures their use successfully as well in theatres where only a piano or organ are employed. After having directed the playing of Synchronized Music Scores, I feel it almost a duty to draw attention to their entire practicableness. Synchronized Music Scores are a success and motion picture musical directors throughout the country will soon realize their value. The mere fact that their use does away with many hour sof tedious rehearsals, as well as the employment of a large and expensive music library, should attract favorable attention."

New Mermaid Is Finished

Lloyd Hamilton Makes Elaborate Comedy for Educational Release

"THE VAGRANT," the second Mermaid Comedy of the new series for Educational, and a third picture, as yet untitled, have been completed by the Hamilton-White organization, and will be released soon by Educational.

What is said to be the most elaborate "set" constructed in the old Griffith studio at Hollywood, which was recently obtained by Hamilton-White, since Griffith left it two years ago, was put up for "The Vagrant." Buildings occupying more than an acre of ground were erected to represent a section of the New York slums, where many scenes in "The Vagrant" are laid.

This comedy is said to provide Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, star of the Mermaid Comedies, a fine opportunity to get over in his clever way numerous side splitting situations. Irene Dalton plays the leading feminine part, while Tom Wilson, who gave a brilliant performance as the "cop" in "The Kid" and in "Scrap Iron" has a similar role in this Hamilton film.

Jackie Coogan Starts New Production

Jackie Coogan, the child star, has started work on his new photoplay at the Brunton Studios in Hollywood, Cal. Except that the picture will be a five-reeler and that Victor Heerman, more recently associated with Owen Moore and Marshall Neilan, is the director, no further details regarding the photoplay have been given out as yet.

Jack Mulhall Cast for Viola Dana's Lead

Jack Mulhall, who was leading man for Viola Dana in the Metro production of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Offshore Pirate," has been engaged to play opposite the little Metro star in her newest picture, "The Fourteenth Lover," an adaptation by Edith Kennedy of a story by Alice D. G. Miller. "The Fourteenth Lover" will be directed by Harry Beaumont.

New York F.I.L.M. Club Holds Field Day

The Fourth Annual Field Day Outing of the New York F. I. L. M. Club was held on Wednesday, July 27th. Nearly five-hundred were present. The Baseball Game between Club members and Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce was exceedingly interesting. Score when game was called, on account of darkness was 2-2.

Many handsome prizes were given to the winners of other games.

Hodkinson Announces Two Title Changes

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corp. have retitled two of their forthcoming picture productions as follows:

The first Irene Castle production which was made under the working title, "The Broadway Bride," will be known as "French Heels," while "The Foreigner," the screen version of Ralph Connor's story will reach the screen as "God's Crucible."

First Reports Received on "Fauntleroy"

The first definite information concerning the quality and progress being made on Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," scheduled as a United Artists release for October, is contained in the production report of Bennie Zeidman, a copy of which was received early this week by Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists.

The report of Miss Pickford's production manager indicates that this is by far the most extravagant picture Little Mary has ever undertaken and that without doubt it will be the classic of her career. At least four weeks, according to Mr. Zeidman, will be required to finish the feature.

Short-Subject Program Put on by Saenger

The success of the short subjects program presented by Samuel L. Rothafel at the Capitol, New York, has stirred other prominent exhibitors to stage the same type of show.

From New Orleans comes the report that the Saenger Amusement Company gave a short subjects program at their Trianon theatre, with the same gratifying results as attended the Capitol showing.

The program was comprised entirely of Pathe short features. and a Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors' comedy, according to a statement from the Pathe home office.

"Now or Never" was the principal attraction, and was augmented by a Tom Santschi two-reel Western drama, "La Rue of Phantom Valley," the Pathe News, Pathe Review, and one of the series of "Aesop's Fables."

Kinema Theatre Did Not Announce Engagement

Emphatic denial that the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles, made an announcement of the engagement of Charles Chaplin and May Collins on the theatre screen the week ending July 23rd is made by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser, owners of the theatre. Instead the programme that week contained "Screen Snapshots" which contained pictures of Chaplin and Miss Collins and stated their engagement had been announced by a Los Angeles newspaper.

Pathe Release Schedule for August 14th

PATHE announces its releases for the week of August 14th in a statement just issued from the home-office. The first subject, titled "The Black Ace," of a new series of Holman Day two-reel dramas will be released during the week of August 14th. The first series is said to have proved so popular that Pathe has contracted for a second group of these two-reel dramas of life in the Maine Woods.

The one-reel re-issue, starring Harold Lloyd, is titled "Rainbow Island." "The Fox and the Crow" is the next of Paul Terry's "Aesop's Film Fables." Gapska; "Social Culture for Lions;" "The Beaches of Florida;" and "The New France," "showing scenes taken near Colmar in Alsace.

Fans Scorn Heat to See "Reputation"

As an evidence of the growing popularity of Priscilla Dean and her Universal Jewel releases, Universal calls attention to the report of the Auditorium theatre, of Carpinteria, Cal., where "Reputation," Miss Dean's latest release, recently "stood them up" during the middle of the heat wave. Despite the fact the house only seats 250, the business was better than that of neighboing houses of greater capacity, it is declared.

Director Careful in Handling His Cast

"The proper handling of people in the cast, handling them so that they can give the best that is in them, constitutes a large percentage of a director's success," said Robert G. Vignola, director of special productions for Cosmopolitan.

"Make the people in your company work with enthusiasm, cheer them up when they don't reach the rung you want them to reach, urge them on, encourage them, never belittle them, and you're bound to eliminate at least one of the hazzards of the business."

Director Vignola has a reputation of being one of the most quiet-working directors in the business, and even in scenes of great emotional stress he rarely raises his voice above the speaking pitch.

Famous Artists to Make Paramount Posters

Henry Clive, whose portraits of Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels and other stars appearing in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Affairs of Anatol" were adapted for three-sheet posters for the production, has signed a year's contract whereby the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation secures his exclusive services for poster work. He has already designed a complete set of paper for George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production, "Experience," and has made one poster for Gloria Swanson's picture. "The Great Moment."

The Select Exchanges are all provided with prints of "Remorseless Love," the Elaine Hammerstein feature that is set for release as of August 10th. Opposite Miss Hammerstein the role of a mountaineer is Niles Welch

Gaylord Lloyd in Comedy Series for Pathe

The Pathe home-office in New York announces that, beginning in September, it will release a new series of one-reel comedies in which Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold Lloyd, will be the featured player. This new comedy company is producing at the Hal Roach studios in Culver City, Cal.

Announcement of the signing of nation wide leading theatre presentation on "Mother O' Mine" the Thomas H. Ince feature was announced this week by General Manager Al Lichtman of Associated Producers Inc., distributors of the production. The contract which completes the special presentation for the country is with Gore Brothers, Ramish and Sol Lesser for a showing at their first run Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles.

R-C Forces Prepare for Independence Month

NOT to be outdone by any competing concern R-C Pictures Corporation is devoting every possible energy to its preparations for Independence Month—the month of September, declares a statement from that organization.

From all the branch managers have come optimistic reports as to the expected success of Independence Month and the general revival of business throughout the film industry. Branch Manager Beale, in charge of the San Francisco office, has informed Charles R. Rogers, head of distribution, that he has received an open letter addressed to the exhibitors of his territory from Mr. C. C. Griffin, vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, endorsing the R-C product and policies, which Mr. Beale is employing as one of his sale's arguments for the September drive.

Branch Manager Dumestre at New Orleans recently made a trip to Houma, La., to interview A. J. Bethencourt, president of the Louisiana-Mississippi branch of the M.P.T.O.A. and a member of the national executive board. As a result of his visit, he booked R-C Pictures for a solid week, from September 4th to September 10th, and now all the other members of the association are promising to fall into line for Independence Month, it is declared.

R-C Names Fall Productions

FOLLOWING immediately upon the heels of the announcement that production activities have been resumed with a strong headway at the Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc., at Hollywood, Cal., R-C Pictures Corporation outlines briefly its production and release program.

A minimum of twenty-six productions are to be released to exhibitors during the year beginning September 1. The stars who are to appear in these productions are Pauline Frederick, Sessue Hayakawa and Doris May, the latter having just signed with R-C Pictures Corporation for a series of Doris May comedy dramas to be known as Hunt Stromberg Productions and released as R-C Pictures.

Included with the twenty-six productions will be two series of Directors' Productions to be directed by Louis J. Gasnier and William Christy Cabanne.

Pauline Frederick will be starred in six productions during the season of 1921-1922, the first of which is "The Sting of the Lash," written by Harvey Gates and directed by Henry King. The second of Miss Frederick's pictures will be "The Lure of Jade," from the story by Marion Orth, directed by Colin Campbell, who so successfully directed "Black Roses" and "The First Born."

The first of six productions starring Sessue Hayakwa will be "Where Lights Are Low," written by Lloyd Osborne, stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson, and directed by Colin Campbell. The second of the six productions in which Hayakawa will star is his own story, "The Swamp."

"The Swamp" is the story of the kindness of a Chinese huckster for a woman who has been deserted by her husband with a little child dependent upon her. A strange punishment comes to this man who had ruined her life, and in inflicting this punishment the huckster goes to his doom. It is a story of poignant feeling in which Hayakawa rises to the finest heights of dramatic expression he has ever given to the screen. Bessie Love plays opposite Hayakawa and the other principals are Harland Tucker, and Frankie Lee. "The Swamp" which was scenarioized by T. Grabb Alexander, is scheduled for release October 30th.

"The Vermillion Pencil" is the third of the season's R-C Pictures in which Hayakawa is the star. This is an Oriental theme with a strong note of drama, tense interest and a splendid climax. The fourth is "Thirteen Poppy Seeds," a story of Oriental intrigue and mystery with a highly diverting plot which brings into play all the subtle characterizations and interpretations for which Hayakawa is so famous.

Doris May's first starring production will be "The Foolish Age" from an original scenario. This was written especially for the new R-C star, and it is designed to bring to the fore all the grace and charm and pleasing whimsicality that made Miss May famous in her co-star role with Douglas MacLean in "23½ Hours' Leave" and other more recent productions. "The Foolish Age" is scheduled for release October 2. The second Doris May production will be "On A Rainy Day." This is an original story.

The first of the Director's Series will be "A Wife's Awakening" written by Jack Cunningham and directed by Gasnier, scheduled for release September 25. The second of the Directors' Productions by Gasnier will be "Mam'selle Jo," written by Harriet T. Comstock and is to be released November 27. "Home," from the novel by George Agnew Chamberlain will be the next of Gasnier's pictures. This is said to be a story of universal appeal and intense dramatic power. A powerful cast is being selected including Rose Dione in the title part and Tully Marshall.

William Christy Cabanne is now at work on the first of his Directors' Productions of five pictures. This is "The Barricade" written by Dr. Daniel Corson Goodman, author of "The Wonder Man." "The Barricade" is scheduled for release October 16. This will be followed by three other productions which will be directed by Cabanne.

Christie Studios Not Affected by Strike

At the Christie studios two directors are working on new two reel comedies for Educational release. Al Christie, immediately after his return from the Educational convention at Chicago, started another two reel comedy. Director William Beaudine is making another Christie Comedy featuring Bobby Vernon, with the support of Josephine Hill, Victor Rottmann, Virginia Ware, Mary Wynn and others.

"Connecticut Yankee' for President Harding'

Through the courtesy of William Fox, before President Harding and his party left for Perth, Mass., to spend the week-end attending the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth, a print of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" was placed aboard the yacht "Mayflower." It had been learned at the Fox offices, through Lieut.-Col. Clarence Osborne Sherrill, military aid to the President, that the heavy burden of duties resulting from Congressional activities had tired Mr. Harding.

Paramount Reorganize British Forces

SWEEPING reorganization of Paramount's producing forces in London was announced this week by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. In the future, declared Mr. Zukor, Paramount pictures made in Europe will be produced by the foremost Paramount directors, and will be enacted by American stars and leading players.

Following consultation with Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production, Mr. Zukor announced that in the future no money or effort will be spared in making the Paramount pictures produced in Europe among the best of the company's productions.

John S. Robertson is now producing in England, filming "Perpetua" and George Fitzmaurice is making "Three Live Ghosts." Thomas J. Geraghty has been appointed production manager of the London studio, succeeding Robert E. MacAlarney.

"Burn 'em Up Barnes" Small Town Try-Out

Under conditions made almost dramatic by the element of surprise "Burn 'em up Barnes," Charles C Burr's romantic drama, starring Johnny (Torchy) Hines and enacted by a group of screen notables which includes Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Betty Carpenter and J. Barney Sherry, was given its premier non-professional showing on the evening of July 28th at the Colonial Theatre, Peekskill, New York.

Utterly devoid of an inkling that they were to sit in judgment upon a new production, the devotees of the silent drama in that typical American small town filled the house almost to capacity to view the programmed attraction.

At the conclusion of the short subject presentation, the house lights were turned on and Manager Seymour Eaton introduced Johnny who, after a few introductory 'gags,' explained his presence and his mission and asked the audience to sit in judgment on his initial feature length offering. At the conclusion of the showing the production and the star were accorded a big ovation.

Marjorie Daw in New Irvin Willat Picture

Irvin V. Willat has selected Marjorie Daw to play the lead in his newest production "Fifty Candles," upon which he is working at present. "Fifty Candles" will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation which sponsored "Down Home," "Partners of the Tide" and "The Face of the World," Willat's greatest successes in the past.

"Fifty Candles" is from the short story of the same name by Earl Derr Biggers, which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post.

Selig-Rork Producing Prize One-Act Play

"The Ne'er-to-Return Road," a one act play by Mrs. Otis Skinner, which won the prize at the Lambs' Gambol in New York a few years ago, was purchased for the screen by Colonel William N. Selig at that time. Because the little play possessed all the vital elements such as virile drama, pathos, heart appeal and human interest necessary to win the first prize before a jury of the greatest actors in the United States, Colonel Selig believed that it would make a remarkable two-reel motion picture.

Following the encouraging public reception of their revival of the two-reel dramas with all-star casts, Selig and Rork immediately started production of "The Ne'er-to-Return Road."

Wallace Beery heads the featured players, who include Margaret McWade, Walt Whitman, Jack Mulhall and Margaret Landis. Bertram Bracken, the man who directed and adapted the first two productions, is at the helm.

Schlager Closes Deal

Sig Schlager, who has closed a distribution deal with Associated Exhibitors through Arthur S. Kane, left recently for the Coast, where he will open offices. The deal involved three units; the Ernest Warde Productions, the Mitchell Lewis Productions and the Western Photoplay Corporation. All exploitation and sales of the three units will be under the control of Mr. Schlager.

Loew Theatres to Show "Greater Than Love"

Universal Selects Final Title

"Fanny Herself" to Be Known on Screen as "No Woman Knows"

"NO WOMAN KNOWS," is the title finally given to the Universal-Jewel production directed by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber's popular novel, "Fanny Herself." This decision by the heads of the Universal company marks the end of a two months' search for a suitable name for the super-production, during which Universal solicited advice from the exhibitors of the United States and Canada as to a proper name for the picturized novel.

In opposition to the wide-spread recognition and popularity of the story under the name "Fanny Herself," the film company had to admit the unsuitable nature of the name as a picture title. It was this question which Universal put up to its exhibitors—whether the popularity of the book would sell the picture to the public or whether it needed a forceful title with exploitation possibilities.

Moving picture exhibitors, by an overwhelming majority, said: "Give us a title with a punch. One that will draw, irrespective of the book's popularity." Accordingly, Mr. R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, and at the helm of the film organization in the absence of Carl Laemmle, who now is in Europe, issued a call for title suggestions.

Hundreds of good titles were turned down because it was felt they were not big enough for the picture, which is said to be powerful in theme, yet human in its appeal. When the title "No Woman Knows," was suggested, it immediately received unanimous acclaim. Its exploitation possibilities were especially noted, and plans already are under way, it is reported by Universal, to campaign the production to an extent even greater than the exploitation put behind "Outside the Law" and "Reputation," two recent Universal-Jewel productions.

More time is said to have been spent in selecting the cast for "No Woman Knows," than for any other Universal picture ever screened. Mabel Julienne Scott was chosen for the leading role. Stuart Holmes, recognized as one of the most accomplished "villains" on the screen, was engaged to play the leading "heavy" role.

E. A. Warren, another favorite character actor, was added to the cast of "No Woman Knows." Warren is well known to photoplay goers for his remarkable work as the bazaar keeper in "The Virgin of Stamboul." Others in the cast include Max Davidson, John Davidson, Grace Marvin, Dick Cummins, Earl Schenck, Snitz Edwards, Joseph Swickard, Danny Hoy, Eugenie Forde, Baby Bernice Radom and little Raymond Lee and Dorothy Dern.

Those who watched the picture in production say that Miss Scott has gone far beyond her former screen success in the portrayal of the character "Fanny" in "No Woman Knows." Browning, the director, says he is certain the picture will create a sensation because of its absolute verity in recording human life. He characterizes it as the "Main Street" of filmdom.

The production is nearing completion at Universal City. The final scenes now are being cut and titled.

Pioneer Plans for New Season

IN announcing its plans for the season of 1921-22, the Pioneer Film Corporation declares that it is ready to release through its twenty-eight exchanges a variety of "independent product of quality second to none." Freedom from "entangling alliances" and a policy of operating "independently in the interests of the independent exhibitor" are also promulgated in its announcement. The Pioneer statement continues as follows:

"The new schedule of releases of the Pioneer Film Corporation for the new season embraces excellent attractions with stars of international fame; for instance, Florence Reed, Gareth Hughes, Lionel Atwill, Madge Kennedy, Ora Carew, Pauline Stark, Edith Roberts, Van Dyke Brooks, Gail Kane, Violet Mersereau, Claire Whitney, and Guy Empey, and these are but a few. In every instance the star has been given a brilliant supporting cast of screen celebrities.

"Some of the titles of the features for the first period of the new season which are to be offered exhibitors by the Pioneer organization include: 'Indiscretion'; 'Oh Mary Be Careful'; 'Wise Husbands'; 'The Forgotten Woman'; 'In Society'; 'Beyond the Cross Roads'; 'A Millionaire For A Day'; 'The Leech'; 'Out Of The Depths'; 'The Crimson Cross'; 'Peeps Into the Future.' These will be augmented for the exhibitors in New York City, state and northern New Jersey, with 'Out Of the Dust,' in which production Russell Simpson, Robert McKim and others appear, and the 'Hope Diamond Mystery,' the million dollar serial, starring Grace Darmond, and which is a film version of the story as told by May Yohe (Lady Francis Hope).

"For over six months preparations have been under way for the completion of plans for the new season and now the stage is all set and everything is in readiness. The preparation was marked by the opening of several new exchanges, including the ones which have been established in Indianapolis and in Albany.

"So far as the Pioneer personnel is concerned, it is made up of sales organization numbering over 300 men who have been carefully trained to uphold the policies as laid down by Pioneer's president, Mr. A. E. Lefcourt, and which policies call for the development and establishment of business relations with exhibitors on an honest, sound business-like basis.

"In a statement issued over the signature of Mr. Lefcourt the point is made that the Pioneer Film Corporation enjoys the distinction of being the leading enterprise of its kind in the field. It has no Wall Street money or Wall Street interests or outside affiliations. It is free to operate on the lines laid down by its own executives. It strongly opposes the operations of any concerns which are directed toward coercing the exhibitor into buying product for which he has no use or dictating to him the policy he must adopt. Mr. Lefcourt furthermore points out that the exhibitor must be given the fundamental right to run his business as he sees fit.

"We are going to do big things during the next twelve months," said Mr. Lefcourt, "and we mean to let the independent exhibitor know that his ultimate success is absolutely dependent on the co-operation he gives to the independent exchange."

Storey Sees Trade Revival

Associated Exhibitor Sales Manager is Optimistic After Tour

JOHN E. STOREY, Sales Manager of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., returned to New York after a trip through the Eastern Branches of that organization, absolutely confident that September will mark the beginning of one of the most prosperous seasons in the history of the motion picture industry.

He conferred with many leading exhibitors, as well as the branch executives of the Associated, and he stated that the big exhibitors are all confident of excellent business in the Fall. They are, in many cases, renovating their theatres and making extensive preparations.

In the course of this trip, Mr. Storey visited New Haven, Boston, Albany, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Among others, he conferred with Harold Franklin of Buffalo, Barrett McCormick and Paul Guedanovic of Cleveland and J. B. Harris at Pittsburgh. He found that these men had voiced the sentiments of hundreds of other exhibitors in stating that the exceptionally hot weather, combined with economic conditions, had been responsible for such falling off in the motion picture business as had been evidenced.

With the passing of the hot weather, and the coming of revived business in the Fall, they are certain of great improvement.

" One of the outstanding facts apparent to anyone travelling through the Eastern section of the country at this time, is the increasing optimism of business men as to the certain return of healthy conditions," said Mr. Storey. " My observation applies only to the Eastern States, but my information from District Managers from the South and the West is along the same lines, and I am confident that business in general has turned the corner and is well on the upward swing."

" One cannot help but be impressed by the evidences of business revival in the important manufacturing centers. New England factories are gradually opening up after a long shut-down. Cleveland and Detroit both show signs of greater activity than in many months. The Ford plant in Detroit is almost back to normal. Business men in Pittsburgh stated that they were confident that the great manufacturing plants there would all be opening up between the 1st and 13th of August."

New Editor for Goldwyn

Reorganization of Department; Paul Bern Will Be in Charge

A REORGANIZATION of Goldwyn's editorial department has been put into effect, says an announcement from Goldwyn headquarters.

Paul Bern is named editor-in-chief, succeeding J. G. Hawks. Ralph Block, head of the editorial and scenario departments in the New York office, has been made associate editor. The staff of readers in New York will continue under his direction. Clayton Hamilton, who for the past year has been connected with the studio editorial force as adviser, has also been named an associate editor.

The reorganization of the department was announced by Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production at Culver City, at a dinner to studio executives given at the Los Angeles homes of Samuel Goldwyn, president of the corporation, last Saturday.

The naming of these three men as heads of the editorial department is in accord with the Goldwyn policy of giving young men important positions with the company. Mr. Bern is thirty-one and his assistants are also in the thirties.

Paul Bern, Goldwyn's new editor-in-chief, has had a long experience in theatrical amusements despite his youth. Although born in Hamburg, all of his theatrical experience has been gained in this country, to which he came at a youthful age. For five years he was an actor and stage manager on the speaking stage. He was a stock company director at Woonsocket, R. I., at Lowell, Mass., and at Lowell, Denver and other cities. He has been connected with the screen for seven years.

Ralph Block has been with the Goldwyn corporation for the past three years, having first been director of advertising and publicity, then going to England on a special mission in connection with the establishment of Goldwyn, Ltd., in London.

Clayton Hamilton has been with Goldwyn for a year and had but recently renewed his contract for another year, having obtained an extension of his leave of absence from Columbia University where he had been conducting classes in the drama for several years.

6 Paramounts for August

British Film, MacLean, Hart, Miss Clayton, Meighan, " Fatty " on List

SIX features are listed in the Paramount releases for August as announced by S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution. These include a Donald Crisp British production, a Thomas H. Ince production starring Douglas MacLean and a William S. Hart production, the first to be released in several months.

The release for August 7 is Donald Crisp's production, " The Princess of New York," made at the London studios. Margaret Trumbull wrote the scenario for this picture, which is based upon the novel by Cosmo Hamilton. David Powell is featured, while the title role is played by Mary Glynne. On the 14th comes William S. Hart's production, " The Whistle." In this picture Mr. Hart steps out of his usual Western role to portray a workman in a big industrial plant.

On the same date is scheduled the Thomas H. Ince production, " Passing Thru," starring Douglas MacLean. The story is by Agnes Christine Johnston and it was adapted by Joseph Franklin Poland. William Seiter directed. Playing opposite Mr. MacLean is Madge Bellamy. Thomas Meighan in " The Conquest of Canaan " is scheduled for the 21st. This is an adaptation by Frank Tuttle of the famous novel by Booth Tarkington, R. William Neill being the director. Doris Kenyon is Mr. Meighan's leading woman.

Sharing the same date on the schedule is Ethel Clayton in William D. Taylor's production, " Wealth," from Cosmo Hamilton's story, " The Almighty Dollar." Julia Crawford Ivers wrote the scenario. Herbert Rawlinson is Miss Clayton's leading man.

On the 28th comes Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in " Crazy to Marry," which is described by Paramount as the liveliest comedy which " Fatty " has appeared in since his two-reeler days. It is from an original story by Frank Condon adapted by Walter Woods and directed by James Cruze.

Will Rogers Completes First Two Reeler

THE recently formed Will Rogers Productions Co., which has been working at the Hollywood Studio, has completed the first one of a series of two-reel subjects to be made, starring Will Rogers under the direction of Clarence G. Badger, who directed Rogers in a number of five-reel films for Goldwyn. The first film is at present known as "Faith" and has Irene Rich, Little Joe Roberts, a one-year-old baby, Bert Sprotte and Nick Cogley as principals. Work has been started on a roping picture as yet untitled, and the next film to be made will be a Western. Mason N. Litson, formerly Goldwyn Production manager is business manager of the Rogers organization and advised that release for these subjects will be announced after the completion of the third subject.

25 Years Making Censor Proof Pictures

In answer to the cries for censorship Colonel William N. Selig offers "The Rosary." When he joined forces this year with Sam E. Rork to revive the two-reel drama with all-star casts, he selected "The Rosary" to be the first of the new organization's special features because this old classic is not only one hundred per cent clean and wholesome in theme, but because it is a powerful human drama, never descending to the vulgar or the salacious.

Col. Selig points with pride to the fact that in his twenty-five years in the motion picture business, he has never had a picture turned down by the censors.

New Company Producing Western Dramas

Goldburg Heads Company

Well Known Independent to Supervise Texas Guinan Productions

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week that Jesse J. Goldburg is the head of the Texas Guinan productions, which were announced in the News last week. Mr. Goldburg, before becoming associated with the Texas Guinan Productions, made a thorough study of conditions and decided that the present depressed conditions were only temporary.

Mr. Goldburg stated that in the course of his investigations he was discouraged by independent producers, well meaning but misguided friends, who urged that this was the most inopportune time to attempt to sell or dispose of state right or independent attractions; that not more than twenty-five per cent of the United States could be disposed of upon a cash basis; that state right buyers were without cash reserve or funds; and that most of them, where they could without a breach of contract, were canceling releases for the future rather than buying. Mr. Goldburg's investigation among the state right buyers, however, while bringing out an admission that business was readjusting itself and that it was not of that sensationally prosperous character that has existed the past year or two, disclosed, nevertheless, that this sudden depression and readjustment has resulted in a demand for meritorious or worth-while attractions; that "any old thing" which heretofore got by, would no longer be tolerated by the theatre owners or the public and, while there was some financial stringency, nevertheless they were ready to contract for meritorious productions for release in the fall and, what was more surprising to Mr. Goldburg, they were ready to pay cash for them, that is the exchange that caused a reserve surplus to be set aside for just the present situation and emergency.

The present series of attractions will be divided one-half Westerns and one-half dealing with subjects of the Northwest but true art and real story material, connected with proper characterization, will be the meat and substance of these attractions. That when it is said that they will be made to play any first-run house in the country it is meant that the productions will be invested with every detail that will place them on a par with superior feature attractions.

Miss Guinan will not operate with any stock company but each production will be cast separately and where it is possible to secure a male lead to play opposite to her, one with a reputation and screen name, that person will be cast for the part.

Mr. Goldburg will leave for Los Angeles the week of August 1 and actual production work will commence August 10 under his personal supervision.

Equity Reports Big Sale

Federated Exchange Buys Western States on "Black Panther's Cub"

WHAT constitutes one of the biggest sales of State Right territory on any independent production was consumated last week when Louis Baum, Sales Manager for Equity Pictures Corporation completed a deal whereby Federated Film Exchanges of Seattle and Denver secure the territorial rights for "THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB" for the States of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Utah.

"If any depression exists in the film industry at the present moment, it doesn't seem to exist to any great degree in the Independent field" says Mr. Baum.

"There may be a few of the larger and costlier theatres who have shut down temporarily owing to the heat and general conditions but the smaller houses seem to be going very well."

"It all reverts back to the sound argument of 'good pictures that are genuine box office winners, go good at any time, anywhere in spite of any conditions'" continues Mr. Baum.

"Give the public a real production with a real Star such as Florence Reed and business goes on just the same as ever.

"The argument that Broadway Stars not meaning anything in pictures is all wrong. Just the very opposite is true for where the public sees the usual stars constantly in pictures, they find a welcome relief in seeing new faces, particularly those of legitimate Broadway favorites of whom they have heard but whom they have never seen."

"It is our intention of billing "THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB" in an extraordinary manner," says Mr. Sheffield of Federated.

Texas Guinan, who with her own producing company will commence work on August 10

Organization Change in Federated Film

A change which, it is claimed, will strengthen the organization of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., has just been announced. The change is the purchase of the Atlanta, Ga., office of the Pearce Films, the Federated franchise-holder for that territory, by M. Mitchell, owner of the Quality Film Service.

Mr. Mitchell is one of the best known film exchange managers of the South. He has consolidated the two offices, selecting the names of Federated Films of Atlanta for the new firm.

Western Import Buys Fight Film Rights

The Western Import Company, Inc., of New York City, announce that they have purchased all the foreign rights, with the exception of Canada, South America, Scandinavia and Belgium, to the official pictures of the Carpentier-Dempsey fight. They also own the rights to the Far East except such territory as was sold by Fred Quimby in the Far East before July 25, the company states.

W. J. Bryan's Daughter a Movie Director

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan and the wife of Major Reginald Owen of the British Royal Engineers, arrived in New York last week and while here exhibited a completed five-reeler, "Once Upon A Time" which she wrote and directed.

"White Masks" Set for Sept. 1

Franklyn Farnum Star of W. M. Smith Production

THE first of the W. M. Smith productions is scheduled for release September 1, and is entitled "The White Masks," adapted from the People's magazine story of the same name by E. H. Corr. In the cast headed by Franklyn Farnum, are Virginia Lee, "Shorty" Hamilton and Al Hart.

At a private screening a few days ago, to which a large number of producers, exchange men and exhibitors were invited. "The White Masks" was voted by all, a premier presentation and worthy of the billing "Super-Special." The picture is tense with action, and startling situations and climaxes abound in plenty.

This is the first picture made by the Smith Company, and heralds a great many successes to follow. The organization at Tulsa, Okla., is unusually large and capable and the studio and facilities for the producing of stellar plays are entirely adequate.

Stories by celebrated authors have been secured by the W. M. Smith Productions, Inc., and these will be filmed before November 30. These stories are all worthy of topline mention, and the writers themselves are extremely popular with magazine and "best seller" readers.

"The White Masks" may be termed an unusual photo-drama. It is described to be mighty in theme and action, and is said to have all the heart appeal necessary to create profound interest.

Franklyn Farnum heads the list of stars assembled in the making of "The White Masks." Farnum was never better cast, nor has he ever had as great an opportunity to display his versatile talents, as that given him in this red-blooded story that fairly bristles with tense interest.

With Franklyn Farnum is seen Virginia Lee, late co-featured player in Robertson-Cole's production, "If Women Only Knew." Miss Lee is a pretty and a clever actress and just the "ticket" to enhance the woman lead in "The White Masks." President Wm. Smith of the Smith Productions, Inc., declares her made to order for the part, and that the author must have had the charming blonde in mind when writing the role of Olga Swenson, who matters very much in the unfolding of the stirring story.

"Shorty" Hamilton assays a humorous role, yet a character that permits the clever cow-puncher to display histrionic ability. "Shorty" is a natural born comedian, nothing artificial about the diminuative artist, just a rollicking sort of chap that puts life, pep and punch into every scene. "Shorty" is seen as a prize-fighter of questionable ability, yet under the tutorship of Farnum, he is made to win decisively against an opponent much heavier and scientific. "Shorty's" mannerisms are extremely laughable, not only in the fight scene but in the more vivid "shots" scattered throughout the picture.

Al Hart, one of the most capable character men in films assumes the heavy role in "The White Masks." Hart has never been seen to better advantage, according to advices from the Tulsa studio, and his enactment of the part in Mr. Corr's story is unusually well done. Mr. Hart was lately featured in a series of Westrat pictures, and favorable comment was given him for his splendid portrayals.

The W. M. Smith Productions, Inc., made their home in Tulsa, Okla. Here they have erected a wonderful studio, capable of housing extraordinary large companies, and permitting them to stage sumptuous productions. The lighting equipment is said to be the largest and finest east of Los Angeles, and the many acres of land surrounding this mammoth building permits the company to make many exteriors that are unequaled.

George Holt has the direction of the Smith players, and his ability as a director is plainly discernible in the production of "The White Masks." Many extraordinary situations and climaxes are brought about entirely by his capable efforts it is declared.

Reginald Lyons has direct supervision of the photography.

Wm. Smith, president of the company declared during the week that he has under way a number of very fine releases scheduled for the coming months, among them being "So This Is Arizona," from the Argosy-All Story Weekly; "Crossroads" and "The Goldgrabbers."

While executive offices are located in Tulsa, Okla., offices are being maintained in New York city also.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to March 26, 1921.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Play Ball"

(Sketchographs-Educational—One Reel)

WHETHER this one reeler will interest the women folks is a question. It will certainly interest the men folks for it is "chuck full" of the kind of information that is inspiring and instructive to the red blooded male.

The writer or director, Julian Ollendorff, has mixed this reel with sketches and moving pictures of America's most popular pastime, from the time of its inception, up to the present day.

His sketches are true to life and carry the mind back to the year 1845 when the old "Knickerbockers" played their first games around New York. The titles explain that these old-timers never used gloves, always stood with one foot on the bag and that the umpire sat on a chair some distance to the right of "home plate."

During the Civil War, the titles and sketches explain, the game received its most important developments, the soldiers of both armies playing it when opportunity afforded.

The story then jumps to 1876, when the National League was organized and gives some very interesting data in sketch form concerning the lives of the famous players of that period and the incidents that happened. Eighteen hundred and eighty to ninety then takes its place upon the screen with illustrations of the famous Captain Anson of Chicago, Kelly of Boston and Rusie of New York. And then comes the famous trio who made their debut on the Baltimore Orioles and who are successful today—McGraw, Jennings and Robertson. Matthewson, Cobb, Wagner, Speaker and last but not least "Babe" Ruth are all there in the regular line-up with the latter illustrating in the "movies" his tremendous "swat."

During the run of the film the author has injected a few moving pictures which are used to show the interest the American youngster takes in his "game of ball."

This is the first of a new series of single-reels, to be issued one-a-month, beginning August 7. —FRANK LEONARD.

"Hurricane Hutch"

(Seitz-Pathe Serial—15 Episodes)

THE "stunt-a-minute" star, Charles Hutchison, certainly sets a dizzy pace for his contemporaries in the serial field through risking life and limb in "Hurricane Hutch," the latest product from Pathe. This serial is a George B. Seitz production and starts on high and continues at breakneck speed with its stunts. No matter about the plot. It may be familiar and charged with hokum. The serial patrons do not care about the story interest other than the fact that they must see the villain foiled and the hero successful. In skeleton form it concerns a scarf in which is embroidered the hiding place of a formula for making paper from seaweed.

Seitz has taken his players to the vicinity of Ausable Chasm, which affords a wealth of picturesque scenery for backgrounds. The star who is also the author, has written some death-defying stunts for himself. He dives into the churning river and is tossed over waterfalls and rocks and saves the heroine in the nick of time. The most conspicuous thrill in this snappy and interesting serial is when he rides a motor-cycle over railroad ties and leaps a bridge. This scene will leave them gasping.

There is something doing most every minute. And if you don't think there is any conflict be advised that Warner Oland is present registering his sauve and subtle personality in villainous employment. Lucy Fox is the heroine and is attractive enough to be rescued from a hundred dangers. Get this quick. You'll have them on the sidewalk in droves making a drive for the box-office. Hutchison will make friends—a lot of them—if the first three episodes offer any criterion.—LAURENCE REID.

"Peaceful Alley"

(Warner-Federated Comedy)

"PEACEFUL ALLEY," in which Monty Banks plays the featured role, is a good comedy of the slapstick variety. The pursuit element predominates throughout, but some novel gags, lively incident, and amusing situations will provoke some laughs despite the stereotyped character of the chase. The opening shots, presenting Banks as "a son of leisure" seated in a luxurious limousine and then cutting suddenly to a flat-car showing the auto to be really a piece of freight in transit, are especially laughable.

The early part of the action shows the comedian in a series of unsuccessful attempts to retain possession of a bank-roll which has by chance fallen into his hands. The story then enters an entirely new phase. Banks takes a job as a rent collector but solely for the purpose of gathering enough funds to prevent the dispossess of a Salvation Army lassie from her prayer hall. The adventures that Monty has in Peaceful Alley as a collector of belated rent accounts will likely prove a riot with devotees of the slapstick. The length is two reels. Gilbert W. Pratt directed.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Sweet Daddy," "Chick-Chick," "Bride and Groom"

(Three Two-Reel Mirth Comedies—Reelcraft)

THE first two of the comedies listed above, namely, "Sweet Daddy," and "Chick-Chick," feature the English comedian, Tweedy, erstwhile known as Tweed-Dan. They belong to the unadulterated slapstick brand wherein the principal funmaker employs trick devices, hurls things right and left, and indulges in the w. k. chase. Tweedy is past-master at the slapstick style, but there is nothing really funny in his method because he exaggerates in putting over his stunts. If one trick is used successfully he must repeat it until it loses its punch. Again he offends by overworking his facial muscles for pantomime. The comedian belongs to the old school, the style of which was to pound home the points and leave nothing to suggestion. "Sweet Daddy" finds him a hen-pecked husband who flirts with a girl, of a musical review called the same as the title. He gets into all sorts of difficulties before his mannish wife catches him and chains him to the dishes in the kitchen.

"Chick-Chick" hits a higher average and presents Tweedy as a city slicker who goes to the country to marry his "hick" cousin. There are some amusing scenes when the big town fellow attempts to use his manners at the table. The corn-feds show him a trick or two with the knife and fork. Finally he rebels at the boobish way of the girl, and she is spirited enough to go away and receive some education in the customs of the city. She returns with plenty of dash and style. The comedy is pretty good in this one, but the outstanding feature is the rural atmosphere.

"Bride and Groom" features Billy Quirk, who will be remembered as one of the pioneers in comedy expression. Of the three sketches, this one tops them all in point of humor and spontaneity of action. The plot tells of a young man who must marry within a stipulated time to inherit a vast fortune. An old idea which has been dressed up with refreshing incident and a few amusing gags. The hero proposes to every girl he meets so as to be certain that one will respond. In a moment of despair he selects one who fails to keep her appointment on time. The offering breezes through in good style.—LAURENCE REID.

"Feathers"

(Prizma—Selznick—One Reel)

THIS is an interesting little number which serves in acquainting us with birds. The different colors are brought forth vividly with the Prizma process and any bird-lover is apt to go into ecstasies concerning the various species. This isn't a motion picture but more of a stereoptican study because the feathered friends are stuffed instead of being alive. Perhaps the feat of catching them in their native haunts and singing and throbbing with life proved too much of a difficulty. Naturally the picture is not as interesting from this point of view. Prizma has apparently gone to some bird museum and collected the stuffed specimens. The male is featured mostly because of more spread of feathers. Some of the birds are exceedingly rare and native to uninhabited regions.—LAURENCE REID.

"Rainbow Island"

(Lloyd and Pollard Reissue-Pathe—One Reel)

THE team of Lloyd and Pollard are the star performers in this comedy, which is one round of laughs from beginning to end.

And it makes no difference whether they have seen this one before or not, its good for a return engagement.

In "Rainbow Island" the snappy comedians are stranded on an island in the South Seas and get into many difficulties with the natives

The queen falls in love with Pollard, but he succeeds in transferring her love to Lloyd and as a result is fattened for the pot.

Let them see it.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Swat the Fly!"

(Kineto Review)

THIS instructive and scientific number should be shown on the screen everywhere. The churches and schools should present it if for no other reason than it teaches a valuable lesson in the art of maintaining health by swatting the fly. Wise is that exhibtor who runs a "housewife" matinee and invites the feminine patrons to look it over.—Length 1 reel.—LAURENCE REID.

(Paramount)

Arbuckle Returns to Slapstick and Provides Much Humor

THE Fatty Arbuckle of the slapstick comedy is back with us again in his latest contribution "Crazy to Marry," a picture which relies principally upon gags and incident and exaggerated buffoonery for its appeal. It is a simple little offering that involves two sets of lovers and develops after the popular style of the two-reeler—introducing the w.k. chase. The corpulent comedian does not wait long in getting started and one knows for a certainty that the slapstick is present when he plunges into a pool for the sake of rescuing a maiden in distress. The early incident has to do with a scheming dowager whose plan is to ensnare Arbuckle into matrimony. But this is very tame compared to the gags which involve handsome Bull Montana.

This picturesque Apollo of the screen comes very near walking away with the picture. He is a dangerous thief while Arbuckle is a surgeon. The former is paroled in the medico's care so that an operation may be performed upon his cranium, thus bringing about a cure of his criminal complex. A merry shout will greet the scene when Bull walks away with the surgeon's tools as the latter is called away to his wedding ceremony. The thief starts in pursuit but has a difficult time keeping up with him. In fact he has to resort to stealing a bicycle, a motorcycle, a flivver, a moderate-priced car and even a Rolls-Royce before he succeeds. He jumps from one vehicle to another when the minions of the law make it too hot for him. It is when he drives into view with the Rolls-Royce that the laughter becomes really explosive.

This gag will bring the house down. Bull's grinning countenance and his individual style certainly puts it over. The offering is inclined to drag whenever the incident loses its punch for a moment. However, Arbuckle and Montana jump to the rescue in time so any criticism looks like petty fault finding. We must say that the heroine, charmingly played by Lila Lee, is introduced rather arbitrarily. But the point doesn't matter because one is too busy watching Fatty change his hat and take a mud bath and spoil Charles Ogle's cement sidewalk. It looks strange to see this legitimate character actor doing a brief bit, but he gets away with it with some clever incident. The comedy builds to a conventional finish with the two sets of lovers finding their right partners. The final show is a scream. Fatty is happily married and is breakfasting with his wife. They glance down. The spectator imagines that a baby will be shown. But it is Bull reclining on a divan. He registers the biggest smile ever shown on the screen while knitting during his convalescence. This is a snappy comedy and will be enjoyed everywhere. It packed them in at the Rialto on an extremely hot night.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

The production is said to contain enough real legitimate comedy to satisfy anybody. Among the supporting cast are Lila Lee, who appears in the opposite role, and Bull Montana, who possesses an undeniable skill for interpreting comedy.

"SHAMS OF SOCIETY"
(Robertson-Cole)

Neglected Wife Formula Burdened with Irrelevant Detail

THE neglected wife formula serves as the background of this picture and the lesson to be derived from it for selfish husbands loses its force in the array of irrelevant sequences and incidental scenes which clutter up the plot and make it anything but a sample of direct continuity. The author has attempted to refurbish the familiar pattern and his effort is commendable in trying to take it out of conventional channels. However, in his aim for originality he has introduced so much superfluous detail that the theme misses fire. There is a great deal of action wasted in planting the characters, but one has no time to become really acquainted with any individual figure, because they pass in view so frequently.

"Shams of Society" carries no sort of preachment until the climax, at which point it becomes decidedly weak because the dramatic sequence gives way to a conventional movie ending. The wife is denied spending money and picks up with a woman of little character, who intrigues her into gambling at the roulette table and causing her to become heavily in debt. There is no direct action visible in any part of the picture. A benevolent friend carries the plot for a time, and scenes are given up to showing Jewish customs and habits which, while interesting, have no part in advancing the story. The "bar mitzvah" party offers good incident, but it seems out of place. The offering has been developed to make it as "in-tri-kut" as possible, and in its favor is a note of suspense which is destroyed in the saccharine climax.

While the figures of society act to the manner born—it is a sort of shady society with which they are identified. The picture plants an effective contrast in showing the respect for the home among the Jewish figures and the love of the dross and sham among the Gentiles. Macy Harlam, polished and suave of manner as usual, interprets a character which to all appearances is bent on deep-dyed villainy. He has the heroine in his clutches because of a theft, and the husband of the woman has conveniently followed to execute vengeance and is peering in the window, when the Jewish figure shows the woman his family and advises her to give up her sham. He also advises his pleasure loving sisters to take heed of the perils of society. The picture is well mounted, there being finely appointed interiors with the scenes entirely correct. Trimmed of its extraneous detail it would look much better. The action is too jumpy as it stands. The players enact their parts in a creditable fashion.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Shams of Society" is the title of the interesting photoplay which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast of celebrated players including Montague Love, Barbara Castleton, Macey Harlam, Julia Swayne Gordon and Edwards Davis. This picture is a domestic drama which presents an argument for the maintenance of the home—that the house will fall to pieces if there is no sacrifice of selfish interests. Herbert Porter is wealthy but thinks that his wife can maintain her self-respect with little need of money.

There comes a time when she finds herself involved in crime, and to find a way out of her dilemma she encourages the advances of a man whom she believes a scoundrel. But at the psychological moment he reveals his genuine friendship and his advice is sufficient to make her realize her error—that the effort to keep up with society is a sham. The picture is well fortified with dramatic moments, is well staged and finely acted.

PROGRAM READER

A highly interesting picture showing the shams of society in which men play fast and loose and women forget the meaning of home will be shown at the ———— theatre next ————. It is a picture which carries a deal of dramatic action—action that is unfolded in scenes and situations of compelling interest and appeal. The photoplay also offers a lesson that husbands and wives should sacrifice petty interests and meet one another half-way if they would seek happiness. A celebrated and competent cast interprets this colorful entertainment—a cast including Barbara Castleton, Montague Love and others equally well known. "Shams of Society" will meet with your approval.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this is a society drama which carries a strong moral—the best plan in advertising is to feature its compelling theme and advising your patrons that there is a lesson to be gained from it for those who are married or about to enter matrimony. The title is rather stereotyped and may not mean much in your arguments. Also the plot will not stand detailing because of its familiarity. However, you have a cast of prominent names to exploit. Every patron is acquainted with Montagu Love, Barbara Castleton, Julia Swayne Gordon and one or two others. So feature their names.

"WET GOLD"
(Williamson-Goldwyn)

Arim Melodrama Carries Adventure and Atmosphere

THERE is no denying that this picture will score for its hazardous line of adventure and the fact that its novel backgrounds provide atmosphere is as unusual as it is appealing. J. E. Williamson, the pioneer in submarine photography, may be depended upon to present something out of the ordinary because of a sure grasp with his subject. He has written a story of adventure and retribution which concerns pirates, submarines, deep-sea diving and sunken treasures, with an element of romance to give it flavor, and has journeyed to the waters surrounding the Bahamas to give color and realism to the plot.

Some may say that the line of action is illogical and that what takes place could never happen. These spectators, reasoning from this point of view, will fail to take into consideration the fact that any story of deep sea activities is apt to be more colorful than truthful. Even Stevenson and Conrad have used their imaginations. The main question is, does it entertain? From our vantage point in a Broadway house we noticed that the picture held them in their seats and that their interest never wavered from the screen. There is primitive action a-plenty—the kind of action that moves because of its elements of adventure, excitement and picturesque photography. Indeed the film may be called instructive in many ways. Certainly it acquaints us with the hazardous work of deep-sea divers.

The scenes which exploit these characters are realistic to the core. The terrific water pressure sees to that. Also the painstaking care of author and director to make the details correct. A real submarine is used and the incident which involves it is near enough to the genuine to be passed by a naval expert. Surely the landlubbers out front won't know the difference. The plot revolves around the recovery of sunken treasure stolen by pirates. an escaped victim and his party being the disciples of righteousness, and a band of cutthroats providing the melodramatic conflict. Before the hero triumphs he is subjected to many hazardous thrills, which include a severe punishment at the hands of the villains and a near-submergence in quicksand. The enemy gives no quarter and the suspense is keen when a torpedo is dispatched to destroy the good people sheltered on a near-by island. There are no light moments. None are expected. The photography is so novel that this feature alone will interest even those who may scoff at the story. Ralph Ince directed and played the leading role and acquitted himself splendidly in each department.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A novel picture is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Wet Gold," written by J. Ernest Williamson and directed by Ralph Ince. It is a feature which exploits remarkable photography in the fact that most of the scenes were taken underseas. It is a grim story of adventure and retribution which involves a search for stolen treasure. Pirates have committed the theft and the treasure is believed to be in a sunken ship.

Cromwell, the leading character, is one of the escaped victims of the pirates and he conducts the search for the gold accompanied by the aged, but plucky Col. Hamilton and the latter's pretty daughter, Grace. There are other members of the party who accompany the intrepid Cromwell. The picture offers several novel thrills because of the undersea incident, and certainly compels the spectator to pay strict attention. Ralph Ince, who also plays Cromwell in addition to directing the feature, gives a rugged performance and the other players give a good account of themselves.

PROGRAM READER

One of the distinctively novel pictures of the year is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Wet Gold," written by J. Ernest Williamson, a writer and director of submarine stories and life beneath the briny deep. It is a picture which carries a rich assortment of thrills because of the undersea scenes and the melodramatic action which moves with vigor and vividness throughout its length. Ralph Ince, one of the leading directors and actors of the screen, plays the leading role and is also responsible for the direction. "Wet Gold" is a novelty because of its photographic appeal and the unusual settings. Come and be thrilled.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a novelty in screen production and you should herald the fact broadcast. Tell your patrons that the chance is theirs to see how life is lived beneath the waves. Tell that it offers several thrilling adventures and acquaints them with the life of divers. Exploit the picture as a melodramatic novelty. Play up the name of Williamson. The author is one of the leading fictionists of the screen in the telling of submarine stories. And also play up Ralph Ince, who directed the feature and played the leading role. You can feature a quartette singing sea chanties for a prologue. And scenics of the rolling deep would be appropriate for the rest of your program.

CATCH LINES

"THUNDERCLAP"
(Fox)

Great for the Gallery Gods

THERE is one thing about this picture which will certainly be accepted by every patron—it certainly gives one his money's worth. Every stock trick of stage and screen has been employed to make this a smash-bang melodrama. And it comes near to winning the prize of being the mellowest concoction ever conceived. Those who wonder at all the hokum and the manner in which conveniences and coincidences are introduced and accept them lightly will probably think Fox is having some fun with them. Those who take it seriously cannot condemn it if they remember that "it happens in the movies."

"Thunderlap" resembles a serial because of its rapid-fire action and thrills and the absence of logic and suspense. Truly not a single element is forgotten. The picture starts by introducing the juvenile interest, and follows up by showing the most consistently vicious villain that ever graced a photoplay—a villain who strikes his wife and makes her a paralytic for nigh on twenty years, and gambles and cheats and stoops to the depths of crime before a bullet fired from one of his fleeced victims strikes him down—the shock of the gun-play restoring the health of the long-suffering spouse. All the old-time favorite stock tricks are there and each is given its proper emphasis. The little girl grows up and is used as the "decoy" to lure foolish gamblers to their ruin; the boy of her childhood days becomes the drudge of the gambling house and the pathos and heart interest are present when he jumps to the rescue of the paralytic and the girl.

These scenes are somewhat related to "Over the Hill"—the crippled character is a relative of the paralytic in "While New York Sleeps," and the race track episodes are related to "Checkers." The big moments of these pictures and many others are employed and pass in kaleidoscopic review on the screen. There is no denying that the gallery gods will eat it up. As for the spectators in the orchestra seats they will be highly interested enough to see it through to its conventional ending. All the patrons upstairs and down should find excitement from the Chinatown sequence. The wily villains and their victims race through passages and tumble through trap doors. The racing scene is a thriller and rich in atmosphere. And the blowing up of the bridge and rescue of the hero from turbulent waters—this incident also packs a thrill. Mary Carr, of "Over the Hill" fame, duplicates her fine performance. She is so realistic as the paralytic that many of her scenes are unpleasant to witness. Walter McEwen plays a character part acceptably, while Barney Sherry as the villain is so good that hisses will he his reward. Violet Mersereau is the heroine.—Length, 8 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of three thoroughbreds—a girl, a boy and a horse—a picture of countless thrills and fast-moving action—a picture which starts the heart beating and causes the blood to tingle—that is "Thunderclap," the interesting melodrama which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. This story carries action, suspense, heart interest, juvenile appeal, pathos, sympathy, hate, jealousy, sentiment and romance. In fact it contains every known melodramatic ingredient.

The picture is interesting from inception to conclusion and affords a highly interesting two hours—in which the spectator is greeted with the blowing up of a bridge and a rescue from an angry stream, the horse-race and many others equally exciting. The cast includes Mary Carr, who again gives a wonderful performance, Barney Sherry, Violet Mersereau and Walter McEwen.

PROGRAM READER

See the thrilling rescue of the boy from an angry stream. See the blowing up of the bridge and the turbulent waters carrying the victims down stream. See the thrilling horse-race with the entries running neck and neck. See the rescue of the girl from Chinese desperadoes. Come and be entertained. Nothing like it on the screen. It contains every quality to fascinate you. Next ———— at the ————.

SUGGESTIONS

You can bill this as the liveliest melodrama ever conceived. Tell them that the patrons are certain of their money's worth. Bill it as greater than "Checkers" and "While New York Sleeps" rolled into one. Bill it as the greatest racing picture ever made. Play up the title. It is a good one to exploit. Spread teasers and readers about. Distribute button-hole hangers with the head of a horse pictured in the center. This will be in line with what is done at the race track. Bill it as a crackling, enjoyable. fast-moving melodrama with a thrill a minute. Play up the cast, paying special attention to Mary Carr.

CATCH LINES

See "Thunderclap," the picture of three thoroughbreds. Positively the liveliest melodrama ever shown. Next ————. See it.

"SHAME"
(Fox)

Oriental Story Filmed in Fine Atmosphere

"SHAME" gets away in a blaze of glory. For the first four reels the picture is the ultimate in technical achievement and atmosphere, enhanced by good acting, competent direction, pleasing incident and some of the finest color photography ever conceived and then the story goes into episodic melodrama with the logic of the plot suffering considerably.

It does not seem plausible that a young man brought up as "David Fielding" is alleged to have been, a friend of the Chinaman, "Li Chung," who had accompanied him to America and speaking the Chinese language, should not know about his mother, would not have been told about the villainy of "Foo Chang"; should have believed "Foo Chang's" story that he was the son of a Chinese woman; would not have gone to "Li Chung" immediately on being so informed; or be so terribly upset by the knowledge, seeing that according to the titles "The Lotus Blossom" was a princess, that he felt called upon to flee to Alaska, taking with him his infant son who might reasonably be expected to die en route.

However, the lack of logic in story quite often detracts not at all in the entertainment value of drama and this will probably be the case with "Shame."

There is plenty of action of the sort that audiences like. A fight between the hero and a wolf will bring 'em out of their seats. Added attractions are found in good snow scenes, occasional bits of comedy, the actions of a cute "kid," some really dramatic moments, etc.

The production has cost a lot of money. Big sets, especially those for the part of the story, laid in China, are the rule. One of these, a Chinese exterior, is perfection itself.

In acting honors, first place goes to William V. Mong, as "Li Chung." George Siegmann is consistently good, but the effect of his characterization is injured by the fact that it is not a good type for Oriental roles. John Gilbert is excellent as "William Fielding," but as the son overacts. One of the best performances is that of Anna May Wong as "The Lotus Blossom."—Length, 8 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A super-film attraction "Shame," with an all star case is scheduled for the ———— theatre for a ———— days showing beginning ————. "Shame" is a story of China, San Francisco and Alaska. It has been lavishly staged and contains much action of the sort that picture audiences always find entertaining. The plot of the drama is highly original telling in an interesting way the life story of a child born in China who grows to manhood in America only to have his parentage questioned.

Among the scenes that are especially to be commended is one showing the hero's fight with a huge timber wolf. The new natural color photography that aids in making scenes artistic is used with splendid results in many parts of the picture.

In the cast enacting "Shame" is George Seigmann remembered as a creator of villain roles in many big pictures among which is "The Birth of a Nation." Others of equal note are William V. Mong, star of "The Ten Dollar Raise," Anna May Wong, the pretty and talented little Chinese actress, Doris Pawn, Rosemary Theby and John Gilbert.

The feature is screened in eight reels. It was directed by Emmett J. Flynn and produced by William Fox.

PROGRAM READER

Another big William Fox super-special photoplay scheduled for the ———— theatre for a ———— days' showing beginning ———— is to be found in "Shame," an eight reel drama enacted by a strong cast of well known players and directed by Emmett J. Flynn.

"Shame" is largely an Oriental story having its beginning in China and later coming to San Francisco's Chinatown. In filming the feature something new and novel in the way of color photography has been used to excellent advantage. Artistic effects never before achieved are features of the production. In the cast are such well known players as George Seigmann, famous as a portrayer of villain roles since the days of "The Birth of a Nation," Doris Pawn, William V. Mong, Rosemary Theby and Jack Gilbert.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill from the production angle, promising big sets, thrills, atmosphere and a unique plot. Make much of the color photography. Certain names in the cast are worth mentioning, namely, Doris Pawn, Seigmann, Mong and two children, Mickey Moore and Frankie Lee. Use stills showing the big sets and the lavishness with which the feature has been produced. Big paper with the title headlined will be effective. Oriental prologues will be worth while. Lobby displays with Japanese lanterns and other Oriental knick knicks is recommended.

CATCH LINES

"That which brings reproach" is the definition of shame by Webster. See if you agree with Webster as the picture of this title unfolds.

Born in China yet not an Oriental or a Caucassian but a half-caste is what "Ming Tong" told David Fielding, wealthy San Francisco business man. And Fielding believed him. On this is founded the dramatic and thrilling story of "Shame."

"A DAUGHTER OF THE LAW"
(Universal)

A Particularly Good Melo Well Worth Seeing

"A DAUGHTER OF THE LAW" is the best Universal in which Carmel Myers has appeared. This does not mean that the star does any better work than in previous productions but that the story in itself is out of the ordinary. This together with a rather exceptional cast which carries the bulk of the action, and good direction, place the feature in the "above the average class."

The plot runs the gamut of the saloons, dance halls, dives, homes of the elite, etc., but does not linger long in any particular place. The story is decidedly strong in action and suspense, twisting and wriggling itself in and around the spectator's mind when he believes he has solved its object.

It is not until the final reel that the plot unfolds itself and this is in the nature of a surprise, for it appears evident that the villains are to make their escape over the border unmolested.

They are apprehended by the heroine and her father, who is aided by the detectives. All this taking place on a fast moving train.

This story is a good illustration of the fact that no matter how overworked a certain kind of plot may be it can be revived with good results, provided it is well told, is mixed with suspense and action and has the thrills to give it impetus.

And we must not forget the supporting cast of which none better could have been selected to portray the leading roles. They are Jack O'Brien, the leading man, Fred Kohler, who is particularly convincing as the heavy, Charles Arling, as the police inspector and father of the heroine, Dick Lareno and Joe Bennett.

The story tells of a criminal gang, operating on a big scale which is run down by the police after a sister attempts to save her erring brother. He is killed by the gang leader for which the latter is sent to jail. Making his escape the crook is pursued by the sister and her father and finally captured.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Carmel Myers, in "A Daughter of the Law," the Universal production at the ———— theatre brings to the role of Nora Hayes a flashing bewitching personality alive with magnetism and power.

The story, a virile one, filled with mystery and intrigue, was written by Wadsworth Camp whose detective yarns have made him famous among American writers.

Exciting incidents in which a criminal gang operating on a tremendous scale, are run down by the police after a series of situations in which a sister heroically attempts to save an erring brother, supply the base of a plot which sustains the interest throughout by constantly baffling the most astute minds.

Unlike many modern pictures in which the criminal element are shown working their nefarious trade in underworld scenes, "A Daughter of the Law" tells the story in a thrilling manner—but leaves many of the unpleasant details to the imagination of the audience.

A feature of the picture is a fight between the gang and the police in the interior of a magnificent home.

PROGRAM READER

It is generally believed that a criminal is the result of environment and training—in other words that he is born and brought up in an atmosphere of crookedness and aside from a certain code of "honor" practiced among the "gang" that he knows nothing concerning the morals and ideals of so-called respectable society.

Eddie Hayes, the son of an inspector of police refused all the approved standards and became a member of a nationally notorious gang of criminals with headquarters in the same city where his father was using his utmost to combat the criminal element.

Eddie's sister, Nora, brought up in exactly the same environment, responded to the opposite influence and tried in every way to save her brother from his career of crime. She was familiar with the workings of the underworld element through her interest in her brother, but the risks and excitement which apparently appealed to Eddie filled her with fear and disgust.

Morally courageous, however, Nora made a tremendous sacrifice in an effort to keep her brother from being caught by the police.

See this wonderfully thrilling story. It will fill you with excitement.

CATCH LINES

It is generally believed that a criminal is the result of his environment and training. This was not true of Eddie Hayes, the son of an inspector of police, for he refused all the approved standards. Did he live to see his folly out? See "A Daughter of the Law" and get a big thrill.

She was a beautiful girl and the daughter of a police inspector yet she entered the slums and mixed with the roughest element What was her object? See Carmel Myers in her latest Universal, "A Daughter of the Law."

Manufacturers of Safety Standard Equipment Are Now Organized

Expect Twenty Projector Manufacturers Will Be Enrolled in Association

We wish to congratulate the manufacturers and distributors of Safety Standard Film upon the formation of their new association, known as "Associated Manufacturers of Safety Standard Film and Projectors, Inc."

The incorporation of this company will do more toward the promotion and stabilizing of the use of motion pictures in the home, church, school, Y. M. C. A., etc., than any other organization could possibly do, as it is working along the right lines—the promotion of safety, which is absolutely impossible under any regulation when inflammable film is used.

Our attention was called, only last week, to a regulation passed by one of our leading States which allows the use of "approved" types of portable motion picture projectors without fireproof booths in factories and offices where employees assemble for instructional purposes, and in assembly halls of an area of 1,200 square feet or less where not more than two exhibitions are given each month. The ruling, as we have it, does not state whether the demand is made that only non-inflammable film should be used, though from the reading it is assumed that any kind of film can be used providing a "tight metal cabinet" is used for storing the films when not in use.

This, in our estimation, is only "beating the devil around the bush" and does not in any way protect the audience.

Had the Commission who have passed this regulation, stated that outside of motion picture theatres or auditoriums where approved fireproof booths are installed, no film could be used unless it be absolutely non-inflammable and then gone on to recommend the use of the Safety Standard, they would have had a safety regulation which would have been worthy of the name.

The education of the governing authorities throughout the country is something which must go on slowly and cannot be brought about over night. This is the work which can be, and must be, carried on and promoted by the Associated Manufacturers of Safety Standard Films and Projectors, Inc.

The officers of this new corporation are: President, A. F. Victor, Victor Animatograph Company; Treasurer, L. E. Davidson, United Projector & Film Co.; Secretary, Willard B. Cook, Fathescope Company of America, Inc.

We are told by the officers of this company that they expect to have a membership of at least twenty manufacturers of projectors using only the Safety Standard and film companies which have been and are being organized to handle and promote the sales of this Safety film. The NEWS wishes them every success possible in their undertaking, not only in the enlargement of their own organization, but in their endeavor to bring about a speedy realization of exhibition conditions and dangers as they actually exist.

The objects of this corporation are outlined as follows:

To enable the various firms and individuals engaged in the manufacture and sale of Safety Standard Films and Projectors to secure collective effort in developing and extending the Safety Standard interest outside of the theatre.

To disseminate as broadly as possible information and publicity with reference to the freedom from hazard in the general unrestricted use of Safety Standard Films and Projectors outside of the Theatre and to enable a prospective purchaser of motion picture equipment to intelligently decide which form is best adapted to his particular requirements.

The Associated Manufacturers will naturally be particularly active in securing the removal of restrictions and prejudice against the use of Safety Standard equipment everywhere. This should have the hearty support of all the Theatre interests.

The Association will assist Municipalities and States through Committees of Municipalities and Legislative Bodies in the framing of ordinances calculated to reduce fire hazard in the non-theatrical use of motion pictures.

The Association will also gather statistics and general information of interest to its Members and furnish this in its most practical form for their individual use.

The Association already includes in its Membership some of the largest firms engaged in the Safety Standard Industry and it is confidently anticipated that all manufacturers of Safety Standard Films, Projectors and accessories will take advantage of the benefits afforded by a membership therein. Have New Rheostat for Moving Picture Projection

Big Step In Advance Claimed by Mt. Vernon Company

Moving picture work imposes a specially severe duty on rheostats, as it requires a fairly large current capacity, and to give best results the rheostat should possess a low temperature co-efficient resistivity and a resistance that does not deteriorate to any appreciable extent with use.

The Ward Leonard Electric Company has recently developed a new type of rheostat construction for high-current capacity rheostats. This new construction employs units made of ribbon resistor material pressed into structural shape so as to facilitate assembly.

It is well known that for certain purposes ribbon resistors are preferable to cast iron on account of the difference in weight and breakability. However, one of the drawbacks to the use of ribbon has been the difficulty of supporting it in such a way as to prevent short-circuits between adjacent parts and yet not take an undue amount of space. This new method of construction is so planned as to make the unit self-supporting, by forming the metallic ribbon into a trough or channel-shaped section which is flattened at both ends and in the middle. The unit is then bent about the middle to form a "V," as shown in the accompanying illustration, and both ends are turned up to form supporting feet which permit the attachment of the unit to a suitable panel board.

The accompanying illustrations show an installation made in the Newman theatre at Kansas City. These machines are equipped with arcs consuming 120 amperes at 50 volts. Since they are connected to 110-volt circuits, there is 60 volts at 120 amperes to be absorbed by the rheostat. The usual moving picture machine absorbs approximately 50 amperes at 60 volts. Therefore, this installation requires an absorption of energy in the rheostat of approximately 2.4 times as much as the ordinary installation.

The particular rheostat employed for this installation is made up of two sections, a heavy-current section of Ribohm construction which forms the fixed resistance of the combination, and the fine-adjustment section of lower current capacity which is connected in parallel with the Ribohm section. The circuit diagram is shown in Figure 1. As will be seen, there are seven steps in parallel with the fixed step, and the adjustments are made by a radial switch. The adjustable steps consist of Vitrohm tubes so assembled as to give proper resistance and radiating capacity.

The rheostat as a whole is practically unbreakable, and as far as handling is concerned, it is impossible to damage it in any way. There is no part of the circuit that can rust or corrode, and the ventilation is so efficient that the rheostat will return to room temperature within two minutes after the current has been cut off. A rheostat of this kind if made up of cast iron grids would require hours to cool off. It would also occupy a much larger space and would weigh about three and a half times more.

The fixed resistance section of this rheostat is worthy of special consideration, as this method of construction is new and possesses certain characteristics that are valuable for many classes of work. Single units, such as shown in Figure 2, may be made up into complete rheostats or resistors by connecting any desired number of such units, either in series or in parallel. When connecting in series the units are mounted zig-zag fashion, being joined at the feet where they are held in close contact by a bolt through the panel board. When connected in parallel, they are joined by means of bus-bars which clamp the feet to the panel board. Taps are easily taken from the completed rheostat at the feet, as shown in Figures 3 and 4, the connection being brought to the front of the board by means of a long stud.

This inverted V-shaped unit when firmly attached to the panel possesses extreme rigidity and will maintain its position independently of expanson and contraction, even when heated a under heavy load conditions. When certai nickel-chromium alloys are used, the metal ma be operated at red heat without any noticeabl diminishing of the strength of the unit.

Resistor units built according to this syste have been given the name "Ribbon Units." The metal which is used in the ribbon may b any one of the resistor materials. Therefore

White matt glazed Terra Cotta

PANTAGES THEATRE
VANCOUVER, B. C.

B. MARCUS PRITECA, Architect

Missed the train - - .- - and two hours to wait!

"THIS stuffy railway station is no place for a two-hour wait," decided the Smith family, when they found they had missed the train. "Let's go see a picture!"

Walking down the street they saw several dingy looking, uninviting motion picture houses. But they kept on going. Finally they came to a theatre building of a totally different type. Its clean, white front was beautiful to look at. There was an unmistakable atmosphere of comfort and quality.

"They must have a good show in here," said Father Smith—and in they all went.

* * * *

AN attractive exterior does draw strangers to the theatre. And it builds up permanent patronage as well. The appearance of such a building proclaims success. Success is proof that the house provides the sort of entertainment people want.

Merely by glancing at the photograph, you can tell that Pantages Theatre, Vancouver, is a successful house; that it enjoys the hearty support of the public. This beautiful theatre is faced entirely with white matt glazed Terra Cotta. And in designing it, the wonderful decorative possibilities of Terra Cotta were skillfully utilized by the architect.

Terra Cotta is particularly suited to the construction and remodelling of motion picture theatres. It is a permanent structural material. It never changes in texture, color or finish; it resists fire, weather, age.

Write for our brochure, "The Theatre," and see what Terra Cotta is doing for many of the best theatres in America. For the interesting general story of the material itself ask for "Terra Cotta Defined." Either or both will be sent free on request by National Terra Cotta Society, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Strikingly Unusual Decorations Feature New Delft Theatre

Chinese Designs in Black, White, Silver and Green

In the opening of the Delft theatre at Marquette, Mich., something entirely new and strikingly unusual in the style of decorating of moving picture houses was revealed to the art. In coloring and type the interior and exterior of the theatre is extremely different from that in most playhouses.

When Morgan W. Jopling, president of the Delft Theatres, Inc., set out to have the Marquette house built, he determined to present to the public some remarkably new decorative schemes, and Agnes Foster Wright of New York was engaged to supervise that work.

Black, white, green and silver are the color combinations used throughout the theatre. The ticket booth resembles a Chinese pagoda, having large plate glass windows with glazed shades orientally decorated. Advertising display frames in the entrance are of silver leaf. Incoming and outgoing audiences are divided by a row of wrought iron ivy stands. Chinese panels on the lobby walls are made from old blocks depicting a Chinese village. The inner lobby has white walls and green panels, with furniture of old Spanish design in walnut and silver.

The foyer is done in a striking silver and black of Chinese design, the pilasters are decorated with diamond shaped mirrors with green frames. The ceiling of the auditorium is a large wheel design with a center of lights with silver plaque fixtures. The rear wall is a stencilled black and silver chevron design.

Another remarkable feature of the theatre is the long lobby. The theatre proper is located behind a railroad track and to have an entrance to the street it was necessary to tear down a small theatre and to build the lobby over the old site crossing the railroad tracks. So designed and so sealed is the lobby that the patron gets no evidence that he is crossing the tracks.

The Delft has a seating capacity of 1,250. Herbst and Quenzli, of Milwaukee, are the architects. Painting and decorations are by Koch and Woboril, Milwaukee. Stage setting was designed by Joseph Platt, of New York. R. H. Zerbel will manage the Delft.

Beautiful House for Jersey City

The K. T. and S. Amusement Co., a New Jersey Corporation, capitalized at $300,000, will erect a modern and up-to-date fireproof theatre and office building on the sites at 71 and 73 Newark Avenue and 62, 64, 66 and 68 Gregory Street, Jersey City. The lobby frontage of 40 x 100 feet will be on Newark Avenue and the theatre will run on 100 x 100 feet to Gregory Street.

The seating capacity will be 2500 and will be equipped with all modern conveniences for the patrons. From plans shown by the K. T. & S. Amusement Co., they are certainly giving Jersey City the benefit of a theatre beautiful.

Ambassador Hotel of Los Angeles Has Motion Picture Theatre

Magnificently Decorated House Incorporated in New Hotel

Evidence of the ever increasing popularity of the modern picture as a medium of high class entertainment, is contained in the incorporation of a complete motion picture theatre as a part of the new Ambassador Hotel which recently opened in Los Angeles, California.

Here we see one of the most magnificent hotels in the country so fully realizing and appreciating the value of motion pictures in offering excellent high-grade refined entertainment to its guests, that it has gone to the enormous expense of erecting a complete theatre as a part of the hotel itself.

The Ambassador Theatre is leased and operated by the Gore Bros. & Sol Lesser Enterprises and is under the personal management of S. Barrett McCormick, former manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Toledo, Ohio.

The selection of equipment that would be in keeping with the service, for which the Ambassador Hotels are noted, was given very careful consideration and it was finally decided by those interested that the Argus Enterprises, Inc., 836 South Olive St., Los Angeles, California, should take entire charge of completely equipping the projection room.

Accordingly the Argus officials set to work to prescribe the very latest and most highly developed projection equipment and also to design its most effective layout and equipped the Ambassador Projection room with two Simplex motor driven projectors equipped with the

A scheme of white, black, green and silver has been used in the interior, the pilasters being brilliant green and silver. The ceiling is decorated like an enormous wheel with a center light of festooned, graduated black glass balls. The fixtures are especially designed silver placques.

The rear wall is stenciled in a black and silver chevron design. Against this stand wrought iron torcheres in silver and black. Diamond shaped mirrors in green frames decorate the pilaster. The wall is further enriched by a beautiful Chinese panel in subtle tones of silver.

Modernist Decoration in an Unusual Cinema.

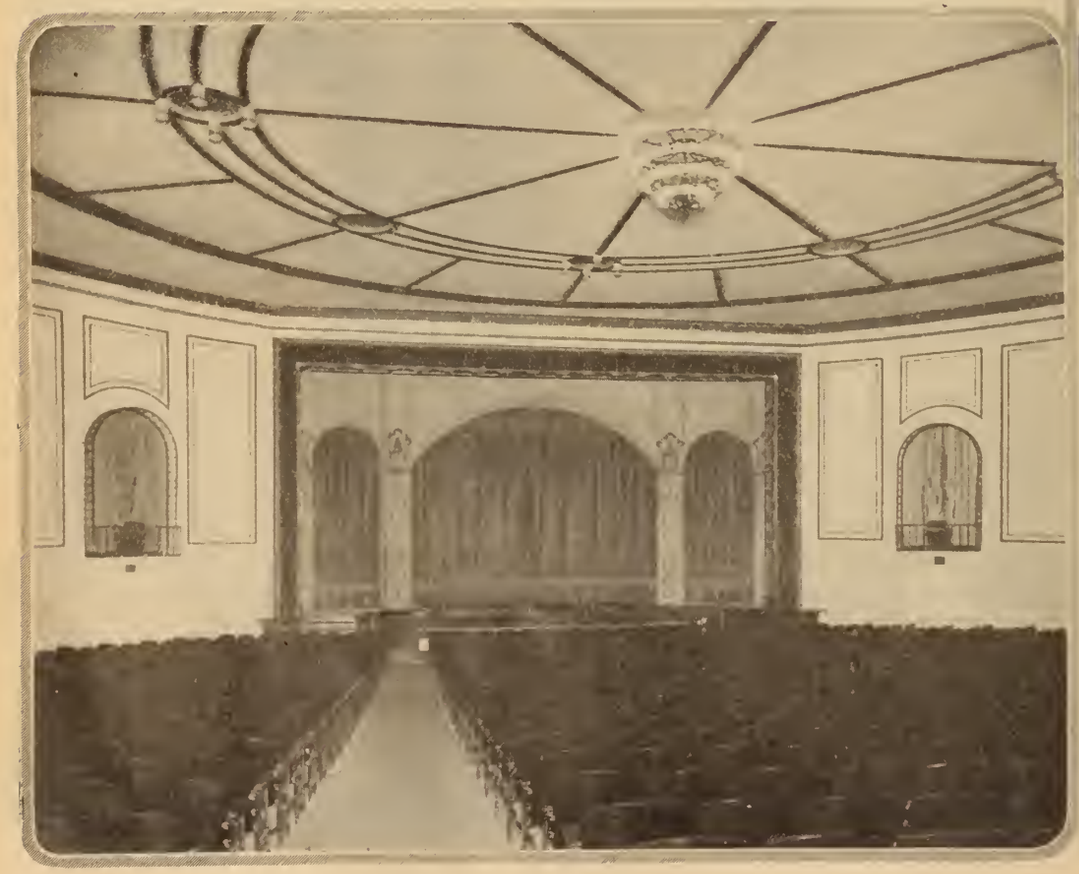
The proscenium is framed with silver panels in black trim, repeating the scheme of the pilasters creating an unusual atmosphere for the set. A fanciful Chinese feeling pervades the set, which depicts tropical flowers, large birds and a pagoda painted in delicate tints of green. The steps to the stage are marbleized verte antique.

A HARMONY IN WHITE AND BLACK BRILLIANT GREEN AND SILVER

Instead of the uncomfortable and commonplace boxes, the space is filled with a decorative wrought iron balcony and behind it a marvellous tree of wrought iron from which hang graduated black glass balls. A thin, brilliant green curtain over silver forms the background. Purple and green lights are played on the tree.



The decorations are planned so as not to detract from the performance, yet afford an interesting and unique atmosphere during intermission. Only on the stage is there any other color beside green. Here is a draw curtain of light yellow and green and lantern like decorations in clear light yellow and orange.

There are three foyers and each is treated somewhat differently This, the middle foyer, has Spanish furniture in black walnut decorated with silver. A large mirror has a handsome overpainting of brilliant birds and flowers, making a bright spot of color.

The ticket booth is in black, green and silver with decorated green glazed shades that carry out the same fanciful feeling and delicate colors of the stage set and the Chinese panels of the walls. The stairs at the right lead to the balcony, over which is the office of Morgan W. Jopling, President of the Company.

THE CHINESE FEELING IS ADAPTED FOR THIS PLAYHOUSE

In place of a railing to separate incoming and outgoing audiences is a line of wrought iron ivy stands. The walls of the foyer are decorated with a remarkable series of Chinese panels picturing a theatre in China. The colors are brilliant as the panels are printed from historical wood blocks.

The Floor-Covering for Your Theatre—

Of course, there are a lot of requirements to keep in mind when planning the floors of your theatre. But doesn't Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum fill them all? Let's see.

In the first place, it is sturdily tough and durable—well able to stand for years the grind of floor-service in the busiest theatre. Second, it can be cleaned easily, quickly and at remarkably low cost. Third, and of interest to your patrons—it is restfully quiet under tramping feet. Fourth, its soft brown tone blends artistically into any scheme of interior decoration.

Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum is built to conform to the rigid specifications of the U. S. Navy—built to stand the grinding wear of deck service on our fighting craft. But it is not only built to give this satisfactory service, it is guaranteed to give it.

On every roll of Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum you will find our Gold-Seal Guarantee—"Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back"—a guarantee that means just what it says.

And this, after all, is the big point: When you buy Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum you buy guaranteed floor-covering satisfaction.

Gold-Seal Cork Carpet

Here is a remarkably durable floor-covering, as restfully silent and yielding underfoot as a carpet of pine needles.

It is made in pleasing soft shades of green, terra cotta, and brown—the surface polished or dull—6 shades in all. Of course the same pledge of satisfactory service, the Gold-Seal Guarantee, goes with it.

Gentlemen: July 19th, 1921.

It is indeed a pleasure for me to write you with reference to the wonderful results you have had in photographing the Dempsey-Carpentier Contest for me. I had intended to write you sooner, thanking you for your co-operation, but the extreme pressure of business in getting this picture out is the cause of the delay.

Your work with the Akeley Camera is an outstanding feature throughout our production. The remarkable follow-up shots which you secured are invaluable in adding to the quality of our production, and the extreme close-ups of the entire action would lead one to believe that your camera was inside the ring during the entire fight, and I am quite sure that the remarkable work of the close-ups have settled many an argument between parties who had bet money on this fight and were undecided on certain technical points. The photographic quality of your work is superb.

We had invested a small fortune in our efforts to make this picture a success from every angle, and the pictures taken by the Akeley Camera were the best insurance policy that we could have possibly bought.

I cannot recommend the Akeley Camera too highly and extend to you my sincere and best wishes for success.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) F. C. QUIMBY.

It affords me great pleasure to testify to the sterling merits of the Powers Cameragraph,which,as a manager of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse",I have thoroughly tested.

In each of the cities where I have put on this big Rex Ingram-Metro picture, I have had installed two Powers 6-B Type E latest model Cameragraphs,duplicating those used during the long run of the "Four Horsemen"in New York City,and can vouch for their strength and beauty of construction,the ease with which they may be taken apart and reassembled,and the remarkable excellence of their projection. It is really a wonderful machine.

Install Cooling System in Livonia Theatre

The Livonia theatre, owned by the Wilonia Amusement company, Brooklyn, recently had a cooling system installed by the Typhoon Fan Company, New York. The installation consists of a 10 ft. Typhoon Twin set and a 10 ft. tandem set. One typhoon set has a span of 26 feet and is driven by a motor of 20 H. P. at a speed of 150 revolutions per minute.

The 10 ft. Tandem set which is located on the roof directly over the proscenium is also driven by a 20 H. P. motor. The interior of the house is kept cool and comfortable no matter what the weather, as there is a complete change of atmosphere every minute. There is no danger from draught as the air passes over the audience at a low velocity. During the winter months either one or both of the Typhoon sets can be reversed and used for exhausting the air instead of blowing the air in as is done during the summer.

The Typhoon system is adaptable to either old or new theatres, as the apparatus can be installed in practically any location, either outside or inside the theatre.

New Rheostat

present constructed, Ribohm rheostats are made by assembling Ribohm units on board of suitable insulation. All internal or cross connections are made with straps or wires carried on the board. In many cases the Ribohm units connect directly to the contact segments of rheostats, thus eliminating the wire connections usually required. The insulating base with its resistor complete is then inserted in a cage which completely encloses all love parts.

Expansion, due to heating, is taken care of very effectively by this method of construction, in which no strains are exerted upon the terminals, units or connections. Ribohm units as treated by the Ward Leonard Company are practically as rigid when red hot as when cool, and may be run continuously at high temperature without deterioration.

The following comparison of Ribohm rheostas with cast iron grid rheostats intended for the same purpose is of interest. A Ribohm resistor unit designed for three kilowatts continuous duty occupies a space of 10 x 10 x 12 inches and weighs 8 pounds; and a Ribohm rheostat with 12 steps designed for 9 kilowatts continuous duty occupies a space of 18 x 18 x 21 inches and weighs 80 pounds.

with furniture of the same period, with similarly conceived walls and ceilings.

The decorations in the theatre proper follow those of the lounging room and instead of the ordinary seats arranged in rows and riveted to the floor, there are large easy chairs, each with a wide space between them and all overstuffed so that the patrons of the Ambassador sink down into their softness and thus enjoy the performance with the utmost of ease and comfort. The chairs are all located on one floor, there being no balconies in the theatre.

The Ambassador stage is elaborately constructed thus facilitating artistic prologues as well as any kind of vaudeville or theatrical performances which may occasionally be chosen to constitute the program.

The heating and ventilating system is decidedly unique, warm air is forced in through concealed openings in the ceiling while underneath the seats are openings through which the foul air of the theatre is drawn out and in this way each and every person is assured of comfortable ventilation.

In the summer time the air coming through the openings in the ceiling will be refrigerated and by means of a very delicate apparatus, a given degree of temperature can be had and constantly maintained.

The system of utilizing fresh flowers and plants on an elaborate scale, forms one of the chief interior decorations. Not a single artificial flower is used in the theatre.

The installation of Simplex Projectors in the Ambassador, recalls the recent installations of Simplex Projectors in a number of well known hotels among which might be mentioned the Chalfonte Hotel, Atlantic City, New Jersey, and the Statler Chain of Hotels located in Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, and the large Hotel Pennsylvania of New York City which is under the Statler management.

These projectors were installed for the use of conventions which make these hotels their headquarters.

In one of the largest cities of the United States every department store but one is showing monthly a loss in gross sales over last year.

One store—in an inferior location, by the way—has shown each month a marked increase over last year, and over any year in its history.

Directed by GEO. HOLT — Photographed by R. E. LYONS

FRANKLYN FARNUM, Shorty Hamilton, Virginia Lee and Al Hart take the leading parts in "The White Masks," a big Western feature to be released by the WM. SMITH PRODUCTIONS.

Artistically considered it is a splendid story, splendidly cast; but the most important part of any production, from the exhibitor's point of view, is the ticket selling part—and that has been amply taken care of, for every poster used will bear the RITCHEY trade-mark!

FOX STARS

THE New Season finds Fox Film Corporation equipped as never before to furnish the Exhibitors with star productions of highest calibre. Fox stars and Fox star pictures are today on a higher plane than ever, and assure for the coming season an unmatched program of box-office attractions.

WILLIAM FARNUM enjoys unique distinction among the favorites of the screen. He has passed from comedy to drama, from romance to realism with equal charm; and always with a host of admirers awaiting his next appearance. During 1921-1922—his seventh successive season with Fox Film Corporation—he will be presented in four new productions, the titles of which will be duly announced.

BUCK JONES! Those who have played his pictures during the past season know how strong a hit he has scored. His genial good nature and clean, breezy type of manhood have made him a strong favorite. "To a Finish" is the first of the Buck Jones series of about eight

SHIRLEY MASON has won a sure place in the hearts of picture patrons everywhere, and has taken her place as one of the really popular stars, with an ever-increasing following. Approximately eight Shirley Mason pictures will be released, "Ever Since Eve," by Joseph Ernest Peat coming first, followed by "Queenie," by Wilbur Finley Fauley.

WILLIAM RUSSELL has shown himself to be equally at home whether depicting the out-of-door-type of character or the more cultured drawing-room hero. His first two releases of the new season present a Western drama, "Singing River," followed by Victor Bridges widely-read romantic drama, "The Lady From Longacre." Eight Russell pictures may be expected.

And FOX PRODUCTIONS for 1921-1922

PEARL WHITE'S name and features are known from one end of the globe to the other—there is, indeed, no personality so well known everywhere to followers of the screen. During the coming season Miss White will be seen in plays well suited to her vivid personality, a series of about five.

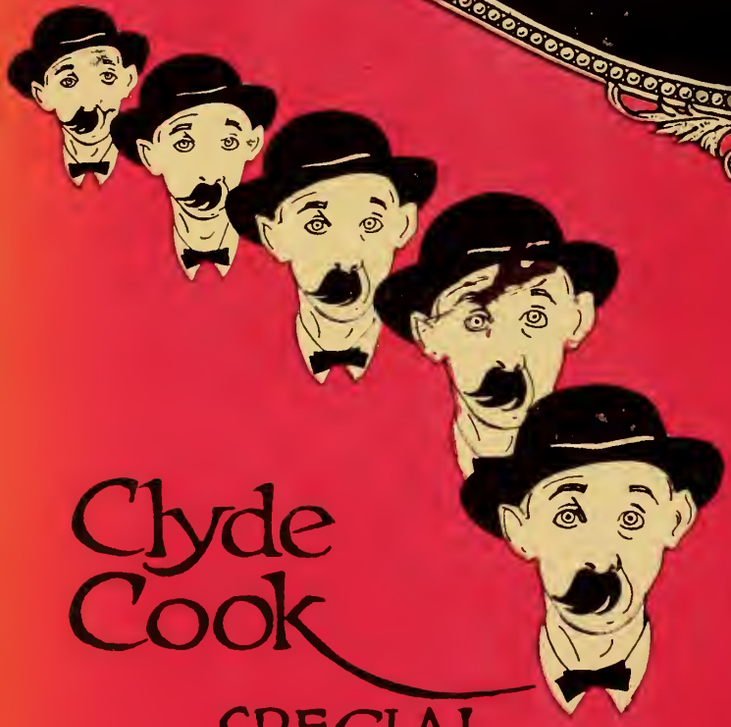
TOM MIX! Never has a picture star enjoyed so sure a hold on the hearts of his admirers. With the wonderful record of never having made a failure Tom Mix enters the new season splendidly equipped; he will make eight new productions, the first of which is "The Night Horsemen," a sequel to his success of last season, "The Untamed."

DUSTIN FARNUM a favorite on former Fox release schedules—returns to the fold in the season now at hand. Acceding to demands from all quarters, William Fox has re-engaged this popular romantic actor, and will present him in a series of about six photoplays during the season. The first of these is "The Primal Law."

JOHN GILBERT takes rank among Fox stars by reason of the excellence of his work. Perhaps no better example of this need be cited than his brilliant performance as David Fielding in "Shame," which was generously praised by the press of New York. His first star picture is "Gleam O' Dawn," by Arthur Goodrich; he will make approximately eight during the season.

20TH CENTURY PICTURES

20TH CENTURY Pictures have won their way to enormous popularity. There will be twenty-six of these sure-fire box-office boosters in the new season, with such proven favorites as Eileen Percy, Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker, Barbara Bedford and others, seen in clean, wholesome entertainment.



Clyde Cook SPECIAL Comedies

CLYDE COOK! His name in electric lights over a theatre entrance means money in the box-office. Clyde Cook Special Comedies provide a national reserve fund of merriment. Of eight two-reelers during the coming year, the first is "The Toreador." Just fancy Clyde Cook as the bull-fighter!

Al St John Comedies

Acceding to genuine demands from all quarters, William Fox has promoted Al St. John to stardom, and the many admirers of this versatile comedian will be pleased to know that a series of about eight Al St. John two-reel comedies will be released on the Fox schedule in the new season, the first two of which are "Small Town Stuff" and "The Happy Pest."

William Fox
Sunshine Comedies

WILLIAM FOX SUNSHINE COMEDIES are so firmly established in the favor of both those who exhibit motion pictures and those who form their audiences that they have become a staple and integral part of the motion picture entertainment of the world. Sunshine Comedies are today infinitely superior to the Sunshine Comedies which won instant approval upon their first appearance seasons ago. During 1921-1922 twenty-six will be released, one every other week.

THE business of gathering and presenting through the medium of motion pictures the news of the world is an undertaking in which equipment, far-reaching establishment, unlimited command of talent and unstinted expenditure are absolutely necessary. The wonderful growth to a position of pre-eminence of FOX NEWS during the year and a half since this news reel was established may be understood in the light of these considerations. FOX NEWS is today an asset which no theatre mindful of the service due its patrons can do without. Its supremacy during the coming season is already foreshadowed by its past performances.

QUO VADIS

["Whither Goest Thou?"]

By HENRY SIENKIEWICZ

Released by

F. B. WARREN (FBW) CORPORATION

1540 Broadway New York City

The Picture That Made

$2,000,000 in 1913-14

This revival in six reels of the first great European picture that ever invaded America brings forth the one production deserving to rank beside "The Birth of a Nation" in commercial values.

A perfect negative, re-edited by Doty Hobart and with art titles by Warren Newcombe, the skilled pair who created the immensely successful picture "The Woman God Changed."

A hundred brand new prints from Republic Laboratories; great showman lithographs from Otis.

Beautiful lobby photography from Ullman and a vigorous, resourceful advertising and exploitation campaign, devised by an organization that knows more about real publicity than any other company in the industry.

Quo Vadis is officially released throughout the country on September 11. It is available pre-release in the larger cities beginning August 15.

Among the great, big pulse-attacking thrills of the mighty Cines production, "Quo Vadis," are:

The burning of Rome to provide a theme for Nero's poem.

The Christian captives devoured by scores of lions.

All year long "Quo Vadis" will continue to be one of the ranking productions of the season—equalling and excelling newer and costly pictures that cannot compare with it for beauty and production superiorities.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXIV AUGUST 20, 1921 No. IX

A Tariff Strangle-Hold

WE are credibly informed that Canada is planning definite and complete measures of retaliation, provided the proposed 30 per cent ad valorem duty of foreign pictures—as contained in the Fordney tariff bill—passes Congress and becomes a law.

The Canadian Parliament will, as plans are now contemplated, immediately adopt a tariff measure fixing a like duty on pictures from the United States.

A Canadian 30 per cent ad valorem duty on pictures made here will mean a tax of $15,000 on a $50,000 picture and $30,000 on a $100,000 picture. This tariff is prohibitive as every distributor knows. It simply means the exclusion of pictures from the United States. There is no argument about that.

Canada will utilize the opportunity to foster home production. Tentative plans along this line, we are informed, are already being made in Calgary, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto, Nova Scotia, etc. Canadian capitalists are said to be interested.

In addition to its home-made pictures Canada looks to Europe for a considerable and steady supply of product. Not merely that but this production supply is being carefully investigated. Pictures are expected from Scandinavia, Spain, France, Italy, and, of course, the bulk of the supply from Great Britain.

Does the American producer want to lose the Canadian market—in addition to the European? Can he afford it?

Apparently not. The closing of twenty-five per cent of the theatres of the United States—for a brief season now, fortunately all but ended—put the production and distribution end of the industry into well nigh a panic.

That is a good index to what will happen if a tariff measure cuts off the bulk of our foreign trade, always reckoned as twenty-five per cent of the picture's full market.

A severe blow indeed to a big and already heavily taxed manufacturing industry; and an utterly stupid one in view of the obvious fact that the revenue will be positively inconsiderate.

It's Up to the Exhibitor

WE have stated previously our opinions on independence, on independent producers, and on "Independence month."

The independent producer is highly essential to the industry—to its box-office health, which means nothing less than the foundation of health and growth upon which the whole industry depends.

He must be encouraged.

And this encouragement must come from the exhibitor.

Today the exhibitor leans toward volume supply of pictures. We won't argue the pro and con of this situation. The fact alone is essential.

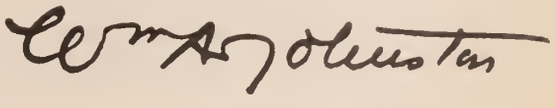
If the independent producer, who is an occasional, not a volume producer, is to be encouraged then the exhibitor must see that his worth while picture gets a fair booking chance and a fair booking price.

The independent producer gets neither today. That's the long and short of it.

"Independence Month" will give the exhibitor an opportunity to prove his allegiance to the independent producer. It will also give his box-office an opportunity to prove the independent producer's worth.

But the exhibitors' relation to the independent producer—a straight business relation not a sentimental one—must go on after "Independence Month" is over. It's merely a matter of bookings and rentals—to give of each what the independent picture deserves.

And that's right up to the exhibitor—to him alone.



Allied Laboratories Summarize Position

EDITOR'S NOTE.—At the request of Motion Picture News the independent laboratory owners organized as the "Allied Laboratories" have summarized their position in the controversy over Jules Brulatour's laboratory activities in the following admirably succinct statement.

Discussion of the tariff question and its effect on raw stock competition, together with other interwoven issues have, in the opinion of Motion Picture News, tended to confuse and becloud the laboratory question. It was for that reason that the following statement was prepared. It places the attitude of the independent laboratories squarely and clearly before the industry; it now remains for George Eastman and Jules Brulatour, as the parties affected, to meet the issue in equally outspoken fashion. The columns of Motion Picture News are open to such rebuttal.

In two particular points is the situation a most serious one, demanding both answer and action. First, Mr. Brulatour's laboratory activities, as yet not officially denied, combined with his representation of the Eastman Kodak Company, give him direct knowledge of the activities and position of competing independent laboratories; secondly, the allegation has been made and reiterated that this power possessed by Mr. Brulatour has been used in an unfair manner, to the extent of price cutting and the extension of unreasonable credit.

"Unfair business" is an ugly term; the strength for evil contained in the words gave birth to the powerful Federal Trades Commission. In no industry, whether it be motion pictures or sawdust selling, can the "unfair" be allowed to continue and to flourish without results inimical to all concerned in that industry.

The issue is flatly before Mr. Eastman and Mr. Brulatour. The answer is of interest and importance to every member of the motion picture industry.

Following is the statement of the Allied Laboratories:

August 9, 1921.

Mr. W. A. Johnson, Editor,
Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

We wish to bring to your attention the situation concerning the independent laboratories which, in our opinion, applies to every independent laboratory in the business regardless of the fact that they may not be members of our association.

The volume of raw stock used was of Eastman manufacture. A few months ago many of our largest laboratories used Eastman raw stock exclusively.

As you of course know, Jules E. Brulatour is the sole distributor of Eastman raw stock and it is from him we must purchase our requirements, by cash or certified check in advance. We understand there are a favored few who can obtain a week's credit from Brulatour.

This of course places Brulatour in a position to know exactly what our volume amounts to and to have other private information concerning our business that is very detrimental under the conditions that have developed recently.

Jules E. Brulatour is the controlling factor in the Paragon, San Jac, and G. M. Laboratories. He is reported admitting this to a certain independent producer and distributor.

These three laboratories have a capacity sufficiently large to take care of the entire volume of printing required. We are advised by our customers that Brulatour or his representatives have made ridiculous prices, as low as .03¼ cent per foot for the finished product, credit 90 to 120 days, whereas the minimum price on which any independent laboratory can exist and use Eastman stock and turn out a quality product is .03½ cents per foot, maximum terms 60 days. Much film must be printed at the minimum quotation to make even .03½ cents per foot profitable.

To date Jules E. Brulatour has succeeded in getting business from several large distributors who formerly patronized the independent laboratory, besides causing a very unrestful situation between the independent laboratory and their customers. This situation, taking into consideration the fact that the average producer and distributor demands Eastman stock, hardly gives the independent laboratory chance to exist.

This entire matter was placed before Mr. Eastman of the Eastman Kodak Company who in our opinion is fully aware of Brulatour's activities. If Brulatour's present monopoly on raw stock plus his contemplated monopoly of the laboratory business does not put the entire motion picture industry at his mercy, we would like to know what further power he would need and must seek to bring about such a situation.

It is true that other independent raw stocks are coming on the market, but it will be some time before the independent laboratories can sell their product to the producer and distributor of motion pictures, and provided this healthy competitive condition in our business can be brought about, is Brulatour going to lower his prices for the finished product below .03¼ cents? If so the independent laboratory cannot then exist even with competitive raw stock and independent producers and distributors willing to buy it.

It is indeed a serious situation and requires the greatest thought and consederation of every representative man in the industry whose interest extends further than his reward of profit.

Very respectfully yours,

ALLIED LABORATORIES
ASSOCIATION, INC.,
By H. Yates.

Pathe Versus Censors

An appeal which, it is declared, will, if necessary, be carried to the United States Supreme Court, against the deletion by the Motion Picture Commission of scenes of bathing girls carried in a Pathe News reel.

An official of Pathe stated that, while it had not definitely been decided, in his opinion the concern would not attempt to restrain the Commission from acting by injunction proceedings, but would take the matter to court and attempt to show that the creation and functioning of the censor body is unconstitutional.

The scene in question showed bathing girls on a Texas beach. It was ordered deleted at the first showing and, on Pathe's protest, was again reviewed by the entire Commission, and again declared unfit for showing.

Commissioner Cobb is quoted as stating he does not believe any court action will test his body's powers, but will merely pass down an opinion regarding the bathing girl scenes in question.

Kansas City Film Board Elects New Officers

McCracken, Paramount, president; Lynn S. Card, Select, vice-president; Roy Young, Standard, treasurer, and Mabel Warren, secretary. Hyden J. Eaton was appointed general counsel of the organization.

A new set of rules and regulations were unanimously adopted by the members.

Distribution Representative at Paramount Studio

M. H. Lewis, who for the past year has been assistant to the salesmanager at the home office of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., left New York last Sunday for Hollywood to take up his duties as personal representative of the Department of Distribution at the Lasky studio. Through Mr. Lewis it is hoped to eliminate the frequent changes in schedules which have been so unsatisfactory during previous years.

G. E. Akers, formerly branch manager at St. Louis, has assumed his new studies at the company's home office in New York succeeding Mr. Lewis, manager at Los Angeles. In 1919 he was made branch manager at San Francisco and the following year he was appointed district manager of the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines offices. From Kansas City he came to home office as assistant to salesmanager.

Censors on Way to Universal City to Attend Grand Conference

Delegates in Chicago for Trip West; Far-Reaching Results Looked For

REPRESENTATIVES of censor-boards from all over the United States and Canada who have been invited by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, to attend a grand conference on the Coast are now en route for Universal City. The main party, comprising representatives of ten censor-boards from this country and Canada met in Chicago at the Blackstone, which is the temporary rallying point for the censors from the Eastern section of the United States and the Dominion. From here the censors will proceed West by private car to Universal City under the leadership of H. M. Berman, general manager of Universal Film, who is acting as host in the absence of President Laemmle.

It is Mr. Laemmle's purpose to have the censors acquire a close-up of the work of making pictures and to bring censors and film producers together in the hope that censorship rulings of a uniform standard will be effected and a spirit of mutual esteem and cooperation established in the relations between the producers and the censorial bodies throughout the country.

Those who met at the Blackstone were the following: Harry L. Knapp, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, Mrs. Knapp and J. A. Berrier; Dr. George Heller, chairman of the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors, and Mrs. Heller; A. S. Hamilton, chairman, and Miss Velma Hammil, of the Board of Censors of Moving Pictures, Ontario; Walter Hepburn, chief censor and James A. Smith of the Office of Censor of Moving Pictures, Vancouver; Mrs. I. G. Burbeck, Board of Motion Picture Censors, Alberta; Mrs. J. B. Miller and Mrs. B. L. Short, the Kansas State Board of Review; Mr. Henry Goldman, censor of films and pictures, Kansas City Censor Board, Kansas City, Mo.; John M. Casey, chief, Licensing Bureau Office of the Mayor, City of Boston; W. D. McGuire, executive secretary, National Board of Review, New York City; and W. T. Willis, chief censor, Chicago Censor Board.

In selecting an assistant to help entertain the censors on the trip and assist them in their work in Los Angeles, Mr. Berman choose B. R. Carrick, of Interstate Films, of Philadelphia. Mr. Carrick's experience with censors has been of longer standing than that of any other exchange manager of the United States.

To set forth the far-reaching benefits that are expected to result from the conference, R. H. Cochrane in reply to an editorial of the Kansas City Times explains just why the Universal took the lead in this censorship matter and why it is impossible for the Universal to get one bit more advantage out of it than any other producer, though Universal is footing the bill. The editorial to which Mr. Cochrane makes reply is quoted by the Universal home-office as follows:

"WILL THE KANSAS CENSORSHIP BOARD BITE?

"It cannot be believed that the two women members of the Kansas motion picture censorship board will accept the invitation of a producing company to go to California at the company's expense. The members of the Board are bound to realize, when they stop to think, that if they had been private citizens, or if they had been members of any other board, they never would have received the invitation.

"The producing companies are not conducting free excursions to California. They are not gathering up the public at random and taking them to Los Angeles just to show them how films are produced. They are not even inviting their most faithful patrons on such trips.

"But when a producer charters a special train and issues invitations to guests for a junket to movieland with all expenses paid, there is a reason why he selects his guests from the state censorship boards. There must be a reason for such selections or he wouldn't make them. Would the Kansas board have to guess very hard to bring out the reason? And for that reason the board is not likely to accept the invitation so kindly and thoughtfully extended. The board cannot allow a producer whose films come before them for review to take them on a pleasure excursion at his expense any more than it could allow him to pay their salaries. Unfortunately it is one of the grafts of government and officialdom that favored interests can, sometimes, purchase favor by such means. Such interests would protest their pleasant attentions were not meant to purchase favor, and the officials who received the attentions would protest they were not influenced by them. Of course. But it is to be noted such attentions are never bestowed on persons who are not in a position to reciprocate in some way, and that fact should be and doubtless will be, sufficient for the Kansas censorship board. It will, no doubt, thank the attentive producer and decline the invitation. If it thinks it really ought to go to California it will go in the Ford sedan the state bought for it, and for which it has no other use that anybody can see."

Mr. Cochrane's reply reads as follows:

"Your editorial of August second entitled 'Will the Kansas Censorship Board Bite?' is based on the erroneous assumption that this national convention of censors is a mere junket to movieland for pleasure. We have never attempted nor desired to bribe or flatter any censors in the many years we have been in the picture business and assuredly we had no thought of even putting them under obligations by such a trip as this. The only thing which prompted us to invite all the censors of the United States and Canada to convene is the fact that no two boards at the present time give us the same rulings on what they consider censorable. It is the same as though you had to publish different editorials and different news stories in each issue of your newspaper circulating in different states. We hope to bring about a uniformity of rulings which will save us some of our present enormous losses due to conflicting rulings.

"We have been fighting censorship with all our heart and soul and we always will believe that it is wrong in principle. However, we must face the fact that state censor-boards do exist and do have certain powers. If we succeed in harmonizing the ideas of the various boards we will have accomplished our only object. We have asked them to go to Universal City to work and not to play. They have accepted in the same spirit. We are confident that they can teach many things to our directors and story writers, and we are equally confident that our studio staff can teach the censors something.

"Certainly no harm can come from a frank exchange of ideas and certainly this company is not seeking special favors as a result of this convention. We felt sure the various states would never get together

No Return Dates for Films Not Lifted on Time

THE F. I. L. M. Club of New York City, in a statement just issued and addressed "To All Exhibitors," serves notice that on and after August 15, 1921, return dates will not be furnished by any member of the F. I. L. M. Club for any picture uncalled for on date booked.

The statement declares that great losses have been sustained by Distributors because many Exhibitors have failed to lift pictures on dates booked and that the distributing companies of which the F. I. L. M. Club is comprised are forced to "end this growing evil" as the need for economy is pressing. The statement further adds:

"Payment for such uncalled for shows will be exacted.

"To avoid confusion, check up immediately your bookings with bills or notices of exhibition."

La Guardia Flays Censorship at A.M.P.A. Meeting; to Fight for Repeal Planned

IN a speech delivered before the members of the A. M. P. A. at its last weekly meeting, Fiorella H. La Guardia, president of the Board of Aldermen of New York City, scored state censorship as "the greatest weapon for moulding public opinion in the hands of political forces."

"I am not worried to such an extent about the number of seconds the censors decree that a husband may kiss his wife, a lover his sweetheart, or a mother her son," continued President La Guardia. "But I do see a serious danger in making the greatest agency for the dissemination of news—the screen—subservient to political conflict. Today the screen is the greatest force in the world in reaching the public. It finds a hearing before a greater audience than does the press or any book of literature.

"Not only that, but today the screen is the only independent medium for the expression and formation of public opinion. It is useless to say anything about the press. Just try and get a line in opposition to the policy of the owners of the newspapers and see how far you go. But the screen today is free; and professional politicians, realizing its potent force, are trying to bring it under their control.

"It is easy to see how this can be done. Once the producers of motion pictures realize that their vast investment of capital is going to be under the control of politically appointed censors, they are going to be anxious to meet every wish that will help them conserve their resources.

"It remains for you gentlemen to preserve for the American people this great industry you have established and to keep it clear from the domination of politicians to use for their own selfish purposes."

A movement to secure the repeal of the state censorship measure in New York is under contemplation by the A. M. P. A. as a result of Mr. La Guardia's speech. The matter has been referred to the board of directors for further action. If the organization can secure the alliance of the National Association, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and other prominent associations connected with the industry, the movement will be officially launched and details for carrying the fight into the pro-censorship camp perfected, it is announced.

Insists Foreign Rights of Fight Film Are Sold

In denial to the allegation of Tex Rickard, that F. C. Quimby, Inc., has not sold the foreign rights to the official Dempsey-Carpentier Fight Picture, Mr. Winik, of the Western Import Co., Ltd., declares that he purchased the foreign rights in London, from Capt. G. McLeod Baynes, the authorized representative of F. C. Quimby, Inc., and Mr. Winik will protect any of his buyers to whom he may sell territory.

Shipman Goes to Canada on Film Tariff Mission

Ernest Shipman signed contracts on Monday of this week in connection with the final release of the Ralph Connor stories. The details of the arrangement will be announced shortly by the contracting distributors. Mr. Shipman left for Canada on Tuesday evening on an important mission in connection with tariff matters growing out of recent developments in Washington, where the film tariff question has been claiming the attention of the Ways and Means Committee.

News Gives What He Wants the Way He Wants It

THE NEWS covers the field, and J. C. Bennett of the Princess Theatre, Whiting, Ind., is prompt to register his conviction of that fact. Here's what he has to say:

"Enclosed find check for two years' subscription. I get them all, but the NEWS gives what I want the way I want it. The Plan Book Review Department is my best bet.

"J. C. BENNETT."

Kansas City Musicians and Exhibs Reach Agreement

The controversy between the musicians' union and the exhibitors in Kansas City was "ironed out" last week at a conference between representatives of both factions.

The musicians, who have returned to work, have agreed to a forty-three week contract, instead of a year's contract, and will work six hours a day instead of five and a half. Each exhibitor will arrange a standard for the minimum number of musicians to be employed at his house.

Paramount Representative Leaves for Brazil

E. B. Shauer, manager of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces the departure of John L. Day, South American representative, on the S. S. Huron on August 3, for Rio de Janeiro, on his annual business trip to the South American countries. Mr. Day will spend considerable time in the offices of the Paramount company in Brazil, arranging for increased distribution facilities during the coming year.

S. R. Kent on a Visit to 25 Paramount Exchanges

Dempsey-Carpentier Fight Film Passed by Censors

The New York State Board of Censors has passed without alteration the Dempsey-Carpentier fight picture. Though not required to do so by law, Tex Rickard and Fred C. Quimby, his associate, voluntarily submitted the picture for inspection as a matter of respect and good faith.

The picture is now being shown at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, the Shubert-Riviera at Broadway and Ninety-seventh Street, and the Bronx Opera House. The picture is also running at the Shubert-Crescent and Teller's Shubert in Brooklyn. One dollar top scale prevails at all the houses which report tremendous patronage.

More than twelve out-of-town engagements already have been booked through New York State, it is announced, and the Quimby offices announce other engagements to follow in practically every city and town in the State. Most of the showings will be for two weeks, with one week for the smaller towns, it is declared.

Shipman to Continue Representing James Curwood

Ernest Shipman will continue to represent the James Oliver Curwood Productions in connection with the release of Mr. Curwood's "The Golden Snare," through First National. It is stated that Mr. Shipman's method of co-operative management with Curwood's "Back to God's Country" "Nomads of the North" proved so satisfactory that it was decided to continue Mr. Shipman in his representative capacity.

The Moss Theatres, Ltd., of London, are reported by the Shipman offices in New York to be conducting an extensive campaign for "Nomads of the North," and it is declared by the Shipman office that receipts on this production for the United Kingdom will exceed $100,000, thus equaling the returns on "Back to God's Country."

Ed. Schiller Honored by Atlanta Showmen

"Ed Schiller's Night" was held at the Capital City Club, Atlanta, on August 3rd, in honor of Col. E. Schiller. The committee in charge consisted of Lionel H. Keene, Charles Kessnich Meyer Regenstein, Dan Michaelove, Walter Liebmann, Lucien York, George R. Allison, Willard C. Patterson, Julian Boehm and Simon Selig.

Paramount Exploitation Chief on Tour

Claud Saunders, director of the division of exploitation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left August 4 to visit the Paramount exchanges in the West. He will stop at Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, and Chicago. He will return to the home office in about three weeks.

Independent's Association Making Progress

Announcement is made by the recently formed Independent Producers and Distributors' Association that the board of directors has engaged the services of Nathan Burkam, a New York attorney, to handle legal matters for the association. Mr. Burkham has been instructed to prepare a bill which it is intended to place before Congress, making it a penal offense for any person to deal in, exhibit, transport or traffic in any picture outside of the territory that such person has actually secured by right or purchase.

A grievance committee has been organized and has alreary considered several matters of importance. Several plans have been adopted for the encouragement of the use of Independent pictures during Independence Month.

No R-C Endorsement for Motion Picture Day

R. S. Cole, president of the R-C Pictures Corp., has issued the following statement regarding "Motion Picture Day."

"The proposal to set aside August 25 as 'Motion Picture Day,' on which producers and distributors of motion pictures would agree to supply their patrons with service without charge for that day only, on the condition that the rentals for that day be turned into a war chest to be used in combatting influences opposed to the motion picture industry, will not be endorsed by this organization.

This statement is made because it is apparent the movement has not the unanimous endorsement of the exhibitors and that the great body of exhibitors are opposed to the plan and have protested against it being put into effect," states R-C. Pictures Corporation.

Cool Week Has Gratifying Effect on Attendance

THE comfortable weather of the last week has had an appreciable effect toward bringing Broadway theatre attendance back to normal, it was stated yesterday by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This increase in attendance at motion picture theatres, as well as legitimate houses, has not been confined to New York, Mr. Zukor declares, but is being felt in other large centers throughout the country.

"Depression in the motion picture industry," said Mr. Zukor, "has not been as bad as had been reported, and observers have felt that whatever slump there was in attendance was due largely to the prolonged hot weather. This belief seems to be borne out by reports we have received from various cities during the last week.

"With the coming of more comfortable weather last Sunday, attendance at the leading picture theatres on Broadway jumped and is now practically normal. In other cities it has been the same. If this comfortable weather continues for another week, I look for the picture business to be back to normal all over the country before September 1."

Strikers Ask Aid of All Trade Unions

THE Los Angeles Central Labor Council is planning to circularize all Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor unless some action is taken whereby their grievances with the Realart and Lasky studios is obtained. The players have been notified of the proposed action and a copy of the circular letter has been sent to them.

After stating that the wages in the mechanical departments have been reduced one dollar a day and the working day lengthened to ten hours, the circular enumerates the following stars, whose pictures, it is claimed, are made under non-union conditions: Ethel Clayton, Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, David Kirkwood, Agnes Ayres, Julia Faye, Roscoe Arbuckle, Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels, Constance Binney, Elliot Dexter, May McAvoy, Theodore Roberts, Monte Blue, Jack Holt, Walter Hiers, Conrad Nagle, Lois Wilson, Mildred Harris.

"We appeal to you," concludes the letter, "to give us all assistance possible in showing these people the error of their way." The Los Angeles Council states that it has 35,000 of these letters ready for distribution to the Trade Unions within the next few days unless action is taken.

M. P. T. O. Seeks Modification of Theatre Taxes

Maintaining that the increasing number of shut-downs of motion picture theatres throughout the country is resulting in decreasing, materially, the amount of money received by the government in admission taxes from these sources and declaring that an elimination or reduction by Congress of the five per cent film rental tax and seating tax will prevent prospective closings and bring about the re-opening of theatres already closed, representatives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America appeared before members of the Ways and Means Committee in an effort to secure a modification of the present burdensome taxes imposed on motion picture theatre proprietors.

The M. P. T. O. of A. was represented by Sam Berman, of New York City; Col. Henry B. Varner, of Lexington, N. C.; Julian Brylawski, of Washington, D. C., and Dr. Francis Holley, Director of the Bureau of Commercial Economics of Washington, D. C.

The hearing was held at the rooms of the committee at the Capitol; Congressman Fordney, of Michigan, chairman of the committee, presiding at the hearing.

Attention of the committee was called to the fact that at the present time, thirty per cent of the moving picture houses in the country are closed, and that those that are still open are operating under a loss. The committee was informed that business in the past few months has fallen off fifty to sixty per cent.

The committee was told that the five per cent film rental tax and the seating tax were borne by the exhibitor entirely as it was impossible to pass these levies along to the public.

The most telling point made to the committee was the fact that the present shut down of so many houses was materially decreasing the amount received by the government in the admission taxes. It was pointed out that the elimination of the burdensome taxes that fall solely on the exhibitors would enable many houses to re-open and prevent several houses that are now on the verge of shutting down from closing.

The elimination of these taxes would help maintain the equilibrium of the theatrical business and keep the admission tax at Normalcy, it was explained.

Army Post Theatres Are to Hold "Universal Week"

In accordance with instructions from Major W. P. Woolridge, director of the theatre division of the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service, every army post theatre in the country is to hold a Universal Gala week, using the solid week program offered by that company in celebration of the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary.

Mr. Thomas H. Marttell, director of bookings for the Army Motion Picture Service, has notified every army theatre manager to get in touch immediately with the nearest Universal exchange and plan a Gala Week Program, to be held within the next few weeks. This means that in the 145 army post theatres in the United States and Panama a solid week of Universal pictures will be played.

Jack Johnson on Screen!

Mark Dintenfass, who was a party to the screen debut of Ex-Ambassador Gerard, now announces himself as the sponsor for Jack Johnson, ex-heavyweight champion, recently released from Leavenworth prison, in his motion picture venture.

The industry has heretofore taken rumors of a Jack Johnson motion picture with large grains of salt, and attributed them to irresponsible newspaper report. Now, however, it may be expected that both the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association will be quick to go on record in the matter.

Carr & Schad Hold Annual Outing August 7th

The third annual outing of the employes of Carr & Schad, Inc., was held at Tyson's Grove, near Reading, Pa., on Sunday, August 7. More than 250 attended the affair, including representatives from practically every film exchange in Philadelphia. Two special trolleys and more than fifty automobiles conveyed the officials, employes, and visitors from the Colonial theatre in Reading to the picnic grove. The entertainment program included dancing, atheltic contests, and two baseball games. A heavy rain storm halted the second game, between the Philadelphia film men and the Carr & Schad Giants, in the second inning and sent everybody scurrying for shelter. Supper was served in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Reading, where as much of the program as possible was continued.

Censors Attend Universal Conference

on such a convention, so the next best thing was to do it ourselves. You must remember that if any good comes of this meeting every company in the business will benefit by it and not the Universal Company alone. There is not the slightest element of graft or junketing or favor seen in it, and we did not believe any censor invited to join the convention has regarded the invitation in any such light.

"If I have not convinced you of our good faith will you at least publish this so that your readers can have both sides of the story and thus form their own opinions.

"At the Blackstone in Chicago on Tuesday Mr. Berman and Mrs. Carrick held a big reception for the censors at which were present not only the full membership of the Chicago Censor Board but many city officials and a great many exhibitors of motion pictures from Chicago and surrounding towns.

"On Wednesday in a private car the party embarked for Los Angeles, a stop of a day being made at the Grand Canyon."

Stoll Manager in New York to Arrange New Deal

Alfred Lever, general manager of the Stoll organization, who has arrived in America, is planning to negotiate contracts for the distribution in the United States of 26 Stoll productions a year. The release of fifteen two-reelers, based on "Sherlock Holmes" stories and featuring Eille Norwood, is also being arranged.

The Stoll organization has established a large studio at the Newport Aeroplane plant in Cricklewood, outside of London. The new Stoll product, Mr. Lever declares, is to be universal in appeal and will avoid propaganda themes and world politics. Mr. Lever further stated that he believed present British activity would reduce the circulation of American pictures in England, which today represent about 85 per cent of the films shown there. If the tariff contemplated should become operative, the loss in foreign trade would offset any protection gained for American producers, he declares.

5 Per Cent Theatre Tax Bill Proposed in Georgia

By a vote of 30 to 13, the Senate of the State of Georgia has passed a bill providing for a tax of five per cent on all amusements, including grand opera, in the State. The debate was one of the hottest and longest that has yet been waged by the Senate.

It was originally planned to tax Atlanta's yearly season of Grand Opera to the amount of $2,500. This proposal was fought by the musical associations, and when its defeat seemed assured, the plan for a tax on all amusements was offered. Before the friends of the motion picture industry could be assembled, the bill was passed.

Unless Governor Hardwick, an avowed friend of motion pictures, can prevent the final passage of the bill, Georgia theatres will suffer under a heavy burden.

Detroit Club Women Start Silent Drama League

A movement intended to attract the active interest of the club women of America has been vigorously launched in Detroit by prominent club leaders of that city under the name of The League for the Silent Drama. The league's aims, as announced, are for a powerful, national body of women to extend encouragement to the producers of worthwhile photoplays and discourage destructive censorship.

The organization was formed at a joint meeting of the members of the Detroit Twentieth Century, Review, Woman's City and Theatre Arts Club and the Cercle Dramatique, called by the Detroit Center of the Drama League of America. The principal speaker was Nellie Peck Saunders, prominent Detroit clubwoman and actress, who is now a member of the Oliver Morosco Productions Co.

British Producer Seeks Tax on U. S. Imports

"Retaliation" is the cry by Walter West, joint managing director of Broadwest Films, Ltd., the British producer, in discussing the proposed tax on all foreign films imported to the United States. In a letter to the London Times of July 21st, Mr. West states that a 30 per cent ad valorem tariff in the United States would bar all British films from the American screen, and demands that Great Britain retaliate. Should an adequate tax be placed on American films coming into England, he states, the government would have a larger revenue and the British films industry stabilized.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

WITH the arrival of cooler weather the Chicago public again is taking an active interest in motion pictures with the result that houses throughout the city, both in the loop and outlying districts, noted a marked increase in attendance beginning about July 27th, and on Sunday night, August 7th, the great majority of motion picture theatres report that they were filled to capacity and "holding them out."

This showing is particularly gratifying to both exhibitors and exchange men as it is taken as an indication that the weather more than the general business depression, has been responsible for the very poor attendance at moving picture houses which marked the month of June and the early part of July.

It was pointed out that June's heat record was the highest experienced in Chicago in fifty years and that July temperatures rarely, if ever, had been excelled, making it practically impossible to attract people away from the beaches and cool spots in the parks which abound in Chicago.

Coincident with the revival of theatre attendance, the exchanges report much better business and with the reopening of many theatres about September 1st, which have been closed for the summer, it is the general prediction that the Chicago film industry will assume its normal pace.

Jawn Freese is directing a one-reel picture at the Chicago Rothacker studio for the Windy City chapter of the Red Cross. Thousands of Chicagoans are dollar-a-year "stockholders" in the local chapter. Previous years the directors annual report to "stockholders" had been made via printer's ink. A few of the reports were read. "Still the Greatest Mother" visualizes just how the "stockholders" money has been spent with respect to the ex-service man, civilian, community and future generation. This kind of an annual report, when screened in the theatres, will be read by thousands of thousands.

Managing Director Jim Salter will open the new six-hundred-seat "Auditorium" at Libertyville, Illinois, on August 13th. The house, which has just been completed, is a handsome and up-to-date theatre in every respect and the first of five houses located in Illinois which Mr. Salter and his associates expect to have in operation by Thanksgiving Day, two beside the Auditorium being under construction and negotiations for the purchase of two other theatres being practically completed. The first feature to be shown at the Auditorium will be "Hold Your Horses."

Showing a scene from "Danger Ahead," a new Universal production

Al. E. Bernstein, formerly Famous Players - Lasky assistant branch manager at Minneapolis, has been appointed Milwaukee manager and at present is visiting and getting acquainted with exhibitors throughout his new territory, making his headquarters in Chicago. Within a short time he expects to assume charge of the Milwaukee office.

E. C. Jensen, field representative for Robertson-Cole, who has been in charge of the Chicago office, pending the appointment of a new manager, is scheduled to leave for Omaha next Monday where he will remain for two weeks returning to his headquarters in New York.

District Manager Gilday, of Paramount, who has been confined to his home for several days with an attack of pleural pneumonia, now is on the highway to recovery and hopes to be able to return to his desk some time next week. Mr. Gilday was really ill for several days before he could be persuaded to leave the office and it is reported that the doctors are having a hard time to keep him from resuming his business duties despite his illness.

At the last semi-monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Chicago, "Independent Month" was heartily endorsed and the officials of the association were instructed to send out letters to all members urging them to co-operate with the independent producers and exchanges in making September a banner month.

Small theatres in Illinois hereafter will be able to purchase Associated First National Pictures on an entirely new plan which obviates the necessity of their putting up money for franchise. It is understood that the agreement provides for the theatre taking fifty-two pictures a year and depositing a stipulated sum of money in escrow which will be returned intact to the exhibitor at the expiration of the contract. Among the big pictures listed under this plan are "The River's End," "Peck's Bad Boy," "The Passion Flower," "The Kid," "Bob Hampton of Placer" and others. Country Salesmanager Eichenlaub will put a sales force of seven or eight men in the field to cover the territory on these pictures.

Edwin Mocsary, who is famous for the splendid presentations he put on at the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres in New York, and who recently has been connected with the Butterfly Theatre, Milwaukee, has been appointed managing director of the Stratford Theatre, Chicago, and will assume his new duties immediately. Mr. Mocsary plans to put on presentations at the Stratford similar to those given in the famous New York theatres with which he formerly was connected.

S. R. Kent, of Paramount, who is making a tour of the principal Famous Players-Lasky exchanges in the central and northwestern states, spent several days in Chicago conferring with the various heads of departments at the local office.

I. Maynard Schwartz, Chicago manager of Educational, has returned from his vacation at Twin Lakes, during which he enjoyed the swimming, fishing and other sports offered at that resort.

Manager Brimmer, of Vitagraph's Chicago exchange, announces that the regular schedule of trade showings for the benefit of exhibitors, will be resumed late this month, Thursday being the day chosen for the screenings, as last year.

Claude Saunders, manager of the exploitation department of Famous Players-Lasky, has been in Chicago for several days planning for increased service and better exploitation aids to exhibitors who are users of Paramount pictures.

A. J. Gallas, has been appointed manager of Robertson-Cole's Chicago exchange and assumed his new duties on August 8th. Mr. Gallas has been associated with Select's Chicago office for the past three years as a salesman and has been identified with the industry for several years previous to that, starting as a salesman with the Central Film Company, the Jones, Linick & Schaefer enterprise, which was located at 110 S. State Street, seven years ago.

Harry Weiss, of Superiod Screen Service, Inc., is making a three week's selling trip and before he returns to Chicago expects to visit 214 Illinois and Indiana towns. He is traveling by auto and runs on schedule time like a railroad train.

Maurice Fleckels has been in the city for ten days conferring with his partner, Ike Von Ronkel, of Favorite Players, and mapping out the fall campaign. Mr. Fleckels is an optimist on conditions in the moving picture industry and is convinced that theatres will do an excellent business this Winter.

Ben Beadell is on a vacation trip with his family and at present is at Lake Geneva. Later on they expect to auto through the Wisconsin lake regions, returning to Chicago in two or three weeks. Mr. Beadell expects to announce his new business connection when he gets back to Chicago.

The Interstate Film Service has bought the Illinois and Indiana rights to a number of additional pictures including twenty-six Dizzy Dumbell two-reel comedies and twenty-six Jacquelin Comedies, both of which are owned by the International Photoplay Company, of Chicago. Twelve Zip Comedies also will be among the pictures which Interstate Film will release starting early in September.

Music and The Picture

"What Has Been Your Most Successful Musical Experiment"

By Charles D. Isaacson

I WANT to publish the stories of musical motion picture successes, and widen the scope of our relationship. We have been honored in the confidences and co-operation of readers everywhere. Without exaggeration, it may be said that over a thousand exhibitors have been in intimate contact with your music editor at some time or other—on some problem or other.

Tell me what has been the most successful musical stunt you have ever staged. This might be an entire program, a special scoring of a picture or a musical number on a program.

Write down in your own way the story of that particular idea—tell in detail what you did, how you exploited it, and how the public responded. And why you think it was so much worth while. Just what did it teach, demonstrate or prove?

A symposium of these stories will be of tremendous value to the rest of the News readers, who have joined hands around this editorial board. What has been done in one city can be duplicated anywhere. And the broadest visioned executive, the man who is glad to open his secret archives for his contemporaries and colleagues will be rewarded in the old biblical manner, "he who casts his bread upon the waters," etc.

The Joy of Sound

We never realize to its fullest values the magic of a possession until it s suddenly removed. Take, for instance, the joy of sound. Suppose we lived in a world of silence!

No more to hear the voice of the mother, the cooing of the baby, the affectionate greeting of the sweetheart, the twitter of birds, the shriek of the engine, the lapping of the waves on the beach, the soughing of the trees, the rattle of the wagon wheels, the thrilling ring of the telephone bell, the patter of the rain on the window or on the lake surface, the thunder of the lightning, the booming of guns, the murmur of distant noises, the giggling of school girls, the crackling of paper as it is handled. It just comes to me that dear Dr. Crane has told somewhere of the sounds he loves best. Perhaps some of you remember his words. You will then understand better than I might tell you.

But such a place—a soundless world!

Now I will call off the sweet dulcet tones that would disappear: the sobbing note of a violin, the robust phrase of a baritone, the tender, high of a tenor, the marvels of grand opera, and the more heavenly harmonies of the symphony and the church organ, the piano's mighty chords, the trumpet's summons, the 'cello's mystic throb.

We think of sound without regard to its mysteries. This is well. And yet it seems to the writer that the series of little talks on sound he will publish here from time to time will serve to bring forward some almost uncanny facts that will delight the musician, student and listener as well!

Photoplaying and the Music Teacher

By Robert N. Watkin

The music teacher perhaps more than anyone else, recognizes that music is a great and growing force in the civic welfare of a community.

The music teacher responds nobly to any effort made to improve the taste for music, and I therefore feel sure of the co-operation of music teachers in any efforts to improve music in the play-houses of Texas. That is my plea here today. You teachers have a wide influence, and when you realize that every year the moving picture houses of this country are bringing to their millions of patrons music in some form or other, you can readily believe that they exert a tremendous influence on the musical development of a community. While those who attend picture shows are unconscious of music's appeal, the appeal is there, and involuntarily the patron is affected.

These facts were largely the important ones that were brought out in the motion picture music conference, held in New York City last January. In calling this conference Charles D. Isaacson, music editor of Motion Picture News, said:

"The time has come for a concerted action on the part of the musical and motion picture interests for an alliance which will have for its aim the simplification of motion picture music, an alliance which will serve both musician and motion picture interests for the mutual welfare of the industry and arts; an alliance which will further the movement to bring good music into the motion picture theatre as a means for the development of the highest type of picture patronage.

"The time has come for a definite move in this direction. The first national conference will be important not only for what it accomplishes, but for what it sets in motion and for the goal toward which it moves.

"The best way to make musicians understand the theatre needs and to make the theatre men get the most out of a musician is for both interests to know each other intimately and to make their plans in common."

The music-picture convention brought out clearly one idea: That the theatre generally succeeds which has learned that music enables the proprietor to give his theatre a personality, an atmosphere, which makes lasting patrons.

The conference clearly brought out also the idea that music in picture theatres is second only to the picture; every picture show manager therefore becomes an impressario for better music.

Women are recognized as leaders in all educational movements, and women even more than men realize that of all the liberal arts, music has the greatest influence over young people.

It has been truly said, "As is a nation's music, so is that nation in morals. "It is important that the right kind of music be heard in our picture shows. Music in this country is for the masses, but we must not presume tha the masses do not want good music. Give then a chance.

The motto of the music department of th federated clubs is: "To make good mus popular and popular music good." That woul be a splendid motto for the Music Teachers Association. In this way America will com into her own as the leader of the world i music.

Wanted: Students for the Wood Wind

There's ever so much more of a need fo flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon, than for piano violin and 'cello, that the clever entrant int musical circles will think matters over care fully and see what he can do which will mak it easier for him to succeed.

The obvious instruments to choose in making a musical career are piano, violin and 'cello but as the saying goes, the woods are full o those who play them well. The unusual and hence the less popular instruments are in th wood wind section of the orchestra. Would yo believe it, when you hear that it is the mos difficult thing in the world to find enough artists on the flute, clarinet, oboe and bassoon to go around? When a conductor wants to fulfill his long latent ambitions, to head a genuine symphony orchestra which can compete with th other standard bodies, he finds himself balked Where can he get a wood wind section!

The moral is plain.

If you want to become popular with the conductors of orchestras, learn to play one of the wood wind instruments and do it so well that all will be competing for your services!

Walter Damrosch, who recently offered scholarships for oboe players brought that matter to a focus. He declared that the condition would be ludicrous if it were not so disastrous in its effect. If an oboe player might only divide himself into a hundred parts he could immediately obtain a hundred engagements! Mr. Damrosch some years ago went to France and actually imported the musicians he needed and made it attractive for them to stay in America. And Mr. Damrosch made his orchestra a success When he was in France during the war he started a school for army band musicians and would have turned out several excellent artists in all instruments, but the armistice ended activities.

Those who go into music as a profession have in mind the desire to do something artistic or something that pays well—or both. If the reader is seeking an activity requiring exper and specialized knowledge which will be highly interesting and lucrative, this is a field to consider seriously. The opportunites are unlimited the competition is comparatively nothng. Outside of a few masters of the instruments, America is a deserted plain. With the growth of the orchestra and opera idea in this country, the demand is growing. Every new motion picture theatre which wants to make a showing is installing a full orchestra—and what is an orchestra without its wood wind? Every band needs its wood wind.

New York Mark Strand Quartet Presented in Prologue

A simple but highly effective prologue for "Mother O' Mine" was staged by Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett, of the New York Mark Strand during the recent engagement of this picture. The drawing of the curtains disclosed a set of a rural stone was in the foreground and a field and country house in the background. A quartet was stationed in front of a wall and had started on the verse of "Close Harmony" as the curtains parted.

During the singing of the chorus of this number the gradual dimming of lights began. The second selection by the quartet was "Mother O' Mine," the composition dedicated to the Ince production and by the time the chorus was completed the stage was dusk. A repetition of the chorus carried the quartet off stage and they took up a position so that their voices registered as if coming from the house.

Lights appeared in the windows of the house as the stage faded into darkness and with the quartet still singing the chorus of "Mother O' Mine" the picture was started. The singing continued undiminished volume throughout the showing of the titles and then when the first scene appeared on the screen, the voices went into a quick dimmuendo ending in silence with the long shot of the farm house which follows the close-up of the mother which opens the picture.

"General Custer" Advertises "Bob Hampton"

C. A. Barbian manager of the Waldorf theatre, Akron, O. employed a simple but effective method of exploiting "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Mr. Barbian costumed a man to portray the character of General Custer and sent him through the city on horseback.

Atmospheric effect was achieved in the lobby with a large tent in the center and pup tents on both sides of the entrance.

Smith Captures Front Page Space in Holyoke Paper

The front page story from the Holyoke newspaper tells how Mr. Smith worked the stunt:

"Holyokers stood in amazement to-day when they saw the figure of a man dressed in a full dress suit with a derby hat and bare feet parading the streets and carrying a suit case. Each and every one asked each other, 'who is that crazy man,' and, indeed, the crazy man had them guessing until finally the folks stopped to look at the sign on the suit case.

Amis Turns Theatre Into Circus Tent

Manager J. B. Amis, of the Majestic theatre, Memphis, turned his theatre into an impromtu circus tent during the engagement of "The Little Clown."

The front of the theatre was hung with triangular banners, giving the name of the star. Circus posters were liberally displayed as were cut-outs from the one and three sheets advertising the picture.

A marquee had been erected, leading from the side-walk, to the box-office which was disguised as a "barker's box," and the ushers and doorman wore circus costumes.

It was most effective, and a welcome diversion for all the fans of Memphis, who demonstrated the amusement and enjoyment by a large attendance.

Lobby display for "The Man of the Forest," designed by Frank Lacey, manager of the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore.

This shows the curb in front of the Lyceum theatre, Bayonne, N. J., with "The Wild Goose" posters pasted to the pavement as told in the accompanying story

Schmidt Builds Elaborate Lobby Display

Manager George Schmidt, of the Strand theatre, Atlanta is demonstrating that with a bigger theatre he can do greater things in exploiting his attractions. Mr. Schmidt has succeeded to the management of the Strand after a long experience at the Alamo No. 2.

For a return engagement of "Through the Back Door," he constructed, in the lobby, a red-brick "Queen Anne" bungalow—with green shutters, white trim, and everything. The back of the house faced the street, and through the back door could be seen a smart, up-to-date kitchen—snowy walls, gleaming pots and pans, a cupboard holding blue and white dishes, a kitchen cabinet stocked with groceries, and even a shiny black stove.

Perched on the window sill, partly shadowed by white scrim curtains, were cut-outs of the two little children whom Mary adopts in the picture. These youngsters were holding an attitude of "watchful waiting."

On the doorstep perched a cut-out of a small black dog, one ear cocked up interestedly, watching, also.

And just inside the door was a cut-out of Mary, with the two scrubbing brushes strapped to her small feet, busily scrubbing the floor. The cut-out was very life-like, arms extended, as if the picture had been caught "in motion."

The effect of "suspended motion" was heightened by some artfully arranged lights, and the display drew well all week.

Children Write Essays for Prizes

Essays are a feature of special morning matinees for children now being staged each Saturday by Managing Director Willard C. Patterson, of the new Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta. The subject of the essay is "What I Like Best About the Metropolitan's Saturday Morning Program." In selecting the best essay, for which two tickets were given for the fifteen best, proper attention was paid to the age of the children, and this taken into consideration when the selection was made.

Uses the Curb for Bill Board Stands

Fred V. Greene, Jr., the Paramount exploiteer from the New York exchange, unloosened a brand new one in Bayonne, N. J., when "The Wild Goose" played at the Lyceum theatre.

He took a six-sheet and two ones and pasted them to the street pavement and curb in front of the theatre. The Bayonne buses unload in front of the theatre, and passengers stepped on the posters wondering what in the world it was all about. Cabs, wooden-rimmed wagons, automobiles, all passed over the paper without hurting it in the least. Greene says it is invulnerable to everything except rain. It attracted a lot of attention because of the unusual position.

Broadway Theatre Builds Lobby Front for "Wet Gold"

Manager MacDonald of the Broadway theatre, New York, used an effective but inexpensive lobby display for the recent showing of "Wet Gold." Mr. MacDonald mounted a 24-sheet poster on a large frame and stretched the display across the front of the theatre over the entrance.

The diving apparatus was so arranged that a man appeared to be standing in the theatre entrance wearing the suit. It attracted much attention, a line of persons standing by reading the descriptive label on it all day long. The sharks and the poster also came in for much attention. Two large frames of stills and specially prepared cards added to the attractiveness of the display.

Flanking the poster on each side was a dried and stuffed shark, suspended by its tail, with head hanging within reach of a person standing on tiptoe, directly in the entrace the manager placed a modern diving suit.

Elephants Advertise "Mother O' Mine" at Minneapolis

The Blue Mouse theatre of Minneapolis played "Mother O' Mine" the same week that Sells Brothers-Otto Floto Circus was due to open its engagement in the city.

The circus did its usual billing and the theatre went in heavy for exploitation, but the odds seemed to be in favor of the circus until the Blue Mouse exploitation man hit on an idea of making the circus advertise the picture.

A talk with the circus people about supplying lightweight blankets for the elephants on which "Mother O' Mine" advertising had been printed, to protect the beasts from flys and dust found the show receptive, and the result was that the eight elephants which compose the circus herd thereafter appeared in the daily parade draped in a covering both sides of which carried advertisements for the motion picture attraction at the Blue Mouse theatre.

When the big beasts were in their quarters the banners advertising the showing of "Mother O' Mine" hung in the "big top," where the main performance was held.

It is estimated that over 200,000 people were reached with this advertising.

Swain's "Gilded Lily" Display

Manager Swain, of the Saenger theatre, Shreveport, La., used a lobby display for the "Gilded Lily," consisting of potted plants and green stuff with a good supply of artificial lilies placed around a cut-out of the star of the picture as shown in the accompanying picture.

A big stand with the heading, "Food for Film Fans," showing clippings, photos and personal items about the stars is also proving a popular feature among the regular fans.

Brecker Borrows Troop of Lions

A troupe of half a dozen lions was used by Mr. Brecker, the enterprising owner of the Odeon, Roosevelt and Apollo theatres, New York, to exploit his showing of "Miracles of the Jungle."

The lions were performing at Happyland Park, a summer amusement resort, in the neighborhood of which all three of the theatres are situated. With the cooperation of the management, Brecker papered the amusement park with colored animal one-sheets, passed out thousands of heralds and throw-aways, and in other ways stimulated interest. As the lions are going to be at the park all summer, Brecker is planning to keep open his houses during that period, instead of closing for the warm spell, as is usually done. Warner's Exchange gets credit for the stunt.

Classified Ad Section Used with Success

Oscar Ginns and Elias Wetsetin of the Queen theatre, Wilmington, Del., and W. R. Ferguson worked together to put over "Earthbound" at its recent showing at the Queen.

As a lobby display the big globe which had its initial use at Washington and described a number of times in these columns was used.

They tied up the Wilmington Evening Journal in a free ticket stunt with a new angle and a decided kick to it. For three days the Journal ran a front page, boxed, boldface type story, headed "Look in Our Classified Ads on Page So-and-So. Free Tickets for Keen Observers." Then the story went on to tell that the tickets were for "Earthbound" showing at the Queen theatre and that the persons mentioned in boldface type in special inserts among the classified ads would receive a pair of free

Hyman's "Sign on the Door" Prologue

Brooklyn's slogan—"A City of Homes," received accentuation at the Brooklyn Mark Strand when as a postlude to "The Sign on the Door," Managing Director Edward L. Hyman conceived a scenic and musical combination with tableau effect.

An ancient homestead was the drop with picket fence cut-out and plenty of shrubbery and tree foliage. In an open door sat a little old woman knitting and awaiting the homecoming of her boy at dusk. A tenor sang Del Riego's "Homing," seated on the edge of the old woman's rocker. As he entered he embraced the woman, evidently his mother.

Seattle Newspaper Helps "Over the Hill"

As a special publicity stunt to advertise "Over The Hill" now playing at the Metropolitan theatre in Seattle, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, a morning paper, gave away five hundred tickets to the show to mothers over fifty years of age. At first the paper had contracted to give only two hundred tickets, but when so many mothers presented themselves at the newspaper office, the persons in charge were reluctant to turn any away, so increased the number of free tickets to the half-thousand mark. The oldest mother in the crowd, eighty-seven years of age, was also given an enormous bouquet by the newspaper.

"Wet Gold" Prelude Highly Artistic and Entertaining

"Wet Gold" when playing at the New Allen theatre, Cleveland, of which S. Barrett McCormick is managing director was aided by a colorful atmospheric prologue originated by Mr. McCormick.

The prelude was presented under the title of "The Court of Pearls and Coral." It was a fantastic dramatic little fairy tale about a diver who visits the deep in search of lost treasure, but becomes enamored of the beautiful maidens, who, in wonderful dream costumes represent the precious stones, and remains one of them."

"The scene was the bottom of the sea, at midnight. The ballet girls, namely, 'ruby,' 'emerald,' 'coral,' 'amethyst,' etc., and called the spirits of buried treasure, are sleeping. A sunken ship is in the background. A huge starfish is in the foreground. The starfish opens and three men appear and did a fantastic dance. From a distance the 'Pirate King' sang the pirate song from "The Pirates of Penzance.' The girls awakened and welcomed the diver who came in search of the treasure chest. He found it; opened it. And from it sprang the 'Queen of the Undersea.' This queen, being immortal, transformed the diver into a sea man, and he remained one of them. The action ends with a wild bacchanale, and a riotous dance."

Inexpensive Lobby Stunt Goes Big

During the showing of "A Kiss in Time," L. E. Franseen, manager of the Tivoli theatre, Beaumont, Texas, placed a big clock in the theatre lobby. On the ends of the hands pictures of the principal players in the feature were arranged so as to meet and "kiss" on the hour.

The unusual stunt was inexpensive and attracted considerable attention.

Special Show for Visiting Travelers at Pittsburgh

The Blackstone theatre, Pittsburgh, had booked "The Traveling Salesman" for the week of July 11, but wanted to hook up with the United Commercial Travelers meeting scheduled for July 9. The theatre planned at first to run the showing of the picture up a week, so as to come in on the meeting, but they hit on a better plan.

With the aid of William N. Robson, the Paramount exploiteer, they managed a pre-showing the evening of July 9, and sent post cards inviting the delegates, wives and friends to attend as guests of the theatre. The newspapers immediately took notice of this hospitality and the fact that the picture was one that should interest every traveler. It's a safe bet that the travelers who went back to their homes without having a chance to take advantage of the theatre's generosity, were on the lookout for the picture at their local theatres.

"Pardon My French" Given Prologue Number at Los Angeles

"Pardon My French," was given a prologue presentation at its recent premiere showing at the California theatre, Los Angeles.

A plush drop was used as a background and the stage set with palms and furniture. Into this set Miriam Wills and Pat Lewis weer introduced in "A Refreshing Bit of Nonsense," with Mr. Lewis at the piano and Miss Wills in two song numbers that included "Tea Leaves" and "My Little Blue Dress."

As an introduction to the act and between the songs, the players introduced bits of dialogue that had reference to the trials of the players in the screen story, coupling stage and screen presentations. That the various audiences were appreciative of this sort of prelude to "Pardon My French" was evidenced by the hearty applause and number of recalls after every presentation of the act.

Rollins Builds "Seeds of Vengeance" Display

With "Seeds of Vengeance" as the attraction, Manager Clarence Rollins, of the Capitol theatre, Clearwater, Fla., arranged a display that attracted a great deal of attention, got a half column write-up in the local paper, and pulled a record crowd.

The lobby was arranged to represent a mountain camp. There was the moss-covered floor, a pot of grits was "cooking" on a fire that glowed from the lighting effect beneath, with guns, boxes, axes and mountaineers to complete the picture.

Manager Rollins says these special lobbies have never failed to bring out the crowd. They do not cost a great deal to produce, except the labor and effort in digging up the props, and he intends to continue them on all specials that will stand such special exploitation.

Blue Mouse Theatre Has Hot Weather Lobby Display

The Rivoli Theatre Co., operating the Blue Mouse of which Oliver A. Rowe and William A. Sobelman are managers, have erected what from the street looks to be an enticing mass of snow and ice.

The box office and walls of the lobby are hung with cleverly painted icicles, with icebergs forming a background. The front of the Blue Mouse is pure white and with the display of ice presents an alluring invitation hard to resist. Tinkling Japanese novelty chimes hung in the lobby also seem to lend an aspect of coolness to the theatre.

At frequent intervals during the day the front and canopy of the Blue Mouse is sprayed with water to cool the theatre. While perhaps this does not really cool the house the psychological effect on the public is great.

The interior of the theatre is remarkably cool. Huge fans are constantly working and the ventilating system is excellent. While attendance at all the Minneapolis theatres are suffering from the heat wave, the enterprise of Sobelman and Rowe seems to be justly rewarded for their theatre seems to be attracting the greater part of the theatregoers.

Here are G. E. Brown's freckle-faced prize winners, a stunt used to aid the run of "Dinty," as explained in the accompanying story

Brown Uses Freckles Idea on "Dinty"

Eight hundred thousand freckles!

Ordinarily freckles are not considered as negotiable, but freckled-face kids in Memphis recently had a good chance to cash in on their sun spots.

Giving Wes Barry, the freckled face star of "Dinty," an allowance of 1,000 freckles, G. E. Brown, director of advertising and publicity of The Memphis Enterprises, Inc., attempted to have Wes outclassed. He started a public and city-wide search for a freckled-face kid who could claim more than 1,000 freckles and offered to pay for the freckles at the rate of a penny each.

Brown tied up with the Memphis Press, an afternoon paper in Memphis, for five days front-page free publicity in the search for the freckled-face champion of Memphis. The start was the publication of a two-column cut of Wesley Barry with the artist's idea of how 1,000 freckles would look on a 13-year-old kid. This brought forth many challengers and at a special performance of "Dinty" at the Strand theatre, Brown estimated that the 800 kids present carried at least 800,000 freckles.

The champion of them all, strange to say, was a 13-year-old girl, who was awarded the cash prize of $10 and a bonus of $1 in recognition of the fact that she has red hair. The second, third and fourth prize winners also had red hair. In fact, there were exactly 89 red-haired kids at the party.

Brown also used the party as a distributing medium, giving out several thousand "Dinty" cards, which the kids put in their hats and wore home.

Flashlight Stunt Fills House for Eddie Polo Serial

The exhibitor who can pack his house on the hottest day of the year has a right to stick a feather in his cap. Here is how A. L. Cristy, manager of the Elmo theatre, Chicago, pulled them in one scorching Saturday afternoon for the opening episode of "Do or Die," the Universal serial.

During the week preceding June 25, the date of the first showing, Christy announced that a flashlight would be taken of his audience on the serial opening date, and that on each succeeding Saturday, one of the faces in the audience photograph would be made into a slide and projected on the screen. The person whose face appeared each week on the screen would be asked to come forward and receive a week's pass to the theatre.

This pulled them in. When the cameraman set up his camera and snapped the house, there was scarcely a vacant seat in the entire auditorium. Since then Christy has been picking faces at random for the weekly "Whose face is this?" stunt. The beauty of the stunt is, they are all coming back each week to watch for their faces on the screen.

Orphan's Week for "Peck's Bad Boy" Run

The showing of "Peck's Bad Boy" at the Mark Strand theatre, Albany, N. Y., for an entire week, was the signal for philanthropical minded persons to entertain the many orphan kiddies of the city, and they went to it with vim.

The Knickerbocker Press, the only morning paper in Albany, gave a whale of a theatre party on Monday afternoon, the first showing of the film, to the orphans of St. Vincent's and the Albany Orphan asylums, devoting big space to it before and after.

Tacoma Theatre Builds Novel Float

Charles F. McManus, Director of Publicity for the Colonial theatre, Tacoma, Wash., in conjunction with A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, arranged a novel display and float for "The City of Silent Men."

A silhouette of a large city with a cut-out of the star was the feature of the display.

A one-ton truck borrowed from the company who also donated the services of a driver was used for the float.

Cloakey Puts Over Novel Show at Winnipeg

In connection with the showing of "The Message From Mars," besides an exploitation campaign which made the natives stop—look—and listen, O. D. Cloakey, manager of the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, Man., arranged a special program and adapted the now famous "old time movie stunt."

"The Great Train Robbery" and "A Trip to the Moon" was dug out of the vaults of a film exchange in Vancouver and shipped to the Lyceum. Special titles were made up calling attention of the patrons that the films were taken in 1901 and also as to the fashion suggestions for the ladies. The furniture painted on the scenery was noted also.

The regular accessories to the "movie show" such as old time announcer, who explained the picture, slides, tin pan piano murdered by a two fingered artist, the illustrated songster, who chewed gum in between verses etc., were gathered together.

This part of the program was followed by a title leader for "The Message from Mars" asking the audience to close their eyes and imagine they had been asleep for twenty years. The picture then went on the screen.

A part of Mr. Cloakey's exploitation of "The Message from Mars" is explained by the accompanying cut showing a ballyhoo float that was driven about the city.

A similar exploitation stunt for "Skirts" is also allustrated.

Telephone Used to Exploit "Deception"

There will be no forced summer vacation for the Rose theatre, Glendive, Mont., after Rick Ricketson, the Paramount exploiteer from Salt Lake City, and Manager Thomas Vallancey woke the town up with "Deception."

Two girls were engaged to telephone to every number in the directory and tell the parties that the Rose theatre was playing "Deception," "The Educational Treat of the Age," and like boosts. Ricketson visited every club and society and pointed out the merits of the picture. Ricketson became the principal speaker at the noonday lunch club and the afternoon social gatherings and gathered personal publicity for himself as agent for "Deception." The picture went over so well that Mr. Vallancey is sold on the idea of exploitation.

He has already announced a buried treasure hunt when Marion Davies picture plays at his theatre. He will placard the town with signs telling where the buried treasure is hidden.

"Saphead" Lobby Features Stock Market Fixtures

In the lobby, he placed a real, honest-to-jerry stock ticker, which he had borrowed from the Western Union. It clicked busily all day, but was arranged so that the roll of tape did not diminish.

On one side of the ticker, on a pedestal, he placed a dummy bull, such as is used by the Bull Durham Tobacco people, and which Manager Shields borrowed from this firm. The dummy was about a foot tall, and correspondingly broad.

On the other side of the ticker, reposed a teddy bear, of a size that corresponded with the bull on the other side. Thus effectively were represented the stock exchange with its clicking ticker, and the "bulls" and "bears" to whose ear that clicking is the music of triumph or defeat.

Pinned to the tape, every yard or so, were bits of tape on which catch-lines from the picture had been typewritten. And Manager Shields proved that he knew human nature, when he did this, for of all the people who stopped to look on, more than half of them, read through the tape, and had their interest thus quickened to a fever heat.

Business was excellent during the entire three-day run of the picture.

Unique Lobby Display Aids "Gypsy Blood" Showing

During the week's run of "Gypsy Blood" Russell Anton, manager of the Victoria, Philadelphia, by his clever and unique display, was able to materially crease the attendance at a nominal outlay.

The display, which took in practically the entire front of the theatre, represented a bull fight, with the infuriated bull making a lunge at the matador, who was shown flaunting the animal with a red rag. The painting was in natural colors and the brightness which it gave the front of the theatre could not fail to catch the eye of persons passing by and even those on the opposite side of the street.

The cut-out of the bull and the matador were of exact size of an animal and man and added much realism to the display. The cut-out was of heavy cardboard and the painting was done by the art department of The Stanley Company of America, which maintains a staff of artists for the purpose of adding originality to their posters and cards.

Stretched across the entire width of the lobby, overhead, was muslin painted in alternate strips of red and yellow. Specially painted three-sheet posters adorned the front and side frames and were painted in gay colors.

The newspaper advertising was less than the usual amount used by the theatre, so that the clever display represented no actual increase of expenditure. Manager Austin and his assistant, John Mitchell, were congratulated from many angles for their display.

Firnkoess' Prologue for "Behold My Wife"

An effective prologue for "Behold My Wife" was devised by Publicity Manager Firnkoess of the Majestic theatre, Louisville, Ky.

A realistic log shack was constructed and a fireplace with electric-heated logs, some weapons, Indian blankets, skins and antlers placed within the shack as shown in the cut added the correct touch. A local singer, dressed as a squaw, sang a few Indian songs. Considerable newspaper publicity was derived owing to this prologue.

New Orleans Trianon Has Clever Exploitation Idea

The Trianon theatre, New Orleans originated a clever exploitation scheme for "The Girl in the Taxi," playing at the Trianon recently.

The stunt consisted of nothing more nor less than the stationing for the full week duration of the exhibition of a real-honest-to-goodness taxi near the entrance.

Dan Rehms, house manager of the Trianon theatre, procured from the Toye Taxi Co., one of its well known big yellow, imposing taxis. The big automobile was placed right on the side of the banquette just a few feet from the ticket window, and near the main entrance. It showed up formidably and its impressive appearance caused many a wayfarer to halt in his march down Canal street and doubtless turned many feet into the playhouse.

Not the least among the attractions were the paste board cuts of the girl herself in the taxi. A picture of her and also of the man in the case peered out from the back of the automobile. The lobby was also especially decorated and billboarded for the occasion. So great, in fact, were the attractions that shoppers by the score could be counted stopping on their way down the great thoroughfare "sizing" things up even during the early morning hours long before the Trianon opened up its doors for business.

Oklahoma Theatre Pulls Nut Stunts for "The Nut"

Hundreds of cards reading, "A nut and a nickel will admit free of charge any child under twelve years of age to see 'The Nut' at the Yale theatre," were distributed about the town of Claremore, Okla., during the showing of the above mentioned picture. Anything looking like a nut got by.

Baker Capitalizes Local Star

"Courage" Campaign at St. Louis Based on Fact That Naomi Childers is Local Girl

Skouras Bros., operators of the New Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, conducted an unusually dignified and productive advertising campaign in connection with the presentation of "Courage," which was shown for a week's run starting July 9th.

The fact that Miss Childers, star of the picture, is a St. Louis product is known by more than ninety-five per cent of the local movie fans. This knowledge was capitalized by John Baker, publicity director for the Skouras Enterprises, in this way.

A neat postal card was mailed to each patron on the New Grand Central's long mailing list. The card bore a sincere invitation on the part of the theatre to have the recipient meet Miss Childers at some time during her stay in the city. Certain hours of the day were named as those during which the fan might be personally presented to the star at the offices of the Skouras Bros. It is needless to say that it would have been impossible to introduce the film star to each person who desired to meet her, but the hours named were such as to preclude a great onslaught of admirers. There were quite a number of women who trotted into the company's offices to shake the hand of the girl from St. Louis, who had made her mark on the screen, but the crowd never grew beyond handling proportions.

Following this Miss Childers appeared in person at the New Grand Central, and the fact was widely advertised in the daily newspapers.

Sensing the opportunity for further exploitation by virtue of Miss Childers' presence, Baker arranged for her to make several addresses before St. Louis organizations and clubs. At each place she spoke, she was introduced, of course, as "appearing at the New Grand Central theatre this week."

Among the various organizations to which Miss Childers was presented were the St. Louis Red Cross, The Society for Relief of Disabled Veterans, The American Legion, and the Kiwanis Club.

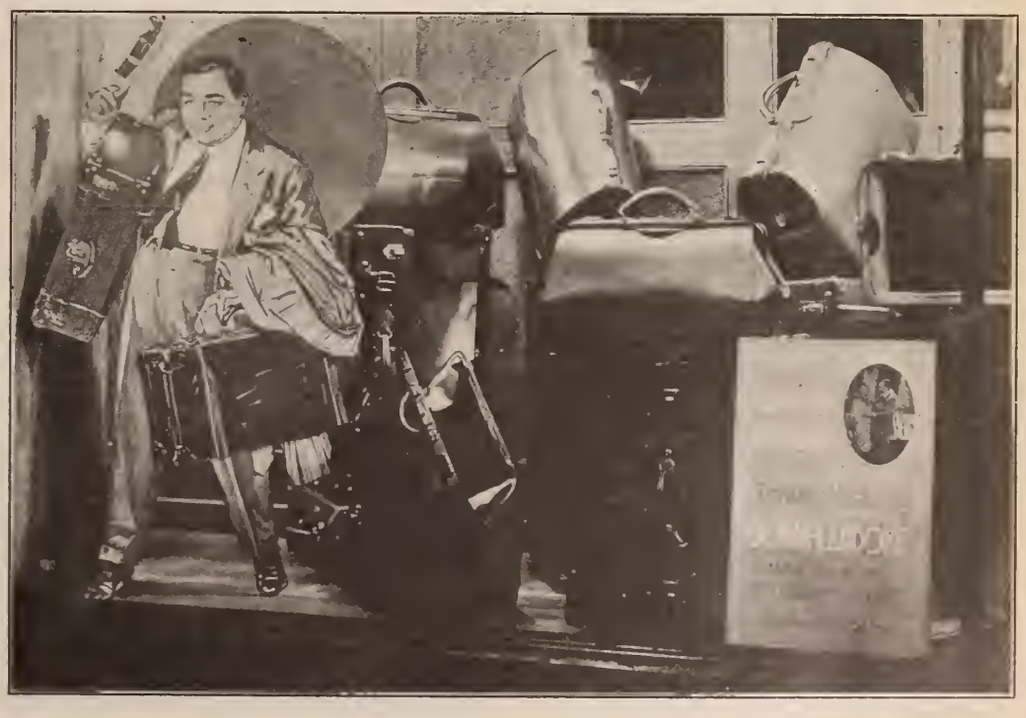
This clever campaign netted a welcome summer business and was worth all the efforts afforded it.

"Traveling Salesman" Tie-ups Go Big at New Haven

A. S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer, arranged a novel tie-up for "The Traveling Salesman," at New Haven, Conn.

Life-size cut-outs of Roscoe Arbuckle, which are larger than life-size cut-outs of anybody else, featured in displays for the picture. One cleverly worded window card read, "For the 'Traveling Salesman' or the Traveling Vacationist Bohan and Landorf have the most dependable goods."

Merchants were pleased with the use of large cut-outs either from 24-sheets or special paper, claiming that they are especially successful in drawing attention to the windows.



One of the window displays for "The Traveling Salesman" secured during the showing of this picture at New Haven, Conn.

This is a view of an exploitation stunt which Joseph Bauer, general manager of the Wigwam theatre, used to attract added business for his showing of "Peck's Bad Boy"

Builds Toboggan Slide as Exploitation

Joseph Bauer, manager of the Wigwam theatre, San Francisco, in racking his brain for a new exploitation stunt with which to stimulate business for "Peck's Bad Boy," hit on the idea of building a "Jackie Coogan Scooter," which explained, means a toboggan slide of home manufacture.

Mr. Bauer made a track about 50 feet long out of one-inch by twelve-inch boards with one-inch cleats on each side of the track to hold the car to keep it from going over the sides. The track had two bumps on the incline and it is these bumps that pleased the kiddies.

The car itself is a very simple little truck made of an 18x24-inch platform with four ordinary steel truck casters. The bumper arrangement was simply a mattress strapped around a steel trolley pole at the end of the track.

After figuring out the approximate length of the track and where he could place it to the best advantage at which point he finally had it directly in front of his lobby, Joe hies himself down to the Central Police Station, where he has a little influence, and soon had the chief, hand him over a special police permit to allow the scooter to be put on the sidewalk.

Striking Stand in Butte, Mont.

The American theatre, Butte, Mont., has just completed a billboard, which is the talk of the town, according to Rick Ricketson, the Paramount exploiteer, who aided H. A. Albright, manager of the theatre and designer of the stand.

It consists of a de luxe frame with cream or siena tint, flag border in American colors. The board is heavily varnished and well lighted. It has a convex border to the lettered panel that is also convexed with old gold enamel. There is a white inset between this and the ground panel.

The board itself is about the size of a 24-sheet. It reads, as follows: "Butte's leading photoplay house"—in lavender; "The American—" bright oranie mineral letters; "The Home of Paramount Pictures"—bright pale green letters; Orchestra and organ lines in white.

The board was photographed and published in the Butte Chamber of Commerce pamphlet. "Butte That Can't Be Overlooked." It has created quite a bit of comment and will suffice for many months to draw the public to watch the changeable three-sheet frame on the stand where the current attraction is advertised. It is located near the depot and all car lines pass it. There is no way of reaching the main part of the city or the uptown hotels without passing the board.

Nathan Protects New Haven Against "Too Much Speed"

A novel feature of Albert Nathan's campaign in New Haven for "Too Much Speed" were heralds imitating police summons which were tied to the steering wheel of every automobile that was parked within the city limits. The Paramount exploiteer got permission to duplicate the summons tags used by the police. They had blank spaces where the distributor filled in the date and the number of the car in pencil. The rest of it read: "You are summoned to appear at the Rialto theatre, New Haven, to see——The name of the picture was on the reverse side. It was impossible for the car owner not to take the herald at first for an official summons and it is a safe bet he read it through.

Nathan sold the "Too Much Speed" campaign idea to the New Haven Automobile Club along with the open-warning-hand taken from the Paramount one-sheet. The hands were made into stickers for the windshields. The newspapers gave good publicity.

St. Louis Theatre Has Novel Movable Sign Board

The Capitol theatre, St. Louis, has a eans of advertising its current produc- ons about the downtown streets of the ty which has been highly productive om a box office receipt viewpoint.

While the idea is not absolutely original its entirety, the fact remains that there e many old ideas which, if properly ndled, can be made as fruitful as those wly conceived.

Exploitation Director John Baker real- es that one of the essentials of success- il showmanship is to keep the name of ur theatre before the public as much as ssible. Accordingly he had a signboard haped and decorated to resemble the up- r stories and dome of the United States apital in Washington. This arrangement as mounted on a large wagon drawn by vo Shetland ponies and driven by a rmer circus dwarf. The signboard con- ins posters on both sides telling of the rrent feature at the Capitol and atten- on is commanded by a number of muted ells which clang at the motion of the agon. In all the sight is one worth opping to regard.

Too Much Speed" Exploitation Tied-Up with Post Story

A feature of the "Too Much Speed" ampaign in St. Louis, was the hook up ith the story "Too Much Speed" which ppeared in the Saturday Evening Post lay 28. Charles E. Raymond, the Para- ount exploiteer, co-operating with the Missouri theatre, sent postal cards to early every residence in the city, reading: "A Message for You! Look on Page of 'The Saturday Evening Post,' Issue f May 28."

This is the way that Manager George Schmidt of the Strand theatre, Atlanta, exploited "The Big Town Round-up"

The accompanying illustrations while lacking the gay colorings of the set itself will show how the atmosphere was created. The pagodas, arches, willow trees and throne all attest to the high social standing of the owner of the garden.

Mr. Rothafel titled this unit of his program, "A Chinese Fantasy." Group and ensemble dancing: "The Sword Dance," vocal numbers, and the orchestral accompaniment together with colors and lighting served to put the audience in a most receptive mood for the showing of the feature, "Where Lights Are Low," which followed.

Inexpensive Prologue for "Foolish Matrons"

For the showing of "The Foolish Matrons" at the New Symphony theatre, Los Angeles, a prologue was presented that proved a most entertaining feature of the engagement. The screen was down on a darkened stage. One side of the stage was flooded with deep red revealing a man garbed in the conventional devil's costume. A dimmed green spot was played on him and gradually brought up to full strength. He then recited the following, written by Glen Pope, of the New Symphony staff:

"I am Temptation—Mankind is my prey—Always am I watching lest they say me Nay—Pride, Vanity, Extravagance; these are my tools. Tried and trusted, they serve as bait for fools. In the cities I am ever lurking—coming when I'm needed. For the puny things called men, who improve their talents but their virtue impair; who strengthen their minds but weaken their morals—they step into my snare. Women, the foolish ones, know me, their master, well. Their feet go down to Death—their steps take hold on Hell. Ponder not, my friends, o'er the riddle of her life—Her ways are movable. Canst not know a foolish wife. I move the pawns in the great chess game of chance. Avarice, ambition, folly—all join in the same glad dance. For what? Love, happiness, power, pelf? All of these, but first of all, comes self! Bide ye a while. On the silver sheet ye'll see women—foolish, wise, selfish—giving all, these three. And the answer—I know not—for in a woman's heart are many things. But hark ye—'tis time to start.

At the conclusion of the recitation the stage was darkened in a reverse manner to that which had been used in the lighting and as the last red faded the feature picture started.

With slander alleged, Edward Regula, manager of the Lyceum theatre, motion picture and vaudeville house at New Britain, Ct., has been made defendant in a suit for $5,000, brought by Benjamin G. Salvini, formerly manager of that house. The case is returnable in the superior court at New Haven, Ct., on the first Tuesday in September.

Alleging breach of contract, Walter Griffith of New Haven, head of the Advance Booking Company, has brought suit for damages of $5,000 against the Lyceum Amusement Company of New Britain, Ct., of which Walenty Lech is manager. The plaintiff sets forth that his company entered in an agreement with the Lyceum Corporation to furnish musical plays for the New Britain playhouse between September and June for a period of three years, at a rate of $1,250 a week. The plaintiff claims that his company stood ready at all times to fulfill the terms of the contract, but that the local corporation has violated the agreement by refusing to produce the plays. Papers served on Manager Lech of the New Britain corporation are returnable in the superior court at New Haven the first Tuesday in September.

Similar Names Confused with Arrow Film

Due to confusion in certain quarters regarding the use by others of the same or a similar name as the Arrow Film Corporation, Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, 220 West 42nd street, New York City, has issued the statement that the Arrow Film Corporation has no branches and are not connected in any way with the various film firms throughout the country using the name Arrow.

This statement, Dr. Shallenberger adds, was made because of the receipt recently of many letters from exhibitors asking if the Arrow Exchange in their particular centers would handle Arrow product or whether it would be handled by some other independent exchange.

Clark-Cornelius Releases

Seven Special Productions to Be Offered for Independent Month

IN order to meet the demands of independent buyers and independent exhibitors for Independent Month, the Clark-Cornelius Corporation has decided to release immediately their seven special productions which have so far been scheduled for the 1921-1922 season. It was the original intention to release these pictures over a period, but the demand has been such that S. J. Rollo, Manager of the Clark-Cornelius Corporation, has decided to franchise them immediately.

Among the seven pictures are included three which have been exploited widely by the Motion Picture Magazine, Motion Picture Classic and Shadowland. These three papers claim an aggregate of five million readers.

These pictures have as their leading players the girl who won the "Fame and Fortune Contest," conducted throughout the year by them. Corliss Palmer, who won the 1920 contest, is offered in "The Eternal Two" and in "From Farm to Fame," which is a two-reel satire and comedy on the selection of beauties and includes in its large cast Mary Pickford, Lillian Gish, Hope Hampton and many celebrities of the screen.

The other Brewester Picture is "Love's Redemption" with Blanche McGarrity who was the winner of the contest the previous year. In her support are Anita Getwell, the second prize winner, Hudson Maxim, the celebrated scientist and Edwin Markham, the famous poet.

"The Glory of Youth," another story that opens in the mining region of Pennsylvania with a thrilling train wreck and trails its way to Arizona, where a strong western phase is injected. "Battling King" is a story of the West as it was, laid in one of the mushroom western towns where law and order are in the hands of the local dance hall keeper until a prize fighter out of a job rolls into town and is eventually made Sergeant of State Police. Several good fights are injected into this production.

"Pardners" from Rex Beach's novel with Charlotte Walker in the stellar role, is another of the releases. The Rex Beach brand of story is so well known and has become so popular that this picture is finding a quick market according to the statement of the Clark-Cornelius office.

"Come Back Home" is described as a story of the prodigal with a throb in every scene. It has the sentiment and is so finely constructed that it stands out as a subject of unusual merit.

New Allene Ray Production

Bert Lubin Announces First of Series of Six Outdoor Pictures

"PARTNERS OF THE SUNSET," announced by Bert Lubin, president of the Western Pictures Corporation, as the first release of a new series of six feature-length outdoor productions, in which Allene Ray is to be starred, will be ready for screening August 15th.

Lubin returned from San Antonio, where the picture was produced, over a month ago, and since that time one of the best known feature editors has been at work cutting and titling this picturization of a Walter Hall story.

"Partners of the Sunset," states Bert Lubin, "will meet a peculiar but strong demand from exhibitors for a feature of semi-western character with an underlying vein of society drama.

"Heretofore, there was nothing in the field with the exception of straight westerns, which many of the first run houses are averse to booking, and the ordinary society-drama of which the blase movie fans have tired of.

"In offering Allene Ray in a new series of outdoor features an attempt is being made to give the audiences what they want—plenty of clean, fast-moving, society drama as a backbone for plots with a locale in the west, chock full of thrills and scenic beauty. Letters received from independent distributors and exhibitors, from all sections of the country, would seem to indicate that the field for this type of pictures is very promising."

In "Partners of the Sunset" Allene Ray is supported by a notable cast, including Robert Frazer, leading man in the Metro Special "Without Limit"; J. W. Johnston, who has played leads in many late Paramount releases; and Mildred Bright the well known stage and screen star. Releasing arrangements for the six features have not as yet been announced.

The Independent's Future—Two Executives Give Their Opinions

By W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film

"A REAL opportunity usually comes only once in a lifetime, and we are convinced that the independent exchanges all over the country now have this opportunity. I feel that the independent exchange that will make proper preparations will be surprised to find what the Fall holds in store for it. The outlook for September 1 is most encouraging and I urge every independent to take advantage of it

"The independent buyers are securing for their Fall release pictures of a much better quality than ever before. The independent producers are concentrating on making fewer productions but of a higher standard of quality. This gives the independent exchange the opportunity to place their product with the better class of theatres and consequently secure much larger returns for their efforts.

"Economy both in the production end and in the selling end is a vital factor, therefore independents will find that the producers are arranging to make series of pictures. By all means this should be encouraged by buying in series, as it costs very much less to sell a series of four productions made under one banner than to sell four individual pictures, and the exhibitors will be more certain of an output.

"If it has not already been done, plans should be made for a standard product both on features and short reel subjects. With arrangements well-laid there is an opportunity of organizing sales forces and conducting an extensive campaign in order that all may get their share of the business, but where one has to formulate a separate campaign on each picture from time to time it will be found to cost lots of money and makes the exhibitors uncertain as to what they are going to receive.

"Everyone is familiar with the resolution passed by the M. P. T. O. at Minneapolis whereby the exhibitors have been asked to favor the independent exchanges during the month of September and this is to be known as Independent Month. If we all prepare for this and use efforts to put it into effect we will be gratified with the results throughout the ensuing year. Keen competition can be expected and the result will be the survival of the fittest. There is room for all if all will only work together and properly lay plans."

By Louis Weiss, Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corp.

"THIS marks the fifteenth year I have been identified with the motion picture industry and incidentally it marks the most remarkable year in many respects which this industry has ever witnessed. Business depression, industrial strife, tottering of the star system, price inflation, all these have run their course and worked their havoc. Personally I believe we have weathered the worst of the storm and I think it is about time for the "croaker" to still his song of calamity, and like the rest of us, get down to real work. It is my belief that this fall and winter is going to see an era of prosperity for the various branches of the picture business. Reports from all sections of the country show a betterment of industrial conditions. Factories are opening and new companies are organizing. Pressure on the part of the various banks regarding loans is easing up, as it is proven by the starting of several new production units. The shutting down of picture houses during the warm weather is nothing new. It is to be expected that exhibitors in certain parts of this country during the dog days cannot meet successfully the competition of outdoor amusements.

"The theatres now closed will reopen with the fall as they have always done. I meet and talk with independent exchangemen from all sections of the United States and they tell me that conditions in their respective territories are improving daily. I know, as we all do, that despite any momentary depression, exchanges and exhibitors are always open for meritorious product. This fact is being proven by the remarkable sales pace we have maintained in disposing of 'Adventures of Tarzan' on the state right market. I am further convinced of the soundness of the theatre situation by the number of letters which we have received and are receiving, asking for bookings on this new Edgar Rice Burroughs' serial.

"There is nothing wrong with the picture business. It is here to stay. The public has simply become more discriminating in their choice of screen entertainment, which, coupled with the money stringency of the past six months, has led to a chorus of wails from the 'croakers' that the motion picture industry is heading for a bad 'fall.' Nonsense. What we want is an application of common sense, fair play on the part of the producer, distributor and exhibitor and most of all, confidence in ourselves. The leading members of the independent field should be congratulated for the confidence they have displayed in going ahead with their production plans and their honest endeavor to raise the standards of the open market by the production and distribution of product far superior to the films which we have in the past dismissed with the words, 'Oh, it's another one of those independent films.' The lineup of the various big independent companies for this fall is an eye-opener as to the quality of film—it will also be an eye-opener for those who have been steadily bad business."

"Naturalist's Paradise" in Kineto Review

A Kineto Review called "The Naturalist's Paradise" to be released next week is illustrative of how fascinating the pursuits of college professors engaged in research may be to the general public.

This is one of a series of Urban Popular Classics photographed by Maurice Ricker on an expedition a year ago. The expedition, known as the Barbados-Antigua Expedition, was sent out by the University of Iowa under the direction of Prof. C. C. Nutting. A great deal of valuable material was collected for use in scientific work and the pictorial record of the trip is as interesting to the public as the results are interesting to scientists.

The curious methods employed by naturalists to secure their specimens, the employment of native islanders in the processes, the specimens themselves, the beauty of the surroundings—all these combine to make an exceptionally interesting picture; one truly as entertaining as it is instructive.

A. N. DuHahaut and Edward L. Klein announce that their new feature has been titled "Strike of the Thieves." Plans for distribution of the production have not as yet been determined.

A personal request by Clara Kimball Young to the exhibitors of America regarding

"Charge it!"

I WOULD like to have every exhibitor in America see my last two pictures — "STRAIGHT-FROM-PARIS" and "CHARGE IT", and write me their personal opinions on them.

Hundreds of letters from fans reach me daily. These letters come from every part of America. They all praise these two pictures.

Thousands of people have seen these pictures,—hundreds of thousands more will see them, during the coming season, particularly during the month of September which will formally open the Autumn season.

As the month of September is to be the big INDEPENDENT MONTH, and as all exhibitors are booking their pictures now for September, you will be making a huge mistake if you fail to book both "STRAIGHT-FROM-PARIS" and "CHARGE IT."

You couldn't get two pictures of this class to open your Autumn season that will give your September month a bigger box office total, nor could you get two pictures that will give your theatre that atmosphere of indefinable quality that puts your house on a higher plane than your competitor.

September is going to be the biggest independent month the industry has ever known. And exhibitors who start their Autumn season right, will have a flying start over competition.

People want finer pictures. "STRAIGHT-FROM-PARIS" and "CHARGE IT" are what the trade recognize as "pictures of the better class." Identify your theatre,—assure yourself of a successful Fall opening by booking and playing "STRAIGHT-FROM-PARIS" and "CHARGE IT."

Any Equity Franchise Holder will screen these pictures for you. Or if you can't see them in person, ask your nearest Equity Franchise Holder what these two pictures have done and are doing in Box Office receipts.

Sincerely yours,

Clara Kimball Young

Big Cast in Young Picture

Lowell Sherman, "Way Down East" Heavy, to Have Prominent Part

UNDER way at the present writing at the Garson Studios in Los Angeles is a picture which if all present indications come true will be Clara Kimball Young's finest photodramatic effort.

Miss Young will play the leading role, with Lowell Sherman opposite. Mr. Sherman needs no introduction to either the industry nor the public for as the heavy in D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East" he not only scored an immediate success but a lasting one, for his work in "Way Down East" has been pronounced by critics and press to be one of the finest bits of "heavy" acting ever screened on the American screen. The character of Craig Dunlap in this new picture offers Mr. Sherman a magnificent opportunity in displaying his many splendid abilities as a character heavy.

Included in Miss Young's supporting cast are such popular players as William Carleton, Dorothy Wallace, Edward Kimball and Dulcie Copper.

And the child part, so important to the success of the production, will be found none other than beautiful and brilliant little Jean Carpenter whose work in Mary Pickford's latest picture "Thru the Back Door" delighted millions.

The new censorship regulations have been adroitly taken care of in this new picture which promises to be strictly and entirely censorproof, an angle that must be of great importance to exchange men and exhibitors throughout the entire country.

The title of the new picture has not yet been announced but will be in due course, in the meantime the Garson studios are humming with activity.

Bible Stories Are Ready

Sacred Films Announces Pictures Based on Old Testament Incidents

CONFRONTED more than a year ago with what was possibly the greatest handicap motion picture producers have ever been forced to face, The Sacred Films Incorporated of Burbank, California have gone through with their program to film the vital stories of the Scripture.

A year ago when the sentimentality of the sex play was at its height the Biblical stories were thought to be a poor commercial venture; but now with censorship and blue law regulation running rampant and the sex play on the wane, the delightful film stories of the Old Testament are hailed as a big relief and embodying a commercial value of proportions.

In addition to the thousands of exhibitors who have responded to the wide publicity given the Biblical narratives the ministerial and church organizations which outnumber the theatres of the country are eagerly awaiting the release of this series of twelve inspirational and educational photoplays couched in the delightful "argot" of entertainment. Endorsement of the clergy is nation wide. The films are theologically and technically perfect it is said.

A large and most excellent press sheet accompanies each of the twelve episodes together with a full line of accessories. These films are to be released one each month commencing Oct. 1, 1921.

Wants More Films Like "Barbarian"

THE success which has marked the release by the Pioneer Film Corporation of the "Barbarian" is evidenced by the criticisms of the picture appearing in newspapers in many parts of the country where the picture is being shown. In this connection it is interesting to note what the Cincinnati Post has to say about the "Barbarian:"

"Give us more films like the 'Barbarian,' Pioneer attraction at Gift's theatre this week. There's a clean wholesome story, exceptionally beautiful exteriors and a capable cast. Monroe Salisbury, the star, made the picture himself and we'd say he did a good job."

First of Aywon Series Ready for Market

Nathan Hirsh, president of Aywon Film Corporation, is elated over the new series of six vital five-reel western productions featuring Guinn Williams supported by Will Rogers, Jr. of which his company possesses world rights. The scenarios are carefully selected for plausibility, unusual situations, intricate plots which baffle solution to the very end and dare-devil stunts.

Guinn Williams is a native son of the West; his genial smile and wholehearted manner, his consummate skill in horsemanship and daring feats attracted the attention of a number of the best producers. For some time to come the Aywon Film Corporation possesses the sole rights to the pictures featuring "Big Boy Williams."

Will Rogers, Jr., the miniature cowboy, is co-starred with Williams in this series. Junior is the 8 year old son of the famous Will Rogers, whose talent the youngster has inherited in full measure.

The first of this series is ready to be marketed and the others will be released at the rate of one per month. A splendid line of complete, catchy advertising matter accompanies each feature.

First Nat'l to Release Holubar Productions

The announcement that Allen Holubar had organized a company in San Francisco to star his wife, Dorothy Phillips, which was contained in a dispatch from the Pacific Coast last week, has brought a request from Mr. Holubar for a further statement concerning his plans in order that the trade may be under no misapprehension as to the facts.

Mr. Holubar states that Miss Phillips will continue to be starred exclusively in Allen Holubar Productions, produced solely and directly for First National. These productions will be financed by Western capital. The exploitation Company, Inc., which was previously mentioned as the producing company, represents merely a group of financial interests, who will furnish Mr. Holubar, and possibly other motion picture directors, with capital to carry out their production plans.

Advance Campaign for "A Man's Home

The Selznick headquarters announces that an advertising and publicity campaign of unusual proportions is to be launched for the Ralph Ince special, "A Man's Home." This campaign will be carried out in advance of the release of the production. One of the plans to be put into execution shortly will be a serial-syndicate with Anna Steese Richardson, co-author of "A Man's Home," supplying the copy. Miss Richardson wrote the story in collaboration with Edmund Breese.

Christie Series Under Way

Comprises 24 Two-Reelers for Educational; First Five Ready Shortly

THE new series of two-reelers being made by Christie for release through Educational Films Corporation of America are now well under way. Twenty-four two-reel comedies are comprised in the new group. Of these the first five are now either fully completed or in the final stages of production.

Dorothy Devore, Eddie Barry, Earl Rodney, Eugene Corey, Ward Caulfield and Al Haynes are in the first picture which is entirely completed and titled "Nothing Like It," a stage comedy. Al Christie directed. "Oh Buddy," the second picture, features Neal Burns, with Vera Steadman as the feminine lead and Vic Rottman as the heavy.

"In For Life" is now being cut and titled, with Viora Daniel and Jay Belasco in the leading roles. Al Christie directed this subject. The fourth picture, now being directed by William Beaudine, will feature Eddie Barry, with Helen Darling and Victor Rottman. This will be called "Falling For Fanny" and is a light comedy of near-marriage in which Eddie Barry is caused to try out a "system" of courting which ends disastrously when the first girl he tries it on is the wife of his friendly adviser.

"Exit Quietly" will be the fifth picture in the series and strikes a new angle in Christie Comedies—the costume play. This is now being made by Frederic Sullivan with Bobby Vernon, Vera Steadman, and Earl Rodney in the featured roles.

All of these releases and pictures, projected for early production so that releases can be made on a basis of two each month, indicate an extensive amount of work for the Christie organization in the two-reel field.

"A Midnight Bell" in N. Y.

Charles Ray's Picturization of Hoyt Comedy Presented on B'way

EVEN though denied orchestral accompaniment, because of the idleness of the theatre musicians, "A Midnight Bell" rang true and clear in its first New York showings at the Manhattan and Brooklyn Strands Sunday. The presentation of this pictured version of the great Charles Hoyt comedy marked Charles Ray's second appearance as a director and won from audiences and reviewers once again the observation that for the star to employ anybody else to direct his work would be quite superfluous.

After praising Mr. Ray's talent as director, the work of the cameraman and of all the members of the cast—for they agreed that every role was well handled—the critics almost unanimously made special mention of the presence of several of the little "Ray touches," bits of originality injected to add a delicious flavor to an already excellent production. Thus they commented favorably on the "facial monologue" in which the young star indulges when he is alone in the "haunted" church, and in which his solitary acting describes his thrills more impressively than any number of subtitles could do.

The reviewers were pleased, too, because in the great sale in the village store, Mr. Ray centers activities about the cash register, where the proprietor and his assistant are constantly elbowing each other to ring up the purchases, instead of confining them to scenes showing the rush of bargain-hunting women. Lastly, though no one is left in doubt as to the outcome of the romance, a welcome substitute for the inevitable clinch—inevitable in most pictures, is offered as the last "shot" of the film.

Mr. Ray, soon after organizing his own production company, for the presentation of pictures by Arthur S. Kane, through First National release, bought the film rights to several of the Hoyt plays. "A Midnight Bell" is the first of them he has presented.

Fox News Starts Season with Two "Beats"

Fox news has started the 1921-22 season off in great shape by putting over two unusual "beats." These outstanding high lights of the many exclusive Fox News features include a wonderful and daring airplane flight over the Grand Canyon, and pictures of the reformed Mexican bandit, Francisco Pancho Villa, once the scourge and terror of Mexico. At the present time Fox News is busy working on other news features of equal magnitude, and can promise some sensational pictures along these lines every month.

"Bob Hampton" Is Given Its Coast Premiere

Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Placer" received a notable premiere in the Southern California territory when it opened last week at the Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser, Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles.

Although the picture has already appeared in practically all the first run cities throughout the country, its appearance at this theatre marked the first presentation before the public of Southern California, as well as the motion picture producing world. As a result the Hollywood producing colony was well represented at the opening.

Big Houses Book Hodkinson Releases

A statement from the Hodkinson headquarters advises of two important bookings during the past week. "Lavender and Old Lace," the Renco Film screen adaptation of Myrtle Reed's widely read novel, has been engaged for a week's showing at Tally's Broadway Theatre in the near future. This picture directed by Lloyd Ingraham includes in its cast Seena Owen, Marguerite Snow and Louis Bennison.

J. R. Beale, Hodkinson, representative in Salt Lake City reports to the Home Office of the Corporation that he has just closed a contract with Mr. William A. Swanson, owner of the new American Theatre in Salt Lake City under the terms of which Mr. Swanson will play "The Journey's End" at his 3000-seat house in the very near future.

Montagne Recalled to Write Script

The vacation of Edward J. Montagne, of the Selznick scenario staff, was cruelly interrupted last week when he received a wire from Myron Selznick urgently requesting him to get the first train out of Lake George and report to the Fort Lee Studios immediately.

It seems a story scheduled for production with Conway Tearle was found unavailable at the last moment. It was then necessary to have another script prepared quickly. It was to be a Ralph Ince production and as Montague is on the script end of the Ince pictures, it was he who received the emergency summons. Within five days the script was written, passed upon and Montagne off again to resume his vacation.

It was Edward J. Montagne who prepared the script of "A Man's Home," the big Selznick special, to be released in the fall. He also wrote the scenario of "Justice."

Leading Role for Seena Owen in "Sisters"

"Sisters," a Kathlyn Norris story, is soon to be put in production by Cosmopolitan Productions at the Harlem Studios of International Film Service Company. Seena Owen will have the leading role. Robert G. Vignola will direct, it is announced.

Kathleen Norris' story appeared in "Good Housekeeping" in 1918 and 1919. It has been published also in book form. E. Lloyd Sheldon is author of the scenario.

To Play Lead in "Grand Larceny"; Frank Lloyd Directing "Sin Flood"

ELLIOTT DEXTER, one of the screen's best known and most popular leading men, has joined the Goldwyn forces. He will play the leading male role in a screen adaptation of "Grand Larceny," written by Albert Payson Terhune. Production will start next Monday under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Claire Windsor has been engaged to play the leading feminine role. Allan Forrest has been selected for an important part. Miss Windsor has recently been seen in "Too Wise Wives," "What's Worth While" and "To Please One Woman."

Elliott Dexter was well known on the speaking stage before turning to the screen. As a film player he has supported such stars as Marguerite Clarke, Alice Brady, Mary Pickford, and others.

Director Frank Lloyd is progressing in the filming of Goldwyn's adaptation of Henning Berger's drama, "Syndafloden," under the translated title of "The Sin Flood." He expects to finish the photography in about ten days. Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix play the leads in this powerful story.

Paul Bern, newly appointed editor-in-chief for Goldwyn, is completing Alice Duer Miller's original screen story, "The Man With Two Mothers," in which Cullen Landis, Mary Alden and Sylvia Breamer have the leading roles.

Director E. Mason Hopper is scheduled to begin work on Rupert Hughes' new story, "The Wall Flower," next week.

Colleen Moore Selected for Difficult Role

Colleen Moore has been selected for the leading feminine role in "The Wall Flower," which will be produced by Goldwyn from an original screen story by Rupert Hughes. The role in which Miss Moore has been cast is declared to be the most difficult part ever written by Mr. Hughes for a screen player, but Miss Moore is said to have come through the screen test, preceding the selection, with flying colors.

E. Mason Hopper will direct the production, work upon which is to start this week. Richard Dix has been selected to play opposite Miss Moore. Shannon Day has also been engaged for a part in this picture.

Playgoers Pictures to Release Feature

Cameo Classics is the name of the newest eastern producing company which has been formed for the making of high class feature pictures based upon original stories. "Home-Keeping Hearts," the first big screen drama bearing the imprint of this organization, will be released early in September by Playgoers Pictures, Inc., through the Pathe exchanges. The men behind the new producing unit are Charles W. Barrell and Carlyle Ellis of New York, and Albert L. Cook of Columbus, Ohio.

"Home-Keeping Hearts" is a five-reel drama detailing the thrilling events in the life of a deep-water diver. The featured players in "Home-Keeping Hearts" are Thomas H. Swinton, and the ten-year old leading lady, Mildred Ryan. Other well-known people in the supporting cast are Edward Grace, Henry West, Luella Carr, Hazel Washburn and Mrs. Sue Balfour.

Pioneer Announces Early Releases for Fall

A statement from the headquarters of Pioneer Film Corporation declares that the volume of bookings being received on "Out of the Dust" is mounting up rapidly day after day. The picture has also been engaged for exhibition throughout the entire Marcus Loew circuit, it is announced. John P. McCarthy is the producer of "Out of the Dust." The cast includes Russell Simpson and Robert McKim.

Pioneer's second release for the new season is "Indiscretion," in which Florence Reed is starred. Gareth Hughes and Lionel Atwill are also presented in important roles in this production. "Indiscretion" will be released about September 15th.

"Beyond the Crossroads" will be the third special release on the Pioneer schedule. This picture was made by the Clermont Photoplay Corporation and stars Ora Carew.

Caruso's Starring Feature in Demand

Since the death in Naples, Italy, of Enrico Caruso, the world's greatest opera singer, Paramount reports a brisk demand from exhibitors for the Paramount picture, "My Cousin," in which Caruso starred. The picture, made two years ago at Famous Players-Lasky's Fifty-sixth Street studio, was well received and played at the Rivoli and other New York theatres. Edward Jose directed the picture from an original story by Margaret Turnbull.

Paramount to Have Another Big Author

Robert Hichens, the famous English author, is to write an original story for screen adaptation by Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd. Arrangements for the active entrance of the author of "The Garden of Allah" into the field of motion picture production were completed by Robert E. MacAlarney, production manager, and Roswell Dague, scenario editor.

ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF TITLES

No Slump in Production at the Selznick Studios

ALL Summer long the Selznick studios at Fort Lee, N. J., have been humming with industry as production followed production while star replaced star on the big stages. While many organizations have been at a stand-still or cutting down on production, the Selznick staff and stars have been actively preparing attractions for next season.

On the big sets that had been built in the back-lot Conway Tearle, under direction of George Archainbaud, finished off on Saturday, August 6th the development of "A Man of Stone." The East Indian village was alive with caravans, its market-place was crowded with native types while the red coats of British soldiers added a brilliant splash to the variegated colors of the tribes.

An item of interest to exhibitors of Selznick pictures is to be recorded in "A Man of Stone" as this Tearle production sees Martha Mansfield returned to his support in the role of an adventuress. Miss Mansfield was called from her vaudeville engagements to enact the role of Lady Mary Fortesque. The leading woman is Betty Howe, selected after an exhaustive search for a player who could combine ability to enact a different role with the gifts of nature that made her typical of an East Indian belle. Colin Campbell, Clarke Brown, Arthur Barry and Warren Cooke are also among the principal players in Mr. Tearle's support.

Monday morning, August 8th, Mr. Tearle began the production of "A Wide Open Town," with Ralph Ince directing Earl Mitchell's original story. Faire Binney is the leading female in Mr. Tearle's support, other assisting players being Harry Tighe, James Seeley, Claude Brooks and Daniel Hayes.

Eugene O'Brien also terminated his vacation to take up the work of providing next season's offerings on the Selznick schedule. Under the direction of Robert Ellis the presentation of "Chivalrous Charley" was also begun at the Fort Lee studios August 8th. Nancy Deaver is Mr. O'Brien's leading woman in the new production with George Fawcett and Huntley Gordon interpreting essential roles. May Tully wrote the story of "Chivalrous Charley."

Elaine Hammerstein completed "The Way of a Maid" at Selznick studios last week and arrangements are now under way for her to begin at once another production. In "The Way of a Maid," which was directed by William S. Earle, Miss Hammerstein had the support of Niles Welch as leading man, with Diana Allen and George Fawcett also prominent assisting players. Mr. Welch, in this production, appears for the second time opposite Miss Hammerstein, having been her leading man in "Remorseless Love," an issue just released as a Selznick offering.

Preparations at the Selznick studios are also being made for Owen Moore to begin his first farce-comedy since his marriage to his leading woman, Kathryn Perry. This production, written by Henry A. Lehrman, will be directed by the author and promises to deftly combine the skill of Lehrman as a producer and author, with the deftness of Owen Moore as a farceur.

The productions now under way are for distribution several months hence as the immediate requirements of "Forty from Selznick" are already filled for a long time in advance, with many presentations completed, edited and ready for release as each production shall be announced on schedule.

Selznick Signs Niles Welch

Leading Man Becomes a Permanent Selznick Player for Long Term

JUST as "Remorseless Love" is released with Elaine Hammerstein as the star, Myron Selznick, vice president in charge of production, makes the announcement that he has signed Niles Welch, who is Miss Hammerstein's leading man in the new release, to become a permanent player in the Selznick acting forces. The contract covers a long term and assures exhibitors and their public that this young leading man will make frequent appearances in Selznick pictures.

Mr. Welch first attracted Mr. Selznick's attention through his work in "Who Am I?", a Selznick special in which Welch plays opposite Claire Anderson. "Who Am I?" afforded Welch ample opportunities to engage his skill as an actor as well as displaying him as a youthful type of the clean, upstanding actor that the public likes so well.

"Remorseless Love" was coming along in Selznick productions at about the time "Who Am I?" was completed, and Myron Selznick decided to cast Niles Welch opposite Miss Hammerstein. So fully did the young leading man meet expectations that he was assigned to Miss Hammerstein's next production, "The Way of a Maid," which William P. S. Earle recently directed and completed at Selznick's studios in Fort Lee.

These three engagements convinced Mr. Selznick that there was a place in his organization of photoplayers for Mr. Welch, and as a result of negotiations that were at once undertaken Welch was signed last week to a Selznick contract for a long term. There is no announcement as to the definite assignment of the new player to any particular star, but his work with Miss Hammerstein having resulted in his engagement there are possibilities in store for a new "pair" to work successfully together.

Fleckels Resigns Office

Defines True Relation of Music to Screen

Declaring that music, as a co-art of the screen, has long remained "in an undeveloped state," the Synchronized Scenario Music Company, in a statement just issued defines the true relation of music to the motion-picture.

"Music applied to the motion picture is not just music, reads the statement, "It is music of a type and kind best calculated to meet the many requirements of the picture. Unless the music coming from the orchestra pits of motion picture theatres bears an absolute relationship to the picture which it accompanies, it not only destroys the sense and rythm of the picture, but it likewise destroys whatever entertainment value it has as a part of the program.

"And now with motion picture productions assuming, heretofore unknown qualities and standards, Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of 64 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill. announce the publication of their Synchronized Music Scores which keep musical pace with the development of the film play. Each Syncronized Score is specially made for each of the standard productions made by the big producers, and they are arranged by the best known authorities the motion picture presentation art boasts of."

Lorna Moon to Write Realart Stories

Realart announces that it has secured the writing services of Lorna Moon, who recently sprang into fame as the author of "Don't Tell Everything," the big new Paramount special which is now being made at the Lasky studio with Gloria Swanson, Wallace Reid, Dorothy Cummings, and Elliott Dexter in the leading roles.

Miss Moon's first effort was an original story in which May McAvoy will star. J. E. Nash is preparing the scenario for this offering, which will be the Eighteenth Realart production for the coming season.

Big Sale Reported on New Tarzan Serial

Negotiations were finally completed this week between Madame Inny Shuopbach and Louis Weiss, whereby the former has secured important foreign territorial rights to the brand new Tarzan serial "Adventures of Tarzan," starring Elmo Lincoln. The price paid for this production by Madame Shuopbach is said to break all previous records for the countries involved; namely, France, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland.

Hal Roach Completing Additions to Studio

Hal Roach, who is producing Harold Lloyd comedies, Ruth Roland serials, and Gaylord Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard, and Eddie Boland comedy for Pathe release has practically completed his building program at his Culver City studio, which has been under way for the past seven months. These additions include a dark stage, a wardrobe and dressing room building, laboratory, cafe, and plunge. The laboratory is waiting only for apparatus to be put in full operation.

A permanent organization has been effected called the Studio Film Laboratories which has for its object the developing and printing of all films of the Hal E. Roach Productions. The officers are T. J. Crizer, Manager; Walter Lundin, Assistant Manager and Charles Parrott, Treasurer. The stock holders art T. J. Crizer, Walter Lundin, Charles Parrott, Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard, Robert Doran, Noah Young, Mark Jones, Jack Roach, Fred Newmeyer, J. L. Murphy, Eddie Boland, Frank Young, Gaylord Lloyd and H. M. Walker.

Exploitation Aids for Fox Productions

In keeping with the magnitude of the Fox product to be released during the season 1921-1922, William Fox has arranged to provide the greatest line of posters, and other exploitation aids, ever offered to exhibitors. There are three styles of 24-sheet stands for "Over the Hill." The 8-sheet, 6-sheet, three styles of 3-sheets, six styles of 1-sheet, two styles of ½-sheet card and 1-sheet tack card have all been designed along the same lines. In addition to this paper there is a muslin banner 36" x 112"; a lobby display comprised of seven 11 x 14 scenes with title card and two 22 x 28 scenes in color and three styles of slides.

The two styles of 24 sheet stands are for "The Queen of Sheba." One, a pictorial stand, shows the chariot race between the Queen of Sheba and Egypt, and the other stand is a combination pictorial spectacle.

On the other big specials an unusual variety of posters and other exploitation aids have been prepared with the same careful consideration given to each subject.

Teitel Has New Process

Negative and Positive Films to Be Treated; Offices in New York

ALBERT TEITEL, a pioneer research laboratory man, announces that he has opened an office in the Robertson-Colc building in New York City and will devote his entire time to the treating of positive and negative film.

His negative process will make it possible to eliminate defects in negatives and to preserve them for any length of time regardless of how many prints are taken from them. The fiftieth print, states Mr. Teitel, will be as clear, spotless and flickerless as the first. Because it will save the laboratories from cleaning the negative after every few printings, it will benefit the producer by leaving him a perfect negative. These and other benefits, states the inventor, will do away with the necessity of making two negatives and considerable saving will be effected.

Mr. Teitel's positive film process for preserving the life of new film consists of a combination of his patents with those of Abe Teitel, of Chicago, and Loeffel's and Peerson's patents, all combined and capitalized under the title of the U. S. Cinema Patents, Inc. It is claimed that every inch of film is treated with a clean web of cloth and the danger of scratching the film is eliminated.

Negotiations are now under way with John Sammis Seymour, ex-commissioner of patents, who, in conjunction with the National Institute of Inventors, will prosecute all infringements. Mr. Teitel, who has made a success of all his professional undertakings, is now prepared to give demonstrations.

Stroheim Cutting Big Film

129,000 Feet of Usable Film to Be Cut to 12 Reels by Stroheim

ERICH VON STROHEIM has started to cut 129,000 feet of usable film into the twelve reels which will be released as "Foolish Wives," Universal's million-dollar super-feature. Production on "Foolish Wives" started on July 12, 1920, and the last scene was filmed on June 15th of this year.

In all 559,000 feet of film went through the camera, it is declared. This amount was reduced to 129,000 feet of material from which the best 12,000 feet will be selected for the screening. The work of cutting will take about ten weeks.

The director is cutting personally, surrounded by members of his staff who were with him during production. In spite of the enormous footage clicked off, there is not one sequence which is to be left out of the picture entirely.

The twelve reels of 1000 feet each will include the titles, which are to be few in number and of the simplest and clearest English. The titles are to be photographed against dead black in bold type, there being no extraneous design or art work to detract from the text.

As editing progresses, Universal is negotiating with an internationally known composer who will write the musical score to accompany the picture, it is announced. Most of the music will be of the same nature as that used to inspire the players while filming was in progress.

Vignola Off to Coast to Direct Marion Davies

Robert G. Vignola, director of special productions for Cosmopolitan, left New York for the Coast this week to direct Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan star, in a new production.

"Great Impersonation" Favorably Received

George Melford's production, "The Great Impersonation," which is an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, was shown to Paramount officials at the home-office last week and made a highly favorable impression. The picture is scheduled for an early release in the fall. James Kirkwood is the featured player.

A statement from the Paramount office advises that all exhibitors showing the picture should run it on strict schedule, notifying their patrons that nobody will be admitted while it is being projected, because, explains the Paramount statement, the force of the ending will be entirely lost and the interest in the whole picture greatly impaired if spectators see the last part first.

Film Salesmen Form Social Club

The film salesman of New York have formed a new organization known as The Film Salesmen's Social Club. The following officers were elected; A. Reinleib, president; Ben Roman, first vice president; Murray Bier, second vice president; E. C. Bullwinkle, secretary; L. Weinberg, treasurer; A. Sachs and Meyer Soloman, trustees; Sam Weissman, sergeant at arms; and Harry P. Decker, historian. The board of directors consists of Herber Kaufman, M. H. Markowitz, Herbert Dram, M. Cahan, and L. L. Baren.

Teaser Cards Prepared for "The Golem"

Block one-sheets and quarter-sheet cards have been designed as teasers for "The Golem," now playing at the Criterion theatre and soon to be released. The teaser will be the basis of the Paramount exploitation. Claud Saunders, director of exploitation for Paramount pictures, designed the poster. The posters have already been distributed in New York City.

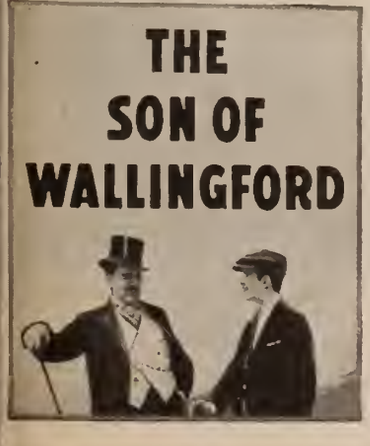
Pathe News Has Scenes of Air Bombing

Pathe News in its current issue No. 61 presents a brilliant record of the air-bombing of German cruisers off the Virginia Capes.

The Pathe pictures convey a clearer idea of the spectacle than could be obtained by those who viewed the actual scene. Even the naval officers present with their powerful sea glasses could not compete with the Pathe News cameras equipped with 17-inch telephoto lenses, which bring the screen audience into startling close quarters with the frightful explosions that sank the "Frankfurt" and the "Ostfriesland."



Better Days at Hand—Laemmle

Addresses Message of Cheer to Industry from Abroad

FROM Carlsbad, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, addresses an optimistic message to the American film industry, in which he declares the time has arrived to get rid of the depression "grouch" and acquire the "grin" that presages better times for all concerned in the motion-picture business. Mr. Laemmle has been kept in touch with developments on this side of the Atlantic since his departure abroad by regular bulletins from the Universal headquarters. His message reads as follows:

"Conditions are going to improve. The reaction has already started. The dawn of a new day—the day of bigger and better box office—is here.

"This is not a surmise. It is not a prediction. There's no guess work to it. It is an assured fact. The causes for this improvement are many.

"Living costs are going down. The retrenchment epidemic—that penny-wise, pound foolish policy that urges a man to forego several hours of real pleasure to spend his evenings brooding and worrying—is disappearing. Like all epidemics, that one was contagious. People got panicky without cause. I repeat: Without cause.

"There never was a real basis for the depression. Certain producers felt, perhaps, a bit squeamish. They might have mentioned the fact that they were a bit doubtful about weathering a tough season. That word was passed on. The gossips got to work. A rumor was born. That rumor grew. From a rumor fundamentally false, there developed a Frankenstein monster. It cast off its shackles, struck at those who had conceived it and soon had the entire industry by the throat.

"Films are better to-day than ever before. More thought, more vision, more brains, and, most of all, more common sense are being put into motion pictures than in the past. If you cannot sell your patrons on the idea that, in justice to themselves and to the fine things that are being done on the screen, they should see these motion pictures, something must be wrong. The fault may lie with the production; I doubt it. The trouble may be lack of advertising or exploitation on your part; that's for you to decide. The theatre-going public may be responsible; Universal will cooperate with you in every way to remedy. Universal always has helped and always will help the exhibitor to the best of its ability.

"I am not predicting a boom. Conditions will have to readjust themselves gradually and intelligently if there is to be any listing benefit. What I do maintain, however, is that things are getting better now and they will get better and better as optimism replaces pessimism.

"There's one thing you can do to bring back prosperity, normalcy—call it what you will. Start selling your patrons on the idea that the slump season is closed. They're the ones you have to reach before you can tell Old Man Depression where to head in. Get your theatre-goers sold on the thought that Gloom has been given the gate and the glad hand is being extended in hearty welcome to Good Times.

"Good-by, Grouch — Howdy, Grin."

Hodkinson Addresses Exhibitor

Boosts Independence Month; Establishes New Service

IN connection with the campaign launched by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to serve September as "Independence Month," W. W. Hodkinson addresses a personal message to the exhibitors of the country and announces the establishment of a new "Hodkinson Backbone Service Contract," by the provisions of which theatre-owners are to be assured a steady supply of feature productions. The Hodkinson broadside is entitled "The Exhibitors' 'Fourth of July'." Under the caption, "Just How Independent Are You—Really?" Mr. Hodkinson declares:

"I would be failing what I conceive to be my duty to the Exhibitor, if I permitted Independence Month to pass without sending some message to the motion picture theatre owners of the country—a message not only urging their observance of the spirit of Independence Month, but a helpful message in that it opens the way to a ready acceptance of the principle of independence.

"You, as an exhibitor, would be quick to resent outside dictation as to the decorative plan of your theatre, the architecture of your lobby, or the color-scheme of your furnishings; yet a vast majority of the exhibitors of the country exercise no voice whatever in the choice of the films shown on their screen. Often they buy pictures with less selective effort than they would exercise in the purchase of merchandise—so many dozen comedies, so many features, and so on down the endless list presented by the film trust, without a thought of the possible lack of appeal of these films to audiences that are rapidly being educated to discriminate between the good and bad in the motion picture world. And the disapproval of an audience is very quickly shown, in falling attendance and decreased earnings. Frequently, by the time the Exhibitor awakens to a realization that he has been pinning his faith to the by-products of the great film-factories of the trust, his clientele has moved off down the street to the house where the right of selection is insisted upon by a wide-awake competitor, who buys his films in the open market on merit alone, and thereby gets the best.

"When complaints flood an industry the size of the motion picture business, there is something fundamentally wrong with it. Almost anything is worth trying that will end the existing chaos—and that is why I say to all Exhibitors that Independence Month is worth trying out.

"For fourteen years I have preached the doctrine of independence in the motion picture industry—freedom from the factory-made film and the heavy burden it places on the shoulders of the exhibitors. Every step I have taken since organizing my own service has been to rescue the Exhibitor from the slavery of mass-production and its inevitable result—choppy programs of poorly-produced films. I have never, as a Distributor, advocated a move that I wouldn't be willing to follow when I was an Exhibitor, and that is why I urge the Exhibitors of America, in the furtherance of the American Spirit of Independence, to devote their September programs to worthwhile independent features. The public, I know, will be quick to appreciate their efforts."

Considerable interest has been manifested in the announcement concerning the establishment of the Hodkinson Backbone Service Contract.

In his preliminary announcement Mr. Hodkinson says:

"To Independence Month, I owe the inspiration of the most important announcements I have ever made effecting the distribution of independent pictures. I refer to the establishment of a new service plan which I have perfected, to be known as the 'Hodkinson Backbone Service Contract.'

"This Backbone Service Contract has been developed to meet the urgent needs of the Exhibitor for a steady dependable supply of merit-tested features. He needs these features more today than ever before in the history of the industry. Only by giving his audiences better pictures and doing it consistently, can the Exhibitor stem the tide now flowing away from his theatre!

"Beginning in September (Independence Month) the Hodkinson Corporation will release an average of two pictures a month. Exhibitors who sign a Backbone Service Contract will thus be assured, whatever the source of their ordinary supply, of a big feature, measuring up to the highest Hodkinson standard of quality, every fortnight.

"I offer the Backbone Service as the Exhibitors' business insurance, and I will include in it only such features as my fourteen years' experience as Exhibitor and Distributor justifies me in accepting as box office winners from every standpoint of public appeal."

Coincident with Mr. Hodkinson's formal statement, the Corporation announces fifteen independent features available for immediate release.

Bright Prospects for Fox in Canada

The great volume of business Fox Films have done in Canada during the past year and the prospect of an even greater volume for 1921-1922 is a matter that has brought great satisfaction to the officials of that company. In the great strides of the past season Fox Films reached out into the most distant territories—territories that required two or three days for transportation.

The Canadian exhibitors have shown a keen desire to book the twelve Fox special productions for longer runs than usual. "A Connecticut Yankee," which is based on Mark Twain's celebrated story, will come to the Canadian exhibitors as a tremendous London success, direct from the Alhambra Theatre, Leicester Square, London.

Another point of great interest to the Canadian exhibitors is the fact that all Fox Films will hereafter be released in Canada at the same time they are released in the United States, which is due in a measure to great increase in the Fox Canadian business.

William F. Barrett is now in charge of all the Canadian territory as general manager with headquarters in Toronto.

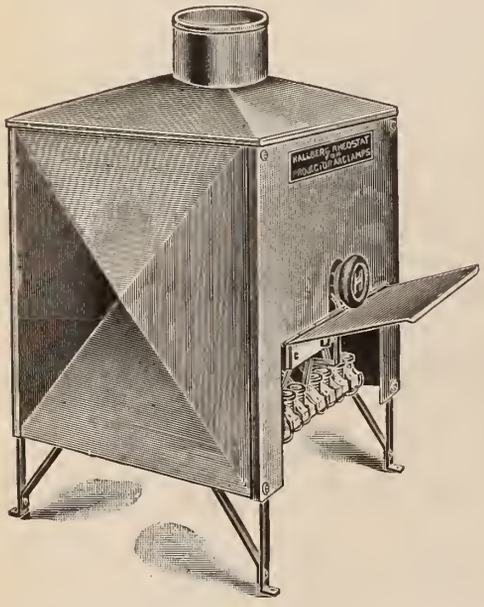
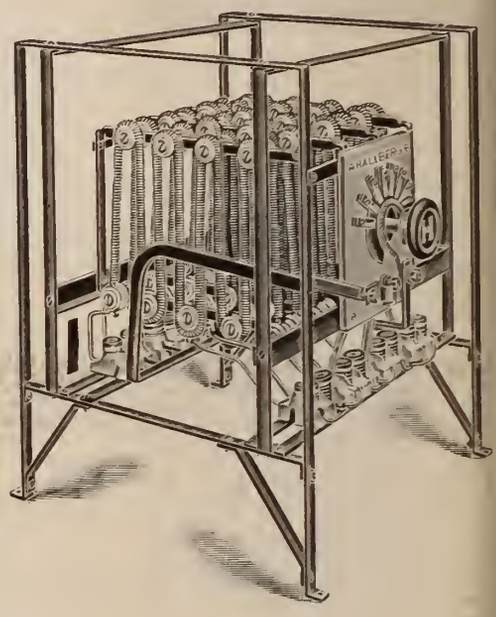
HALLBERG MULTIPLE UNIT RHEOSTAT



The Hallberg is the first M. P. Projector Rheostat designed with the comfort of the Projectionist as well as the control of the arc in mind. The temperature coefficient of the resistance unit is zero, therefore, when the Arc is set at a given current it stays put, which means that the amperes remain constant at the arc with the Rheostat hot or cold—Ventilating duct is provided when so ordered as illustrated for discharge of the heated air into a flue outside the Projection Room.



Designed and Built Like a Steel Bridge Making It Practically Unbreakable!

Made up to 120 Ampere capacity in one unit about 20″ square—Can be set to give any current at the arc from 15 amperes up in approximately 15 ampere steps—Any one of the resistance units can be exchanged in five minutes by the Projectionist—We have now past the stage when any old kind of a Rheostat will do, and herewith offer the most substantial, the coolest, and the most efficient Rheostat in the world, especially designed for our U. T. E. PROCTOR AUTOMATIC PROJECTOR.

Never before has the projectionist been provided with such convenient and substantial means for regulating and controlling a Projector Arc—the advent of the Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat puts all others on the shelf because it is made of the right stuff such as you have been looking for during the past fifteen years—The illustration showing one of the units demonstrates to any modern projectionist the wonderful simplicity and substantial design of the make-up of this Rheostat and how each unit being separately and individually fused gives absolute control and facilitates the renewal of the units or readjustment of them without putting the entire Rheostat out of business. The U. T. E. corporation is now installing several banks of these Rheostats with U. T. E. Projectors in three new theatres in the City of Philadelphia which will be described later.

Associated Producers Announce 1921-22 Releases

AL. LICHTMAN, General Manager of Associated Producers, Inc., this week, announced the 1921-1922 plans for releases. The contemplated schedule includes seven special productions in the months of September, October and November.

Each one of the announced releases emphasizes in an exceptional way the policy of Associated Producers of "individuality created" productions. The single star system was entirely abolished in the casting of them, according to the announcement, thus eliminating any changes in the stories to unduly emphasize any parts.

In selecting the casts, however, the utmost care was taken to procure the best talent for the particular roles to be enacted. Mabel Normand and Hobart Bosworth are the only ones given special mention in any of the casts.

These seven special productions include one personally supervised by Thomas H. Ince, one by Mack Sennett, two Hobart Bosworth productions made at the Ince studios, one special directed by King Vidor, one directed by Larry Trimble and one produced by J. L. Frothingham.

The J. L. Frothingham production is the first scheduled for release and it will be available for exhibitors early in the fall. Lewis S. Stone and Rubye De Remer, pronounced by Paul Helleu, the prominent French artist, to be the most beautiful girl in America, heads the cast. The production is a film adaption of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel "Passers By." Among the other well known players who are in the cast are William V. Mong, Kathleen Kirkham, Raymond Hatton, Walter McGrail and Frank Leigh.

Hobert Bosworth's first production by his own company, "Blind Hearts," is the second of the big specials on the schedule. He has a role of the kind which has made Bosworth so popular throughout the country. He is an Alaskan prospector bent upon the avenging of an imagined wrong and the action of the story is at the time of the Klondike gold rush. Emily Johnson wrote the original story and Joseph Franklin Poland adapted it. Madge Bellamy, the new Ince discovery who made her screen debut in "The Cup of Life" heads the cast which supports Mr. Bosworth and others in it are William Conklin, Wade Boettler, Henry J. Herbert, Irene Blackwell, Colette Forbes, Lula Warrenton and Raymond McKee. Rowland V. Lee is directing.

Third on the schedule is the production which re-unites the two people who co-operated on "Mickey." It is a Mack Sennett production with Mabel Normand as the star and has been titled "Molly O." Lowell Sherman heads the cast supporting Miss Normand and others who have prominent parts in it are George Nichols, Gloria Davenport, Jack Mulhall, Eugenie Besserer, Carl Stockdale, Jacquiline Logan, Anna Hernandez, Eddie Gribbons and Albert Hackett. F. Richard Jones is the director under the supervision of Mr. Sennett. Mr. Jones directed "Mickey."

Al Lichtman, general manager of Associated Producers

King Vidor's initial production for Associated Producers is the fourth on the list. The production was made in the Ince studios. It has been titled "Love Never Dies" and the cast provided for it includes Lloyd Hughes, Claire McDowell, Madge Bellamy, Winifred Greenwood, Lillian Leighton and Frank Brownell.

The fifth special, "The Silent Call" is regarded as one of the greatest animal story ever filmed. H. O. Davis is the producer, Larry Trimble the director and Jane Murfin prepared the scenario from Hal Evarts Saturday Evening Post story "The Cross Pull." "Greatheart," a marvelous police dog and a she-wolf have prominent parts in the story. The cast includes John Bowers, Kathryn McGuire, William V. Mong, James Mason, William J. Dwyer, Robert Bolder, Nelson McDowell, Ray Howard and E. J. Brady.

The production which Thomas H. Ince has pronounced to be "the most tremendous drama of my career" is the sixth on the list. It is "Hail The Woman" and, persons who have read the story regard it as being one which has a strong chance of being accepted as the great American drama. C. Gardner Sullivan wrote it from theme based upon American womanhood, and American morals, and Mr. Ince has assembled the greatest vast which has ever appeared in one picture. The players include Florence Vidor, Madge Bellamy, Lloyd Hughes, Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall, Charles Meredith, Edward Martindel and Mathilde Brundage. Griffith Wray has been selected to do the directing under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

"The Sea Lion" the second Hobart Bosworth production is the seventh on the list of specials. It is a story of Alaskan whale fisheries and gives splendid opportunities for Mr. Bosworth in the actions which audiences the world over have found so thrilling. Emily Johnson wrote the story and Rowland V. Lee has been selected to direct. Bessie Love, Emory Johnson, Jack Curtis, Carol Halloway and Richard Morris are among the well known players who are in the cast.

"The term 'individuality created' has been used in describing these fall releases of Associated Producers, Inc., and the pictures themselves live up to the description" said Al. Lichtman, general manager. "They were made under neither the hit-or-miss system nor under the turn-'em-out-in-a-hurry-policy. Each production represents the concentrated, individual effort of an experienced and a successful producer. Each has been individually created for the screens of the world."

Edward Dillon will direct this comedy of an American beauty expert's laughable adventures in a mythical principality. The twins are well known to picturegoers, having appeared as youngsters for the old Thanhouser Company.

Mob Action Ends in a Riot

Rival Factions Stage Real Fight for Rex Beach's "The Iron Trail"

DIRECTOR R. WILLIAM NEILL, who is filming a screen version of Rex Beach's railroad story, "The Iron Trail," for release by United Artists, recently got considerable more action in one of his exteriors than scenario specifications called for, according to a statement issued from the home-office of the "Big Four." In addition, three of Mr. Neill's cast and his assistant-director, Bert Siebel, were painfully injured, according to the account. The sequence of events, as described in the United Artists statement, took place as follows:

One of the scenes called for in the script shows two rival factions engaged in a mob fight to determine which of their respective employers shall enjoy the right of way in establishing the railroad line. A thousand extras were needed to stage scene, and accordingly two agents were sent to nearby towns to gather up the local talent. Without knowing it, the agents assembled two bodies of laborers between which bad blood already existed. When word was given to mix it before the camera the rival gangs followed instructions with a vengeance. Before Director Neill grasped the true nature of the situation, three of his principal players had gone down and out and his assistant Siebel had been felled by a glancing blow from a pick-axe.

All signals from the directorial chief to stop action were ignored, and it became necessary to utilize another unit of extras, representing "Mine Guards," to stay the riot. The "mine guards" were sent against the fighting crowds with rifles loaded with blank cartridges. The sound of the firing and the sight of the rifles produced the desired effect, and order was restored sufficiently to permit the administration of medical assistance to the casualties. The rest of the mob scenes were filmed without further trouble but the big fight did not have to be retaken.

"It was immense," says Neill, "on the first take."

Urban Films Classified

300 of Proposed 1000 Reels of "Book of Knowledge" Are Prepared

CLASSIFICATION of the tremendous amount of material in the film library of Charles Urban has gone forward at such a rapid rate that a sketch of the broad proportions it will take is now possible.

As Mr. Urban and his film editors proceed with the work all the completed reels are listed numerically either as Kineto Reviews or as Movie Chats and after they are in either of those broad classifications they are further subdivided into their proper series.

There are now completed more than 200 reels under the Kineto Review department and more than 100 under the Movie Chats. These 300 reels have been edited in a little more than a year and every one of them has had the personal attention of Mr. Urban himself.

Some of the more noteworthy groups which are being fashioned out of the library of film include the following: "The Urban Science Series." This includes upwards of 20 reels now and is being added to constantly. The main contributors have been Prof. F. Percy Smith, of London, England and Ch. N. Mavroyeni, of Athens, Greece.

"The Animal Kingdom Series." This group already comprises 40 reels and, according to Mr. Urban's present plans, has no limit as to scope. Many European photographers have contributed to this series; the principal Americans are Raymond L. Ditmars and Arthur H. Fisher. "The La Fontaine Fables." These are now a fairly familiar story to American audiences. There will be twenty of them, the choicest stories of the 240 La Fontaine is credited with. They are being produced at the New York Zoological Park by Mr. Ditmars. "The Four Seasons." This is a masterly series also produced by Ditmars, picturing the ways and moods of Nature in Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter. One reel is devoted to each season.

The 4 reels will be released as a single picture.

"The Roving Thomas Series." This is a world-travel group under the guidance of the Urban cat. None of these have as yet been released. Each reel is a combination of photography and animated drawing, the Urban cat being the creation of John C. Terry.

"Great American Authors Series." These pictures will be semi-biographical, semi-literary. There will be twelve in all; more if the public demand is satisfying enough.

The 300 reels already completed mark more than the first lap on the course to a 1000 reel encyclopedia.

"Cup of Life" Presents Madge Bellamy

In Thomas H. Ince's "Cup of Life," Madge Bellamy will be presented in the leading female role. Miss Bellamy is probably best known for her stage work opposite William Gillette in "Dear Brutus." Penhryen Stanlaws, the well-known "girl" artist, pronounced Miss Bellamy one of the most beautiful women on the American stage. In "The Cup of Lofe" Miss Bellamy portrays the role of a white girl who has been adopted by a Chinese merchant. Marchall Tully portrays the merchant while Hobart Bosworth as "Bully" Braud and Niles Welch as his son Warren Bradford play the other leading roles in the production.

Vitagraph Units Busy at West Coast Studios

ADVICES from Vitagraph's home-office declare that the new serial, "Breaking Through," in which Carmel Myers is starred, is now well under way at the Hollywood studio. Robert Ensminger is the director. The continuity was prepared by C. Graham Baker. It is expected that the entire serial will be completed before the first episode is released in October.

Another Vitagraph production, "Flower of the North," based on James Oliver Curwood's novel, is also reported to be well under way at the West Coast studios. The cast is headed by Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke. David Smith is directing. The exteriors filmed in the mountains of Northern California will present some beautiful natural scenery, it is declared.

Larry Semon is engaged in the filming of the final scenes for "The Bell Hop." Earle Williams is busy on a new production, "Lucky Carson," which is being directed by Wilfred North. Betty Ross Clark plays opposite Mr. Williams.

Anita Stewart Picture Given Release Title

Louis B. Mayer has selected "Her Mad Bargain" as the releasing title for the Anita Stewart vehicle recently produced under the working title of "The Price of Happiness." It is an Associated First National attraction. The screen version was written by Josephine Quirk and filmed under the direction of Edwin Carewe.

Walter McGrail, Gertrude Astor, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Adele Farrington, Margaret McWade and Ernest Butterworth are the principals of the star's supporting cast.

Finish Filming of "The Three Musketeers"

Shooting on "The Three Musketeers" is over. All told, 894 scenes were taken for this production, over a period of ninety days. This made an average of nearly 10 scenes a day, some of which are said to be the most difficult ever filmed.

The Broadway premiere of "The Three Musketeers" will take place at the Lyric Theatre.

Wallace MacDonald in Vitagraph Cast

Wallace MacDonald, one of the best known male leads in motion pictures, has signed a contract with Vitagraph resulting in his being co-starred with Carmel Myers in "Breaking Through," the new Vitagraph serial which is being directed on the West Coast by Robert Ensminger.

Many Big Exhibitors Book "Devotion"

"Devotion" the A. J. Bimberg production with Hazel Dawn and E. K. Lincoln heading the cast is proving a strong favorite with the leading exhibitors of the country according to reports which have been received by General Manager Al Lichtman of Associated Producers, Inc., from the exchanges of that company, which are distributing the picture. Among the larger theatre companies which have booked the attraction are Gore Brothers, Ramish and Sol Lesser, Loew's, Hulsey's Southern Enterprises and Lynch's Southern Enterprises.

Elaborate Lithographs for "Three Musketeers"

An extensive advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign is to be undertaken on behalf of "The Three Musketeers," Douglas Fairbanks' latest picture, announces United Artists. Fairbanks, it is said, has spent a million dollars on the production.

Varied and striking paper has been prepared, all of which show the star in the character of O'Artagnan. The twenty-four sheets makes use of the well known phrase, "All for one, and one for all," and pictures the three musketeers. The six sheets show vividly some of the excellent swordsplay.

Prisma Colorings Embellish "Experience"

Adolph Zukor, President of Famous Players, was so impressed with the pastel painting of "Ambition" by Prince Palcologue, that he contracted with this well-known Roumanian artist for twenty-four of a similar nature. These have been photographed by Prizma as color embellishments for "Experience," to be shown at the Rivoli next week.

The initial print of "Rip Van Winkle," featuring Thomas Jefferson in the title role has been received at the Hodkinson headquarters in New York.

Trend to Short-Subjects

C. H. Christie Points to Growing Use of Short Films in Programs

IN a statement issued during the week from the Christie Studios, Los Angeles, Cal., C. H. Christie, general-manager of the Christie Film Company, points to the growing popularity of the "all-comedy and all-short-subject bills" in motion-picture theatres especially during the summer months. Mr. Christie says:

"Exceptional bookings of comedies during the last six months and the accompanying advertising of comedies by leading exhibitors who are users of newspaper space is the strongest proof of the fact that there is a growing tendency toward using more short film for balancing programe and less use of expensive entertainment in the form of prologues and vaudeville.

"This is a hopeful sign, because after all people go to picture theatres to see pictures and they demand their short entertainment in the form of comedies, scenics and novelty reels just the same as they do the dramas, feeling that they have been cheated if they are given cheap vaudeville instead.

"Naturally the picture theatre man, except in the case of the biggest city theatres, cannot compete with the vaudeville circuits for entertainment. But they can get the best results by depending for their balanced program on film distributors who deal in standard short films.

"Film is naturally the only short subject which is equally available to the small theatre operator and to the big fellow.

"The experiment of playing up orchestras in theatre advertising has usually operated with a back kick, owing to the unavoidable tendency of high-priced and much-advertised orchestra leaders to jump to the opposition house.

"Stage novelties have remained novelties and as such must lose their effectiveness in time. Also they are not equally suitable everywhere although their first introduction may have been a knockout entertainment for the theatre which first sponsored them.

"A leading distributing manager just pointed out the need for shorter feature films, say 4500 to 5000 feet. That gives the comedies and the other film specialties a better and bigger chance for recognition.

"The fact that nearly every theatre owners who buys newspaper space now advertises the well known comedy brands and comedy stars indicates that it is generally good business to advertise the parts of the program which are known to be able to give satisfaction."

Katherine Lewis Added to Christie Cast

Katherine Lewis has been added to the cast of the latest comedy being produced at the Christie studio under the big new contract with Educational. Al Christie is personally directing the picture, which probably will be called "Listen Sister." Dorothy Devore is featured in this new comedy, and Earl Rodney and Eugenie Forde have prominent parts.

Gasnier will begin shooting "Ma'mselle Jo" from the novel by Harriet T. Comstock, on August 8. The book was adapted to the screen by Winifred Dunn. Rose Dunn has the title role and Tully Marshall plays opposite her.

Pauline Frederick begins work on August 8 with an original story by Marion Orth, the working title of which is "The Lure of Jade." Colin Campbell will direct.

Sessue Hayawaka will resume his work August 15, on one of three big productions, all of which are ready for him.

ADVENTURES of BILL and BOB

in "THE MOUNTAIN LION"

A PICTURE REVEALING THE MARVELLOUS NERVE OF TWO REAL AMERICAN BOYS

"CATCHING A COON"
("Adventures of Bill and Bob"—Pathe)

Type of production ..... 1 reel
educational.

The second of the series of "The Adventures of Bill and Bob" is called "Catching a Coon" and shows how the two youngsters catch a raccoon. The trap is baited and Bill and Bob await results. In view of the timidity of the little animal it is surprising that the cameraman has been able to obtain such a close range. One shot shows the coon wading through a shallow brook. Later it is caught in the trap and seeurely fastened with rope by the boys before they release the trap, Mr Coon unwillingly trudges out of the camera's focus leashed to the rope. Very good material of its kind.—Wid's

"THE AMERICAN BADGER"
(Bill and Bob Series—Pathe)

In this one Bill and Bob concentrate on the badger. This animal whose fur is very valuable is found most abundantly in the Western plains.

After a short introduction in which our heroes are seen climbing the mountains and enjoying the atmosphere of the great outdoors, the method of laying the trap is shown.

It is placed in a hole probably not more than six or eight inches in depth, wrapped in oil paper and then covered with earth. But this does not complete the job, for the young hunters have to be careful and not leave their fingerprints or anything that would arouse Mr. Badger's suspicions.

When things are completed the hunters retire and a subtitle announces that after three or four days discouraging work the following scenes were taken. These scenes show the badger returning at the trap and cautiously sniffing about. He is not wary enough to see the trap and when he is not thinking unconsciously springs it and is caught.

He is then tied by the young hunters and led away.

Pictures of this sort are always interesting to the studios and to those who like great outdoors.—Frank Leon-ard, M. P. News.

"ATTRACTIVE"—"INTEREST-ING"—"UNUSUAL"

Verdict of New York Newspapers Regarding "Adventures of Bill and Bob"

The World—Monday, March 21, 1921.

New York Herald—March 21, 1921
"Trapping the Bobcat" is an attractive picture that is the first of a series called "Adventures of Bill and Bob."

New York Telegraph—March 21, 1921.
The Strand has a good short feature subject on its program. It is called "Trapping the Bobcat" and is a part of a series entitled, "The Adventures of Bill and Bob." Bill and Bob are two small boys who give a "Peurod" touch to a nature picture. The film presented by Pathe, ought to draw flocks of Boy Scouts to the Strand.

New York Evening Post—March 21, 1921.
"Trapping the Bobcat" is the first of the Pathe series known as "The Adventures of Bill and Bob." It shows these young but expert woodsmen in an exciting game, and presents, too, forest scenes of considerable beauty

Baltimore Sun—March 16, 1921
A pleasant departure from the usually mediocre comedies which follow the feature film is provided this week in Cyrus Williams' presentation of "The Adventures of Bill and Bob," a semi-educational picture which is created in such fashion as to create a most enjoyable interest. Not in the least pedantic this insight into the ways and manner of capturing the beast leads one to hope that we may expect more along the same line.

We are very pleased to let you know that "Trapping the Bobcat," first of the "Adventures of Bill and Bob" series, is a very pleasant impression on us, and we consider this series the most original of short features that we have ever had the good fortune to place on our program.

Paramount's Releases for August 14th

WILLIAM S. HART in "The Whistle" and Douglas MacLean in the Thomas H. Ince production, "Passing Thru," are the Paramount feature releases scheduled for August 14.

In "The Whistle," which was written by May Wilmoth and Olin Lyman and was adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer, "Big Bill" steps out of the schaps of the Western frontiersman and dons the overalls of the factory worker. The locale of the story is New England and Hart's role is that of a mill foreman who fights for the rights of his fellow workers, and for their protection against accidents. Myrtle Stedman is seen as the leading woman.

Agnes Christine Johnston is the author of "Passing Thru," the Thomas H. Ince production which presents Douglas MacLean. Joseph Franklin Poland wrote the scenario and William A. Seiter directed. Madge Bellamy is the leading woman.

The blowing up of a brick bank building within which are all the principal characters of the story, is but one of a number of thrills that are said to make "Passing Thru" one of the most sensational as well as humorous screen offerings of the season.

Gottschalk Will Write Music for Doug.

Louis Gottschalk who will long be remembered as the producer for Henry Savage of Franz Lehar's famous "Merry Widow" in this country in 1908, has been engaged to arrange the musical score for Douglas Fairbanks' film version of "The Three Musketeers," scheduled for fall release by the United Artists Corporation.

Gottschalk is now in daily conference in Los Angeles with Fairbanks, also with Doug's director, Fred Niblo, and Edward Knoblock, who is credited with the lens edition of the famous Dumas story.

"Hurricane Hutch" Heads List

Thrilling Serial for Pathe Release on September 25

CHARLES HUTCHISON, celebrated as "the thrill-a-minute stunt king" of motion picture serials, in his latest production, called "Hurricane Hutch," will have the honor of heading Pathe's Autumn schedule of releases. The release date for "Hurricane Hutch" is September 25th. Hutchinson is credited with authorship of the story, which enabled him to invent all of his own "stunts" and distribute them throughout the serial with the most logical dramatic effect; also to largely increase the usual quota of thrills per episode, introducing new ideas in a natural and dramatically convincing manner.

Produced and directed for Pathe by George B. Seitz, the new Hutchison serial is said to benefit by every available element entering into serial production. Mr. Hutchison's supporting company of principals is notably strong. The two important villain roles are played by Warner Oland and Harry Semels. For the heroine part, beautiful and courageous Lucy Fox was chosen. The leading heavy woman is accomplished Ann Hastings, while the new ingenue beauty of screendom, Diana Deer, has a part well suited to her youthful charms.

A cast of this quality, according to the producer, was made necessary by the intense character of many of the purely dramatic scenes. The superior acting of these scenes adds effectiveness to some of the star's best "stunts," as they bring out the motives which apparently nerve the hero so frequently to take his life in his hands. In "Hurricane Hutch," the "stunts" not only are there, but they have to be there. The gain in cumulative interest produced by such painstaking efficiency is said to be strikingly apparent, and to place "Hurricane Hutch" in a serial class by itself.

The nature of the drama enacted requires the hero apparently often to hazard his life on the shortest notice. The fortunes of a paper mill of which the heroine is the heiress hangs on possession of a secret formula for the cheap manufacture of paper from seaweed. A villainous conspiracy to secure this formula involves various attempts to wreck the plant and otherwise to harrass or ruin its fair owner. The principal villains—played by Oland and Semels—move in the same social circles with the heroine, while the star has the part of superintendent of the mills and their fair owner's devoted admirer. He is a busy man, and it is easy for the accomplished villains to keep him busier yet—taking desperate chances with death for the heroine's and his own salvation.

Such things begin to happen in the very first reel, developing naturally out of the action of the drama. The hero is required to overtake a train carrying the heroine into the conspirators' net. You see Hutchison on his motorcycle taking a short cut and leaping his machine a score of feet over a wrecked bridge. He finds himself compelled to ride the length of an open trestle with a train only a few feet behind him, then down a steep embankment and across the radius of a curve, finally to leap from his speeding machine directly on to the rear platform of a flying express train. This is one sample of a steady succession of feats of equal skill and daring which bring "Hurricane Hutch" up to the position of "headliner" on the Pathe Autumn schedule.

R-C Names September Releases

THE release schedule for R-C Pictures for September, announced by R-C Pictures Corporation for the opening of the new year's Production program, includes four productions of special interest. The year's schedule includes twenty-six productions. The program includes Pauline Frederick in six productions, Sessue Hayakawa in six, Doris May starring in five Hunt Stromberg Productions, four Directors' Productions by Louis J. Gasnier, and five Directors' Productions directed by William Christy Cabanne.

The first of the season's releases, which had its pre-release showing at the Capitol Theatre last week is "Where Lights Are Low" starring Sessue Hayakawa. This is a gripping drama of love in a palace garden and in Chinatown's mysterious caverns. It is the story of a love that gave a prince power to fight his way through a ring of death to peace and happiness. Direction was by Colin Campbell, and the play has been praised by the critics as one of the best in which the clever Japanese star has appeared. "Where Lights Are Low" is scheduled for release September 4.

Pauline Frederick's first starring production for the year is "The Sting of the Lash," directed by Henry King. The story is by Harvey T. Gates and direction is by Henry King. It is described as one of the strangest love stories ever told on the screen. It tells the story of a man who sank low in degradation, and who was regenerated through the power, steadfastness and loyalty of a woman's love. "The Sting of the Lash" is scheduled for release September 11.

"Shams of Society," a Walsh-Fielding production, directed by Thomas B. Walsh, is set for release September 18. It tells the story of the sordid poverty of the wives of rich men who have no personal means of maintaining their own places in life. It is described to be a strange drama of life with tragedy lurking near—and an amazing climax. Barbara Castleton is the star.

The fourth of the first month's releases will be the Gasnier production, of the Directors' Productions series, "A Wife's Awakening," which will be released September 25. It is the story of a man with a crooked soul who would have made his wife a cat's-paw in his shady deals.

Out-Distance Other Amusements in Attendance and Financial Receipts

THAT the motion picture has taken first rank by a wide margin in Australian amusement circles is indicated by information received by E. E. Shauer, manager of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The total attendance at motion pictures during the last year was 67,466,657, or more than thirteen times the population of the country, while the revenue paid to the state in the form of taxes was almost half the entire sum collected from all amusement enterprises during the year. The rapid strides made by the motion picture industry have far outclassed the revenues received by all other forms of amusement, such as the theatre, racing, dancing and skating, concerts and miscellaneous attractions.

The attendance at all amusement enterprises during the twelve months was 95,866,620, which represents approximately nineteen visits for each man, woman and child of Australia's 5,000,000. Thirteen of these visits were made to motion picture theatres, the other six visits being divided between the theatre, racing skating, dancing, concerts and other amusement attractions. Box office revenues for all amusement attractions in the commonwealth were approximately £6,615,000, motion pictures receiving £3,104,000 of this amount. This splendid showing has been of great encouragement to the leaders of the motion picture industry, and undoubtedly will result in increased activity in the building of larger and better theatres and in improving the presentation of pictures.

Statistics collected by the Melbourne Argus illustrate the tremendous growth made by the motion picture industry. Receipts from the entertainment tax during the year were £551,314, divided as follows:

Racing	£109,571
Theatres	105,004
Pictures	258,670
Dancing and skating	20,688
Concerts	13,139
Miscellaneous	44,242

"On the Way to Normalcy"

Shake-Up in Progress to Put Things Back in Place, Says Irving Thalberg

IRVING G. THALBERG, general manager of Universal City, has analyzed the present condition of the motion-picture industry in concise terms.

"The motion picture screen reflects life," declares Mr. Thalberg. "At the moment, it is mirroring the world's return to normalcy.

"Nothing ever gets by for long that isn't based upon fact. The man who works and is proud of it, has discarded his silk shirt. The man who doesn't need to work is working because he has a right to have a hand in the greatest shake-up that the world has ever known; a shakeup that is going to put things back in place and with them the motion-picture industry.

"There are many ways of saying it, but the man who makes motion-pictures knows that he must make better pictures for less money and start making them now.

"The picture of the future will be a human story, accurately depicted by genuine people and exhibited for those who will spend money to see a sincere story of normal life.

"The present unrest is the best thing that could have happened to the industry. No permanent peace was ever achieved without revolution, and the producers know that the distance between success and failure is just a few thousand feet of unworthy motion picture film palmed off on the public.

"I have been asked: 'When will the motion picture industry right itself?' and my answer is:

"When the excellent stories that are now being filmed at a reasonable cost can be released to exhibitors at a cost that will enable them to show them for what they are worth, make a reasonable profit for themselves, return a reasonable profit to the producer and give the purchaser his money's worth of entertainment."

C. C. McCollister, veteran theatre owner, who will have supervision of the Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, in addition to directing the destinies of the other houses of the United Theatres Co.

Twelve Stars in Fox Productions for Coming Year

"WILLIAM FOX products for the ensuing year will fulfill every promise made to exhibitors and the public." Such is the pledge made by that company in the announcement of plans for the new season. More than that, assurance is given that every promise implied in the progressingly increasing excellence of Fox productions in the past will be carried out.

In the field of feature productions twelve popular Fox stars will provide new and striking pictures for the entertainment of their hosts of followers.

The number of William Farnum productions for the season has not been fixed, and probably will be limited only by the well known capacity for hard and continuous work of this energetic star.

Tom Mix, the cowboy who came to the films and made good brilliantly as an actor, reversing a more common practice, will make about seven photoplays of strenuous life, reckless riding and daring adventures. Ingenuity of plot characterizes the stories selected as vehicles for the strenuous Western star, and this, together with his rapid and continuous development as a marvel of the screen, gives assurance of increased popularity for Tom Mix through the new season. The first Mix picture of the season, announced as a September release, is "The Night Horseman," a sequel to his immensely popular photoplay "The Untamed." "The Night Horsemen," is a gripping story of the type which Tom Mix and his company are most effective in presenting on the screen. The next will be 'Trailin'," an October release.

Dustin Farnum, popular with women as an attractive matinee idol and with men as a real he-man, is to make approximately seven pictures in the course of the season. His first, "The Primal Law," is announced by William Fox for September release. The second picture, under the direction of Bernard Durning, has not yet been named. It will be released in October.

Buck Jones has shown himself a fast runner-up through the past season in the race for supreme excellence which William Fox promotes, and he seems likely to go far in the ensuing year. Stories of rapid action and replete with thrills have been provided for the fast-riding and hard-fighting star, and he has plunged with enthusiasm into the appalling tasks designed for him by scenario writer and director. The first Buck Jones photoplay of the new season is "To A Finish," a thrilling melodrama of the West in which the hero is pitted against formidable odds. The second, bearing the suggestive title "Bar Nothin'," is well under way and will be released to exhibitors in October.

Pearl White and her company are busy with her first picture of the season without stopping to select a title for it. The story provides the beautiful and versatile star with unusual opportunities to display her most noted qualities. The best known woman of the screen bids fair to win new laurels in the new season which William Fox is launching with the determination that it shall exceed all the ambitious efforts of the past.

John Gilbert, who won fame in the thrilling Fox special, "Shame," now running on Broadway, will contribute about seven notable pictures to the products of the present Fox season. His first starring picture, "Gleam O'Dawn," will be released early in the season.

Shirley Mason, the daintiest and most delightful little lady on the screen, graciously and courageously accepted the task of providing some seven attractions to the list.

Shirley Mason's first picture of the new season is "Ever Since Eve," a romantic mystery story based on the popular novel by Joseph Ernest Peat, "Concerning Chichine." The great little star is seen in many striking situations, many different gowns and in many moods. "Ever Since Eve" will be released in August. The second bears the title of "Queenie."

William Russell, the vigorous and daring young romantic star who has won wide and favorite attention from motion picture patrons with a preference for photoplays of dash and daring, also will make about seven pictures in the current year. His first is "Singing River," an August release, in which tense situations abound and are relieved by a strain of sparkling humor. The story is by Robert J. Horton The second, for October release, is a romance of London and a mythical European kingdom, "The Lady From Longacre," from a popular novel by Victor Bridges.

The 20th Century Brand of Fox pictures will again have Eileen Percy heading the delightful stars who have made this series much in demand by exhibitors. The first of these will be "Hickville to Broadway," which will be released on August 20.

Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker are two young stars who will command a lot of attention during the coming season. They earned their honors in "Over the Hill," and plans for the coming season include them in several productions in which youth and adventure play a prominent part.

Added to this series also is Barbara Bedford, who has been a leading woman with Fox for some time.

Twelve Fox Specials Assured of Broadway Runs

ENTERING upon its final phase, so far as production is concerned, the extraordinary plan announced some time ago by William Fox for twelve specials for presentation in Broadway theatres is an assured success. Six of these super-features already have appeared on Broadway, three more have been completed at the Fox studios, and the remaining three are in work. One of the new famous Fox Broadway specials enjoyed a continuously successful run of nearly a year on the world's greatest entertainment thoroughfare, and was taken off while still drawing good houses in order to make way for another special of the group, in fulfillment of the promise made by William Fox.

All twelve of the big special productions, following their runs on Broadway, and in some instances without awaiting the termination of these, are to be released to exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada in the course of the momentous season now entered upon. The first release, announced for August, is that of "Over the Hill," widely known as the greatest human drama of all times. The Fox special photoplay production of Will Carletons' famous poem enjoyed the record run on Broadway, and has been the occasion of thousands of communications, by mail and telegraph, from exhibitors everywhere, asking when the picture would be released. The scenario was prepared by Paul H. Sloane and the production directed by Harry Millarde.

Another of the great specials, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," the Fox photoplay version of the delightful Mark Twain classic was booked for a run at the Capitol, largest theatre on Broadway and in the world, after being withdrawn from the Central Theatre to permit the launching of "Thunderclap." "A Connecticut Yankee" goes to the exhibitors September 11.

The third Fox special to be withdrawn in the midst of a successful run, to make way for a successor among the big twelve was "Queen of Sheba," which will be a December release to exhibitors. It was replaced at the Lyric Theatre by "Shame," a suprise thriller of the most intense type, the story for which was written by Emmett J. Flynn and Bernard McConville. It was staged by Emmett J. Flynn.

"Over the Hill," closing its record run at the Park Theatre, was succeeded by "A Virgin Paradise," a gripping story of the jungle and civilized hypocrisy written by Hiram Percy Maxim and directed by J. Searle Dawley.

"Perjury," "Footfalls" and "The Last Trail," finished and ready, now await their turns while "Thunderclap," "Shame" and "A Virgin Paradise" are enjoying their opening Broadway runs and the last three of this amazing series of specials, as yet unnamed, are being produced in the different Fox studios.

The nine completed specials are of widely different types, each strikingly original and presenting thrillingly dramatic situations new to the screen. "Over the Hill" appeals to the heart, the sentiment, the emotions of mankind. Dramatically, with its all-star company headed by Mary Carr, Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker, directed with consummate skill by Harry Millarde, it is a triumph of the screen.

"A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" makes a strongly humorous appeal, and also is impressive as a spectacle with its visualizations of English court life in the Age of Chivalry. The foremost members of the all-star cast are Harry Meyers, Pauline Starke and Rosemary Theby.

"Queen of Sheba" is a stupendous wonderful screen spectacle as well as an impressive drama of love and war in Egypt, Arabia and the Holy Land ages ago. The characters are portrayed by an all-star cast headed by Betty Blythe and Fritz Leiber.

"Thunderclap" is an exciting race-track melodrama presented by an all-star cast headed by Mary Carr, Violet Mersereau and Paul Ellis. It abounds in tense situations leading up to a racing scene which establishes it as the most powerfully spectacular photoplay of its kind. The directing genius of Richard Stanton is displayed at its best in this great Fox special.

Startling contrasts, scenes of extraordinary beauty and grandeur and displays of tense human emotion characterize "A Virgin Paradise," an impressive spectacle dealing with life in the jungle and with civilized hypocrisy. It is presented with an all-star cast headed by Pearl White. The picturizing of the remarkable story by Hiram Percy Maxim made almost unheard of financial demands upon Fox Film Corporation, and upon the recognized directing ability of J. Searle Dawley as well. The result justifies all the cost in money, talent and devoted service to a splendid enterprise.

"Shame," with John Gilbert, Rosemary Theby, William V. Mong and George Siegmann in an all-star cast, is a story of stormy human emotion in widely different settings, from the streets of Shanghai to Chinatown of San Francisco and the snow fields of Alaska. As a spectacle it is magnificent, and as a melodramatic story of life under strange and weird circumstances it is thrilling. There are charming love scenes and flashes of humor contrasted with the grimness of other scenes. The photodrama made extreme demands upon the directing skill of Emmett J. Flynn, which he met effectively.

"Perjury" is a startling story of the miscarriage of justice, with far-reaching effects upon many lifes. The all-star cast is headed by William Farnum, and includes Sally Crute, Wallace Erskine, John Webb Dillion and Frank Shannon. Tense situations abound in this thrilling photoplay, which is replete with surprises. Harry Millarde directed with all his well known skill.

"Footfalls" presents Tyrone Power, Estelle Taylor and an all-star cast in one of the most profoundly impressive photoplays ever shown on the screen. At times the tremendous picture story grips one with almost intolerable force, compelling breathless attention. Its surprises are startling, amazing. As a story of human grief, human emotion and human determination it stands supreme. This soul-starring photodrama was directed by Charles J. Brabin in masterly fashion.

"The Last Trail," as the title indicates, is a story of the west, and a most unusual and impressive story of its type. The all-star cast is headed by Wallace Beery, Maurice Flynn, Eva Novak and Rosemary Theby. The story is from the novel by Zane Grey, and is one of rapid action, exciting situations, suspense and surprises. Emmett J. Flynn directed.

"Over the Hill" goes to the exhibitors in August; "A Virgin Paradise" and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" in September; "Thunderclap," "Shame" and "Perjury" in October; "Footfalls" and "The Last Trail" in November and "Queen of Sheba" in December.

The list of twelve specials is an imposing one, fulfilling the ambitious promise of William Fox impressively.

"Music in the Air"
(Educational)

THEY say the Indian of North America is growing extinct. Maybe he is but his brothers in South America have no idea of leaving this old world, judging from their numbers and the way they act in this one-reeler.

And the cameramen must have made a special trip to catch this feature which exploits the Indians in all their regalia and paraphernalia during one of their most impressive ceremonies.

As an introduction, tourists are pictured crossing a large lake from Bolivia to Peru to take in the sights. The titles tell us that the Indians are descendants of the old Incas but one could never tell this fact from their dress and appearance.

Before the "big event" which is the parade, the Indians are shown preparing their costumes which are of expensive material and give the bucks as the titles announce the appearance of beetles. When this is done the business of disguising themselves is put into operation, which means the placing of hideous false-faces, mustaches and wigs upon their heads and faces.

And then comes the parade which consists of floats, bands (each member of which plays a fife, flute or drum and intends to be heard) and various other incidentals too numerous to mention. Those scenes are well worth witnessing.

The cameraman then takes us about and into the churches, shows us the dancing which is said to last about a week—and some of the native belles.

An interesting and instructive educational.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Quaint Holland"
(Lyman H. Howe Library—One Reel)

THE land of windmills, canals, market places, dairy farms and the most picturesque people in the world is "Quaint Holland," from the Lyman Howe Library. This natural color reel is not only picturesque but it is also amusing. The risibilities of an audience will certainly be heard from in terms of laughter over the quaint costumes of the natives and the curious expressions on their faces. With natural colors giving emphasis to these costumes one may imagine the interest aroused from the number. The photography is finely tinted and wonderfully clear. This is particularly noticeable when the spectator is taken down the various quiet streams in boats. The water is reflected so well that one can almost see bottom. These Hollanders are a clannish people. They are unmindful of progress or the affairs of the outside world, simply being content to market their wares and live in peaceful association. They are a hardy race and the indications are that milk and cheese constitute the major portion of their diet. The women are as husky as the men. "Quaint Holland" is an exceptionally appealing scenic.—LAURENCE REID.

"After the Dough"
(Hallroom Boys Comedy-Federated)

PERCY AND FERDIE of Hallroom fame have given up their sham temporarily to put something over on the Volstead act. Sid Smith and Harry McCoy who play the parlor pets are seen standing before a fake bread line, the dispensor of the food handing out a bottle of booze which is securely hidden in the loaf. Smith drops two or three loaves, before he is able to take one away. The boys encounter a cop and have a time registering innocence, but eventually are seated in the park where they imagine themselves safe from prying eyes. But the officer is also on the park bench and he compels them to take a dose of castor oil.

The concluding footage has to do in rescuing the loaf of bread from a dog and baby—the action revealing a deal of trouble because of the cop's presence. The familiar chase is introduced which concludes with the bottle in their possession after Smith has been run down by a train. The comedy carries a timely idea which breezes through with plenty of pep notwithstanding the fact that the humor is not unduly conspicuous. The piece is good enough to find booking anywhere.—Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Secret of Butte Ridge"
(Tom Santschi Series-Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS two-reeler reminds us in many ways of the days when the General Film Company had its swing. In the first place the story is of the same calibre as the ones that used to grace the screen in those days. It is strong in its dramatic moments, illogical in many ways and is unimpressive when taken as a whole.

The star plays the role of Jim Southerland, who has a secret sorrow. When a financier, his daughter and her fiance arrive in the old town, Southerland recognizes the latter and determines to guide them to Lost River.

When they arrive at their destination, Jim discovers that the party is searching for gold. The action here seems to revert to the old school, for it seems to be "too set" and taken for granted.

A close-up is then shown of the star, and as his mind recalls the events of other days, a flashback keeps pace. In the scene are the young lady, her father and fiance and at the finish of a dramatic speech he discloses the identity of the girl's lover.

The following sequence shows the villain in a determined effort to carry the girl away, when he is thwarted by the entrance of the good dog "Ajax" who puts the quietus on the bad man in a most realistic fight. This is one of the big features of the story.

The picture should interest if only for its strong moments—but there are many melodramatic titles which remind us of the speeches the old actors used to make as they strutted about the stage. These should be eliminated.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Land of Chu Chin Chow"
(Kineto Review)

KINETO takes the spectator on a journey to the Far East—to China to be exact and the many interesting features of the number cast a spell of enchantment because of the easy manner of living of the natives, the profusion of flowers, and the beauty of the backgrounds in the rural spots. Pekin, the Forbidden City, is shown with all its rich atmosphere. The hordes of people, the various temples and idols, the quaint customs which involve funeral processions, wedding processions, and other colorful events native to the country. These are fascinating. The great wall of China, which was built two centuries before the birth of Christ, comes into view. It winds its way over mountains like a huge snake. One cannot help wondering what the modern siege gun would do to it. The mysticism of the East is caught throughout the picturesque reel—LAURENCE REID.

Movie Chats
(Sixty-first Series—Released Through National Exchanges—Produced by Kineto)

THERE is variety in this Movie Chat of Charles Urban. It starts off with some street scenes of Jerusalem, and gives us a glimpse of some of the types—picturesque, sharp-eyed, bearded old fellows. Then some of the French and British military come along. Immediately after we journey to the shipyards, and are given a lesson in concrete ship building. Various stages of construction are shown and then the completed product. From ships we go to geese. It seems that they are raised in Jerusalem for export. They are shown being plucked and displayed by the poulterer. Geese give way to gorillas. An infant gorilla does some tricks, and a few London zoo pictures are inserted.

All scenes are mildly interesting, if disconnected—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Painters Frolic"
(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon—Fox)

BUD FISHER or the man who animates his cartoons has evidently taken advantage of the cleaning up process which is relieving New York's skyscrapers of their grimy appearance because he has placed Mutt and Jeff on a painter's platform for the express purpose of painting and building. The elongated Mutt tells his lil' pal to hoist at the same time to keep the platform even. Both are daubing away when a dog hops from a window and starts the complications. The apartment seems to be a canine asylum because the animals are seen yelping from every window. Mutt and Jeff are frightened. The little fellow forgets to keep the platform balanced and the result is both are propelled through a window into a bath-tub occupied by an old maid.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Circulation of the Blood" and "Botany-Field Flowers"
(Nat'l Non Theatrical Motion Pictures—One-Half Reel Each)

THE first subject is interesting from the fact that it covers a big field "on the blood" and its circulation. And it must have taken great patience and much work to get the data together.

In order to make the subject clear and understandable the action of the blood is shown in many close-ups.

First we have the frog, then the hen, the human, showing the blood after digestion, its circulation and the circulation of the pulmonary vessels—and the rat. Interest is especially aroused when comparison is noted.

The second subject shows various forms of plant life in close-up formation.—FRANK LEONARD.

"PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT"
(Frothingham-Associated Producers)

Highly Involved Mystery Story Is Rather Puzzling to the Spectator

IT is the natural order among producers of mystery stories to puzzle the spectator with highly involved situations so that he will be thrown off the right track in guessing the denoument. The intention of the scenarist or director is perfect in this instance, though in following the above-mentioned policy, logic and clarity, are eliminated and replaced by a hazy line of action and characters which are not clearly defined. When it is all over one is inclined to wonder at the lack of any genuine motive for the movements of the crooks. In other words there is nothing definite about the plot. Rather is it negative insofar as building a smash-bang mystery melodrama.

They have tacked on a picturesque title to Oppenheim's story, "Passers-By," a title which is quite in keeping with the plot. Also a cast of clever players including Lewis S. Stone, who always furnishes a first rate performance, William V. Mong, of "Ten Dollar Raise" fame, and the charming Rubye de Remer, are present and lend character to the offering. The action is mystifying to a degree—so much so—that one sort of wonders what it is all about. A group of criminals are caught red-handed by the Parisian gendarmes and all but the leader escape. They make their get-away in strictly movie serial fashion using trap doors, secret panels and other studio devices.

The picture becomes involved because the characterization is not clearly established. The figure of the English nobleman is almost negative when he should be dominant. Again there seems to be no reason for the hunch-back crook, played with emotional fervor by William V. Mong, in leading the heroine about Europe for the sake of locating the Englishman. They have the treasure—which has been stolen off screen from the French sub-treasury. Indeed many scenes are glossed over by subtitles. And this procedure makes the action rather arbitrary and illogical. Meanwhile the Englishman takes up establishment in London and his object is to locate the heroine who in reality is his daughter. A caption says that he marries a girl of his youth, and when she appears she looks twenty years younger.

There is an absence of detail which could have explained many situations. One has to accept them as they are which makes the action rather puzzling. An amateur detective straightens out the complications, and the vicious culprits kill one another. There are some errors which might be blamed on the cutting. For instance, a character leaves his home in a straw hat and is next seen in top-hat and overcoat. Lewis S. Stone does not have much to do in the sympathetic role.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An adaptation of one of E. Phillips Oppenheim's clever mystery stories is the coming attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. This picture, entitled "Pilgrims of the Night," concerns a group of crooks who have for their leader an exceptionally clever thief known as "The Black Fox." The latter presides over a fashionable gambling palace which is raided by the police when they learn that in the possession of the crooks is a huge sum of money stolen from the French sub-treasury.

The "Black Fox" is captured but others escape. The loot isn't recovered until an amateur detective traces down the escaped criminals—one of whom is the hunch-back, Ambrose. The latter has taken the chief's daughter with him in order to execute vengeance upon Lord Ellingham. The titled Englishman is the real father of the girl and eventually they are reunited. The picture flashes considerable action and a wealth of suspense. A prominent cast that includes Lewis S. Stone, Rubye de Remer, William V. Mong, Walter McGrail and others interprets the picture. Edward Sloman directed.

PROGRAM READER

"Pilgrims of the Night" is the fascinating title of the picture which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This interesting production is from a story, "Passersby," by E. Phillips Oppenheim and is said to be one of his cleverest mystery tales. The action takes the spectator through absorbing scenes which have to do with the capture of a band of crooks, the recovery of stolen treasure, and the detection of certain innocent parties. In this picture are such clever players as Lewis S. Stone, who can always be relied on to furnish a good performance. William V. Mong, the beautiful Rubye de Remer, and others of ability. Remember next ————. Come and see the fascinating mystery photoplay.

SUGGESTIONS

The title of this picture is attractive enough to give special exploitation. It can be used for a teaser campaign and for the circular letter advertising. Also play up the author, who is one of the popular writers for fiction and the screen. Emphasize that it is an exceptionally clever mystery photoplay which keeps the spectator on "pins and needles" because of its action and suspense. Also give special mention to the cast which includes Lewis S. Stone, William V. Mong, Kathleen Kirkham, Rubye de Remer and others. Play up Stone and Mong, telling that the latter created a memorable performance in "The Ten Dollar Raise." Exploit Miss de Remer as one of the beautiful women of the screen.

"BIG GAME"
(Metro)

Fairly Interesting Picture for May Allison

JUDGING this picture on its merits as a faithful adaptation, one who saw the original play will certainly take exception to it. "Big Game" was a melodrama of primitive passion involving an obvious triangle situation for its theme. There was little or no comedy written into the subject the plot revolving around three characters, two of them being man and wife, products of civilization, the other, a picturesque trapper of the North woods. The latter figure was the most dominant personality of the play and the conflict waged between his determination to win the woman at all costs. He was a swaggering, domineering bully who looked upon the winning of women as big game. He discovered that the husband was a weakling and wasn't afraid to call him such in the presence of the latter's wife. In fact he taunted him with the logic that to the strong belongs the spoils.

The adaptor has changed the plot and characterization entirely to make a satirical comedy for May Allison. Since the play did not prove very successful and since many people did not see it, the picture will probably be accepted as a fairly interesting offering. The figure of the Canuck has been changed so that it is hardly recognizable. He is not the fascinating, determined lover of the play. Instead of presenting him as the conquering male, the scenarist makes him a husband and father of eight children who is employed by the wife to make love to her so that her better half's courage will be aroused. There is missing also the vivid atmosphere of the snow country. The play proper begins at the fourth reel, the earlier scenes being written into the picture to give it some foundation for its satire. One or two vital characters have been left out entirely. And there is none of the tense melodrama which was generated from the triangle scene. In fact to make it fit the "ingenuish" Miss Allison, it has been necessary to alter the plot and characterization, which makes one wonder why it was bought at all.

In the play the wife is about to elope with the dashing trapper when her husband shoots him. This sequence is missing. Instead the villain takes the count in a brawl in a perfectly conventional climax. The title is hardly justifiable in view of this pleasant mild satire. The husband and wife are Bostonians who venture to the wilds. She is in love with him all the while, there being no conflict at all. She brings four trunks which are left unopened. This play could have been made into a tense melodrama had the characterization and plot been left as they were in the original. It would have needed vigorous personalities to interpret it. As it is the picture loses its punch. However, the majority of patrons are apt to like it since it teaches the little game of putting pep in a husband.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A smashing, vigorous picture of the eternal conflict as it is found in the primitive places is "Big Game," adapted from the stage play of the same name and which stars May Allison. The picture will be presented at the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. The plot revolves around the idea whether a normal man, a civilized man, is prepared to fight to the death for the reputation and love of his wife. "Big Game" is the story of such a test, and the struggle occurs in the Northern Canadian wilderness whither "Larry" Winthrop, heir to millions and his charming wife, have come adventuring.

Their guide, Henri Baptiste, decides to appropriate the wife using as his argument the idea that only the strong should survive. He is Winthrop's superior in strength and his boastful manner and pride in his ability to conquer women precipitate a conflict that develops a tense situation. The wife discovers that her husband is a coward. But in an emergency he shows his courage. The picture is well acted.

PROGRAM READER

Left alone in a forest cabin with two men, Eleanor Winthrop found herself confronted by the alternative of being the property of one or the other of them—one who was her lawful husband and the other who was an abysmal brute. Thus, she finally saw her husband swept aside by the superior strength of the brute and herself. She saw in the French-Canadian trapper the ideal male—the conquering male. And his force and magnetism caused her to regard her husband as a weakling. She was on the verge of eloping to Quebec with the trapper when her husband found his courage. What did he do? Did he play the game or did he succumb? See "Big Game" at the ———— next ———— with May Allison as the star.

CATCH LINES

"You go wiz me to Quebec. In the daytime we'll hunt big game, and when ze night falls we'll sit in front of the fire-place and mak' love. Eh, what you say?" What did she reply to the trapper? See "Big Game."

"Your husband is a fish," he told her. And she believed him. What happened? See "Big Game."

"EXPERIENCE"
(Paramount)

Rich Settings and Fine Cast Will Probably Put This Morality Play Over

THE exhibitor who books this picture should certainly know beforehand what he is offering his patrons. Since the play has had a wide vogue for a number of years, having toured the country and been witnessed by a vast army of theatregoers, there is no reason to deny that it carries some box-office value as a photodrama. Morality plays are difficult to transfer to the screen. In the majority of instances most of them have failed miserably, because of the fact that the silver sheet is not the proper medium to exploit a preachment. It is at its best in recording physical action.

"Experience" was a conspicuous success upon the stage. It is quite likely to make money for the exhibitor providing he plays up its high lights, such as the title, settings and extraordinary cast.

The subject itself carries no dramatic strength at all. The merest tyro who patronizes the movie house will certainly be able to guess the outcome from the introductory scene. Naming the characters as Youth, Wealth, Ambition, Opportunity, Beauty and Love is not half so effective as calling them Jones, Smith, Brown, et cetera. One feels that he is being lectured in the manner of avoiding temptation. The city takes the count again. Virtue is found only in the small town. Youth leaves Love, encounters Opportunity and migrates to the city where he must go through the experience of meeting temptation before he emerges successful and returns to his native heath, a sadder and wiser young man.

It is all very obvious and overdrawn. Success, failure, pride, disillusionment these come too rapidly to prove convincing. So the spectator's attention is drawn to the rich settings. Certainly "Experience" cost a lot of money. The backgrounds and constumes see to that. Besides a cast of well known and talented players has been assembled to give it some appeal. Richard Barthelmess, John E. Miltern, Marjorie Daw, Charles Stevenson and fifty or a hundred others are present adding a box-office value to their names. But all they have to do is to pose and point some moral. Each player enacts his character for what it is meant to suggest and is succeeded immediately by another. The picture becomes tedious to the yawning point. Indeed it carries very little appeal from its story interest. The scenario and titles by Waldemar Young are first rate. Really there is no condemnation from a technical standpoint. It is hopelessly orthodox, stereotyped and conventional. There is no chance to present any drama. A large group of characters pass—a title defines each one, a preachment is offered constantly, and there you are.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

What is considered one of the greatest (if not the greatest) symbolic plays ever written is George V. Hobart's "Experience," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a motion picture. This adaptation by Waldemar Young is said to be faithful to the original and the direction by George Fitzmaurice is excellent. The parties responsible for the film version have contributed a photoplay which is unusually rich in dramatic moments and spectacular appeal. The picture teaches a lesson that Experience can be gained by combatting and overpowering temptation and other sinister influences in the path of life. Richard Barthelmess is featured as Youth and his supporting cast includes a host of popular and talented players, among them being Marjorie Daw, Sybil Carmen, Charles Stevenson, John Miltern and Helen Kelly. The picture is sumptuously mounted.

SUGGESTIONS

This adaptation of George V. Hobart's sensational success has been made into a most fascinating picture and should be exploited weeks in advance in order to acquaint the patrons with its high lights. No doubt many patrons have seen the original. You can state that it is a faithful adaptation of the play which recorded the experience of a country youth who met temptations in the city and conquered them. Bring out the value of the cast—a cast that includes thirty well known players. Play up its sumptuous production and tell that George Fitzmaurice directed. Put on a prologue carrying out the idea of the theme. Play it up big and use circular letters, teasers and attractive copy.

"AFTER YOUR OWN HEART"
(Fox)

Humor and New Gags Make This Quite Interesting

THIS picture comes too quickly after "The Big Town Round-Up" for the Tom Mix followers to classify it as something exceptional. Even were the first mentioned offering presented weeks or months previously the spectators who saw it would still remember it as a photoplay quite out of the ordinary. "After Your Own Heart" may not carry much dramatic substance, and its theme may be ordinary, and viewing it from a production angle there is nothing meritorious in the settings, lighting and technical equipment, but it does offer a pleasant hour of entertainment of a light sort. The star, apparently, is a believer in the policy of satirizing his stories of late. Certainly he has a lot of fun in introducing some novel and amusing gags.

No doubt he has taken a tip from "The Connecticut Yankee" because of his employment of autos to engage in battle instead of horses. Before this highly exciting and humorous climax is reached, the picture is inclined to sag but is bolstered up over the weak places by Ralph Spence's subtitles, many of which score, while not a few fail to hit the bull's-eye. The star plays an educated Westerner, who after graduating from Columbia, introduces modern methods in conducting his ranch. His enemy believes in the old-time ideas—horses, 'n' everything. But Mix dresses like a dude and employs autos and aeroplanes for the round-up. The plot reduced to skeleton form is simply the winning of the girl who is the daughter of the enemy ranchman. He saves her from injury by employing his well known horsemanship. When she learns that he is the owner of the other ranch she is disillusioned, but accepts his hospitality to bring an end to the conflict.

The humor which has been running quietly beneath the surface comes out in the open when a tea is given for her in Mix's home. The tea-wagon is rolled in and Tom sits down in white flannels and sportcoat. Nearby are three picturesque cowboys who add the funny touch through their inability to adapt themselves to the new conventions. The peas roll off the knife of one sword swallower, and they are frightened when the maid uses a vacuum cleaner in their immediate vicinity. But the big punch saves the picture. The evil forces are determined to ruin the girl's father and kidnap her. They encircle the house in Indian fashion. Meanwhile Mix and his cowboys come up with their autos and adopt the same tactics. Overhead Geo. Hernandez as the father is dropping dynamite sticks from an aeroplane upon the villains. Finally Mix lassoes the house and pulls it down. The gags and incident are novel and bright enough to put this offering over.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Tom Mix, the popular cowboy star, will be at the ———— theatre next ———— in "After Your Own Heart." This is an up-to-date western in which the cowboys use airplanes and autos on round-ups in addition to horses. The star is a Westerner who has received an education in the East. He returns to the plains with advanced ideas some of which are so revolutionary, particularly those which have to do with showing politeness, that the cowboys believe him somewhat effeminate.

He is the owner of a ranch over which the members of an adjoining ranch are having a dispute concerning the water-hole. He falls in love with the daughter of the ranchman and proves to her that he is on the square when he routs the enemy. This he does by employing his cowboys to make war by means of autos and aeroplanes. It is an amusing climax and an exciting one which shows the victors emerging successful. Ora Carew is the pretty heroine while Geo. Hernandez plays a character part with his customary humor.

PROGRAM READER

He was a man after your own heart. Easy of manner, courageous in a pinch, good-natured, willing to take a chance, chivalrous toward women, happy-go-lucky in disposition that was Tom Mix in his latest picture. The popular cowboy star plays in an up-to-date western which presents him presiding over a bunch of boys who use autos and aeroplanes in addition to horses for the round-up. It is a lively and amusing picture this "After Your Own Heart." The star is seen in a number of thrills. The climax which offers the battle between the good element and the bad is worth the price of admission alone. Ora Carew is the leading woman. At this theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

You can make a lot of copy about Mix having but recently returned from New York—his first trip to the metropolis. You can bill him as having been a guest of President Harding during his eastern trip. As for the picture tell that it offers an exciting and amusing hour in which the cowboys on one side are strictly up-to-date. Which is to say that they use aeroplanes and autos in addition to horses for the round-up. Bill it as a Western which offers some originality. Tell that it is up to the popular Mix standard—that it is a fitting companion piece to "The Big Town Round-Up." Describe it as a picture which furnishes a full quota of thrills and action and adventure. Bill it as a new type of Western.

"HER STURDY OAK"
(Realart)

Wanda Hawley Picture Only Mildly Entertaining

WANDA HAWLEY has been in more entertaining pictures than "Her Sturdy Oak," and most probably will rise to greater heights in the future. Elmer Harris has written the star a story containing some novel and amusing characters, which falls rather flat after the first few reels and ends lamely.

The star is, as usual, quite charming, but honors are divided between her and Walter Hiers, who plays opposite. The story starts as if it were to develop into a rollicking farce comedy. The rotund Hiers is a poet who owns half a ranch and lives on it. The other owner is a huge, masculine, aggressive woman who is in love with the poet. But his romantic soul craves some one whom he can protect, and not be protected by. Thus when he meets Violet, played by the star, it is love at first sight.

Violet is the original clinging vine in search of some one to be her sturdy oak. Naturally she picks on the poet. Sammy (Walter Hiers) wins his freedom from his fiancee—the aggressive ranchwoman—and he and the clinging vine are married. The humor disappears from the picture at this point and the story takes a serious and somewhat dramatic turn. The young married couple have their troubles aplenty. Sammy's poems do not sell, and when twins come along the household is in a pretty bad way financially. Meanwhile the ranchwoman still pursues her former sweetheart.

The ending is somewhat incredible. Taking possession of a deserted house, the little family discovers a beehive. In no time they have opened an apiary and are selling honey along the road to motorists. The story ends with Hiers tending to his bees.

The picture can be classed as very mild entertainment. The idea of the "clinging-vine and sturdy-oak" does not develop as the opening scenes would seem to promise. Hiers, now a leading man, is an excellent comedian, but in the more dramatic moments does not quite convince, largely because he is a comedy type.

The ranchwoman is played by Sylvia Ashton in a boisterous, enjoyable manner. Others in the cast are Maym Kelso, Leo White and Frederick Stanton.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

What is characterized as a sparkling comedy-drama is "Her Sturdy Oak," starring the charming Wanda Hawley. The offering will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The story is the work of Elmer Harris, who has contributed numerous original scripts an adaptations to the screen, among the latest of his plays being Realart's releases, "Ducks and Drakes," and "The March Hare." The new attraction was written especially for Miss Hawley and provides her with a role for which she is ideally suited. Others in the cast are the rotund and popular Walter Hiers, Maym Kelso, Leo White and Sylvia Ashton.

The plot presents the perplexities of a poor, young married couple who find their debts so overwhelming that they are evicted from their apartment and take refuge in a run-down cottage in the country. The action is always realistic. Fortune favors the brave, however, and the finding of great stores of honey in the chimney of the long deserted cottage sets them on their feet financially. The picture offers delightful comedy and is well acted.

PROGRAM READER

A breezy domestic comedy starring the charming Wanda Hawley, whose pictures of late have proven highly delightful, is "Her Sturdy Oak," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. Walter Hiers, the rotund, jolly comedian, is her leading man—verily, a sturdy oak! Miss Hawley is as pretty as ever and as a clinging vine type of young woman gives one of the most appealing impersonations of her career. Her performance of the young bride in "Her Sturdy Oak" is delightfully real and amusing. It is a breezy picture of a young couple who find themselves overwhelmed with debts. How they find a way out is told in five reels of charming action.

SUGGESTIONS

The previous Hawley pictures have been hitting pretty high. So there is no doubt that the Realart star has arrived. Tell them that the present attraction is of the same high calibre as her previous offerings. Bring forth that it is appealing and refreshing and provides the star with a delightful role. Tell that she plays the old-fashioned clinging-vine type of girl. Bill it as a delightfully breezy comedy, one which is amusing because of its domestic problems. A light program should be featured. And a light musical number would be appropriate. Tell that Walter Hiers is in the cast.

CATCH LINES

She was a clinging vine and he was a sturdy oak. Yet they couldn't meet expenses until—. See "Her Sturdy Oak," starring pretty Wanda Hawley.

"REMORSELESS LOVE"
(Selznick)

One of Elaine Hammerstein's Best

THERE is nothing new under the sun, says an old saying—and it's true. The novelty in story telling lies many times in the construction and arrangement of the plot and the hundred and one other little details that lead us to believe that something new is being told.

And so it is with "Remorseless Love," which is a story of the Kentucky hills, with its "feud" taken as the central idea. The story isn't anything remarkable, as stories go, but is sure fire when it comes to its dramatic moments and incident.

Tales of this description seem to crop up now and again, many of which are cheaply constructed and resort to more "gun play" than a western drama. It isn't so with "Remorseless Love," for its plot leans more to the romantic and there is only one shooting and that is accidental.

The opening scenes are very well drawn, showing the star in the role of a village school teacher. For contrast the hero is pictured in the elete class, rides his thoroughbreds and has his automobile.

The heroine is loved by a "son of the woods," who has his argument with the hero over the "girl." But just as we begin to think the plot obvious it switches, for the woodsman is accidentally shot and killed by a young boy who has picked up a gun belonging to the hero. The latter is accused of the killing and in a series of exciting moments, which end in the court house, is saved from the chair by the hurried and excited confession of the boy.

The story builds to a strong climax, the beginning of which is a scene between the star and the father of the dead man, who is so convinced of the hero's guilt that he tells the young schoolmistress that if she attempts to save her sweetheart with convincing testimony "he will shoot her on the stand."

"Remorseless Love" will interest and excite.—Frank Leonard.

THE CAST

Ruth Baird ..... Elaine Hammerstein
Enoch Morrison ..... Niles Welsh
Dave Hatfield ..... Jerry Devine
Hester Morrison ..... Ray Allen
Cosmo Hatfield ..... James Seeley
Cameron Hatfield ..... Effington Pinto

Story by Lanier Magruder.
Scenario by Edward Montague.
Directed by Ralph Ince.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Remorseless Love," in which Elaine Hammerstein will be presented at the ———— theatre for a ———— day engagement beginning ————, is a somewhat different type of story from any in which the popular screen star has yet appeared. The scenes are laid in the Kentucky mountains and the action has to do with dramatic incidents growing out of one of the ages-old feuds for which that section is celebrated.

There are no ballrooms or evening gowns. Miss Hammerstein appears as a young girl whom a little education has failed to change from the phototype of her ancestors, whose loves and hates were as strong and wild as the winds that rocked their mountain trees.

Niles Welch appears in leading support and Effingham Pinto who is known in every section of the country because of his splendid work in the spoken drama, has an important role.

The big punch arrives in a courtroom scene during which the girl threatened with violent death if she dares to tell the truth, braves everything for the man she loves.

In the cast are Jerry Devine, Ray Allen, James Seeley and Effingham Pinto.

PROGRAM READER

Lovers of sensible and wholesome photoplay entertainment will find a picture just to their liking at the ———— theatre where Elaine Hammerstein is presenting "Remorseless Love," a screen drama based on Mary Lanier Magruder's story. Backed by the rugged and beautiful settings of nature with very few "sets" or artificial framings, there is a story told with connecting detail and without frills or distracting episodes dragged in to make a "movie" holiday.

Miss Hammerstein this time plays the role of a school teacher who has set her face against the traditions of her tribe and kind, hating feuds as useless, cruel and uncivilizing.

The story of "Remorseless Love" is a virile tale of the loves and hates that had existed for generations among the members of two feudal families of Kentucky. Ruth Baird is a descendant of the irreconciliable Hatfields and when Enoch Morrison, member of the opposing clan, returns to the countryside from a long term in college and manifests more interest in Ruth than in the family hatred, things begin to hum from all sides.

How the two young people succeed in lifting the barrier of enmity makes a picture both interesting and appealing.

Niles Welch is Miss Hammerstein's leading man and other prominent members of the cast are Jerry Devine, Ray Allen, James Seeley and Effingham Pinto. Ralph Ince directed.

"THE MIDNIGHT BELL"
(First National)

Whirlwind Finish Puts Over Ray's Latest

A BANG-UP last reel of melodrama with the star pulling the familiar "thwart the villains and win the heart and hand of the heroine" stunt in a new way saves "The Midnight Bell" from being just another movie.

For four reels or so the picture has mighty little entertainment in it, being a series of episodes in which mostly by titles it is explained that the hero lost his job selling rubber heels, wished himself on to a small town merchant as a clerk, fell in love with the merchants' daughter, and that a church in the burg is haunted. Then things begin to happen. It develops that a gang of crooks have planned to rob the local bank and in so doing have dug a tunnel from the church basement to the bank cellar. At the very time the job is to be pulled, Charlie elects to spend the night in the church in order that he may bag the ghosts. The heroine has a presentiment that something is going to happen to her beau and rushes to the meeting house. Both are captured by the crooks. The girl, who by the way, works in the bank, gives the yeggs a fake combination to the safe and they go through the tunnel to pull the job. Charlie has been bound and gagged but manages to get hold of the bell rope and wakes up the whole town. Both ends of the tunnel are plugged up and the yeggs are captured. After the clutch the picture is over.

As a story, taken as a whole, there is nothing to it. Also the way it has been developed except in the melodramatic finish, does not reflect any great credit on anyone. The detail and bits of rural hokum that have characterized many of Ray's pictures are missing. The direction is not of the best, many technical errors being allowed to slide by. For instance, a modern home with uptodate gas range, etc., is shown as the domicile of the country shopkeeper who stated that his gross business was $225.00 per month. However, since audiences are prone to like any picture which ends in a blaze of glory and since Ray is popular with the average fan "The Midnight Bell" will probably be voted a first class show. But it might have been very much better had more pains been taken with the early reels and a more logical plot been evolved on which to hang the very good "midnight bell" episode.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

Adapted from the stage play of the same name by Charles Hoyt. Directed by Charles Ray, assisted by Albert Ray.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Midnight Bell," famous on the stage for many years, has been adapted to the screen with Charles Ray in the role of "Martin Tripp," the young traveling salesman who lost his job and went to work in a country store, there to capture a gang of yeggs who were robbing the bank and who won the heart and hand of pretty Annie Grey, the shopkeeper's daughter.

"The Midnight Bell" is a rural comedy of the type in which Ray excells as a principal player, into which has been injected a melodramatic finish that will bring the most hardened spectators out of their seats.

In support of the star is a cast of ideal types, among which are Van Dyke Brooke as the rural merchant and Doris Pawn as the heroine.

The picture was directed by Mr. Ray and has been staged with attention to detail and in a fine atmosphere. The picture comes to the ———— theatre for a ———— days' showing beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

Charles Ray, the First National star, comes to the ———— theatre in his latest comedy drama, "The Midnight Bell," an adaptation of the famous old stage farce of the same, written by Charles Hoyt for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The star has the role of Martin Tripp, an erstwhile traveling salesman who lost one job and obtained another in a little country town where the right girl resided and which a gang of crooks had picked out as a place to pull off a bank robbery. The story shows how Martin won the girl and frustrated the plans of the bank robbers. The picture finishes in a whirlwind of melodramatic action in which Ray succeeds in ringing the bell in the old church, although bound and gagged and thereby obtains aid in bagging the yeggs.

The production was directed by Mr. Ray and screens in six reels. It is offered as a First National attraction.

SUGGESTIONS

Exploitation possibilities for "The Midnight Bell" are to be found in the title, the name of the play from which it was adapted, the star and the chance for hokum stunts.

A bell in the lobby hung in an improvised belfry, can be used to advantage. The ringing the bell scene of the picture could be staged in the lobby and would without doubt attract great attention. However, it would probably kill some of the punch of the picture. Ghost stories as readers in the newspapers and tied up to the picture would go well. For a prologue number attention is called to those being presented this week at the Brooklyn and Mark Strand theatres, which will be described in next week's issues of the News Exhibitor's Service Bureau.

CATCH LINES

A story of a cub traveling salesman, who was dumped in a country town where ghosts were supposed to inhabit an abandoned church and where a gang of yeggs were planning to rob the one and only bank.

Charlie Ray playing Martin Tripp in Charles Hoyt's famous old time farce comedy that "stood 'em up" for a quarter of a century as a legitimate stage attraction.

"A VIRGIN PARADISE"
(Fox)

Pearl White Plays a Female Tarzan in Adventurous Melodrama

IF there is one actress who can adapt herself to any kind of plot or characterization, that actress is Pearl White. Since the Tarzan series have proven pretty interesting melodramas—what with their jungle atmosphere and lively action, the Fox star has probably said to her managers—"Give me a female Tarzan, and I'll make them all sit up and take notice!" So "A Virgin Paradise" is a feminine version of Tarzan. Taking a leaf from Edgar Rice Burroughs' books is just as easy as taking one from some conventional author's story, and it provides a great deal more entertainment notwithstanding that the plot takes on the form of wild melodrama.

The action starts out by showing the actress in the jungle, the role being that of a missionary's daughter who is left with no companions but lions, monkeys, and a motley assortment of cannibals after the death of her parents. She is heiress to millions and to settle up her rich uncle's estate, a party of civilized Americans sail to the jungle regions to find her, if possible, and bring her back. Let it be said that the hero is on board. Let it be also said that he takes the count when the female Tarzan pushes him off a rocky cliff for daring to shoot at her pet lions. There is a villain on this boat too, who is desirous of marrying the wild woman in order to share her income. Things develop smoothly until American waters are reached, at which time, hero and heroine lock the rest of the crew in the fo'castle and swim to shore.

The picture is difficult to classify. There are moments when one thinks it is a comedy because of the wild and hectic melodrama and the manner in which Miss White burlesques her part. Nevertheless it is always interesting. They will probably stand up on their hind legs and shout when Pearl proceeds to show her inability to cope with civilization. She goes to her uncle's home and cuts up didoes which shock the neighbors—these scenes presenting her au natural or bedecked in strange disguise, spreading comedy hokum with her nimble feet and hands. She is not a consistent Tarzan. There is no returning to the jungle to keep company with the apes and lions. There is no disillusionment and homesickness.

Miss White routs the villain in the wildest cave-woman scene ever shown. She uses her favorite hold—a body scissors and half-Nelson and the poor man is helpless. Trust her to put plenty of punch in this kind of a scene. She then burns her own home because it suggests hypocrisy, and is ready to elope with her hero. One cannot take this picture very seriously, but it doesn't matter. There is plenty of fun and excitement and it certainly moves with vigor. The backgrounds are acceptable, the jungle scenes being first rate. Miss White's company has to work hard to keep up with her.—Length, 8 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"A Virgin Paradise" is the colorful title of the new Fox feature which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast headed by Pearl White, and including Robert Elliot, J. Thornton Baston, Alan Edwards and other competent players. The picture is from an original story by Hiram Percy Maxim, the son of Hiram Maxim, the inventor of the Maxim Silencer, and may be said to be rich in colorful action and incident, thrills and novel backgrounds.

The story takes the characters and spectators from the jungle to civilization and shows the transformation of a wild creature into a woman of refinement. Miss White, always an able actress, demonstrates again her marked ability for making her roles interesting. Some of the thrills show the eruption of a volcano, the association of the heroine with monkeys and lions, and an exciting fight between the wild woman and a man who is determined to kidnap her against her consent. J. Searle Dawley directed and many of his scenes call for praise because of the picturesque atmosphere contained in them.

PROGRAM READER

A story of the jungle and civilized hypocrisy is contained in the newest Fox feature entitled "A Virgin Paradise," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. This is the work of Hiram Percy Maxim, the son of Sir Hiram Maxim and the celebrated inventor of the Maxim Silencer, and is considered one of the finest photoplays of the season. There is a wonderfully picturesque romance which begins in the South Seas and culminates in an aristocratic old New England home. The leading role is played by Pearl White who again demonstrates her emotional capabilities. How her primitive instincts rebel against her new surroundings, and how she finds true love make up a story of absorbing interest.

Tivoli of Chattanooga, Tenn., Latest Motion Picture Temple

Another Million Dollar Theatre Opens in the South

The latest home of moving pictures to take its place among the leading houses of the world is the Tivoli of Chattanooga, Tenn., recently completed at the cost of one million dollars. Lavishly decorated and designed for comfort and homeliness, the Tivoli is a great addition to the art of the silent drama.

The Tivoli has a seating capacity of 2,300. It is the latest theatre of the chain of the Tennessee Enterprises, Inc. C. W. and George L. Rapp of Chicago were the architects. Besides a $30,000 organ, the Tivoli has a symphony orchestra of twenty-one pieces, under the direction of Ira R. Summers.

As the theatre is approached from the street one is first impressed by the marquee sign, which occupies the entire width of the building. It was installed at a cost of $5,000, and the observers would not regard that figure as out of proportion. In the sign are lamps of 15,000 watts capacity, while, beneath, the front is illuminated by a large number of 75-watt daylight globes. The daylight effect is noticeable in all phases of the lighting system, both inside the building and out.

Writing room of Tivoli. The theatre abounds in rest and comfort rooms

The outer lobby has been decorated and finished in a way to cause the first impression of the building to be bewildering. The ceiling is full height of the building. It is of massive plaster designs, finished in polychrome and antique with Chinese and Cobalt blue, mulberry, green and buff over aluminum leaf. Sectional plate glass mirrors at each end reflect the ceiling for an impressive distance. To the left will be seen a seven-foot fountain with running water and a figure of Cupid. The fountain is named Cascatelle, for the famous river of a thousand cataracts in Tivoli. The floor here is of exposed marble. A hanging lantern, measuring seven feet in height, throws a burst of light throughout this wide lobby. It is of antique design. Between this and the inner lobby are glass doors and a very large plate glass window that is hung with brilliant American Beauty plush draperies. The brass rails were furnished by the Newman Brothers Manufacturing Company and the lobby display frames by the Stanley Frame Company.

The inner lobby brings the visitor nearer the features that are bound to attract the attention of writers, artists and builders who may have opportunity to see them. The ceiling continues the effects noted in the outer lobby. The prevailing colors in dome, panels and medallions are blue and red, with backgrounds of salmon, all the decorations being touched with gold. Cain stone is used in the side walls to a height of twelve feet. Large, hanging chandeliers, made specially for this lobby, are suspended by velour chains bearing veloured tassels. These chandeliers, as other fixtures, are plated with 14-carat gold and ornamented with hand-painted china. The grand staircase leads from this lobby to the mezzanine. Its ornamental bannisters are of copper bronze, surmounted by a massive mahogany hand rail. The foyer opening is beneath the mezzanine. It will be covered with Bigelow axminster carpets in rose, ivory and black. Two alabaster floor lamps stand at the approach to the opening.

The foyer is enclosed in glass, with Grecian urns and ornaments as decorations. Sectional mirrors are located on all the pilasters throughout the foyer. At the right is a niche with drinking fountain, and on the other side is a spacious lounging room and telephone booth. The features of this foyer promenade are the solid carpets, chairs, lounges and frequent stand-lamps. This portion of the building bears the name "Temple of Hercules," commemorating an historical edifice in ancient Tibur, the original name of Tivoli. A specially designed tablet in the foyer wall bears the proper inscription.

The interior design of the theatre is Adams and renaissance. The auditorium is finished in Chinese blue, mulberry, gold, green and buff. The main dome over the balcony and auditorium is indirectly lighted with a yellow and blue sky on aluminum leaf, lighted with amber to produce hammered gold effects.

The mezzanine opening dome is of gorgeous design, indirectly lighted and, as in other places, the color motif is on aluminum leaf. This opening permits the audience to be seen from the mezzanine, though the stage and screen cannot be seen. Large coves in the balcony are likewise indirectly lighted with the standard effects of the entire house emphasized. Openings in the rear of the boxes on each side of the stage represent sunbursts, and they are draped with American Beauty rose silk plush, embroidered with gold. The same colored draperies will be seen on loge and box railings.

The balcony seats are grouped in front of the stage opening without any obstructing posts. In fact, there are no posts or columns in the entire building. The entrance to the balcony, by way of the mezzanine, is a tunnel that is called the "Tunnel of Anio," named for a historical show place in Tivoli. The balcony tunnel floor is in solid carpet, the same design as the mezzanine and foyer, and the space is furnished with chaise lounges and enormous stand-lamps.

The mezzanine is pronounced by all the visitors as the most beautiful section of the theatre. It circles the auditorium and will be utilized as a promenade. Its floor is solidly carpeted, has chaise lounges and Adams' designed chairs. The mezzanine will be known as "Villa D'Esta," after the famous villa in Tivoli, which is ranked among the most beautiful places in the world. All mezzanine openings will be in silk draperies, gold embroidered.

The proscenium opening is declared to be the largest in the South, being 48 feet long and 25 feet high. The stage curtain, which is now being installed, is of American Beauty rose silk plush with six-foot valance embroidered in gold and with a deep gold fringe. All lighting is controlled by a Major pre-selective switchboard, and one operator will manipulate all dimmers and colors throughout the building. The stage equipment is sufficient to carry any kind of a production. The scenery for pictures alone cost the builders $10,000. Prologues and pictures will be projected upon a stage two feet above the large stage, this being 22 feet long, 17 feet high and 6 feet deep. The canopy overset is of transparent silk, through which various colored lights will be projected. The special picture set is embellished with silk columns lighted from within. The picture stage is covered with glass for special lighting effects.

Rest rooms for men and women abound throughout the various sections of the theatre. The principal room for women is located on the lower floor, entrance to which is from the main lobby under the left mezzanine stairway. Its furnishings consist of dressing tables, beautiful chairs, lounges and specially constructed French double-plate mirror. This rest room is called "La Regina," after a famous hotel in Tivoli. Another ladies' comfort and waiting room is located to the right of the mezzanine floor and is known as the "Temple of Sybil." This room is in Adams design furniture. A third ladies' rest room is located on the balcony tunnel floor. A telephone booth is located in the men's club room on the lower floor.

The Tivoli is kept comfortable in all kinds of weather by a ventilation and cooling system of the Typhoon Fan Co. The art marble for the theatre was furnished by the Mosaic Tile Co. The plastering in the Tivoli was done by the National Plastic Relief Co. Projection room is equipped with Powers 6 B projectors and with Peerless Arc controls of the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Co. The dissolving stereopticon is a Powers. Current is furnished by a 100 ampere motor generator set of the General Electric Co. The seats were furnished by the A. H. Andrews Co.

Make Many Strong Claims for New Multiple Coil Rheostat

Much Lighter in Construction Than Many Old Types

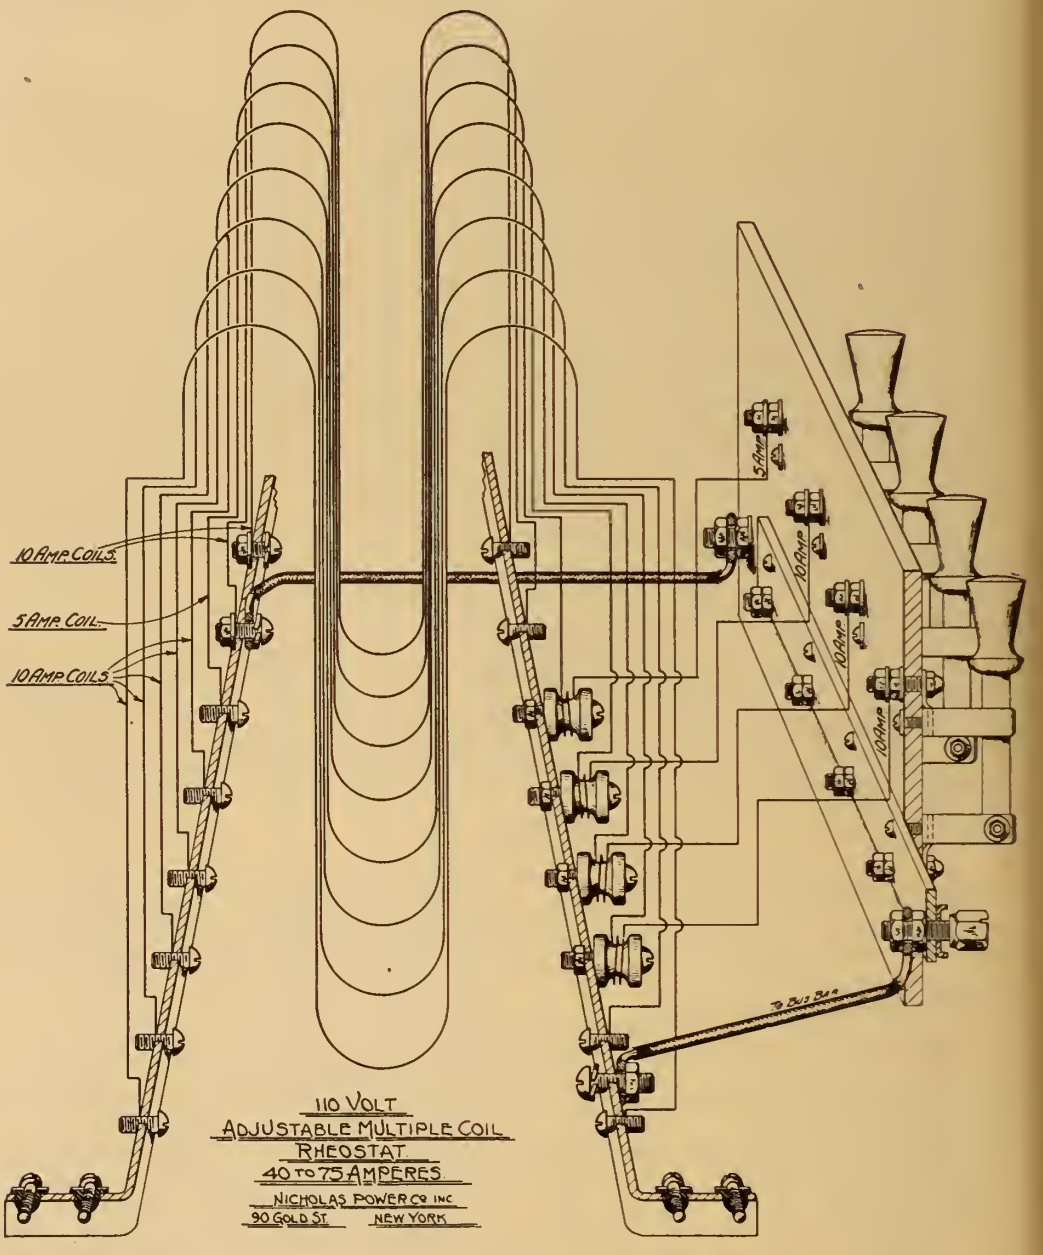
By Herbert Griffin, Technical Engineer, Nicholas Power Co.

The new Power's Rheostat was planned by men who have had long practical training as projectionists, supplemented by a wide selling and factory experience which has given them ample opportunities to thoroughly understand the requirements of exhibitors and projectionists. While the new multiple coil rheostat was planned and built to fully answer projection room needs it is also superior to the present type of rheostat for general use. A few details, as free as possible from technicalities will explain the difference between the two types of rheostats.

The Power's Rheostat is lighter than many of the present types of rheostat and this accomplished without any loss of durability while the actual efficiency is greatly increased. The new rheostat is made up in the following sizes: 30-55 amps., 40-75 amps., 60-95 amps. and 80-125 amps. It is built for 110 or 220 volts but, of course, there is a difference in the construction and a difference in the price for the machines of different voltages.

For comparative purposes the 115 volt 40-75 amps. rheostat is taken to show the difference in weight between the Power's New Rheostat and the present type. The new rheostat, 75-115 amps. weighs 27½ lbs. as against 89 lbs. for the same number of amps. on the present rheostat. On rheostats of higher amperage the difference in favor of the new device is even more marked. Where repairs are made in the projection room the weight of the present heavy amperage rheostat is highly objectionable as it is impossible for one man to handle it, and even when two men handle it the great weight of the grid rheostat is often a source of danger.

The type of rheostat now in general use has a series of cast iron grids while this new rheostat has a number of multiple unit coils supported by round porcelain insulators. The wire used for these coils is of a special alloy and is non-corrosive. The cast iron grids are very thin, are easily broken and when repairs are required it is necessary to dissemble the entire rheostat to insert the new grid. With the new multiple coil rheostat the coils carrying 5 or 10 ampere are connected in parrallel to bus-bars (as shown in drawing) and can be replaced in a few minutes without difficulty.



Power's Multiple Coil Rheostat

Adjustments on the new rheostat are made by means of knife switches connected with the ends of three 10 ampere coils and one 5 ampere coil and one of the bus-bars; therefore three switches carry only 10 ampere each and the additional switch 5 amps. only. Where the entire capacity of rheostat is not being utilized, should any of the coils in use become ineffective an unused coil can be connected immediately by means of the knife switch. The loss of one grid on the present type means that the entire rheostat ceases to be effective and requires repairs which involve considerable time and trouble. Owing to the fact that such a small amount of current is carried by any part of the new rheostat and that the wires are very small, perfect connections can be made between bus-bars, switches and ends of coils. The present type rheostat having grids connected in series, makes it necessary for all grids to carry the entire current through rheostat. This necessitates the use of a number of heavy wire connections made between screws and washers which loosen up very easily under expansion and contraction, thus causing arcing between screws and wires, which means ultimate burnouts. The new rheostat operates exceedinly cool. No change in voltage is effected by increasing or decreasing the amperage, which is obtained by opening or closing the knife switches. In other words, the voltage drop across each coil is exactly the same, therefore the addition of coils in parallel only increases the amperage.

Inventor of Akeley Camera Will Film Gorilla in Africa

Carl E. Akeley Will Penetrate Jungles in Photographing Trip

Carl E. Akeley, who is very widely known in the scientific field as a hunter, naturalist and explorer and in the motion picture field as inventor of the Akeley Camera and the President of the Akeley Camera, Inc., a concern that manufactures his various inventions, has organized a large expedition in co-operation with the American Museum of Natural History, New York, to penetrate into the untravelled and unknown reaches of the African Congo forest to study and photograph the Gorilla in his secluded abode.

Very elaborate preparations are being made at the Akeley Offices for the drawing together of motion picture photographic equipment such as has never before gone into Africa or any other field in such completeness and thoroughness.

Mr. Akeley is taking three Akeley Cameras with many special lenses for telephoto work, as well as special lenses for work in dense jungles where there is very little light. He also has designed a special stereoscopic motion picture camera for his special study.

Mr. Akeley is the one man who is most fitted for such a trip as he has made three previous trips of long duration into unknown parts of Africa and knows all the conditions that has to be combatted. While on the last one he joined forces with Roosevelt and hunted elephants with him on the Guash N'Gisu Plateau. On all these trips he has done extensive photographic work in both still and movies.

Gets Idea for New Camera

It was on his last trip while trying to get motion pictures out of the ordinary and of subjects not easily obtained that he was completely stumped by the limitations of the Sterotype motion picture camera which he had, and being an inventor of no little ability conceived the new and basic principals of the present "Akeley" which he is now taking.

Not only will he hunt and preserve the skins and skeletons of the gorillas for the Museum but he will take plaster casts of the face and hands and of the body before and after skinning to be used with the many pictures in reconstructing a big group at the Museum.

Valuable Motion Pictures

Mr. Akeley's wide experience in photography, his vast knowledge of Africa and its conditions and his reserve information as a naturalist fits him for a task no other man or men could undertake with equal success, and the motion pictures he will obtain of these man-beasts, because of thoroughness of knowledge and preparation, should startle the world.

Mr. Akeley will cover all phases of African life during his trip and will have to show everything from the wonderful bird and animal life through to the beautiful scenic and natives with the most spectacular of all "The Life of the Gorilla," as the climax.

This picture not only will be of popular value but will probably be the most valuable scientific and educational picture ever taken.

A Day in the Life of a Gorilla

In these pictures Mr. Akeley will endeavor to show the daily life of a family, if possible, or single ones, caught at opportune moments, in their daily routine.

CARL E. AKELEY

Inventor, Scientist, Sculptor and Lecturer
Mr. Akeley has been, since the organization of the company, its president, and has personally supervised the development of its products. He has to his credit many notable and original creations in his many versatilities, among which is the invention of the "Cement Gun," for which he received the Scott Gold Medal of the Franklin Institute. He has invented methods which have made Taxidermy an art and brought it to its highest standards of today. His many works of animal sculpture stand in a class by themselves. As a naturalist he is best known for his studies and photography of the African elephant in their native haunts

No one knows just how or where they live—how they hunt—what food they eat and how they get it. It is known from the very few specimens that have been in captivity that they are very affectionate, throwing their arms around the neck of their keeper in human-like way and responding to petting and the same affection from the keeper.

This brings the touch of human interest, which is always the keynote to the picture and makes us wonder how near like we, their human cousins, do they live and spend their days. Do they have a low or high form of social organization and are the males bigamists and breed to any female? Or are they monogamists and select their mate like the Canadian goose for life, never to mate again even though death takes one away.

Mr. Akeley will be accompanied by friends from Chicago with their six year old daughter. Only the men in the party will penetrate the unknown, while the ladies will await their return in the higher and healthier altitudes of nearby mountains.

The trip will take nearly a year, as after he arrives he will spend some time testing and trying out his outfit, while those with him are becoming acclimated. Progress into these deep jungles is necessarily slow as there are many obstacles. He will depend mostly on the natives for his success and therefore must win himself into their hearts and gain their confidence before he can penetrate further with safety and success.

When actually in the Gorilla Country he will have to practically live with the natives and hunt with them in their primitive way, otherwise he would never see his quarry. To attempt to enter the country of such a wary game in the white mans way with a big expedition would spell defeat.

These beasts are of such tremendous power that great caution must be taken for the defensive. One cannot build a "blind" from which he may photograph in safety as he would when going after a lion, as one gorilla would demolish in a few seconds what it would take man many days to build. Mr. Akeley is depending on his knowledge and ability as a hunter to steal his way to their very lair.

Once there he will concentrate all efforts to first securing motion pictures with his noiseless camera which is another important factor in his stepping stones to success, before any attempt is made to shoot.

Plans to Capture and Bring Back Alive a Pair of Young Gorillas

Preparations are also made to capture, if at all possible, a pair of young gorillas and bring them back alive. This will be a most difficult task, first by reason of the fight that must ensue with the big ones who will fight to the death to protect their young, and second by the amount of painstaking care and attention in successfully bringing them home through the long sea voyage to which they are not accustomed.

Terrific Battles to be Filmed

In penetrating the homes of these beasts and especially in the attempt to capture the young, Mr. Akeley realizes he is risking his life, but he believes the cause to science so great that unless some one takes that risk these most interesting animals to man may become extinct with the secrets of their life habits and their relations to man, dying with them.

He knows only two things, which is his duty to do, and these are when Mr. Akeley stops, which may be that gorillas are in the bush just ahead of him, the native sets down the camera, points it at Mr. Akeley and where he is looking, and cranks. Should any action take place, such as a charge or even an appearance of this huge beast, it will be recorded on the film and cranking will be continued until Mr. Akeley signals to stop. This method Mr. Akeley figures may prove to be the only way a gorilla picture may be obtained. In such dangerous work the gun must always be foremost and although the pictures are what the expedition is for, the camera must necessarily take the second place.

Hundreds of Miles from the Outside World

Many hundreds of miles will be between these courageous hunters and the outside world, but an endeavor will be made, which is only possible by establishing the friendliness of the various native chiefs and their tribes to maintain communcations with the outside world and the Akeley office at least once every week.

Use High Intensity Searchlight for Taking Pictures

Spotlight Used for Special Effects and to Eliminate Shadows

The constantly growing use of artificial illumination for taking moving pictures, which has come about through the impossibility of obtaining proper effects by the use of daylight, has led to the development of a number of special devices.

One of the latest of these is a high intensity spot light, developed by the General Electric Company. The light, which is a small searchlight in general appearance and construction, is not only useful in the studio to eliminate shadows caused by other forms of lighting and to get special effects, but can be used for the same purposes outdoors on location.

It consists of a projector having a 24-inch mirror, inside which are mounted the carbons and feed mechanism for the arc. The latter is entirely automatic in operation, the carbon being fed by a small shunt motor connected across the arc. By this method proper regulation is obtained because changes in the length of the arc are immediately reflected in the motor voltage, causing it to take proper corrective measures automatically. In addition to being fed forward, the positive carbon is rotated, which insures the burning of a large and even crater, which is always maintained at the focal point of the mirror. The arc may be struck magnetically by means of a push button on the end of a ten-foot cord, which allows for remote control. It is also possible, however, to adjust the carbons manually by handles independently of the motor.

The mirror is of glass, ground, polished and heavily silvered, being flexibly mounted in a ring and protected by a dome, to allow for expansion due to heat, and to prevent possible injury from concussion. The barrel of the projector, of cast aluminum, is mounted on a movable tripod, fitted with an elevating shaft and gear so that a range of from six to nine feet above the floor can be obtained as desired. The tripod also carries a rheostat for voltage control and the contractor which operates the magnetic striking apparatus.

The light can be used either as a spot or flood light by changing the focus of the beam, or if desired it can be used as a prime flat light by removing the mirror which focuses the rays. It is particularly adaptable where moonlight or sunlight coming through a window, or where the illumination of a large setting is desired. It is also useful for back lighting. As the whole outfit weighs only about 500 pounds, it is readily moved about to whatever position is desired.

Second Model 24 Feet High Intensity Studio Light (Back System)

When used out of doors out on location it is supplied with power by a gasoline, motor-driven generator, the whole power plant being carried on an automobile truck.

Two K & C Theatres To Be Re-Opened

Extensive renovating is nearing completion on two of the K. & C. Amusement Company's theatres, the Palace at South Norwalk, Conn., and the Empress at Danbury, Conn., and plans are being made to re-open the houses on August 15.

The painting is being done by the William Eckart studios, of 1416 Broadway, New York, and the new fixtures are by the Hamilton Electric Company, of Norwalk. A. J. Collins Furniture Co., of Norwalk, are furnishing the carpets. Both houses are equipped with Simplex projectors.

The two theatres are under the management of Alexander Hamilton. The Palace has a seating capacity of 1,400 and the Empress of 1,500. Twenty thousand dollars is being spent in renovating each house. The Palace and Empress run combination picture and vaudeville shows. While the moving pictures will be started again in August, the vaudeville part of the program will not be put on until September 15.

Two of the firms who had so much to do with making the Metropolitan one of the South's most attractive theatres are working with Mr. Sottille on this theatre. C. K. Howell, architect, is one, the other being Mr. Vollmer, mural decorator, who did the mural work for the Capitol theatre in New York, as well as for the Metropolitan in Atlanta.—Gaddis.

Veteran Cinematographer Invents Wonderful New Camera

Thomas Ince Cameraman Files Patent Papers

A new motion picture camera embodying thirty-two patentable features has just been completed by J. O. Taylor, veteran Thomas H. Ince, cameraman, and judging from initial tests promises to revolutionize certain phases of screen photography.

The most important feature of the new device is that it will almost entirely eliminate the flicker from the "flickering drama." Whereas, in the finest of standard cameras now in use, the shutter is closed a larger portion of time than it is open, Taylor has succeeded in perfecting a cycle of operation during which the shutter is open for 270 degrees and closed for but 90 degrees. In other words, the shutter in the new camera is closed but one-fourth of the time as against more than one-half of the time in other cameras.

The result is smoother and more liquid action and a material decrease of the jump and flicker that has apparently been impossible to entirely eliminate heretofore. In the photographing of unusually fast action the difference is particularly noticeable. The highest speed movement may be registered by the new device without the streaky motion that has formerly characterized such work in spite of every effort to eliminate it.

The novel camera embodies many other improvements and innovations that have been perfected by Taylor as a result of many years' experience and investigation both as a still and a motion picture cameraman.

The entire machine is enclosed in a case of skillfully machined aluminum alloy of extreme lightness.

Its six lenses, ranging from 32mm. to 120mm., are entirely enclosed by the covering metal box

Optical Society Will Meet in Oct.

The Optical Society of America will meet in Rochester, N. Y., on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Oct. 24, 25, 26, 1921, at the Hotel Rochester.

In order to provide the maximum opportunity for social meetings of members and guests, arrangements will be made for society lunches and dinners.

The regular sessions for the reading of papers will be open to all interested persons.

Members and others desiring to communicate results in optical research are invited to submit titles of papers for the program to the secretary any time before September 25. Titles received after that date cannot be included in the program. The secretary requests that titles be submitted as early as possible. No arbitrary time limit is set for the presentation of a paper, but each author is requested to estimate carefully the time which will be sufficient to present his paper briefly and intelligibly, and to submit this estimate with the title. Authors will be expected to confine themselves to these estimates. Each title must be accompanied by an abstract (100 to 200 words). Authors are urged to make every effort to present the essence of their papers as cogently as possible in these abstracts. It is expected that they will be printed in the program and in the minutes of the meeting. No titles will be printed to be presented "by title." Titles should not be submitted unless the author has a bona fide intention to actually present his paper orally or have it presented by some one else.

Persons having papers ready for publication which cannot be actually presented at the meeting are invited to submit them for publication in the Journal; Address, Paul D. Foote, Editor, Journal Optical Society of America, Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Because of the optical industries in Rochester it is expected that this will be a particularly interesting meeting. The local committee is arranging for the Society to visit Bausch and Lomb and the Eastman Kodak Co.

The National Research Council Committee on Physiological Optics has asked the Society to form a Section on Vision. It is hoped to do this at the coming meeting; and, if a sufficient number of papers on this subject are submitted, one whole session will be devoted to Vision and Physiological Optics.

Official White House Projectionist Enthused by James R. Cameron's Newest Book on Projection

Author Visits Capitol City and Has Very Satisfactory Talk with President's Operator

James R. Cameron, author of "Motion Picture Projection," shaking hands with Charles W. Plunkett, official White House projectionist

Unusual certification of the merits of James R. Cameron's newest book, "Motion Picture Projection," rests in the fact that it is numbered among the decidedly limited list of books which are chosen for the shelves of the library at the White House in Washington, D. C.

This fact was brought out on the occasion of a visit which Mr. Cameron made to the Capitol on the invitation of Charles W. Plunkett, who is the official projectionist at the White House, and the man who has shown hundreds of pictures to ex-President Wilson and President Harding as well as in the War Department and other departments of the government.

According to Mr. Plunkett pictures are projected almost daily at the White House, usually in the East room before audiences ranging from two to a dozen persons. Mr. Plunkett is unquestionably an expert projectionist, and has been in the business for fourteen years, the past five years of which he has been connected with the Strand theatre, Washington, D. C.

He is the proud possessor of a portrait which the ex-President autographed for him as follows: "To a very skillful motion picture operator from a sincere friend, Woodrow Wilson," and on another occasion the Ex-President presented him with a $100 Liberty Bond which he personally autographed.

The accompanying photograph was made on the White House grounds immediately following a discussion of the contents of Mr. Cameron's book, "Motion Picture Projection," in the course of which Mr. Plunkett said: "There is no doubt in my mind as to the value of your book to my Brother projectionists. I have never seen any book which compares with it either in the extent to which the subject is treated or in the clearness of style in which the book is written.

Mr. Cameron who has written several books on the subject of projection is also the owner of the Theatre Supply Co., at 124 West 45th St., New York, which concern is distributing "Motion Picture Projection" at $3.50 postpaid.

The film magazines are of standard size, holding 400 feet of film, but are affixed to the body of the camera by automatic catches enabling them to be changed and threaded within a few seconds.

The take-up on the magazine for exposed film is operated by a friction disc equipped with two speeds. When the spool is empty the take-up is operated on low speed and automatically switches to high speed as the spool fills, thereby giving an even pressure on the camera crank at all times.

The gears of the camera are gold plated throughout. At a very trifling cost Taylor has insured against corrosion which all cameras are forced to combat while working on or near salt water. The gold-plated gears also require less oil.

Because of the longer proportional time the len aperature is open, Taylor claims that the camera will photograph both interiors and exteriors with much less light than is ordinarily necessary, and secure shots in light at present considered too weak for any results whatsoever.

Simplicity was aimed at throughout the entire design and has been attained to a high degree. Taylor estimates that the complete camera may be produced for commercial sale at $1,000.

More than four years have been devoted by Taylor to designing the new camera. It has been two years in construction, as the minutest details were worked out and their efficacy tested in model form before they were accepted in practice.

Patents have been applied for on thirty-two distinctive features. Several of these apply to general principles while the remainder cover specific details.

For the present Taylor has no intention of manufacturing the camera for general sale although several attractive offers have been made for a share in the patents. He intends to test it thoroughly before considering placing it on the market.

Taylor is widely known throughout the industry for his exceptional marine photography in Thomas H. Ince's "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface," as well as in "The Cup of Life," a forthcoming Ince feature. In the latter production he has included several shots made with the new camera which demonstrate beyond doubt its superiority over standard models both as regards smoothness of action and clarity of detail.

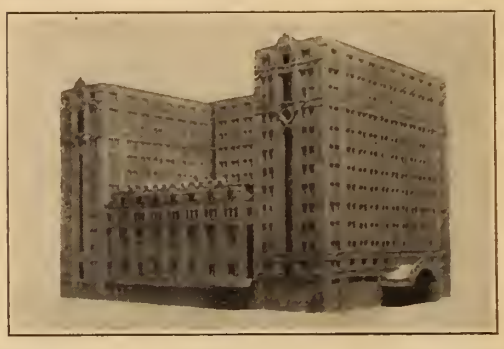
Rush Work on $3,000,000 Grauman Theatre

Two shifts of eight hundred men each are rushing work on the Grauman Metropolitan theatre, Los Angeles in order to have the structure completed by January 1, 1922. Sid Grauman is managing director of the Grauman Theatrical Enterprises which runs a string of theatres in Southern California.



Architects clay model of Grauman's $3,000,000 theatre, Los Angeles, now more than half completed

To speed the work on the $3,000,000 theatre, contractors who are in charge of the work have established offices right on the site. The theatre is located at Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles.

The Grauman Theatrical Enterprises are determined to have the pretentious theatre completed by the first of the year.

Changes Name to "Sammy Powers"

Sam Steinberg, an officer and one of the organizers of the S. & S. Film & Supply Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., was in New York for a few days during the past week, and now announces that hereafter his name will be "Sammy Powers." The S. & S. Film & Supply Co. are distributors of Powers' projectors and Sam thought it would be a good idea to pay the Nicholas Power Co. a visit and take a trip through the factory to see just how their product is made. Incidentally, while in town he visited a number of New York theatres using the new Power's G.E. High Intensity Arc Lamp. As a result of his trip through the factory and personal viewing of the work accomplished by the Power's G. E. Lamp, Sam has returned to Pittsburgh more enthusiastic than ever about Power's projectors and this accounts for his desiring to be called Sammy Powers hereafter. Everyone knows that Sam is a hustler and knows how to push along a good thing, and we are quite sure that when he is on the road selling Power's projectors it will make an ideal sales combination.

Last week Associated Producers was in the limelight; Fox told a big story; week by week the F. B. Warren Corporation is causing exhibitors to sit up.

Fall is here. Keep your eye on the advertising pages. And remember, that, as always—

Old Nest

RUPERT HUGHES'
heart-gripping story of Home

DIRECTED BY REGINALD BARKER

The mother whose children no longer seemed to want her

One of the outstanding motion pictures of all time is Rupert Hughes' heart-gripping story of Home

SUDDENLY they have all grown up and left her—the babies she used to tuck in bed at night.

His big boy a famous statesman. Her little girl an outcast—facing temptations from which she can no longer shield him. Even Emily, his baby, gets married and leaves the mother who has petted and spoiled her.

The old house is empty and silent. All have forgotten her. Her birthdays pass unnoticed.

Each has embarked on a drama of his own. Severe ambitions, temptations carry them away. There are moments of laughter and comedy, romance and suffering tragedy. The story of their lives sweeps you along.

The Old Nest marks one of the year's great advances in motion picture production. Never before has the screen touched with such beauty and such dramatic force a subject which finds an echo in the lives of every one of us. It is a masterpiece of a new type—a presentation of life as it really is with its moments of great joy and flashes of exquisite pain.

You will take your home, your mother as they might have been or as they are—The Old Nest will awaken deep in your heart memories of the mother to whom you ran with your childish troubles. One of the most heart gripping and dramatic stories ever told.

The people in the play—You know them all

MARY ALDEN HELENE CHADWICK CULLEN LANDIS
Dwight Crittenden Lumsden Hare Robert Thorn Louis Lawrence Robert De Vonne Johnny Jones Fanny Breckinridge Edwin Sonny (Buddy) Messenger Rose Curran Mrs. Crayne Mary Meade M. B. Hall Flynn

Dr. Frank Crane writes—
"Hughes has taken down one wall of the American house of today and you see in and know the family. A big story of life—rich bitter and sweet, and sad and glad and majestic and petty and divine and pitiful."

Fannie Hurst writes—
Rupert Hughes dipped his pen into his heart when he wrote The Old Nest. Seeing the picture is for all the world like stroking through the family album of America."

Alice Duer Miller writes—
"The Old Nest will appeal to anyone who ever had a mother and most people have. It is real and touching and silence normally without an atom of false appraisement. I have seen it four times and cried each time."

Dangerous Curve Ahead

RUPERT HUGHES'

comedy drama of American married life—with Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix

DIRECTED BY E. MASON HOPPER

Married life is just one Danger curve after another-

MOST motion pictures end with a marriage. But here's one that begins with a marriage—a marriage of just two such young people as started their great adventure next door to you this summer.

Any wife will laugh a lot and cry a lot—when she sees it. Husbands will come away from this picture with a deeper understanding of what their young wives have to cope with. Fathers and mothers will chuckle and weep over it.

There are dangerous curves that every married couple must take. What are they? How can they be rounded without a crash?—Perhaps you think you know.

Dangerous Curve Ahead shows them to you cleverly, lightly yet with a deep insight into human hearts.

Author and director worked for one year on this picture. Together they evolved the many little touches that make it so amazingly lifelike. Such close co-operation is the result of Goldwyn's plan of bringing American authors into direct contact with picture production.

Do you know the ten great dangers of married life?

1. The Daily Dinner.
2. The Office Overtime.
3. The Conscience of the Bride.
4. The Poor Party.
5. The Midnight Marathon.
6. The Bridge-Table Determined Lapse [illegible] of the Husband.
7. The Courtesy of Bills.
8. The Long Evening Trip.
9. The Old Lover.
10. The Lure of High Society.

RUPERT HUGHES writes:

As in my picture, The Old Nest, it is life itself that provides the difficulties and the heart breaks. This is a sort of Pilgrim's Progress. I have tried to picture the life of every girl in the experience of one girl, and to show how tumultuous a motor road excursion is. As soon as one dangerous curve is rounded another waits ahead.

"The Old Nest" was a portrait of the American mother. "Dangerous Curve Ahead" shows the American daughter venturing out to build a nest of her own.

TWO years ago, in its initial announcement to exhibitors, Realart pledged itself to this policy:

". . . An unswerving, unchanging determination that the Realart trade-mark shall always mean

"In Production—The Sign of Superiority
"In Distribution—The Sign of Service
"To the Public—The Sign of Satisfaction
"To Exhibitors—The Sign of Success."

Realart made good.

Ask any Realart exhibitor.

ONE year ago, in announcing its plans for the season just ending, Realart promised policies which would mark an epoch in motion picture distribution. Notable among these were the Star Franchise and the Honor Plan.

Again Realart made good.

During 1921-1922 it will have many imitators.

IN the season to come, Realart will provide a new and better Star Franchise—an agreement cut to fit the vexing problems of the times and permitting the exhibitor, for the first time, to operate his business as a business.

The outstanding feature of the new policy is this: You will play your Realart Pictures before you pay for them.

Ask the man who shows them

You know you will play your Realart pictures before you pay for them.

You know you can depend upon receiving high-class productions at a reasonable price.

You know that the pledges of performance are written in the ageement—made part of it—not merely whispered in your ear.

You know you will be doing business with business men in a business-like way—without catches, tricks, or subterfuge.

You know you will have the protection of Realart's guarantee: A reasonable average profit on a season's productions.

The new Realart Star Franchise is now ready at all of the twenty-two Realart Branch Offices

NE year ago a saucy little girl with tantalizing black eyes, silky black hair and a mischievous, kiss-inviting mouth took by storm some two or three million fans who had gathered in five thousand theatres to be confirmed in their opinion that she deserved stardom.

And now, just a year later, hard-headed circuit managers voluntarily write us that this captivating star is drawing better in their theatres than any other actress —better even than several for whose pictures they pay much more money.

Her success is one of the most complete triumphs in motion picture annals. Exhibitor after exhibitor reports steady increase in patronage from one release to another. And why? Because she has the ability to put over the sort of pictures which most of the people like. Because she has had stories perfectly suited to her requirements. Because she possesses charm and beauty. Because there isn't a flapper or debutante who wouldn't give her right eye to be able to carry glad rags in the queenly manner that this star does. Because—oh, well, because she's

BEBE DANIELS

The Good Little Bad Girl

Realart might have set Miss Daniels' pictures aside this season for selling on a star series basis. We might have boosted the ante—yes, and we could have gotten away with it, too. But that's not Realart's way of doing business. We don't ask exhibitors to help us build star values and then try to grab all the value for ourselves.

And so we are going ahead planning in Miss Daniels' behalf the biggest season any actress ever has had. Her first story will be THE SPEED GIRL, written especially for her by Elmer Harris. Then will follow a succession of the successes such as those in which "The Good Little Bad Girl" has made her truly enviable reputation—including THE HEART OF YOUTH and SPRING FEVER.

HOW do you like the sound of this? Mary Miles Minter in TILLIE! You know, Helen R. Martin's TILLIE, THE MENNONITE MAID, which in novel form has sold something like an half million copies, and which, after appearing in the Henry Miller Theatre in New York City, with Patricia Collinge as the star, had a wonderfully successful road career.

And you know that there isn't another screen actress whose beauty, charm and talent better equip her for this popular Pennsylvania Dutch heroine than M. M. M.!

Then there's HER WINNING WAY, Miss Minter's first picture of the coming season. It's based on the play "Ann" by Lechmere Worrall, which had its origin in Edgar Jepson's charming novel, "Ann Annington."

MARY MILES MINTER

The Girl with 100,000 Admirers

Think back! Has this lovely star ever disappointed you? She has given your audiences during the past season roles as widely different as the little blind girl in EYES OF THE HEART, the child of the circus in THE LITTLE CLOWN, and the mad-cap mischief-maker in DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL, and they have all been successful.

More than one candid exhibitor admitted after showing THE LITTLE CLOWN that the picture deserved Special rentals. Realart would have been justified in asking extra money on more than one of the Minter productions.

But you don't find Realart doing it, do you? As a matter of fact, Realart can't. Your Realart Star Franchise entitles you to every M. M. M. picture at your contract price. But, on the other hand, through a Realart Star Franchise is the only way you can get Minter pictures.

Mary Miles Minter will bring to your screen during the season of 1921–22 only pictures of the very highest quality, pictures that every member of every family in your community can enjoy; pictures that are packed with action and fun and the joy of youth, yet censor-proof; pictures produced from stories carrying the widest appeal; pictures that will prove profitable for you to present.

CONSTANCE BINNEY

Scene from
ROOM AND BOARD

PICTURE lovers have a way of speaking of some of their favorite stars with admiration, of others with awe, but of Constance Binney they always speak with affection.

There probably never has been more genuine enthusiasm displayed over a romantic portrayal than over the playing of Miss Binney in the big box-office production, 39 EAST. Few screen stars possess the fascinating combination of charm, good-breeding, wistful humor, and feeling for romance which so generously characterizes Miss Binney's work.

There has been just one trouble with Constance Binney productions—shortage of supply. And now this difficulty has been overcome by Miss Binney's refusal of a most flattering stage contract. She has left for the Pacific Coast to devote a full season exclusively to photodrama. Realart makes this announcement with satisfaction born of the conviction that a season given exclusively to pictures, and under the most favorable producing conditions, will place Miss Binney far in the forefront of romantic actresses.

CONSTANCE BINNEY

The Adorable

Elaborate plans have been completed for Miss Binney's work during the coming season. She will be under the direction of Chester M. Franklin, who has made many of Realart's successes during the past year. Her first production will be ROOM AND BOARD, a colorful and unusual romance written by Charles E. Whittaker and Donnah Darrell.

After this will come the CASE OF BECKY, which was originally produced for the stage by David Belasco and in which Frances Starr achieved success. This stirring drama, written by Edward Locke, is the story of a girl who possessed two personalities, and is believed by many critics to afford better material for screen presentation than did Stevenson's famous "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

These are but samples of the sort of stories in which Miss Binney is to be starred. The best that the market affords is to be provided in a serious endeavor to widen the already large circle of admirers of this lovable young woman.

WANDA HAWLEY

Scene from
HER FACE VALUE

BRASS TACKS! How's that for a title? Pretty nifty, yes? And as good as it sounds! Took two stories to make one picture—both of them by the inimitable Samuel Merwin and both published in The Saturday Evening Post. Probably you've read them—"Eva on the Ice" and "Saving Sister"—most everybody has. They tell of the ambitious activities of a super-modern young woman named Goldie. And they've been made into a photoplay that will prove a good tonic for anybody's box office.

Then there's HER FACE VALUE—another Saturday Evening Post smile teaser by another famous author—Earl Derr Bigger. In magazine form it was called "The Girl Who Paid Dividends," but there's extra value in the new title.

You won't object to THE CRY BABY as a nail puller, either, will you? Nor to THE CLINGING VINE, a Fred Jackson story, about a girl who clung?

Who's the star? Why, whom do such titles and stories fit, better than

WANDA HAWLEY

The Girl with the Million Dollar Smile

She's genuinely human; that's why you forget yourself and laugh with her even though you've sworn you're off Life for good. She is the original, lovable blues-chaser!

For clean, wholesome, rollicking fun, minus clap-trap and slap-stick, we commend you to such pictures as THE SNOB, THE HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT, A KISS IN TIME and other Wanda Hawley productions of the season just ending. Wherever she is, there is the irresistible smile which has won the heart of Main Street as well as of old Broadway.

DASH—smartness—style—these are the qualities possessed by Alice Brady which make her the leading feminine matinee attraction.

And these qualities, plus the thrill and power of her emotional portrayals—plus her recognized standing as the greatest dramatic actress on the screen today—give her an advantage which it will be Realart's endeavor to capitalize during the coming season by providing the best stories yet obtained for her.

Long association with the stage—she comes of a family famous for its contributions to the theatre—has made Miss Brady a master of technique, given her poise and developed her artistry far beyond that of the average motion picture star. Season after season of success in the spoken drama testify to her superior ability as an actress and to her steadily increasing box office value.

ALICE BRADY

Idol of Stage and Screen

She will make her 1921–1922 debut in DAWN OF THE EAST, a story of unusual interest, dramatic intensity and color, the scenes of which are laid in China. The play was written for Miss Brady by E. Lloyd Sheldon, author of innumerable successes and one of the foremost scenarists of the times. It is thrilling melodrama with a plot as remote from the ordinary as the East from the West.

Samuel Merwin is the author of one of Miss Brady's pictures—HUSH MONEY—in which she will be seen again in her native atmosphere of elegance and high society. It is the story of a debutante's warfare on moral issues with her father and sweetheart. Tense dramatic interest centers about the running down of a child by an automobile.

PRESS OF THOS B BROOKS, N. Y.

"Its Praise Should Be Printed in Bold-Face Type"

What a Missouri trade paper editor thinks of "THE BLOT," Lois Weber's first production for F. B. Warrren release.

It is not often that the editorial columns of this publication are opened to the reviewing of moving picture productions, but one that the writer saw in a projection room in the Film Building Monday is worthy of more than ordinary mention. And its praise should be printed in bold face type.

"The Blot," a Lois Weber production and the initial release of the F. B. Warren Corporation, is the picture referred to. It is remarkably well produced and it contains so much human interest woven around such a simple true-to-life story that it arouses the emotions of the spectator and keeps him enthusiastically interested. And when the last flash is thrown on the screen he is left anxious for more.

It is a genuine pleasure to witness this story that has as its theme the underpaid school teacher. And so natural is the acting and so splendid the portrayal of the various characters by the well selected cast that the whole story seems a vivid reality. The heart interest contained in the home life of Professor Griggs, who earns a bare living, is strikingly appealing. And the contrast of the professor's home living with that of his neighbor, Hans Olsen, a shoemaker, is cause for much humor and pathos. Phil West, the young son of a wealthy trustee of the school, is a clean-cut young actor, and portrays wonderfully well his part. He simply wins over the audience with his grace and pleasing manner. And Amelia, the professor's daughter, is a beautiful girl. She is probably not familiar to moving picture audiences, and if she is new to the screen, she's a find.

"The Blot," aside from being a splendid interest story, far better than "Humoresque," is absolutely censor proof. And it's a big score for the moving picture industry in its battle against censorship. Lois Weber has written, directed and produced many fine productions, but "The Blot" is unquestionably her best work. It's a perfect picture.

A much better selection could not have been made by the Warren Corporation for its initial release. And if this is to serve as an example of what the exhibitor may expect of their forthcoming productions, their success is assured.

QUO VADIS

["Whither Goest Thou?"]

By HENRY SIENKIEWICZ

Next to "The Birth Of A Nation" the most valuable motion picture property in the world. Re-edited by Doty Hobart. Art titles by Warren Newcombe.

The first big European picture ever brought to America was "Quo Vadis," from Henry Sienkiewicz's world-famed novel. This was late in 1913. It ran twenty-two weeks at the Astor Theatre, New York. It was the first picture ever shown in America at a theatrical scale of prices.

It was played as a theatrical road show attraction in the legitimate theatres booked by the powerful Klaw & Erlanger organization. And it achieved a then miraculous gross of $1,500,000. Later, handled through the Kleine exchanges, it grossed $750,000 more in the picture houses of the nation.

As released through F. B. Warren Corporation it is completely re-edited, re-titled, rearranged into six magnificent and stirring reels. It is still the great super-picture of the European producers. Look at these amazing records of legitimate bookings in 1913.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" Burns 'Em Up-It's There

Johnny Hines in
"BURN 'EM UP BARNES"
C. C. Burr Production

DIRECTORS.....George Beranger and Johnny Hines
AUTHOR .....Not credited
SCENARIO BY .....Raymond L. Schrock
CAMERAMEN.....Ted Beasley, Hal Young and Ned Van Buren
AS A WHOLE.....One of the most delightful comedies seen in months, with just enough story to make it worth while STORY.....What happens to rich man's son who starts on his own. But different from any of them
DIRECTION.....Very good; at times excellent. Some comedy bits immense
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent usually; a few bad spots. Colored playing cards a feature
LIGHTINGS ..... Usually good
CAMERA WORK ..... Average
STAR.....His usual skittish self, at times very amusing
PLAYERS.....Support unusual, especially for picture of this kind, and includes George Fawcett, Edmund Breese and J. Barney Sherry. All good
EXTERIORS.....Very good. Particularly fine racing stuff
INTERIORS ..... Looked natural
DETAIL.....Very good. Ralph Spence's titles very funny
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Good enough for any house; clean, wholesome, with lots of laughs
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....5,600 feet

Johnny Hines burns 'em up all over the place in his first five-reeler, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes." If Hines can find story material of this type you won't see him in two reelers again. Your crowd is going to like it. That's sure. It's clean, wholesome, with a clinch at the finish for the lovers of lovers, and with a lot of comedy that takes you off at the very start to a mad whirl of laughter. It slows down after the second reel, but then the story begins to get in its work and by the time the clinch comes you realize you have seen a mighty good picture which has, in addition to the many laughs, the thrill of seeing "Burn 'Em Up" rescue a baby from being killed by a train by lifting himself over the beams under a freight on which he is riding, and then they throw in a motor race that for fast skidding and speed takes you dangerously near the edge of your seat. It's mighty good entertainment, especially after seeing a lot of the so-called comedies that have been floating about of late.

Hines is excellent, but George Fawcett and Edmund Breese also fit in as hobos, who Johnny ties up with for awhile before settling down. Some of the best screen comedy found in a long time is in the hobo sequence, especially the stealing of a dollar bill from each other, and then the gambling of the hobos with the placing of a card deftly through the toes is sure fire. But there are many laughable touches all the way.

The story tells how Johnny, son of a motor car manufacturer, starts on his own, is robbed, thrown into a freight car, meets a lot of hobos and casts his life with them until the time comes when he makes good in a little town where he meets the bank president's daughter and, after many incidents, finally wins her. There is a lot of side plot, but it isn't necessary to bother with that here.

The Laughs Plus the Thrills Should Prove Sure Fire

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This looks like a sure-fire audience picture. It has a flock of laughs that start right at the beginning and carry through for over two reels. Then the laughs let down until the finish, but they are scattered liberally through the rest of it. You can make promises on this and your crowd will surely like it. You might use a phrase like this in your catchlines: "'Burn 'Em Up Barnes' is sure to please you." You can talk about the thrill where Hines rescues the infant, and the motor race is good for a lot of thrills, so you can use that. Talk about the support; their names are well known to fans and Hines should be popular because of his short comedies.

JOHNNY HINES MAKES HIT IN NEW PICTURE

The enthusiasm caused by the personal appearance of Johnny Hines and the pre-release showing of his first big feature picture, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," at the Colonial theatre, recently, has not subsided.

Johnny Hines has long been prominently identified with the two-reel Torchy comedies and has succeeded in making a feature of the romantic comedy type which provides splendid entertainment. It is the impression locally, that a new feature star is about to be added to the film firmament of no mean proportions as an entertainer and laugh maker.

The entire showing was characterized by gales of laughter which met every comedy situation. One of the most spectacular scenes, Johnny's rescue of a child from the path of an onrushing train, sweeping it into his arm as he clung to the side of a train passing in the opposite direction, brought the audience up standing. Another thrill and round of applause came when Johnny leaped into a racing car, entered the annual automobile road race and captured a pair of crooks who had robbed the bank and were trying to escape with the spoils. Accidentally, he won the race and—a bride.

THE CAST IS MADE UP OF A GALAXY OF PLAYERS, MOSTLY STARS IN THEIR OWN RIGHT

JOHNNY HINES of the Torchy Comedy fame.

BETTY CARPENTER, who plays "Hope" in Famous Players "Experience" and is featured in Robert W. Chambers "Cardigan," soon to be released.

EDMUND BREESE, who might well share feature honors in this production and whom "fans" will best remember as the star of Metros "The Shooting of Dan Megrue."

GEORGE FAWCETT, star and director of great ability, endeared to the American public through the best productions of our day.

J. BARNEY SHERRY, whose best remembered work for Marshall Neilan is as the Sergeant of the Northwest Mounted in "The Rivers End."

JULIA SWAYNE GORDON, one of the first and foremost screen stars now before the public.

MATTHEW BETTS, whose recent work as the villian in Whitman Bennett's "Salvation Nell" is a character classic.

DOROTHY LEEDS, former Follies Beauty, recently seen in the leading feminine roles in Torchy Comedies.

RICHARD THORPE, until recently, the leading man at the Champs Elysee Theatre, Paris, and more recently seen in many of the Torchy Comedies.

Co-Director, George A. Beranger

Sub-titles by Ralph Spence

who is largely responsible, in our opinion, for the success of William Fox's "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Photoplay by Raymond L. Schrock, Photographed by Hal Young, Ned Van Buren and Ted Beasley.

HINES TRIES OUT HIS FIRST 5 REELER IN LOEW THEATRE

Johnny Hines has arrived. At Loew's Peekskill Theatre several nights ago, the famous Torchy comedian tried out his first five reel feature "Speed 'em Up Barns" to learn just how the public liked it. It is safe to say that not one foot has been wasted, and each reel is literally packed with laughs, and not of a hokum variety. One of the outstanding features is the fact that Hines did not attempt to gather all the glory for himself but is supported by such well known players as George Fawcett, J. Barney Sherry, Edmund Breeze, Julia Swayne Gordon, Betty Carpenter and others. Hines made a personal appearance following the showing and was given a rousing ovation.

Burr:
I want to extend my thanks to you and Johnny Hines for having had the opportunity of showing "Burn 'em up Barnes" in the Colonial Theatre for the first time in any house.
Never before in my experience have I seen a motion picture audience laugh more heartily over any scene than they did when Johnny, in tramp make-up was chased by the dog, nor applaud more wildly and stamp more vigorously when Johnny rescues the child from the path of the on-rushing train and again, at Johnny's dramatic entrance in the automobile race. It was great!
The enthusiasm of my patrons has not abated since the showing and inquiries if we intend showing it again, are coming in from those who missed seeing it on Wednesday evening. This interest created by word-of-mouth advertising is the best proof of picture merit. "Burn 'em up Barnes" looks like a winner to me!

What makes a picture "BIG"?

A Good Story—

"One Arabian Night" has it—from the best known book next to the Bible.

A Great Director's Artistry—

This is the master work of Lubitsch, director of "Passion."

A Popular Star Who Can Act—

Pola Negri sprang into fame more quickly than any screen favorite in history.

Magnificent Settings—

One looking at it would believe it made in Bagdad itself.

Strong Supporting Cast—

It's pretty hard to pick which does the best work among the eight or nine principal characters, but watch Lubitsch himself as the hunchback.

Vast Ensemble Scenes—

Some of the street scenes seem to have thousands in them—and they're a part of the story.

Novelty—

We can't remember a picture that resembles it in story and treatment.

Exploitation Angles—

Well now just wait until you see the press sheet and advertising accessories.

Humbled Again

Is the Tariff to Be Our Crowning Sin of Ineptitude?

THE 30% ad valorem duty on foreign pictures as contained in the Fordney tariff bill—

The fact that it was put there in the sole and thoroughly misguided interests of the Actors Equity Association—

The fact that this bill passed the House with scarcely a dissenting voice from the industry—

The fact that the Senate Committee is now considering this tariff and will probably make a decision without having fully and forcefully brought to its attention the righteous attitude of a big industry toward so momentous a matter—

These, briefly, are the facts of one of the most amazing chapters in the industry's record of downright weakness in the face of great moral and economic crises.

Here are the further and indisputable facts:

A 30% ad valorem duty will exclude from the country all foreign pictures—practically all.

Retaliatory tariffs will exclude American pictures from all foreign countries—practically all.

The loss of the foreign market will cost the American producer and distributor fully twenty-five million dollars a year.

This unbearable loss will have to be passed along to the American exhibitor and thence to the American public.

The remarkable prestige of a great, upbuilding American manufacturing industry,—so remarkable that today, in Great Britain for instance, it supplies 85% of the product used there—will be leveled down over night; and home production will be fostered in those foreign countries which now produce slightly and those which do not produce at all.

A new art will, for the first time in all history, be barricaded by commercial tariff walls, the United States being alone cut off from the picture art expression and inspiration and information of the civilized world.

The United States now entering upon a potentially great period of international commerce and affairs will be robbed of the one great agent that can best tell the rest of the world of her natural resources, manufactures, commerce, enterprise, ideals—will lose, in other words, its greatest and invaluable publicity force.

And for what? And why?

Just two counts:

(1) A revenue so inconsiderable that it means nothing. Today the foreign pictures in this country are less than 1% of our total consumption. They should never exceed 10%; they will never harm but always help our exhibitors and producers.

(2) An actor's union asks for this tariff—a group of individuals who thought that a slump in employment caused by a picture overproduction of 100% was due to an importation of pictures of 1%; who don't realize that such a tariff, above anything else, would so penalize their employers that jobs and salaries would slump not temporarily but forever more.

Europe and Canada are looking in amazement at the situation and want to know the nigger in the woodpile.

Naturally.

They assume that so great and fortunate an industry must, for some unknown reason, want this tariff; otherwise so absurd a situation wouldn't be tolerated for one moment by so great an industry.

No!

This industry doesn't want this tariff. There isn't a commercial excuse for it; and there's every commercial reason against it.

The true reason is this:

We are so blindly selfish that we are asleep at the switch—as always before.

We are a big industry—in some respects: In others small out of all proportion.

We have no unity whatsoever. It's every man, every company, every organization for itself.

We have a National Association and a Theater Owners Association and the two can't get close enough together to fight censorship, taxes or tariffs. So we have our hands full of each and every common menace and evil that comes along.

We squabble over small bills and issues: but big bills like the New York State Censorship cost of $2,500,000 annually; the admission tax of over $60,000,000 annually; the 5% film tax of over $6,000,000 annually; this tariff loss of $25,000,000—these we have no time for, no unity wherewith to meet them successfully.

And the banks, the legislators, the public are asking: Why?

We accuse each other of dishonor in small things; and we cheerfully assume the worst result, the most dishonorable thing ever jammed down the throat of an American. And that's censorship.

We don't want to overstate this tariff crisis. We realize the importance of other big crises —the tax situation for instance (and by the way we are told that united action from this industry would have reduced the heavy admissions and film taxes at least one half).

But we are not overstating. Who will deny that this matter is big, vital and pressing?

A joint committee representing fully and harmoniously the common interests of exhibitor, distributor and producer and well equipped with facts and figures should go to Washington and get this strange, unsound, unwanted plank withdrawn from the tariff act.

Is such a committee impossible?

Can we admit a weakness so disgraceful?

Or are we beaten, and bound hand and foot by the unintelligent effort of a single representative of an actor's union?

Save the Money

THE picture business has to save money this year. Or, rather, a greater percentage of the money paid by the public must go to picture exhibitors and picture producers.

This is imperative.

Soaring overhead costs have brought conditions to the point where many a manager of a "million dollar picture palace" is convinced that he is in business for the sake of the mortgage and the payroll.

What better opportunity for saving than in reasonable curtailment of ridiculously large symphony orchestras and lavish musical features?

Understand us:

The proper musical background for picture presentation, the use of moderately priced specialty features—these are widely different from the excessively extravagant expenditures that add thousands to the weekly overhead.

Big theatres have gone to extremes in the matter of music; the average small theatre has not yet progressed far enough. Not by a long sight.

Boom days, competition, and an intense desire to please the public have caused the big theatres to go to lengths which now make it extremely difficult in times of "normalcy" for the theatre owner to secure a reasonable profit on his investment or for him to pay a proper rental for the bigger pictures.

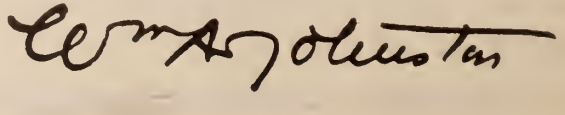
And don't forget—the picture is the attraction.

Think it over, Mr. Exhibitor.

Give thought to the standardized music score service as a means of saving in orchestra salaries and expensive leaders; consider the alluring present day offerings of organ makers; look over the many other possibilities in mechanical music; find out what the cue sheet makers can do to aid you in securing necessary effects at a saving in orchestral personnel.

Save the money!

The picture business needs it.



Retaliation to Import Tax May Be Expected, Warn Foreign Film Men

French, Italian, British Representatives Tell of Danger

RETALIATORY measures in France, England and Italy, as well as Canada, will most probably result in the event the United States passes the proposed tariff on foreign made films.

This was the consensus of opinion expressed by Louis Mercanton, Count di Revel, and Alfred Lever, three of the leading film representatives of France, Italy and England respectively at a meeting held at the Hotel Astor Tuesday afternoon.

"A tariff on foreign made films," said Mr. Mercanton, "would certainly result in retaliatory measures in European countries. But not only that, as far as France is concerned, the importation of American films would be absolutely prohibited during the pendency of such an American tariff on foreign made films. America must expect to see in one full swoop an entire stoppage of American film sales in France."

"That such a step would be disastrous to the American producer is evidenced by the fact that most every American producer expects or does get back twenty to thirty per cent of his negative cost from the foreign sales alone."

Count di Revel, of the Unione of Italy said that retaliatory measures in Italy are sure to follow as soon as America bars out Italian films by virtue of a high tariff.

"Italy must do this," said Count Revel, "for its own protection. We are showing a large proportion of American films in Italy and we believe we have some fine pictures in Italy that should be shown here for its artistic value, if for nothing else alone. Films are like literature, one country must enjoy the literary genius of another country and to bar free thought and free expression out is disastrous to say the least."

Mr. Lever, Stoll's general manager, called the proposed tariff an iniquitous one. "It is hard to believe that the American government plans to put a tariff through on foreign made films simply as a commercial proposition," he said. "This hardly seems possible when it is considered that only one-half of one per cent of foreign made films reach this country.

"When we in England heard that the Government in America was considering imposing a tax on foreign films we were under the impression the American producers desired such a measure. On coming to America I learned to my gratification that the majority of producers here were against the tariff.

Ernest Shipman said that Canada is "itching for the United States to pass the measure so she can come back at her with a similar tariff, dollar for dollar. He predicted that the exhibitors and distributors in Canada stand ready to form their own producing companies if a tariff is imposed on foreign films.

Among those at the meeting were C. S. Clark, of Robertson-Cole; Delight Evans, of Photoplay Magazine; Ruth Grimwood, Horace C. Jenkins, J. H. Hoffberg, of the foreign department of Goldwyn; Millard Johnson, F. V. Luporini, E. D. Rinaldi, Louis Nalpes, French producer; Mr. Komroof, of Wid's Daily; Fred Schader, of Variety; Frank B. Arnold, Mathew A. Taylor, of the Motion Picture News; M. A. Beeman, of the International Magazine Company; Horace G. Knowles, Nat X. Dorfman, Louella O. Parsons, of the Morning Telegraph; Frederic Chapin, Alfred Lever, general manager Stoll Film Co., Ltd., Louis Mercanton, L. C. Wheeler, Ernest Shipman, William A. Johnston, editor, Motion Picture News; Count di Revel and H. Conway Winshfield.

Laemmle, Abroad, Sees Danger

In a strong note of warning from Europe, where he is now on vacation, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, sends word that British and European film men are preparting to retaliate upon America if the import tax is put through. The Universal chief, after conference with film heads and men of public affairs in several Continental countries, advises that America's film export trade will be seriously jeopardized by such a move.

The proposed tariff he characterizes as un-American, un-wise and unprofitable. In a recent communication to the Universal home office, he explained in detail his opinion on such a tax, and the attitude towards it as taken by foreign film men.

"An ad valorem tax on films imported into the United States would be the height of folly," explained Mr. Laemmle. "America has far more to lose than to gain by such a move. If it did nothing but hamper the importation of good foreign pictures into the country, it would be bad enough. America and the American film business can well afford to welcome the best productions of British, European and other producers.

"Such a tax, however, has as its most insidious feature a contemplated discrimination against the film productions of the very countries, which now take in the bulk of America's enormous film export trade. If the motion pictures of these countries are hampered by tax barriers from being shown in the United States, we may expect retaliation—retaliation of such form that the American film export business will be materially harmed by it. The United States can ill afford to destroy an export business amounting to eight million dollars a year."

Motion Picture Day Plan to Be Revised

A MEETING of representatives of the producing and distributing companies that had agreed to participate in the Motion Picture Day Plan on August 25th was held during the noon hour Thursday, August 11th, and it was agreed that the representatives in attendance should constitute themselves a committee and meet on August 18, to work out the Motion Picture Day Plan, taking advantage of some constructive suggestions which had been made and eliminating, if possible, all objections thereto.

Those present at the meeting and constituting the committee were: Saul E. Rogers, Fox; W. E. Atkinson, Metro; Morris Kohn, Realart; Lee Counselman, Famous-Players; F. A. Gudger, Goldwyn; R. S. Cole, Robertson-Cole; Earle J. Hudson, Associate First National; Al Lichtman, Associated Producers; Sam E. Morris, Select; Edward M. Saunders, chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee, and Charles C. Pettijohn, who suggested the plan.

Mr. Pettijohn, in addressing the meeting, stated that the two faults found with the present plan were that the method of procedure is wrong, and that the date is not universally satisfactory. The method of procedure can be changed, said Mr. Pettijohn, and a date set which will please every element in the industry.

J. S. Woody on Annual Tour

Realart's general manager, J. S. Woody, left New York on August 12th on the first leg of a journey that will take him to all of the branches of that company. This is in line with Mr. Woody's policy of keeping in personal touch with all the factors of the organization by making an annual inspection trip.

Mr. Woody intends to drop in on a number of his exhibitor friends whenever his itinerary permits. His tour will take him as far as the West Coast, where he intends to make an inspection of the much augmented Realart Studios.

Vergisslich Heads N. Y. Exchange of "A. P."

J. Vergesslich has been appointed resident manager of the New York Exchange of Associated Producers, Inc., by General Manager Al Lichtman. He succeeds J. J. Unger, who has been made a special representative by Mr. Lichtman.

Latest Episode in the Thrilling Serial "Another Zukor Hearing" Leaves Past Somewhat Muddled But Develops Plans for Future Arbitration —Desire For Harmony Evident On Both Sides

IN pursuance with the mandate of the Minneapolis convention, the Committee of Five of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, under the leadership of President Sydney S. Cohen, met Adolph Zukor on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and conferred with him concerning a long list of grievances lodged against Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by exhibitors in various parts of the country but especially in New England and the South. The outcome of the two initial sittings of the conference is summarized in the following:

(1) Mr. Zukor goes on record that he stands ready to co-operate with the Committee of Five in every possible way to secure an expeditious and satisfactory adjustment of the differences between the independent theatre - owners of the country and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In accomplishing these ends, he has given to the Committee access to every source of information, records, files and business correspondence at the disposal of the Famous Players-Lasky.

(2) Mr. Zukor will review in person every specific grievance now in Mr. Cohen's possession. He will secure from the home-office and the field forces every bit of written material having to do with each particular complaint; he will summon whatever Paramount officials it may be necessary to secure a comprehensive account of each case; and finally he will request exhibitors involved in the grievances, where their presence is deemed advisable, to come to New York for a hearing before him, defraying all expenses of travel and accommodations incurred by the exhibitors in answering his summons. Finally when all the facts bearing on the case are collocated, Mr. Zukor will present in writing the results of his findings to the Committee of Five for their consideration and decision. And declared Mr. Zukor:

"I will abide by the decision of the Committee, asking for a re-consideration of its decision only where I believe they have based their judgment on a mis-carriage of information or on a mis-interpretation of the facts as presented.

"In case a difference of opinion arises between Famous Players-Lasky and the Committee of the M. P. T. O. of A., concerning some legal point, I will meet the Committee, select with them a United States judge or any other legal mind agreeable to the Committee, and abide by the decision handed down by such an authority.

"In case Famous Players-Lasky disagrees with the Committee on some trade point, I will meet with the Committee and choose in conjunction with them some person in the trade of repute and ability, conversant with the motion-picture industry, and will accept the decision of such person on the disputed point."

Mrs. Sarah F. O'Reilly, wife of the late Judge Daniel O'Reilly, prominent in city legal and political circles and mother of Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York state M. P. T. O. A. died on August 16. Two other sons, Joseph J. and Jefferson F. O'Reilly, survive.

The funeral will be held from her late residence, 256 East 68th St., New York, Saturday, August 19, at 9.30 A.M.

Mrs. O'Reilly was at one time Principal of a New York High School. Her personal charm endeared her to a wide circle of friends.

The sympathy of the industry is extended to Charles O'Reilly.

Mr. Cohen in his reply to Mr. Zukor declared that he would withhold at least temporarily acceptance of that part of Mr. Zukor's plan suggesting the mode of procedure to be followed where difference of opinion existed over a "legal point," until he had consulted with the national counsel of the M. P. T. O. of A.

(3) The disputes arising over the activities of the Alfred S. Black enterprises in New England and the Southern Enterprises and Lynch interests in the South are to be given special consideration. Owing to the nature of the contractual relations between Famous Players-Lasky and the organizations just indicated, Mr. Cohen declared that in fairness to all parties concerned the Committee of Five could not commit itself to any definite plan of action until it had consulted with its national counsel, Senator James Walker of New York. This declaration of Mr. Cohen's followed a reading of the contracts to the Committee.

(4) Mr. Zukor further declared that during last August he had met a committee of the M. P. T. O. of A and had given assurance at that time of remedial measures. If since that time any exhibitor has suffered as a result of activities of the Black or the Lynch enterprises, which activities were contrary to the spirit of his promises last August or which were not in accordance with the full provisions of the contracts between Famous Players-Lasky and these parties, then Famous Players-Lasky will repair—one hundred per cent—the injuries inflicted on such theatre-owners, declared Mr. Zukor.

(5) On Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Cohen submitted to Mr. Zukor verbatim copies of the complaints addressed to the M. P. T. O. of A. headquarters against Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Zukor is to begin at once on the work of assembling all facts and witnesses which may help in the adjusting of these grievances. The Committee of Five is scheduled to meet Mr. Zukor again this week when some of the cases upon which all pertinent facts have been collocated will be brought up for consideration and decision, it is expected.

(6) As it would be impractical to keep all members of the Committee of Five on the spot until the entire list of complaints has been reviewed and acted upon, it is Mr. Cohen's plan to summon W. A. True of Hartford, Conn.; and Col. H. B. Varner of Lexington, N. C., to New York whenever Mr. Zukor is ready to confer on the separate cases. The other members of the Committee of Five will be acquainted with the facts of the case by long-distance telephone or wire and then asked to declare their stand.

(7) Copies of the contracts entered into by Famous Players-Lasky with the A. S. Black interests, with the Southern Enterprises, and with the Lynch interests were submitted to Counsel James Walker of the M. P. T. O. of A. on Wednesday afternoon for consultation with the Committee of Five as to the proper steps to be taken by the Committee in effecting adjustment of differences between exhibitors and these organizations and Famous Players-Lasky.

(8) In answer to a question of Mr. Zukor as to whether Famous Players-Lasky is the only organization to be examined by the Committee of Five, Mr. Cohen replied that there are other companies which are to come within the scope of the committee's investigation.

The major feature of Wednesday morning's session was the reading of the various contracts. It developed that the agreement entered into gives Famous Players-Lasky practically equal representation with the other interests on the various boards of directors controlling the different corporations. Mr. Zukor declared that Famous Players-Lasky was ready to exercise every right and power enjoyed under the contracts in preventing practices detrimental to independent theatre-owners. Just how far these contracts empowered Famous Players-Lasky to check the activities of the other parties to the contract was declared to be open to doubt. Consequently, Mr. Cohen asked for time to consult with Counsel Walker on these phases of the situation before the committee would commit itself to any definite mode of procedure regarding the Black and Lynch problems.

Another feature of the Wednesday session was the determination of Mr. Zukor to present to the Committee every source of information which the Committee in its judgment thought advisable to have submitted. This insistence of Mr. Zukor upon a frank exposition of all papers, contracts, and records bearing on the problems was continued despite the frequent adverse criticism of his counsel E. T. Ludvigh. On more than one occasion Mr. Zukor over-rode the objections of his counsel and insisted upon a full and detailed presentation of the contracts and their contents. Only those figures which were deemed might prove of advantage in a business way to rival companies were withheld in the reading of the agreements.

Mr. Zukor was accompanied at both the Tuesday and Wednesday conference by E. J. Ludvigh, treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and attorney to the Paramount president. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was represented by President Cohen and by the Committee of Five, comprising James Ritter of Detroit, Mich.; W. A. True of Hartford, Conn.; Col. H. B. Varner of Lexington, N. C.; A. R. Pramer of Omaha, Neb.; and Gus Schmidt of Indianapolis, Ind.

The Tuesday conference, which was decidedly inquisitorial in character, was opened at 11:30 on Tuesday morning by President Cohen at the Claridge Hotel, New York. For three hours Mr. Zukor faced the Committee of Five and listened to a long list of exhibitor grievances against Famous Players-Lasky, recited by Mr. Cohen and the committee-members. Mr. Zukor did not do all the listening, however, nor did Mr. Cohen monopolize the speaking. The Paramount executive, abandoning at times his brief replies to the specific complaints, launched into a vigorous defence of Famous Players-Lasky and its policies. The committee-members also claimed the attention of the conference from time to time by accounts of their personal experiences and dealings with the Paramount officials in their respective localities. The exchanges in the main, however, were between Mr. Zukor and Mr. Cohen, both of whom for the most part presented their sides calmly and in a deliberative fashion.

Mr. Cohen had brought to the conference a bulky brief-case well-stocked with letters from theatre-owners in all parts of the country. Most of the time was occupied by the reading to Mr. Zukor of these letters of complaints. All of them described in detail cases of alleged mistreatment and injustice declared to have been practiced by Paramount officials in their relations with the independent exhibitors of their respective territories. As he completed the reading of each grievance, Mr. Cohen requested Mr. Zukor to reply. In most instances, Mr. Zukor expressed his inability to render a final and conclusive answer because of lack of knowledge of the details involved. Mr. Zukor further requested in each case that a copy of the complaint be given him so that he could inquire into the facts of the case and determine upon a settlement. Mr. Cohen promised a ready compliance with this request.

As complaint followed complaint from the recesses of Mr. Cohen's capacious portfolio, Mr. Zukor requested that his position be made clear. He said:

"It must be understood that unacquainted as I am with the details of these grievances it is obviously impossible for me to give an immediate and conclusive answer. I might, on my side, present to this committee a list of contentions which you would find it impossible to answer simply because you were not aware of the details entering into the controversy. Let it be understood, therefore, that I am not giving an immediate and definite reply to these complaints because I lack at the present time a knowledge of the details involved which would be necessary for the giving of a final answer. I would be glad to have Mr. Cohen give me a copy of these complaints so that I may investigate personally into each particular case and come to some definite decision with the committee."

At this juncture a plan of procedure in the handling of all future grievances was suggested which met with the approval of both sides. The arrangement as suggested is briefly this: All exhibitor complaints against Famous Players-Lasky should be addressed in the future to the M. P. T. O. of A. headquarters. They will then be submitted to the Famous Players-Lasky organization for its consideration. After all the relevant facts have been checked up, Mr. Zukor's committee will meet with the M. P. T. O. of A. committee and a solution of the difficulty will then be determined upon.

In the matter of deciding upon the complaints already in Mr. Cohen's possession, Mr. Zukor expressed his willingness to take every possible step to adjust the differences satisfactorily, and he won the unanimous thanks of the Committee by declaring: "I am entirely at your service until the last letter is out of Mr. Cohen's file."

Among the grievances recited by Mr. Cohen and the other committee-members were allegations of unfair competition on the part of Famous Players-Lasky in the building and acquiring of theatres in localities already served by independent exhibitors, who in most instances it was stated, used Paramount's releases and thus contributed to the growth and strength of the Famous Players-Lasky organization. Mr. Cohen described specific instances by reading from exhibitor's letters at hand.

"It is manifestly unfair," added Mr. Cohen, "for Famous Players-Lasky to compete with exhibitors who have helped to build up the Famous Players-Lasky organization and put it in its present place of power in the industry."

Another alleged practice was the withholding of first-run service where the contract called for such and the denying in some cases of even second-run pictures to independent theatre-owners.

The alleged use of a certain type of advertising by Paramount managers in various local newspapers which tended, it was declared by Mr. Cohen, to bring ridicule upon the house of an exhibitor who did not use Paramount service, was also called to Mr. Zukor's attention. Mr. Cohen stated that in some instances actual damage to the exhibitor had resulted from the use of such advertising, and he inquired of Mr. Zukor what steps would be taken by Famous Players-Lasky, to repair the injury said to have been done. To each specific grievance, Mr. Zukor replied that he would be glad

Clergyman Prepares Anti-Blue Law Booklet

THE Rev. D. Herbert Jones, of Huntington Park, California, a minister who, because he combatted members of his church who sought to put over Sunday closing in his community, resigned his pulpit, has prepared an interesting booklet, "The Menace of the Blue Laws, or Why I Champion the Sunday Theatre." Rev. Mr. Jones is now writing titles for Mr. DeMille.

The booklet is entirely comprehensive, is thirty-one pages in length, and contains powerful arguments against the enforcement of Sunday closings. These booklets may be obtained from J. Johnson, the Coast representative of the Division of Exploitation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., at the company's Los Angeles office.

Alexander Beyfuss Now a Producer

FROM the headquarters of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation comes the announcement that Alexander Beyfuss, long identified with the motion picture industry both on the Coast and in the East, has re-entered the film business as a producer.

Mr. Beyfuss was a guiding figure in the organizing of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation and is one of its largest individual stockholders. He has been elected vice-president and general manager of the corporation. One of the first steps taken by the new company was the purchase of the controlling interest in the Martin Johnson Film Co., of which Mr. Beyfuss has also been elected vice-president and general manager.

This latter company has been very successful in all its past activities, its initial product, Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas," having been one of the outstanding features of 1919. Through confidence and faith in "Cannibals of the South Seas" Beyfuss put them over at a time when no one in the industry believed that the product was of the great value it turned out to be. Martin Johnson departed from New York about four weeks ago, bound for British East Africa to obtain motion picture records of lion and gorilla hunts. The Exceptional Pictures Corporation has an option on all the material which Mr. Johnson obtains on this trip.

Beyfuss will bring to his new enterprise a keen insight into showmanship methods, a thorough knowledge of production values and an intimate experience with distribution problems, obtained in his long and varied career in the business. Nine years ago as owner and manager of a theatre he entered the industry and since that time has gone through each successive phase: as producer, then distributor, and for the past four years in important executive positions with two of the biggest national organizations. In all his experience as the "man behind the gun," he has never permitted any personal publicity and up to this time his likeness has never been published in any trade journal.

"Salomy Jane," considered one of the important successes of its time, represented Beyfuss' first endeavor in feature production, and since that time he has been responsible for numerous of the bigger productions, prominent among which is the bringing to the screen of Otis Skinner in "Kismet." Through his experience with this type of play he enjoys the confidence of some of the most important factors in the business.

Having always been an advocate of the unusual in features, the definite announcement of the production activities of the corporations whose destinies he is guiding, will be looked for with interest by the entire industry.

The Exceptional Pictures Corporation has leased a suite of offices in the new Loew State Theatre Building, New York City, and the organization will move into its new quarters about September 1st. Mr. Beyfuss, when questioned regarding the policy of this new company, said: "Next week we will be ready to announce, not what Exceptional is going to do, but what it HAS DONE."

Musicians and Operators Accept Wage Reduction

A statement from the headquarters of the M. P. T. O. of A. advises that the musicians of Lansing, Mich., have voluntarily accepted a reduction in their scale of wages. Leaders will receive $45 per week and side men $35 per week for a six hour day. Operators also after some delay agreed to a reduction. They will receive $40 per week.

The statement also declares that the exhibitors of Grand Rapids, Michigan, have succeeded in having the musicians and operators accept a 15% reduction in the 1921-1922 wage scale.

Samuel Sax Made Sales Manager of R-C

Samuel Sax, formerly general sales manager for the Selznick Company, has joined the R-C Pictures Corporation and been assigned to the post of sales manager. Mr. Sax began his career in the motion picture industry with the Universal Film Corporation as a salesman and remained with that organization for four years. He then had a brief affiliation with the Mutual Film Corporation, after which he joined the Select Pictures Corporation as branch manager of the Indianapolis office.

Jos. H. Gilday, Paramount Chicago Manager, Dies

Joseph H. Gilday, district manager for Paramount in Chicago, and one of the best known men in the film industry, died Friday morning, August 12, from pleuro-pneumonia after an illness of two weeks.

Mr. Gilday who was considered one of the most successful of the Paramount sales executives, got his start in the film business in Kansas City. For twenty-five years he had been a letter carrier. When motion pictures started he opened one of the first picture theatres in Kansas City, the Illiad. He became a salesman in the Paramount exchange in Kansas City, November 12, 1917.

Mr. Gilday is survived by a widow, Mrs. Francis Gilday, nee Schott, and a daughter Marion.

The remains were taken to Kansas City for burial and funeral services were held here Monday, August 15th.

Allied Laboratories Ass'n Answer Tariff Arguments

The Allied Laboratories Association, Inc., through Tom Evans, chairman, has answered the letter of President J. A. Coram, of the Bay State Film Corp., which was recently published in the Motion Picture News. Mr. Coram defended the proposed tariff on film raw stock as necessary for the independent manufacturer.

The Allied Laboratories seek information in regard to the other independent manufacturers of raw stock mentioned by Mr. Coram, and also inquires the names of those American manufacturers who, it was stated, were obliged to close down because of their inability to compete with foreign manufacturers.

The letter to Mr. Coram infers that the cost of film raw stock to the laboratory is too high, and that any competition from without is far better for the general industry than no competition at all. It states that at present competition from within is weak and negligent. Jules A. Brulatour's alleged laboratory activities are mentioned, and he is accused of attempting a monopoly which will drive the independent laboratory out of business. Should this happen, argues the association, the independent manufacturer will not be able to exist.

Realart Has A New Paying System

"Playing and Paying" Separated in System Radical to Pictures but Adapted from Old Line Merchandise Principles

REALART, which gave to the industry the "honor plan" of booking now steps forward with another innovation in the form of a system that separates "playing and paying."

The new method is divulged in the course of the corporation's annual Fall policy announcement and is the first bit of real news to emerge from the seasonal "blurbs." By the divorcing of playing dates from paying dates Realart believes that its new system will go far towards removing the causes of disagreements between exhibitor and exch. Abolition of C. O. D.'s, collection prior to shipment, and an encouragement to set play dates are among the advantages that may be seen from a surface glance at the new plan.

Realart's own explanation of the new plan sums it up as follows:

"The Exhibitor contracts for a season's service of thirty-six star productions which Realart agrees to deliver to him at regular, stated intervals and on schedule time. An account is immediately opened in the exhibitor's name. He is debited with the agreed price of his service, just as he would be if he had contracted with a correspondence school to take instruction, or as if he had signed for telephone or gas or electric light service.

"The customer agrees to pay his total license or service fee in installments, the first installment when he signs the agreement, just as he does when he makes application for gas or electric light or telephone. He is credited on the books with this payment; it reduces his indebtedness immediately, not six or eight or ten months later.

"He does not make any further installment payments until after he has begun playing pictures. Then he pays regularly on specified days of the month, exactly as he does in the other cases above cited. He continues these installment payments until the sum of them equals the total amount he has contracted to pay. Then he's through paying and there's no juggling of accounts and no balances to be applied to certain pictures."

In further explanation of the similarity of the plan to business practice common outside the motion picture industry, Realart cites the case of a lease it has just signed for a new building to be erected for its branch office in a mid-western city. This lease stipulates that Realart obligates itself for a certain sum of money annually during a term of years, the same to be paid in instalments. The first of these instalments covering six month's rent was paid when the contract was signed; subsequent instalments are equivalent to one month's rent and are paid at regular intervals, in advance of the service rendered, until the total obligation has been settled.

Realart claims its policy in the matter of payments closely parallels that of the real estate business, and actually goes it one better, in that the instalments are not required until after service has been rendered for the period covered by the payments.

This method of payment, it is explained, does away with C. O. D.'s and similar collection devices insofar as picture service is concerned. Bills are rendered regularly at specified times and without regard to how many or how few pictures have been played. There is no connection between the two.

The chief advantage alleged in favor of the plan is its fairness. Every payment the exhibitor makes reduces his obligation. Subsequent payments are not asked in advance of the playing of pictures. And the exhibitor is not required to reveal his business affairs to express agents and postal clerks. "In short," says the Realart statement, "an honest attempt is being made to establish the business status of the theatre owner on the same plane as his fellow merchandisers."

The Franchise, which is made out in triplicate, is a concise document, the face of which contains the various clauses of the agreement. On the reverse side are the details of the service, together with a two-year calendar to be used by the salesman to indicate the playing dates on which the Franchise Owner agrees to play the pictures. In addition to this there is a schedule for indicating playing dates for pictures booked for the 1920-21 season but still unplayed. "The instructions to salesmen," says the policy statement, "clearly sets forth the folly of accepting applications from persons who are uncertain about when and how they will show our pictures. Contracts are useless to us unless they are carried out on a fixed basis and provision for so carrying them out is made both as regards pictures for the coming season as well as those of the current season which remain unplayed."

One of the most important portions of the announcement concerns price. "Our attitude on this question," says the official statement, "is unchanged. We always have proceeded on the theory that overselling was poor policy. There is a halfway mark where both exhibitor and distributor can make an honest profit. Unless a reasonable return is assured to both the deal is unfair. And unfairness is unprofitable in the long run even to the one who seems to be profiting from it. We have no desire to deal with the man who wishes to take advantage of us, and we assume the same statement would apply to Realart if it should adopt any but a fair and equitable policy. We try to evidence good faith at all times by square dealing."

That is the way J. S. Woody, General Manager of the company, summarizes the corporation's policy.

"We are not leaving anything to chance" he says. "Experience has shown us that the average exhibitor takes much more on faith than does the distributor, and we desire to insure this confidence.

"Proof of the exhibitor's attitude is furnished by the number of applications for service which are signed in blank. A salesman calls, tells his story, reaches an agreement regarding price, playing dates and payments and then puts his name on the bottom of an agreement not yet filled in. He assumes a thorough understanding of what he has agreed to do, and that the blanks in the application will be filled in accordingly.

"The salesman takes the signed document to his office, or sends it in. It is filled out, forwarded to the Home Office, approved and returned to the exhibitor. Probably it is made out in accordance with his understanding, but perhaps not. There are many chances for error. A clerk may be careless. The salesman's explanation may not be clear. There may be an honest difference of opinion regarding what actually was agreed upon. Thus trouble may develop at the outset, or the exhibitor may wake up after service actually starts to a realization that his contract is not just what he thought it was.

"Realart is putting into effect every practical sort of safeguard against error on its part. Order blanks or memoranda of agreement have been provided. These cover all the essential phases of the application—number of pictures, starting and playing dates, license fee, amounts and dates of installments, protection and priority privileges and similar information. Three copies are made. These are signed by the exhibitor and salesman and one of them is left with the customer so that he can compare it with his license agreement when the latter is returned. One of the remaining copies is attached to the application which is sent to the Home Office for approval and is used there for comparative purposes."

Precautions do not end here, however, according to Mr. Woody. Salesmen are especially warned against carelessness or loose statements in presenting the service proposition. In evidence of this fact the company's Sales Manual (issued solely for the guidance of salesmen), is cited wherein emphasis is laid on the necessity for cautious, well-considered, truthful statements.

Second Deletion in News Reel; Pathe to Act

DELETION of scenes from a Pathe News reel for the second time in two weeks, has been ordered by the Censor Board.

Pathe will fight the deletion in the courts in conjunction with the "cut" made of bathing girl scenes last week.

The scene objected to this time was one of Hope Hampton in a fancy bathing costume—which might or might not pass the city censors of Atlantic City's beach—standing before a portable bath house prepared to enter the surf, after the fashion which prevails at European watering places.

Lewis Innerarity, secretary and counsel for Pathe, made it plain in an interview with a NEWS representative, that Pathe was not fighting for the right to show bathing girls in their news reel, but claimed the constitutional right to show anything compatible with decency.

"We regret, in fact, that it was scenes showing women in bathing costumes which has brought about the action of the censors. So far as Pathe News is concerned, it does not care if such scenes are ever embodied in it. It is the principle of censorship of news reels that we oppose. We contend we have the same constitutional guarantee of freedom as the newspaper."

The contention of the censors that a subtitle preceding the scene of Hope Hampton in bathing costume, as well as the picture itself, tended to show contempt for Atlantic City law, was answered by Mr. Innerarity with the statement that so far as was known there was no clause in New York law empowering the censors or making it encumbent on them to uphold or rule on the laws of another state.

While the course of action has about been decided upon by Pathe, it has not as yet been announced.

Hearst Will Not Favor Motion Picture Day

Emphatic objection to "Motion Picture Day" as a plan unworthy of the dignity and solidarity of the motion picture industry is expressed by William Randolph Hearst, President of International Film Service Company, Inc., through George B. Van Cleve, Vice President and General Manager of Mr. Hearst's film interests. Mr. Van Cleve says:

"The whole project would put the industry in a strange light. Groups of men doing a business clearly recognized as legitimate do not need to raise a fund to carry on a 'war.' Even granting the possibility of the need and good taste of such a fund, imagine the complications that would arise from the administering of it.

"This company sees no reason why the exhibitors should be called upon to contribute their earnings to the proposed project. We have found the exhibitors intelligent and we know that they will fight shoulder to shoulder with the producers in every legitimate way, but it is not equitable to ask them to do it in the manner that the advocates of 'Motion Picture Day' are suggesting.

Nat'l Ass'n Starts War Against Film Pirates

A vigorous campaign to prevent the pirating of American films for Japan has been institutel by the Film Theft Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. One arrest has already been made and stolen copies of "The Kid" owned by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and "Suds," the property of United Artists, have been recovered in San Francisco, where they were about to be forwarded to Japan.

May Censor Script Before Picture Is Produced

ACCORDING to a wire just received from the Coast, the conference of producers and censors now in progress on the Coast may result in very definite and beneficial steps being taken in the establishing of censorship methods. The producers and censors, says the telegram may select a committee to work out plans for a censoring organization to be located permanently in Los Angeles which will pass upon the scripts before the work of production is undertaken. The cutting of a scenario instead of the customary slashing of a picture will save the industry a great sum, it is pointed out.

Another benefit anticipated from the censors' visit is the possible launching of a national movement in conjunction with the churches to come to some mutual understanding on the matter of motion-picture censorship. It was brought out at a joint meeting of the church people, producers and stars that the greatest damage is done to pictures by people who base their opinions on film advertising. "For Adults Only" signs and similar methods were among the recommendations made.

The showing of "Foolish Wives" to the visiting censors has been postponed until Thursday.

New $300,000 Company Incorporated in N. Y.

The company with the greatest capitalization incorporating in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week was the Ethiopian Amusement Corporation, capitalized at $300,000, and having for its directors Jacque E. Horn, of St. George; Samuel Aste, and Bernard Stern, of New York. Records in the secretary of state's office also show the Ambassador Motion Picture House, incorporated during the past week, with a capitalization of $1,000.

Super-Attractions Only for Two Big Houses in Fall

Concrete answers to the editorial of William A. Johnston, titled "The Big Picture," which appeared in the August 6th issue of the News, are reported from Cleveland and Indianapolis in the news that the Stillman theatre in the former city and the Loew's State theatre in the latter city will play, beginning in the fall, super-attractions exclusively.

The Stillman theatre will house only the big pictures for indeterminate runs. The theatre will have only two shows a day, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. There will be no prologue policy. The admission prices have not yet been established. The first picture to appear at the Stillman theatre under this new policy is "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Loew's State theatre will become one of the most important production houses in the Middle West, following the inauguration of a new policy Sept. 4, Manager Walter David announced this week. The house is to play super attractions at popular prices of thirty cents afternoons and fifty cents evenings for any seat in the house. The new regime opens with "Way Down East."

J. Searle Dawley Elected Head of M.P.D.A.

At the last meeting of the Motion Picture Directors Association, J. Searle Dawley was made president of the Association, taking the place of Charles Miller, who resigned from office on account of his absence from the city which made it impossible for him to fulfill the duties required.

Cromelin Takes Exception to Eastman Statement

Paul H. Cromelin, president and general manager of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, has taken exception to several statements of George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Co., which were published in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of August 13. Mr. Eastman had argued that a protective tariff on film raw stock, now under consideration by Congress, was necessary for the American manufacturer.

Mr. Cromelin states that from the years of 1914 to 1918 we did import raw stock to the extent of approximately 260 million feet. All of this was imported free of duty, and despite this, the Eastman Company made a tremendous profit, he states. Had the Eastman company raised prices, it is asserted, the additional revenue would largely have gone to the government as excess profits tax. Mr. Cromelin also states that the Eastman company has in the past been successful in competing with the German Chemical and Dye Trust.

Exception is also taken to Mr. Eastman's statement that foreign made film is not coated upon American-made celluloid. The product, states Mr. Cromelin, is purchased in this country, sent abroad, where it is treated and sensitized and returned here, where it must compete with the Eastman product. Should a 20 per cent ad valorem tariff be added, he argued, such a competitor as the Gevaert Company of Antwerp, would be driven out of the market. "Such a tariff," concludes Mr. Cromelin, "would have the effect of keeping out competing raw film and complete the last link required by Mr. Eastman in order to absolutely dominate and control the motion picture industry in the United States.

Patterson Made Colonel on Governor's Staff

Willard C. Patterson, general manager of the Sig Samuels Enterprises in Atlanta, Ga., and manager of the new Metropolitan, the first run Associated First National house in the southern metropolis, has just been appointed a colonel on the staff of Governor Hardwick of Georgia.

Governor Hardwick and "Colonel" Patterson have been close friends for some time, and it was the Governor who appeared in person on the stage of the Metropolitan on its opening night, to welcome the citizens of Atlanta to the new playhouse, and congratulate the management upon the success of their enterprise.

F. B. Warren to Have Graf Productions

TELEGRAPHIC announcement from California is made by F. B. Warren that Graf Productions, Inc., of San Francisco, headed by Max Graf and J. H. R. Jacoby, are to distribute through the F. B. Warren Corporation, four big productions to be directed by two of the ablest American directors.

The first of these directors to be announced by Graf productions, Inc., is Lambert Hillyer, who has directed the last twenty-five William S. Hart productions and has written a great many of that number of Hart stories. The first Graf production under Mr. Hillyer's direction is "White Hands," by C. Gardner Sullivan. The star of this Sullivan story is Hobart Bosworth, and he will be surrounded by an all-star cast. It will be released in November.

Production of this story begins Monday, August 15th, in the San Mateo Studios, thirty-five minutes by train or motor from San Francisco, and this new organization means the first serious effort of California's northern city to become a producing center and attract there from Southern California certain of the best directorial factors in the industry. Important financial plans are now being developed in San Francisco by business and banking interests.

Max Graf was the organizer of the Hobart Bosworth Productions, which made two productions for release through Associated Producers, Inc., during the fall.

The second director is not made known. The announcement, it is said, will be a surprise to the industry.

Negro Problem on the Screen

WE are heartily in sympathy with the Southern exhibitor who takes a stand against the introduction of colored performers in pictures in a manner objectional to Southern audiences.

The racial problem in the South is a large one. The situation is always delicate. No one except a Southerner, or at least one who has lived for some time in the South, understands the matter.

So far as pictures are concerned the long and short of it is simply this: unless the producer is well qualified to know just what he is doing he had best eliminate completely the negro character, unless he wants his pictures cut to pieces, or its distribution seriously curtailed below the Mason and Dixon line.

W. A. J.

Jonesboro Amusement Company,
Jonesboro, Arkansas,
August 11 1921.

Motion Picture News,
New York City,

Gentlemen:

As a Southern exhibitor, I wish to call your attention to a growing evil in the industry and one that is totally unnecessary. I refer to the increasing tendency to mingle colored performers with white in pictures intended for exhibition in territory where the races do not mingle.

I am not a "nigger baiter." I have an intense liking for many members of the colored race and a full respect for their rights but the average director seems to have no grasp of the Southern patron's attitude.

A serial of not long ago was so offensive in this respect that hundreds of Southern exhibitors had to cancel it. Only yesterday we showed in one of our local houses a feature that was so flagrant in this respect that it has inspired this letter.

Why is it necessary to use colored performers in pictures with white casts? There are, of course, many parts that could be handled by colored performers without offense to anyone but why take the chance? We often have to cut the heart out of our pictures to avoid showing offensive scenes. If the director had an ounce of intelligence with respect to the race problem, he might, with safety, employ colored performers but the white man of the South will not sit through a scene that shows a burly negro putting his hands on a white woman, even though his intentions are honorable.

Why must directors create a race problem within our industry? Even with the colored performer playing minor parts the directors seem to delight in emphasizing their presence. In a recent feature a close-up of a colored maid was shown without any reason whatever. Had this been a white girl playing the maid she could not have bought that distinction for big money but because she was colored, the director gave her thoroughly unimportant role a prominence that is usually accorded only the principal members of the cast.

I am a real friend of the industry. Also a real friend of the colored race but this is a delicate subject south of the Mason-Dixon line and there is no need for dragging it into the silent drama.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) E. W. COLLINS.

Revenue Officials Not to Alter Ticket Rulings

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri has received an answer from the Acting Deputy Commissioner as a result of their efforts to obtain a correction of the present rules in regard to checking up on admissions sold. The exhibitors contend that to use serially numbered tickets would be throwing their books open to the public. The Commissioner stated that it is not deemed advisable at the present time to alter the rulings, but the attention of the exhibitors was called to the ruling which does not require all tickets to be serially numbered, provided they are valid for admission on date only, and such date is printed on the back.

Brunet Returns to U. S. With Plans for Increased Activities

Pathe Has Big Deals Pending, States President; Foresees Better Business

"WHILE Pathe Exchange, Inc. will continue to specialize in short subjects, with a distinct ambition to offer the trade the very best in this division of films, it also has some deals pending for product of other nature, the details of which will be divulged when entirely closed. There are also some important deals pending for additional short subjects which we hope will further increase the average excellence of our present short subject product."

This significant statement was made by Paul Brunet, President of Pathe Exchange, Inc., who returned from Paris August 13th, following the closing of the deal whereby the American stockholders and the present American management have taken over control of Pathe Exchange, from Pathe Cinema of Paris.

Mr. Brunet made it very plain in his statement that Pathe Exchange under its new American control, will assume increased activity, and since there is no change in the active management, the policy of the company will continue to be the leading independent distributor of motion pictures in the United States.

"Pathe Exchange, Inc., has at its disposal," said Mr. Brunet, "practically unlimited capital for the carrying out of all its present plans. In addition, when the new financing has been completed, it will be provided with even more liberal capital facilities, with the expectation that, as the industry develops, as it certainly will, Pathe will also expand, and be enabled to maintain its leadership in the independent distributing field."

Commenting on the business situation in the United States, with which he kept in the closest touch during his stay abroad, Mr. Brunet noted that it was not very good, from the film and exhibitor standpoint. "But any normal year having an excessively hot summer, such as we have had this year," Mr. Brunet explained, "cannot avoid a considerable slump. Of course, there is no denying the fact that general business conditions had been growing steadily more acute until it reached its apparent crisis early in the summer. Naturally this made itself felt at the box offices of the nation's theatres. These were factors that no industry could control or prevent, and over which we should not feel unduly pessimistic.

The foreign film and exhibiting business, while slowly improving, just now, has been in even worse shape than our American situation.

"Furthermore, the slowing up of business in the American film world has its compensations, now that the situation is clearing up somewhat and cooler weather is again with us as no longer is the industry confronted with the overproduction that existed throughout the past three or four years, and the exhibitor will not find himself face to face with as much competition as would have been the case had the slump been forestalled another year or two.

"It is also quite obvious that the ex-

Ups and Downs in "Los"

Here's a bulletin on conditions in Los Angeles that "he who runs may read": "Theatres here have had two weeks of improved attendance but it is now falling back to the point where it is thirty to forty per cent off normal. The Orpheum has dropped the matinee price from one dollar to fifty cents. Film houses have made no changes in prices."

Country-Wide Survey Shows Marked Increase in Attendance

Zukor Receives Encouragement from All But a Few Sections

THE motion picture business in the United States has turned the corner and is showing unmistakable signs of improvement, with an outlook for complete and early recovery from the effects of the prolonged hot weather of this summer.

This is the conclusion drawn by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, as the result of a telegraphic survey made by him during the last week.

Encouraged by the decided improvement in the business of motion picture theatres in Greater New York since the advent of cooler weather, Mr. Zukor wired twenty-five representative exhibitors in key cities in every section of the country, asking them for information as to the state of business in their respective vicinities and the outlook for the immediate future. The telegram which he sent follows:

"Motion picture theatres in this vicinity showing decided improvement in attendance. To help make survey of country for trade papers, please wire me, collect, information as to state of business in your vicinity and your prediction for immediate future."

Examination of the twenty replies received reveals that the exhibiting business of the country as a whole is looking to the future with an optimism which is extremely well grounded. Except for three bad spots, the business north of the Mason and Dixon line seems to be improving rapidly and the outlook is that it will soon be back to normal. What bad spots there are are entirely sectional and are confined chiefly to the South, where extreme hot weather still prevails; the extreme Northwest, where lumber and allied industries are at a standstill; Iowa and Southern Ohio, where business apparently is still sluggish.

Reports from Buffalo, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Detroit, Kansas City, Denver and Los Angeles indicate a return to normal conditions at an early date, with definite prospects of a real boom in the Fall and Winter. Boston and Cleveland have shown decided improvement since the cooler weather set in two weeks ago.

Washington, Toledo, Omaha and San Francisco, while not reporting an appreciable improvement so far, reflect a strong belief that better times are on the way. That the situation in San Francisco has not sharply improved is attributed entirely to the big strike in the building trades. However, there is a good prospect of an early settlement of the strike, and then the picture business is certain to thrive.

Among the replies received are the following:

Harold B. Franklin, Shea Amusement Co., Buffalo:

"The first cool weather has brought a marked improvement in attendance for the theatres here. We look forward to the future with much confidence, providing we are able to give the public quality pictures."

Sam Katz, Balaban & Katz, Chicago:

"Business in this section showing definite improvement. It is safe to say that all classes of theatres, large and small, are showing decided improvement in business."

Fred Desberg, State theatre, Cleveland, O.:

"Business improved in past two weeks due to cooler weather."

Frank Talbott, American theatre, Denver, Colo.:

"Our business is very satisfactory with prospects for improvement in near future."

Phil Gleichman, Broadway-Strand theatre, Detroit:

"Replying to your wire, business has taken a decided change for the better in this territory during the past two weeks, due principally to slightly cooler weather. Am now convinced that depression during Summer was due more to exceedingly hot weather than anything else and feel very much encouraged. Am now looking to very good Fall and Winter business."

Frank L. Newman, Kansas City, Mo.:

"Decided increase week of July 31 with 'The Great Moment' continuing this week with 'The Sign on the Door.' Weather much cooler these two weeks. Believe public shopping for pictures and genuine box-office attractions will be heavily patronized while program or average pictures will fail to attract. Think this condition will continue through Fall."

Sid Grauman, Los Angeles:

"Business in Southern California has not been bad with exception of few houses. Exhibitors report business improving and gradually returning to normal. Downtown houses have suffered but business improving greatly of late. Happy to report Grauman's doing excellent business. Rialto with Swanson good for six weeks. Impossible to handle the crowds. Congratulations for your wonderful line-up for next year."

J. E. Hostettler, Hostettler Amusement Co., Omaha:

"Conditions here show very little improvement at present but we believe after the hot weather there will be a great improvement in attendance."

Jules Mastbaum, Stanley, Co., Philadelphia:

"Business in our theatres has improved very materially since the hot spell has been broken. The extremely hot weather and daylight saving was the cause of the drop in attendance, but we feel sure that it will again become normal with the opening of the Fall Season."

E. V. Richards of the Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, reported that in Louisiana, where business is now registering an increase of about five per cent over the bottom figure reached the last week in May, no relief from the heat is expected until the middle of October. However, industrial activities have been substantially resumed in many communities, and the heat is all that is keeping the people away from theatres.

In the Seattle territory, according to J. Van Herberg of Jensen & Van Herberg, paralysis of the mining, lumber and fishing industries has temporarily dislocated the entire business structure of that locality.

A similar situation is reported by Charles A. Feinler of the Virginia theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., where extensive enforced idleness is augmented by strikes in the printing and building trades. Similarly, local industrial conditions are having a depressing effect in Cincinnati, according to I. Libson of the Family theatre of Cincinnati, and in the State of Iowa, according to A. H. Blank of Des Moines.

Hot Weather the Only Cause of Depression

"THE evidence of returning prosperity given in answer to our question," states Mr. Zukor, "only confirms the contention of close, observers that whatever depression there has been in the industry was due almost entirely to the prolonged hot weather.

"This hot weather has had a psychological effect on all of us, no doubt, and increased our temporary discouragement. But it is high time we recovered and faced the fact that business is improving steadily and will continue to improve.

"This improvement, as several exhibitors have set forth in their telegrams, can be accelerated by playing big pictures. In fact, the quickest way to bring business back to normal is to play and produce better pictures than we have ever before given the public. An unusually large number of good pictures are scheduled for release this fall. Exhibitors should book these pictures early and play them to the limit, for concerted action along this line will bring the entire industry back to normal inside of a few weeks."

Brunet Plans Increased Activity

hibitor on every hand has been lowering his operating costs to meet the present situation, which places him in a most advantageous position, with increasing fall and winter box office receipts in the offing."

Questioned about the much discussed invasion of foreign films, Mr. Brunet is of the opinion that the average foreign production cannot possibly bear up under competition with the excellent American product.

"Of course, there will be an occasional foreign made product," Mr. Brunet cites, "that will do exceptionally well on the American market, but these will be few and far between. The American market need give itself no concern about any damage to its best interests because of this so-called 'foreign invasion.'

A FLYING THEATRE

What is believed to be the first aerial motion picture show, was given on board an eleven passenger hydroplane which flew at the Chicago Pageant of Progress. A Rothacker produced film comprised the first picture program, and was presented while the plane was 2,000 feet in the air. The picture was "Howdy Chicago." A. L. Parker, "publicity person" for Rothacker Film Co., staged the stunt to have a copy of the complaint so that he might take steps to effect a remedy in each particular case.

Zukor's Hearing Before M. P. T. O. A.

Another matter which Mr. Zukor assured the committee would receive his investigation is that of circuits, supplied by Paramount service, which upon entering new localities receive Paramount pictures to the exclusion of the older local independent houses, it was declared. Such cases like the others would have to be decided upon separately after proper investigation, declared Mr. Zukor.

Mr. Schmidt of Indianapolis and Mr. Pramer of Omaha both recited at length their experiences with various Paramount officials in the field, citing particular instances to support their contentions of alleged injustice and discrimination. Mr. Schmidt was particularly vigorous in denouncing what he termed the "arrogance" of some Paramount exchange officials in their relations with the exhibitors of their territories. Mr. Pramer told in detail of a "Chautauqua Week" which had been staged by a Paramount manager in Tecumseh," Neb. In conducting this "Chautauqua Week," said Mr. Pramer, the local exhibitor was charged a prohibitive price for Paramount service and he then had to witness the spectacle of a Paramount manager sponsoring a competing show in a nearby barn under the auspices of the local school and church authorities.

The National Association also came in for some airing. After Mr. Zukor had scored the intrusion of censorship into the business of the producer, Mr. Cohen rejoined that the producers could blame the National Association for the introduction of state censorship in New York. Mr. Cohen declared that the only effective remedy for obviating censorship is "the education of the public." He further stated that the M. P. T. O. was ready to launch such a campaign when they unwisely heeded the assurances of the National Association's leaders that censorship would not be effected in New York and abandoned their plan of appealing directly to the public.

Mr. Zukor deplored the lack of unanimity which he said existed among the producers and distributors and stated that at times producers and distributors had sent in their resignations when pressed for their share of the money in running the organization and supporting its enterprises.

At this point one of the committee-men naively suggested that the M. P. T. O. of A. conduct a campaign, a motion picture day, for example, in behalf of the producers and distributors.

Mr. Cohen further assailed the methods of the National Association by inquiring of Mr. Zukor by what authority did one of its leaders "cable President Wilson, pledging to him 17,000 screens of this country in helping to establish a League of Nations."

Mr. Zukor declared he hoped yet to see some sort of arrangement effected which would bring a committee of exhibitors, producers, and distributors together for the purpose of agreeing upon some one man, who ought to be a man of great legal mind, to represent the industry in all its branches and fight its battles whenever and wherever the occasion would arise.

Towards the close of the conference Mr. Zukor provoked some mirth by proclaiming in answer to a question put by Mr. Cohen:

"I tell you gentlemen, though you may not believe me, there is neither big brains nor big money in this business. If there were big brains and big money in it, this industry would not be in the condition that it finds itself in today."

This expression came from Mr. Zukor after he had held the attention of the members by a vigorous exposition of Famous Players-Lasky's entry into the exhibition field as a policy of self-protection. Censorship and the additional difficulties confronting the producer as a result of the arbitrary control of censors over his product had also been hit on during the course of Mr. Zukor's address to the committee.

Concerning the theatre acquisition activities of Famous Players-Lasky, Mr. Zukor emphatically reiterated:

"I am willing to go on record that the purchasing of theatres by our organization will be ordered stopped whenever other organizations do not threaten the free entrance of Paramount releases to the screen. But, now, what protection, what assurances are you going to give me?"

Mr. Zukor stated that it was the practice of an organization, made up of exhibitors, in influencing stars and directors to leave Famous Players-Lasky and in financing their productions that first caused his organization to acquire theatres for the exhibition of its releases as a necessary measure of self-protection. When asked to designate this organization by name, Mr. Zukor replied that those present could use their own judgment. He also explained further that he had no fault to find with any organization of exhibitors entering production. "They are perfectly within their rights," Mr. Zukor declared. But on the other hand he maintained Famous Players-Lasky should not be "picked on."

In closing Mr. Cohen re-stated the purpose of the Committee's presence:

"We are here to come to a better understanding of our mutual problems and to eliminate vicious practices. Moreover, I can assure you that the M. P. T. O. of A. is ready to co-operate with any move to advance the industry as a whole."

Mr. Zukor expressed full concurrence with this expression, and the meeting was adjourned until 11:00 A. M. Wednesday.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

Salesmanager H. E. Belford, of Richard Kipling Enterprises, left for New York Monday to close up state right contracts on the two series being released by that company, the Northwestern and the Western, six pictures of each of which will be released to exhibitors through state right exchanges during the year. The Southern Wisconsin, and Northern Illinois and Indiana rights on these two series already have been taken over by Joe Friedman, of Celebrated Players Film Corporation and a large percentage of the territory throughout the country has been disposed of.

George N. Gollos and Harold M. Gollos, of Gollos and Gollos, have the negative of "The Littlest Rebel," starring E. K. Lincoln, at the Chicago Rothacker Laboratory where this well known picture will be re-edited and given new art titles preparatory to having it state righted. The Gollos Brothers are enthusiastic over their big feature, "The Wandering Jew," which will open at Barbee's Theatre on September 14th for an indefinite run at advanced prices, and for which a spectacular prologue is being prepared.

Harry G. Ballance, assistant salesmanager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has arrived in Chicago to take charge of the office pending the appointment of a new district manager to fill the position made vacant by the sudden death of District Manager Joseph H. Gilday.

District Manager Herman Stein and Mrs. Stein, of Universal, left last Saturday for a week's motor trip through Michigan. Before returning from his brief vacation, Mr. stein expects to visit Detroit and other cities in that state.

Blaine Drum, Richard Kipling Enterprises' new star, has just finished his first picture for that organization and it will be released as one of the Northwestern series of features about October 1st.

The story is from the pen of Al Neitz, known as a powerful and virile writer, and from reports reaching Chicago it is one of the best pictures of the type to be released on the independent market.

General Sales Manager H. E. Belford reports sales on the two Kipling series, the Western and the Northwestern, going along at top-notch and that the outlook for Independent Month and fall business generally is excellent.

Among the territories recently sold on these two series are: Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to the R. D. Lewis Film Company of Dallas, Texas; Iowa and Nebraska to the Reelcraft Film Company of Davenport, Iowa; and Southern Wisconsin, Northern Illinois and Indiana to the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois have pledged their co-operation to the Illinois Women's Athletic Club in its nation-wide campaign against the showing of a photoplay starring Clara Smith Hamon.

Secretary W. D. Burford, in writing to Mrs. James H. Keely, president of the Women's Organization, enclosed a copy of the resolution condemning the showing of the Clara Smith Hamon picture, passed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois at their convention in Chicago on April 11th and 12th, and in part said:

"We wish to assure your organization that we will do everything within our power to prevent the showing of this, or any other picture of similar type, upon the screens of Illinois. Our organization extends over the entire state and we are sending circular letters to our entire membership warning them against this picture.

"We will be glad to co-operate with your organization in every way possible to prevent the showing of this picture. However, there are some theatres in Chicago, particularly in the loop, who do not belong to our organization, who are apparently seeking sensational films of this type.

"We believe that with your help this picture can be stopped from showing, not only in Chicago but in the entire state."

Maurice Hellman, short subject manager for Universal's Chicago territory, states that he has the distinction of having made the first film contract for Balaban & Katz's new theatre, the Chicago, which is scheduled to open some time in September. The contract signed up covers the International Film Service.

Jerome Saffrom, who for some time past has been manager of the St. Louis exchange of Robertson-Cole, is scheduled to arrive in Chicago this week to become local salesmanager. Manager Gallas also announces that J. W. Rosseau has joined his staff as a salesman and will cover country territory.

T. C. Braun left this week for a brief business visit to Los Angeles and the west coast. He recently has been acting as manager for Smiling Billy Mason, who opens a series of personal appearances in St. Louis this week, and it is rumored may become personal representative for another well known film star.

Associated Producers claim an unusual record in booking three of their big feature pictures into both the Tivoli and Riviera, "Mother O' Mine," having been shown at both houses this week, "Foolish Matrons," last week, and "The Ten Dollar Raise" being booked to be shown the week of August 28th.

Manager Cecil Maberry, of Goldwyn, who has just returned from a visit to many of the key centers in the central west, reports exhibitors everywhere are noting a marked increase in business, and that the general feeling as to conditions is greatly improved with practically all showmen predicting a splendid Fall and Winter business. Mr. Maberry reports that the two big Goldwyn features, "Old Nest," scheduled for release September 11th, and "Dangerous Curve Ahead," which will be released October 2nd, have already been booked by eighty per cent of the first runs in the territory, eighty per cent of the second runs and eighty per cent of the third runs, and that the total business contracted for by Goldwyn's Chicago exchange to date is far ahead of that on the books up to October 1st in 1921.

Divisional Manager J. M. Duncan, of Vitagraph, has returned from a three week's business trip during which he made visits to Detroit, Minneapolis, Omaha and other important film centers.

Jake Cooper, of the Twentieth Century Theatre, one of the veteran and popular members of the industry in Chicago, was stricken with paralysis last Friday, and is in a very serious condition.

Sunday, August 14th, was one of the best days Chicago motion picture houses have experienced in some time and many of the theatres reported that they held out crowds during the afternoon and evening. The Roosevelt with "The Affairs of Anatol," as the feature did the best business of its career Sunday according to reports more than eight thousand five hundred people having paid admissions during the afternoon and evening, which is about all that house can possibly accommodate.

Celebrated Players Film Corporation inaugurated the late Summer and Fall season of big trade showings on Monday afternoon when a large crowd of exhibitors and others connected with the industry gathered at Aryan Grotto to view "The Miracles of the Jungle," serials, one of the new Roy Cummings releases, and other of the pictures which will be released by Celebrated during the early Fall. A string orchestra played the pictures. This is the first time that the Aryan Grotto had been used for this purpose and the unusually large crowd which attended pronounced it a very favorable place to hold a pre view. "The Miracles Of The Jungle," is one of the best serials ready for release and evoked very favorable comment from the audience. President Joe Friedman of Celebrated thoughtfully provided cigars for all those who attended.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

Conquest of Canaan—

Very good in every respect. Great audience picture and box office magnet (West.)

Did not regard "The Conquest of Canaan" as one of Meighan's best but the feature pulled to hold fair business. (Middle West.)

Not up to Meighan's latest productions. Disappointed many spectators. Business average. (East.)

Went over good and drew good business. (West.)

Deception—

A very interesting historical film with some excellent acting. The pageantry scenes are wonderful. Played to a big business. (Middle West.)

Very fine picture with strong appeal to better class audiences. Played to good business for week. (Middle West.)

The Great Moment—

One of the best box-office attractions we have had this season. Broke the straight attendance record for our house for the year." (South.)

Played to very good business the first week and expected to last two weeks or more. Star very popular here. "Great Moment" considered good vehicle for her. Theme somewhat unusual and interesting. Parts well taken by principals. (South.)

Best picture and drawing card we have had for the past three months. Kept it over a second week. (Middle West.)

Gloria Swanson is becoming more popular here each week and the picture consequently did a good business (Middle West.)

White and Unmarried—

Meighan is always a favorite and he scored big with us in this picture. Good house and satisfied patrons. (Middle West.)

Wealth—

Very pleasing picture with good box office results. (East.)

The Woman God Changed—

Very good picture and was highly appreciated. Weather is exceedingly inclement, many fans are out of the city on the Gulf beaches, but "The Woman God Changed" had a fairly good run. (South.)

Proxies—

Ordinary picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Too Much Speed—

Wallace Reid favored at this house and "Too Much Speed" pleased our patrons. Did excellent business during its run here. (Middle West.)

Appearances—

A somewhat unusual title and a picture which is a little different from the rest. Drew a good attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Life—

Dandy picture but receipts only fair. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Stranger Than Fiction—

Much like a serial. Katherine MacDonald a drawing card in this film. (Middle West.)

Audience liked it. Intensely interesting but theme oddly portrayed. (South.)

Lessons in Love—

Very fine picture with excellent receipts. (East.)

Salvation Nell—

Didn't do any too well for us. Pleased only fairly well. (West.)

Scrap Iron—

Big picture from entertainment standpoint and drew much extra business. (West.)

Nobody—

Seemed to go over fairly well but was nothing unusual. (Middle West.)

Playthings of Destiny—

"A trite and hackneyed story, star is locing her grip on my audiences, and a production not above the average. Busines very bad." (South.)

The Sign on the Door—

An attraction which openly defied summer business depression and played to a good business all week. (Middle West.)

Wedding Bells—

An average Constance Talmadge picture—pure farce. Did well considering that it played in opposition to "Caligari" and "Deception." (Middle West.)

Courage—

Above the average picture, well acted. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

The Great Adventure—

While there appears to be nothing especially good about this production, it has no particularly bad features and on the whole might be classed among the good average pictures. Business was a bit dull with us for the week. (South.)

REALART

Moonlight and Honeysuckle—

Knock-out of a Western heart interest story. Good business. (Middle West.)

They liked this one. It appealed to the hot weather palate and went over nicely. (East.)

Such a Little Queen—

Not up to standard—receipts poor and much below average. (East.)

A Private Scandal—

An ordinary production which was aided greatly by Larry Semon in "The Bakery," in doing an average week's business. (Middle West.)

The Furnace—

Rather inappropriate title for warm season, but splendid picture and drew fairly good business. (South.)

Sheltered Daughters—

Only a fair production, although it was a good drawing card for the week. (Middle West.)

A Heart to Let—

"Started off slow, but finished up with a fairly good week's business. (South.)

The March Hare—

This one is somewhat different from the average and it won the approval of patrons, doing a good week's business. (Middle West.)

METRO

Uncharted Seas—

A very interesting picture which was well received. (Middle West.)

The Last Card—

A good picture that went over nice. (East.)

Good picture to average business. (West.)

Life's Darn Funny—

Nice little story with star redeeming herself somewhat after "Home Stuff." Attendance good. Gareth Hughes well cast. (South.)

Out of the Chorus—

Picture is good average. Possesses no especial merits, but it went over fairly well and proved right satisfactory on the whole. Business was about as well as could be expected. (South.)

FOX

The Road Demon—

Just a fair feature playing to not quite average business. (West.)

The Sailor—

The best thing Clyde Cook has done. (Middle West.)

The Face at Your Window—

Tied up with the local Ku Klux, whom I found more than ready to co-operate—and cleaned up. Had full houses throughout week, while other houses in town were playing to empty seats. (South.)

After Your Own Heart—

One of Tom Mix's best. Fine business. (Middle West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

The Ten Dollar Raise—

An excellent picture which carries a wide appeal. Did the best week's business in some time. (Middle West.)

Home Talent—

Consider this an excellent hot-weather attraction. Business good. (South.)

We played this on a double bill, but we could have done just as good or possibly better with it alone.

Foolish Matrons—

"Foolish Matrons" not a great picture but seemed to please the majority of patrons at this house and we did a good business with it. (Middle West.)

A Broken Doll—

Monte Blue draws a fine flapper audience for me, and we did good business on this. (South.)

I Am Guilty—

Did good business for the week and seemed to please. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Don't Neglect Your Wife—

Some effective newspaper advertising caused this one to go over great, playing to a big week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Cabinet of Dr. Caligari—

Opinion was about evenly divided as to whether this was the biggest joke or the most artistic picture in years. However, it certainly attracted attention and caused more comment than ten ordinary pictures. Incidentally, it ranked with the best box office attractions in six months. (Middle West.)

Australian Theatre Builds Excellent Lobby Displays

That American showmen have nothing on at least one Australian publicity director is proven by an inspection of the cut on the opposite page showing two lobby displays originated by Phil Gell of the Crystal theatre, Sydney, Australia, and the following description of it in text.

The lobby entrance of the Crystal Palace is 48 feet wide allowing plenty of room for unusual stunts.

One of Mr. Gell's recent lobby displays was that arranged for the showing of "A Small Town Idol." A beaver board cut-out of a horse with outstretched neck and extended back leg, measuring forty-two feet from tip of the nose to hind hoof was mounted in the centre of the entrance. A cut-out of Ben Turpin hinged to the horse and mounted on wire so that it bounced up and down in a weird manner, a cootie that bored in the hind leg, a wobbling tongue, a bobbing tail, and a glaring green eye (an effect gained by a flashing electric bulb in back of green glaze completed a display that made it the talk of Sydney.

Neat and Inexpensive Window Display Used in Brooklyn

Maxwell M. Chetkin who operates a chain of neighborhood theatres in Brooklyn, N. Y., is a firm believer in advertising and exploitation, and to back up his belief in showmanship he has given free rein to Joseph E. Brown and Harry Spangler, managers of his Electric theatre, seating 600 people, at Broadway and Lafayette Avenue. When the weather is pleasant, the pictures are shown in an airdome operated in connection with the theatre.

Along, narrow foyer or inner lobby permits the display of a fine advance showing of posters, lobby and photographs, but the point of greatest interest to the public is a large show window at one side of the entrance, facing Broadway.

In this window are displayed scenes reproduced from productions about to be shown. Many effective displays have been built at such low cost as to excite wonderment. One in particular for "The Beach of Dreams."

This display represents a rugged, storm-swept beach. In the foreground is a cut-out of a man sinking in the quicksand, while just beyond him the waves seem to be rolling in and breaking on the beach. A miniature lighthouse illuminated with a flashing lamp stands on a promontory, while an ill-fated ship is seen in distress on a sunken reef.

The cost of this display will interest all exhibitors. Boys of the neighborhood were sent to a nearby beach for the sand, and the rocks came from a construction job nearby. The sand cost two passes to the show and forty cents cash for carfare.

The figure of the man sinking in the quicksand was an outcut from a poster, and the cost of poster and the mounting was ninety cents. Cardboard for the signs and the lighthouse cost fifty cents. Old material was used to make the waves, and cost nothing. The lighthouse illimination, and that of the window cost sixty cents, making a total of $2.40.

Messrs. Brown and Spangler have effected an arrangement with a nearby clothing house by which that concern furnishes to them wax figures

Walking Advertisement on "Twin Beds," a Hit

The old adage, "Take up your bed and walk" was put to practical use by Joe Eyerly, of the Lyric theatre, Newton, Ia., recently in exploiting the "Twin Beds."

Joe had two miniature beds constructed in such a manner that they could be carried easily. Then he secured the services of two boys who carried the beds through the principal streets of Newton and on each prominent corner the boys would stop, sit down on the street and give the illusion that they were laying in the beds. The head and footboards of the bed were lettered calling attention to the title of the picture and also to the fact that the feature would be shown at the Lyric theatre.

Although this was an inexpensive manner of advertising, it helped Joe wonderfully in putting the picture over.

Patterson Has Special "Highbrow" Mailing List

For more than two years Willard C. Patterson, managing director of the new Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, has been compiling a special mailing list of people prominent in literary work or some other line of the seven arts.

This list was utilized to excellent advantage in exploiting "Without Benefit of Clergy," playing a recent engagement at the Metropolitan. A carefully worded and very well written letter, multigraphed and filled in very carefully on the typewritten part, was mailed to each of the names on this list, telling them of the play date and a bit about the picture. The result was an increased attendance of the sort of people that are seldom seen in the motion picture theatre.

Use Live Geese to Exploit "The Wild Goose"

An effective yet inexpensive bit of exploitation for "The Wild Goose" was recently put over by Manager Hector M. Louis.

To begin with, he sent a neatly printed post card to the several hundred names on his mailing list heralding the advent of "The Wild Goose" and invited them to visit the Delmar during the "Goose's" stay.

Then he hired the service of two young boys who walked behind unfettered geese through the streets of the neighborhood. Each boy bore a canvas sign on his back declaring that the Goose—"The Wild Goose"—had arrived and was stationed at the Delmar theatre.

Scrap Iron Serves as Legal Tender at the Liberty

As an exploitation stunt, Manager Steve Willitt, of the Liberty theatre, Astoria, Ore., announced it would admit, free of charge, at the matinee performance with which his showing of "Scrap Iron" was inaugurated, any child 14 years of age or under, who would bring to the Liberty theatre with him at the time of the matinee a piece of scrap iron weighing not less than five pounds. "Scrap Iron, Scrap Iron, Scrap Iron" was the theme through all the advertising. "Bring a hunk of "Scrap Iron" and be admitted free to "Scrap Iron."

The thing caught the fancy of youth and age as well. Adults sought and produced scrap iron for their children, or told them where it could be procured. The youth of the city went on an extended hunt for the waste material which had become legal tender to the extent of one free admission to the Liberty for the day.

Franklin Stages Prologue for "Traveling Salesman"

When Harold B. Franklin presented "The Traveling Salesman," at Shea's Criterion, Buffalo, he put on a most attraactive prologue consisting of a reproductioon of a Pullman car interior which was used as a background for the Criterion quartette. The members of this organization appeared in costume, one as a porter, one as a conductor and two as traveling salesmen. The quartette sang several popular songs, accompanied by the Criterion orchestra. The stunt was enthusiastically applauded at each performance.

Lancaster "Talks" His Exploitation Over

Exploitation of pictures at the Apollo theatre, Gloucester City, N. J., is an applied art, Manager Thomas K. Lancaster specializing in a branch of salesmanship that few exhibitors are able to follow because of a lack of training and perhaps a natural aptitude, the personal talk about coming bills. Mr. Lancaster is an old trouper who has spent nearly all his life on the vaudeville stage as a monologist. Consequently he is able to appear before the audiences with a "speel" that gets instant attention and in fact is an entertainment number in itself.

Mr. Lancaster looks over his coming attraction press book and gets an idea of the talking points of each picture. Then at a specified time he makes his entrance on the stage with all the care and professional skill that he would if he were presenting one of his old acts. The audiences are told what to expect in the way of entertainment with a bit of humor thrown in and no stereotyped phrases to create a bad impression. The result is the highest class of exploitation, word of mouth advertising.

Mr. Lancaster is also a great believer in the efficiency of well distributed heralds. He gets out well written throwaways on every feature played with a few words for the smaller numbers on the bill and the vaudeville numbers. In the lobby he uses the regular paper, photos, etc., and also patronizes the newspapers liberally.

The Apollo opened about a year and a half ago and Mr. Lancaster has been manager since that time. He is constantly on the job and makes it his business to be on speaking terms with most of his patrons. He asks them for opinions of the shows, chats with them on current subjects and if a customer has been absent for any length remembers to inquire the reason, etc. The result is that the Apollo always plays to good business and is an institution in Gloucester City.

Whitfield Has Matinee for Children

A matinee given free to the kiddies by Manager R. P. Whitfield resulted in much word of mouth advertising for the serial, "The White Horseman," when the opening episode was shown at the Lyric theatre, San Angelo, Texas.

The Magnolia Confectionery located next door to the theatre printed tickets which entitled the holder to an ice cream cone. These were distributed to children purchasing tickets to the performance.

Being a member of the Kiwanis Club, Whitfield arranged to have the regular weekly luncheon held in the theatre at which time there was a special showing of the picture. Sixteen prizes all donated by Kiwanian merchants were distributed among the club members.

Canadian Editor Kills Two Birds with One Stone

To kill two birds with one stone is practically the reason why Bert Amond, city editor of the Recorder-Times of Brockville, Ontario, is also ticket-taker at the one moving picture theatre in the city, the Brock theatre. In the daytime, Mr. Amond is to be found at his desk in the newspaper office. Any evening, except Sunday, he is on duty at the entrance to the theatre. In this way, Amond really has two jobs and two weekly pay envelopes but there is another angle to the situation.

One job really helps the other. Mr. Amond points out that the theatre is the one live place in the city at nights and nearly everybody in Brockville attends the theatre at least once a week. This is where he meets them at regular intervals, gets to know them personally—and secures the news of the hour for tomorrow's paper.

Mr. Amond declared that he had been with the theatre before he entered newspaper life and he just continued to be the doorman at the Brock theatre after he had joined the staff of the Recorder-Times, which, by the way, recently celebrated its 100th anniversary.

"I always carry my pad and pencil with me and am always ready to jot down a few names or notes for a story," said Mr. Amond. "I meet everybody here and everybody knows where to find me during the evenings. If a prominent local resident attends the theatre in company with one or two strangers, Amond knows that the regular patron has a visitor or two from out-of-town. The police pass the door every few minutes and if there has been any excitement down the street it isn't long before the 'cop' trots along to the theatre and breaks the news."

And that's the way the press keeps turning in Brockville.

'Buried Treasure" Hunt Pulled Once More

A tie-up with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in which Seattle merchants contributed about $500, and the Strand theatre $50, put "Buried Treasure" over with big receipts. A. Mike Vogel, the Paramount exploiteer, arranged with seventeen merchants for ads in the Post-Intelligencer. The firm's names were so disarranged in lettering that you couldn't make them out. In the ads the firm's each printed their slogan to give some clue to their identity.

The Post-Intelligencer got the credit for giving away fifty dollars in prizes, although the theatre paid the money. There was much interest in the contest and the prize winning answers were exhibited in a display frame in the lobby. The attendance was large for this time of the year.

This is a window display secured for "Forbidden Fruit" during its showing at the Gladmer theatre, Lansing, Mich.

McCormick's "Dream Street" Prologue Makes Hit

The setting was an imaginary street, with huge crimson columns, and steps leading into the doorway of a castle, the castle representing "The House of Worldly Lure." A narrator appears upon the deserted street. He introduces, in turn, the "Three Virtues," dressed in white; the "Golden Lure," meaning passion; and the "Shepherd of Mankind." In a series of pantomime, the "Virtues" are attracted by the "Golden Lure," and are about to enter the "House of Worldly Lure" with him when the "Shepherd of Mankind" appears, tears off the beautiful mask worn by the "Golden Lure," and shows his hideous face. The "Shepherd of Mankind" appears as a "Shining Light." The "Shining Light" reveals the true spirit of passion hidden behind the "Golden Lure" mask, and by his intensity, causes him to die. The "Three Virtues" pass out into the night.

A cut showing the stage setting used for this number and the characters playing the roles appears on this page.

It was in the matter of lighting that this prologue number made its special appeal to the Cleveland fans. Many artistic and pleasing combinations of color were achieved.

Weld Designs Clever Exploitation Display

Arthur E. Weld, manager of the Strand theatre, Cedar Rapids, Ia., conceived a clever design for the marquise of the theatre during the run of "Paying the Piper."

The display consisting of a dancing figure pirouetting on facsimiles of the Cedar Rapids buildings was made in duplicate the two signs, covering both sides of the marquise. The title "Paying the Piper" was illuminated by colored lamps.

"Peck's Bad Boy" cut out used by the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore.

Grauman Ties Up with Los Angeles Music Store

Here's a hunch for theatre exhibitors who are having a hard time putting over window exploitation. Sid Grauman is the man who has stumbled on this new idea. and it is getting over strong in Los Angeles, where Grauman's Million Dollar and Rialto theatres are profiting from the scheme.

Hooking up with music stores is the hunch. At his theatres, Sid Grauman each week has an orchestral overture and two organ numbers, beside what other musical acts he may program. Mr. Grauman wondered why he had not thought of lining up these musicians with local music shops. For example, when Henry Murtagh played "Maybe" on the organ, he could see no reason why the music shop featuring "Maybe" shouldn't meet him halfway. So he called in James M. Fidler, his publicity director, and told him to hook up with the music stores.

Result, each week the Grauman theatres are lined up with one or more musical shop in Los Angeles. In return for newspaper notices bearing the name of the song played, the song shop gives the theatre and musican featuring their number big space in the show windows.

Fairbury, Ill., Uses Novelty Post Cards with Success

There were quite a number of suspicious wives in Fairbury, Ill., recently, due to the fact that they had received cards through the mail bearing this inscription:

"Do you believe your husband when he tells you he has been sitting up with a sick friend. Learn the Truth About Husbands —Central Theatre—June 8th and 9th."

Prologue Company Used for Lobby Ballyhoo

The carnival scenes in Venice, an important part of "Carnival" were utilized by the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago during the recent run of the above mentioned picture.

A company of dancers, as shown in the accompanying cut were costumed like the characters appearing in the carnival scenes of the picture and used both in a prologue and in the lobby as a ballyhoo.

The prologue was an artistic ballet number but when the company retired to the lobby the Ascher press agents announced that they would be allowed "to have the time of their young lives."

The result was a daily period of unrestrained merriment, in which toy balloons popped, confetti was thrown about and other "hokum" stunts indulged in to the delight of both the performers and the crowds who soon collected to witness each "carnival" event.

This is a picture of the "Carnival" prologue performers who aided in the exploitation o the picture when presented at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago

Jazz Jail Birds Arouse Town

Herrin, Ill., is a small city, but it has big ideas when it comes to the appreciation of wide-awake showmanship, such as is exhibited by John Marlow of the Hippodrome, one of the prettiest little show houses in the state.

Marlow recently put across a novel and amusing stunt for the exploitation of "Outside the Law," which attracted the attention of every man, woman and child in the community.

He obtained a jazz band of several pieces. Then he had a cage built on the body of a three-ton truck. In the cage, in convict's clothes, he placed the drummer of the band. On the seat with the driver was the cornetist, dressed as a cop, and at the back of the truck, in prison keeper's garb, was another member of the band.

This combination of jazz and justice covered every street highway and byway of Herrin and awoke echoes which had slumbered since P. T. Barnum died. Result: All box-office records for the Hippodrome were smashed to smithereens during the showing of the Priscilla Dean masterpiece.

McKeeport, Pa., Theatre Holds Horse Shoe Show

As an exploitation medium for "The City of Silent Men" in which Thomas Meighan, the "good luck star," plays the stellar role the Lyric theatre, McKeesport, Pa., conducted a "lucky" horse shoe" stunt.

All children under ten years of age who presented at the box office an old horse shoe (the emblem of good luck) were admitted free of charge.

Philadelphia Palace Has Attractive Lobby

An attractive and unusual lobby display for "The Man of the Forest" at the Palace theatre, Philadelphia, drew many patrons, during the week of July 11, despite the great heat. In fact, the cool and pleasant appearance was just exactly right for drawing patrons' attention to the fact that the interior of the theatre was much cooler than the street.

The box office was built up into a little log cabin, all sides being covered with bark and artificial green leaves. Artificial trees, mostly oaks, stood all along the pavement, allowing just sufficient space between for convenient ingress and egress to the theatre. Inside, the darkened lobby, which is not large, had its walls covered with bark and leaves, and more trees stood before the doors leading into the theatre. The general effect was highly attractive, and the coolness of the green leaves and the darkened interior added greatly to the charm of the appeal.

Kessler and Mayer Give "Horse Shoe" Show

J. D. Kessler, manager of the New Alhambra theatre, Canton, O. and Joseph H. Mayer, exploitation representative for Universal, put over an exploitation campaign for the opening bill at the New Alhambra after a complete remodeling of the house that got the attention of every picture fan in the city.

The picture was "Once to Every Woman." The exploiters made their appeal to both young and old. For the youngsters, it was announced that admission would be by horse-shoe for the first Sunday matinee. As a result more than 6000 horse-shoes were deposited in the lobby of the theatre. It was a good omen for the new house. This stunt got front page publicity in the Canton newspapers.

For the older people, it was announced that all mothers fifty years of age or over would be guests of the house during the first four days' run of the feature.

Hundreds of Canton's matrons availed themselves of this invitation and left the theatre to spread the praises of the picture and of the new, comfortable theatre.

Adams Has Scheme for Aiding Dull Days

J. H. Adams' Strand theatre, Nashville, Tenn., has a good plan to stimulate business during dull periods.

He has contracted with forty merchants to pay him $25 a week for 500 tickets to be given to customers purchasing 25c to $1.00 worth of merchandise on Tuesdays and Thursdays which he has designated as "Merchants' Days."

Mr. Adams figures the other four days will average up and also that the crowds on the special days will draw extra business from the passers-by attracted by the jam at the front of the house.

Portsmouth Theatre Builds Fine Lobby Display

The manager of the Olympic theatre, Portsmouth, Va., gave "Prisoners of Love," one of the best theatre front displays yet given that production by a one-day house.

By means of painted beaverboard he turned the front of the Olympic theatre into a stone prison wall with two arched doorways leading into the theatre. The ticket seller's window, midway between the two doors, was barred like a prison window, while on a level, with the tops of the doors were two other small barred windows.

The imitation stone wall did not reach to the top of the lobby that space being reserved for a banner advertising the showing. Posters and framed stills were used liberally in front of the prison wall.

Richmond Falls for "Too Much Speed" Idea

Another example of the ease with which "Too Much Speed" is hooked up with safety first campaigns occurred in Richmond, Va., where Herman Phillips, the Paramount exploiteer, co-operated with the Richmond News-Leader for a "Too Much Speed Campaign."

Phillips broke down the long-standing conservatism of the leading paper in Virginia, and by playing on the level, the editor was able to sell him on the idea.

The Monte Stone Truck Co. was tied up and displayed "Too Much Speed" banners on every vehicle they had on the floor and in the garage. The paper paid for signs which were put on a half-ton truck. This was driven by one of the leading society girls and driven down Broad street, the town's main thoroughfare. A parade was also staged with every car on the market. All were draped with banners and teaser one-sheets of the warning hand. Harry Bernstein, manager of the Wells theatres, Richmond, co-operated with Phillips on the stunt. The News-Leader, which is said to have the largest circulation in Virginia, printed front page stories of the campaign. "Too Much Speed" was used as much as possible in the text of the stories and in the headlines.

Stellings Gets Out New Herald Novelties

Ernest Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, Wilmington, N. C., is a firm believer in the effectiveness of novelty heralds as exploitation mediums.

One of Mr. Stellings recent novelties was a six-page folder affair, the pages being about three inches square.

On page 1 was, "Some Scramble Inside."

Great Falls Merchants Find Window Tie-Ups Beneficial

The "Deception" campaign in Grand Falls, Mont., has established the precedent of window tie-ups and other co-operative feats between the Grand theatre and the Merchants. A. Mike Vogel, the Paramount exploiteer who helped arrange the campaign with Will Steege, manager of the theatre, said he found the merchants solidly against window tie-ups. "Why should we advertise the other man's business?" was the line of the argument.

Vogel followed the "Deception" campaign stunt now being worked in several towns, and bound the merchants together into a "One Hundred Per Cent Quality League," in which every article was guaranteed against deception either in representation or prices. The merchants welcomed the idea because they had been trying to live down the "profiteer" odium which they inherited from the war.

The window cards displayed were, of course, joint—reading the advertisement of the theatre. The merchants were glad to get together on the watchword, "No Deception." They were so pleased with the results they have placed their windows on the ever-eligible list. One street ballyhoo stunt was a street car which was occupied with a brass band and was driven on every track in the city. Large streamers advertised the picture.

Frost Puts Over Another Cooperative Double Truck

Assistant Manager Frost, of the Consolidated Amusement Co., of Tampa, Fla., has put over another tie-up. This time it is four full pages on "If Women Only Knew."

Using the title as a play of words to start the ads, he covers pretty near all lines of business including automobiles, restaurants, dry cleaning, laundry, banks, swimming pool, tailor, shu fixery, and even a barber shop.

Cooperative Newspaper Tie-up Put Over at Tampa

Assistant Manager Frost, of the Consolidated Amusement Co., who operates the downtown theatres in Tampa, Fla., recently put over "The Traveling Salesman" at the Victory theatre in a big way.

Frost hustled around to the merchants in the city and secured six pages of co-operative ads for a newspaper sales campaign. Most of these ads, written by Frost, were worded to bring the name of the picture out prominently, and in many of them were cuts of the star.

Trailer for "Mother O' Mine" Used in New Way

Getting full advertising use out of a trailer by arranging so that it was a free exhibition continuously for seventeen hours a day, for a week prior to the showing "Mother O' Mine" at the T. and D. theatre, Oakland, Cal., is a stunt which Frank Costello, manager, put over recently.

Mr. Costello procured a window in a vacant store near the business center of the theatre. A transparent screen was installed, and a small portable projecting machine with a 1000-watt lamp was used in back of it. The regular trailer provided by the distributing company was looped into a continuous strip. The machine ran steadily from seven in the morning until midnight for the entire week

Big "Home Talent" Campaign at Cincinnati

Edwan Forrest Young, who has just severed his connection with the Lyric theatre in Cincinnati to accept one as exploitation manager of the Alhambra, Isis and Lyric theatres owned by Charles Olsen in Indianapolis, held an exploitation carnival as a means of acquainting the patrons of the Lyric with the merits of "Home Talent."

He made arrangements with the women's clubs of the city to open stalls in the lobby of the theatre where candy, pastry and other things manufactured by "home talent" could be offered for the whole week of the showing.

The American Legion was interested in a campaign for an increase in membership through an idea for a "home talent" week, the idea being that every home boy who had shown his talent as a soldier could be reached. The American Legion band of fifty pieces led a parade each evening which terminated at the theatre where a recruiting speech was made by a "home talent" orator.

Mr. Young got in touch with the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. to interest them in supplying the talent for a "home talent" night at the theatre. So many applications were received that those applying for a chance to appear had to be refused after Tuesday. The results which were obtained through the "home talent" night, it was the Friday the theatre was nearly mobbed, led Mr. Young to regret that he hadn't planned it as a nightly attraction.

The opening of "Home Talent" was announced by the releases of six hundred balloons from the top of the theatre building, each one of them carrying a ticket good for the admission to any matinee showing of any "home talent" person, i. e. a person born in Cincinnati. This was the only stunt which cost the theatre anything, $9.00 being spent on the balloons and $2.00 for the gas that floated them.

Wendt Has Another Exploitation Novelty

A week previous to the showing of "Such a Little Queen" at the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, O., Harold F. Wendt, Director of Publicity, distributed among the theatre's patrons playing cards on which was printed a picture of the star and an inscription which read, "Better than a Royal Flush—Constance Binney in 'Such a Little Queen.'" The novelty of the little herald got the attention of Rivoli patrons in a way that many a much more expensive stunt would not have done, and the result was much added interest in the "Such a Little Queen" showing.

Black Tries the Aeroplane Advertising Stunt

The stunt was pulled in the usual way. A machine was secured from out of town and the flight and the auspices advertised in all the papers. During the flights, two demonstrations on consecutive days being arranged, 100 passes good for admission to the Quincy, where "A Rookie's Return" and "Beau Revel" had been booked for the week were released. Manager Black was a passenger on both trips and secured a lot of front page publicity in relating his experience.

This lobby display for "God's Country and the Law" was originated by William C. Shults, manager of the Majestic theatre, Springfield, O.

Hooper Prints His Own Throw-aways

A. B. Hooper, Jr., manager of the Princess theatre, Albertville, Ala., sends in a novel herald, a reproduction of which appears on this page, which he says keeps the printing expenses down to a minimum and answers every purpose of the job press.

The illustration will explain itself. Mr. Hooper gets his throwaways out on a Roto-speed duplicator. The cut illustrations are traced from those found in press sheets, etc. The text as indicated is type written and hand lettered.

Since January 1st, thirty thousand hand bills have been printed on the machine.

Latta Builds Inexpensive Lobby Display

One of the many attractive but inexpensive lobby displays which C. J. Latta, manager of the Lyric and Empress theatres, Harlan, Ia., has recently used is shown by the accompanying cut.

The display in this instance was for "Forbidden Fruit." Besides the lobby display Mr. Latta also put over considerable other exploitation for the picture.

He tied up with a local ice cream parlor for "Forbidden Fruit" dishes of various sorts, plastered the local store windows with "Forbidden Fruit" paper, pasted advertising stickers on a bushel of apples, and gave them out at the door, etc.

"Open Air Prologue" Staged at Seattle

From Seattle comes the story of a new type of prologue. The Strand theatre had booked "Wet Gold" and planned an introductory number for the stage, in which a local diver was to don his deep sea costume and submerge to the bottom of a huge glass tank, there to give a demonstration of his profession.

The stage, however would not accommodate the tank and consequently the stunt was transferred to the theatre lobby, and labeled "Open Air Prologue."

The prologue which ran about fifteen minutes attracted great crowds. After seeing the act persons who entered the theatre were just in time to catch the beginning of the feature picture.

In order to make the event more realistic, the theatre lobby was decorated to resemble an undersea garden, and the tank itself was filled with natural marine growths, as well as the replica of a sunken ship and hundreds of small gold pieces.

A cut showing the diving apparatus and the tank with the diver about to submerge appears on this page.

Teaser Idea Specialty Number Staged by Grauman

The word "Xochitl" pronounced "Sochil" or "Social" Toltec Indian language meaning flower, was the name given a prologue number arranged by Sid Grauman, of Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., and Ted Shawn who operates a dancing school in the city. The odd title attracted considerable attention from the theatre's patrons, for it seemed to suggest something different.

The act consisted of a series of dances representing the Toltec tribe of Indians (a race said to be older than the Aztecs of Mexico), in which the flower idea was carried out except that the people were costumed after the summer of the ancient Indian tribe of Mexico.

Good Small Town "Love Special" Stunt

Exploitation at the Orpheum theatre, Atchison, Kansas, is a part time job which John W. Creamer, projectionist, puts over when not at work in the booth.

With Manager Ingledue to advise Mr. Creamer has originated many inexpensive exploitation ideas that brought extra dollars to the Orpheum box office. One of Mr. Creamer's recent stunts is a lobby display for "The Love Special." The dome of the ticket booth was removed leaving a flat surface. On this space a three-sheet cut-out was placed in the center of a circular toy train track. Side wings were built to resemble mountains. On the track, a toy train borrowed from a local store, was placed. Each of the three cars carried an appropriate sign advertising the picture.

The display was artistically lighted and was a never-ending business attractor.

Minneapolis Theatre Adapts Sandwich Man Idea

The Blue Mouse theatre of Minneapolis adapted the sandwich man idea in exploiting "A Small Town Idol," arranging with four boys to carry placards advertising the attraction through the residential sections of the city.

The afternoons were chosen as the times when matrons and other members of the family who were at home would be seeking the front porches and lawns to rest from their daily tasks and also to escape the heat of indoors.

The theatre backed up this novel scheme with a truck loaded with the comedy cut-outs from the production which paraded the downtown district and attracted all the people in the city who had not stayed home.

Red Lined Extra Used for "Kazan"

The red overlined newspaper stunt was used by Harold R. Kistler, manager of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, as exploitation for his showing of "Kazan."

BBoys were stationed on prominent corners in the shopping and business districts and distributed the papers. They were the current day's issue and were eagerly received and well read. The papers started early in the afternoon and the boys' supplies were constantly replenished until two thousand were all gone. And the effects began to be felt early Monday evening at the box office and continued throughout the week.

Scene from Picture Used for Prologue Basis

The scene in "The Midnight Bell," where the hero spends a night in the haunted church was used as a prologue suggestion by Manager Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre when this picture played the Strand.

The set consisted of a black "cyke" with three hidden apertures in the black drop. At right and left on the drop were three vaulted stained glass church windows. The effect was the interior of a church choir loft at night, the stage being left in semi-darkness. A balustrade such as fronts a choir loft was in front center stage.

White spots were thrown at points on the "cyke" where heads of three singers appeared through the slits in the "cyke" completing the illusion of flitting apparitions. As the spotlights shifted these heads would disappear the intermittent effect being produced of appearing and disappearing ghosts. The Strand Male trio who were the ghosts sang Leoni's "The Brownies."

Franseen's Auto Parade Gets Results

L. E. Franseen, of the Tivoli theatre, Beaumont, Texas, used an automobile parade to advertise "Straight From Paris," when it played his house.

Three days preceding the showing an automobile with a banner which read, "Straight," paraded the streets. The next day two cars the banners reading, "Straight From" and on the third day three, reading, "Straight From Paris," the third car carrying an additional banner inscribed "Clara Kimball Young's Latest, at the Tivoli Theatre," went over the route.

Guinan Productions in Demand

Postage stamp photos of Texas Guinan that are being distributed

THE offices of the Texas Guinan Productions reports the territory of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina was closed by the Eltabran Film Company of Atlanta, Ga., by telegraph within two hours after Mr. Brannon of that company read the announcement of the offering of these productions. Marion Kohn, of the Consolidated Film Corporation of Los Angeles and San Francisco, also closed on these productions for his territory of California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

Telegraphic and mail inquiries for terms and details with respect to the productions were received at the executive offices of the Texas Guinan company from states right buyers covering every territory in the United States and Canada.

This situation seems to belie the rumors current in some circles that the states right field was not in an altogether healthy condition. It seems further to prove the fact that the production and distribution of short-length dramas is being more and more concentrated in the hands of state right producers for state right distribution and that the production of features for the states right market will be along the lines of super-attractions rather than program features.

The Texas Guinan Productions have contracted with Mrs. Mildred Mareno Sledge, the popular writer on Western life, for six original stories to be written around the character of Texas Guinan, the locale of which is to be laid in the Far West and the Northwest. Mrs. Sledge has already delivered the first three stories, two of which deal with the Northwest Mounted Police and one with American Western characters.

Two Reel Westerns Are Selling Rapidly, Reports Company

Arrangements are being made for a tie-up with the Western newspaper circuit for the running of contests of a novel and unique character in connection with the showing of the Texas Guinan productions in the cities and towns where the members of such circuit operate newspapers.

A further novel form of advertising, emanating direct from the offices of the producing organization, is the circulation of a half-million postage-stamp photographs of Miss Guinan in her various poses in Western costume.

This is said to be possibly the first time in the history of short length states right subjects where the producer has engineered and gone to the expense of exploitation, to be carried on over a period beyond that embraced in the selling of the productions to states right exchanges. This is in line with the policy of the Texas Guinan Productions to continue their campaign of exploitation direct to the exhibitor for a period of twelve months after the release of the subjects, even though all territory is disposed of, and in keeping with this, it is the intention of the company to continue its trade paper advertising.

The progressive policy of the Texas Guinan Productions is built upon the theory that in order to maintain and increase the popularity of their star it is necessary that they relieve the local exchange of the burden of continually exploiting attractions leased to them.

Special Service Section on

"The Adventures of Tarzan" Serial

THERE may come a time when the producers of motion pictures will overwork the character of "Tarzan," but that time is not yet. The famous jungle character created by the facile pen of Edgar Rice Burroughs has always made an ideal screen character. This serial has been adapted from the concluding chapters of "The Return of Tarzan." The earlier books dealt with the childhood of "Tarzan"—how he grew up among a tribe of apes, was nursed by them, and, when he reached to manhood, became their leader.

"Tarzan" is in reality a British lord. He is rescued from his African jungle and returns to England to claim his inheritance. When this serial opens he has been in the employ of the British government, following up Bolsheviki agitators. He is cast overboard by his arch-enemy and eventually reaches the jungle home where he grew to manhood. Later, the girl with home he is in love, his enemy, the Russian; and an Englishman who is claiming Tarzan's title and is in love with the girl, are brought to the island when their private yacht is wrecked. All three think Tarzan dead. At this point the serial opens. In the first few episodes a wild tribe of the interior of Africa, and any number of wild animals, supply most of the thrills. The four principal characters are Tarzan; Rokoff, the Russian; Clayton, the pretender to the title; and Jane Porter, the girl, who is a daughter of an American naturalist.

The character of "Tarzan" may be likened to that of "Jack Merriwell" or "Dick Harkaway" of twenty years ago. Just as there was no end to the demand for "Jack Merriwell" and 'Dick Harkaway" stories, so there is no lessening of interest in "Tarzan" serials. Excitement is the keynote of the whole serial, and each episode ends in a genuine thrill. These thrills are produced by the wild animals. Nothing quite as tense or daring has been seen on the screen, at least recently, in the way of animal thrills. For instance one episode ends with Tarzan standing alone on a rock. Two lions are crouching above him on either side. As the picture fades out these lions make a flying leap from their cliffs and pounce upon the hero, throwing him down. Such an ending makes it pretty certain that you will not have many empty chairs on the following week.

The serial is, of course, mostly thrills and action, and it should be circus stunts that predominate in exploitation. This does not mean any extravagant use of real animals, but the lobby can be made unusually attractive by means of cutouts. A florist can supply a good substitute for jungle foliage so that your lobby will resemble, in a general way, the opening shot of the serial, which is a dense tropical growth. Cuckadoos swing in the trees; the apes climb along branches, and the lions, panthers, and wild boars scurry about amid the underbrush. It is even possible to build a wooden cage and place in it a man dressed as near as possible like the bull-ape in the picture. A reputable costumer can provide a realistic make-up.

For street displays a camouflaged motortruck looks like the best bet. Drape it with creeping vines. Palm trees and native plants could well be used. Hide the chassis and wheels with huge banners announcing that the first episode of "The Adventures of Tarzan" will be seen at your theatre on such and such a date. It would be even better to use several men inside the truck, dressed in monkey costumes, who could distribute throw-aways at the busy street corners.

If you do not like the cage idea for the lobby, set aside one corner of it and erect, in a rustic fashion, parallel bars or cross bars. Obtain a gymnast, not necessarily a professional, put him in the monkey costume and let him delight the crowd with his antics. A man with some originality and cleverness, coupled with ability on the bars, will help immeasurably.

It is important to get the children interested. This simply amounts to spreading the news until every youngster in town knows that the serial is to be shown. The reputation of the "Tarzan" character, the success of previous "Tarzan" pictures, is sure to do the rest. It would be wise to run special ads for the children in the newspapers, advertising a special showing. Make it, if possible, a morning matinee on some school holiday, or the last free day before the opening of the schools. If this is not possible, make it any Saturday morning. Show them the first episode and then impress upon them that the remainder will be shown every certain evening for the next fifteen weeks. Special invitations for newsboys, or Boy Scout organizations would start the interest among the youngsters.

Do not hesitate to use plenty of newspaper space, at least for the opening episode. Make it bold, and even extravagant in its wording. Each episode is syndicated for use in local newspapers, and makes gripping reading. An ingenious stage setting can be made from cutouts, obtained from the posters, a wooded drop, and carefully selected spot lights.

A great amount of advertising supplies are available for "The Adventures of Tarzan." The stock posters are one sheet, three sheets, six sheets, and a twenty-four sheet. Posters for each episode are in one sheet, three sheets and six sheets. For a lobby display there are eight by the black and white, with glossy finish; an eleven by fourteen sepia green; and a twenty-two by twenty-eight colored. There are three styles for the serial, and one style for each episode. In addition to these there are heralds, window hangers, window cards, banners, letter heads, and oil paintings. These paintings are in two sizes, one of which is forty by sixty inches and the other thirty by forty. The press books offer newspaper material, and as already stated each episode is in syndicate form for newspaper use. For novelties there is a novelette, a series of animal drawings (one for each episode) and sets for minature animals, one for each episode, as follows: Lion, giraffe, leopard, lioness, rhinoceros, crocodiles, zebra, tiger, hyena, monkey, camel, jaguar, elephant, wild boar, and group of apes.

Travel Pictures for Truart

Burlingham Adventures to Be Offered to State Righters

CONTRACTS have just been signed hereby the Truart Film Corporation, of which M. H. Hoffman is vice-president, with offices in the new Loew Building, New York, has acquired an entirely new series of twenty-six "Burlingham Adventures" in one reel each which are to be distributed this fall on the State Right plan.

The first pictures to be released will be four separate one-reelers showing the famous wild men of Borneo. These are the result of an expensive expedition into the unexplored jungles of Borneo, 500 miles from the coast, where Frederick Burlingham made his home with the Dayaks. Borneo is the largest island of the Dutch East Indies, 12,000 miles distant, situated midway between Asia and Australia and directly on the equator. It is hot there the year round and clothes are not necessary. In the interior there are still head-hunters and practically all the natives use blow-pipes and poisoned arrows for killing game.

These Borneo reels will be put out in the following order: "A Borneo Venice," "Monkey Land up the Barito River," "Jungle Belles of Borneo," "A Wedding Feast Among the Borneo Dayaks."

This expedition already has had considerable publicity, the New York World having published two pages and syndicated the story. Numerous other newspapers have published interviews and the National Geographic Society was sufficiently interested to send a special editor to meet Mr. Burlingham in New York and, after a two day conference, decided to publish a full account with maps and photographs in the National Geographic Magazine which has a circulation of 750,000. This story will be published this fall. Millions of readers, consequently, will be interested to see these pictures.

In making up these twenty-six new adventure pictures Mr. Burlingham had visited many strange parts of the world which will assure complete variety of subject matter.

From Borneo spectators will be taken to the Swiss Alps to see accurately recorded the perilous ascent of the Zinal-Rothorn, one of the most dangerous mountains in the world, which had killed a number of expert alpinists. Before reaching the top Mr. Burlingham's party four times were driven back by foul weather but at last succeeded in filming the summit, a thrilling feat which no other camera man has been able to duplicate.

On his return to America Mr. Burlingham was surprised to find that no one ever had photographed the famous scene of the song "Way Down upon the Swanee River." He immediately built a boat carrying an air-drive engine, and descended this strange river 200 miles. This film has beautiful qualities and lends itself to special exploitation specialty, as the whole country is interested in erecting a national memorial to the genius of Stephen Foster who wrote this song which has been sung by millions all over the world. The Travel Magazine is publishing an illustrated account of this adventure in its October number.

Among the other pictures to be presented by Truart are scenes in Japan and the Pacific islands, unusual shots in England, France, Switzerland and Italy, here and there an American picture and then among many other pictures the "Lure of the South Seas."

Hoffman General Manager of Tiffany

M. H. HOFFMAN has assumed the postion of general manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., the newly formed company, which is producing a series of features starring Mae Murray and directed by Robert Z. Leonard. The first picture of the series, "Peacock Alley," has been completed.

The second production is now being prepared for the screen by Frederic and Fannie Hatton, famous playwrights and authors of "Lombardi, Ltd," "Upstairs and Down," "The Land of Hope," "Little Italy" and "Dawn of the East."

"Ham" Presents Loving Cup to Mayor

A silver loving cup was presented to Mayor George E. Cryer of Los Angeles a few days ago by Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, star of Educational-Mermaid Comedies, in the presence of many city officials.

Mayor Cryer is honorary chairman of the United Spanish War Veterans' National Convention Committee, which staged an army and navy boxing bout in Los Angeles on August 19 to raise funds to bring the convention to Los Angeles in 1922. The loving cup presented by "Ham," was intended for the winner of the bout.

Two Halsey Photoplay on Broadway

Forrest Halsey, well-known author and scenario writer, will have the distinction of having two successful screenplays on Broadway this month. The first of these "Disraeli," a United Artists production, starring George Arliss who appeared in the original stage production, is having its premiere at the Strand on Sunday of this week and the second "The Wonderful Thing," a First National production, starring Norma Talmadge, will follow "Disraeli."

Aywon Film Announces Snowy Baker Titles

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, announces the following sequence for the Snowy Baker series starring the world famed fighter and horseman "The Fighting Breed," "The Shadow of Lightning Ridge," and "The Better Man." CLOSELY following Dallas FitzGerald, who started on Tuesday from New York for Universal City to take up his directorial duties, Hobart Henley goes on a like mission, leaving New York on August 18.

Hobart Henley, like FitzGerald, might almost be said to be a product of the Universal. His first work was with the Big U under Julius Stern at the old Eleventh Avenue Imp Studio, and it was with the Universal that he directed his first feature picture, "Parentage." Since that time he has carved out for himself a place in the forefront of the profession.

"Burn 'em Up Barnes" Premiere

Hines Feature Successful at Cincinnati Opening

THE eagerly awaited 'big town' premiere of Charles C. Burr's "Burn 'em up Barnes," a high-powered automobile romance in which the volatile comedian, Johnny Hines makes his debut to stellar honors in productions of feature length proportions, was offered on Sunday last at Libson's Grand Theatre, Cincinnati, where it is scheduled to play an extended engagement.

The production was put on, practically 'cold' for its producers wanted to know with certainty and without prejudice exactly what they had. They realized that the entertainment values of "Burn 'em up Barnes" assuming that it possessed any, would be given ample publicity through word of mouth advertising. It was felt that "Burn 'em up Barnes" was a 'sure-fire' audience picture wherein laughs and thrills abound in such measure as to provide the clean, wholesome story with additional interest-compelling features and a wealth of talking points, clearly apparent even to the novice in the ranks of Showmen.

"In Burn 'em up Barnes" there was offered in addition to this much sought after type of story, a cast of sterling quality, each individual of which eagerly blended their artistry and personality into a composite of scintillating brilliance. "Burn 'em up Barnes" is a starring vehicle for Johnny Hines but unlike the more or less usual customed tailored, made-to-measure, close fitting dramatic garment, the mellow artistry of Edmund Breese, George Fawcett and Julia Swayne Gordon is made all the more piquant by the vivacious charm of Betty Carpenter and Dorothy Leeds and the histrionic strength of Matthew Betts, Richard Thorpe and Harry Fraser.

The advance billing did not exceed 100 sheets and the newspaper space used was normal. "Burn 'em up Barnes" opened for an extended run literally 'on its own' which makes its overwhelming success all the more significant. It is the further proof, if any be needed, that photoplay patrons shop for and purchase entertainment in quite the same manner as they do for any of the other necessities of life.

While the full details of the opening are lacking by reason of telegraphic brevity, it is known that to most Cincinnatians, the appeal of "Burn 'em up Barnes" was too great to resist. Only at infrequent intervals has such a galaxy of stars of the stage and screen been assembled for a single production and these factors contrived to bring out the bargain spirit so pronounced in most all Americans.

Since early Monday morning, the telegraph wires from Cincinnati have brought East a veritable flood of congratulatory epistles, indicative of the actually earned favor of audience, press and trade and it is interesting to note that the larger number of these messages are from persons not even remotely connected with the production or the showing.

Serial Due for Radical Change

Children, Major Part of Serial Fans, to Be Suited

MOTION PICTURE serials soon will face radical changes in style and substance, it is the opinion of Irving G. Thalberg, production manager of Universal City.

"The screen serial must be changed in form and story," explained Thalberg. "It must be designed to conform with the tastes and with the permitted requirements of the serial going public.

"Now, the serial going public is made up mostly of children—90% is a close figure. This means that the tastes and requirements of children should be considered constantly during the production of a serial.

"The importance of a due consideration of the child-screen requirements, is attested by the fact that censors admit that 85% of the present censorship activity and agitation is because children see moving pictures. The average censor will admit that little or no worry is caused by what grown-up audiences may or may not see on the screen.

"I believe that Universal is the first serial producing company to take these factors seriously into consideration. As a result we are making something entirely new in serials. It is a chaptered screen drama based accurately upon American history, and stalking through its 18 episodes will be the same figures the youngsters find on the pages of his school history.

"The new serial is 'Winners of the West,' a graphic screen drama of the adventures and struggles of Captain John G. Fremont, soldier and explorer, whose excursions across the Rocky Mountains and into the West beyond form one of the brightest pages of American history. Ford Beebe, one of Universal's most dramatic scenario writers, has adapted Capt. Fremont's story to the screen. Art Acord, the star, plays the role of one of the great explorer's trusted scouts.

"Universal has taken this step because it realizes that youth must be served. Youngsters crave action and adventure in story and on screen. What could be more fitting than to give them screen entertainment based upon historical incidents and woven around characters they are taught to respect and admire?

"With this in mind Ford Beebe has made screen heroes out of the famous characters who stands forth among the winners of the west. Fremont was chosen as the first of this illustrious band to be immortalized on the screen. The story of the Art Acord serial recounts the adventures of a band of hardy pioneers, travelling across the plains and through the Rockies in their prairie schooners, on the heels of Fremont's trail breakers."

Greatest Progress Is Credited to Comedy

AMONG all those engaged in the making of pictures, the comedy producers have made the greatest proportionate improvement in their product during the past year, declares Saul S. Harris, head of the Arkansas Enterprises, Inc., following a recent visit to the Los Angeles studios.

"The comedy men have kept the faith with exhibitors and the public," says Harris. "They have kept faith because they have delivered proportionately, more for the money in point of quality product, excellently built productions, and real entertainment.

"The increase in prices for good high-class two-real comedies has not been in proportion to the advances which have been made in some cases for feature pictures. Yet, on the whole, the advancement in comedy art has taken strides far ahead of the other film branches."

Eddie Bonns to Handle Warner Exploitation

Eddie Bonns, a well-known figure in the motion picture industry, has been engaged by Warner Brothers to handle the special exploitation campaigns on the forthcoming productions to be issued to the independent field by the organization, according to an announcement by A. Warner. The special work undertaken by Mr. Bonns will deal primarily with the twelve productions being made for Warner Brothers under the direct supervision of Harry Rapf.

Peacock Productions Has New Leader

M. R. Fink, general manager of peacock Productions, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo., has been elected to the presidency of that concern. He will continue as general manager.

Mr. Fink was elevated to his new executive capacity in recognition of his splendid record with that company. He is one of few men who has risen to a high executive position such as he now holds and who has made such a phenomenal success in the short time in which he has been in the territory.

"Jungle Adventures" is First Before Censors

With the inauguration of the Motion Picture Commission of New York State recently appointed by Governor Miller in accordance with the law calling for the censoring of all motion pictures commencing August 1st, 1921, comes word that the first production to be viewed by the new Commission was Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" a five-reel adventure drama.

Alexander Beyfuss, one of the veterans of the industry, who is Johnson's feature, personally arranged this showing for the Commission giving "Jungle Adventures" the honor of starting the new body upon its duties.

Offer Eight Big Powell Specials

State Right Buyers Have Opportunity for September

THOUSANDS of exhibitors the country over who are planning to make September "Independence Month" in accordance with the decision reached at the recent National Convention, when an agreement was made to show as many independent productions as possible during that month, will learn with interest that Frank Powell Producing Corp., of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is offering eight big super specials to State Rights buyers, the first to be released on September 1st

These attractions were all personally directed by Frank Powell and include six productions in which Marjorie Rambeau, the celebrated stage beauty, is starred, one in which Nance O'Neil is the featured player and one All-Star production in which Linda Griffith (Mrs. D. W. Griffith), Creighton Hale, Sheldon Lewis and Zena Keefe appear. All are five-reel in length and are reconstructed features — adaptations, re-edited, re-titled, from proven successes.

General Manager Stuart R. Walker reports that considerable territory has already been contracted for, although to date little effort has been made to bring these productions to the attention of the State Right buyers, and the first formal announcement of their release is contained in this week's issue of the Motion Picture News. Southern New York, Northern New Jersey, Northern Illinois and Northern Indiana have already been sold. Negotiations are now pending for Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and other territories.

"It is not surprising that these big eight super features are in tremendous demand" remarked General Manager Walker in talking with our representative, "since they instantly realize that such a series of attractions with big stars, notable casts, real quality productions with tremendous selling power, seldom find their way to the State Right market and their offering at this time presents an unusual opportunity for the independent buyer.

"The subjects as now titled, together with the attraction from which they have been adapted or re-constructed, are as follows: "On Her Honor" adapted from "The Dazzling Miss Davison," starring Marjorie Rambeau; "How A Woman Loves," adapted from "The Greater Woman," starring Marjorie Rambeau; "Fidelity," adapted from "The Mirror," starring Marjorie Rambeau; "Forbidden Love," adapted from "Mary Moreland," starring Marjorie Rambeau; "She Paid," adapted from "The Debt," starring Marjorie Rambeau; "The Case of Mrs. Balfame," adapted from "Mrs. Balfame" by Gertrude Atherton, starring Nance O'Neil; and "The Depths of New York," adapted from "Charity," featuring an All-Star cast that includes Linda Griffith, Creighton Hale, Sheldon Lewis and Zena Keefe."

"All eight of these super features are being offered the State Rights field on a royalty, plus cost of print, basis, and September 1st has been set as the release date, so haste is necessary on the part of anyone who wishes to secure territory in time to take advantage of the big Fall openings in his vicinity."

Wilson to Make Kyne Stories

BEN WILSON PRODUCTIONS of the future, which are to be released through Arrow Film Corporation, will be of higher quality than subjects heretofore made by this producer. This is indicated by the contracts made by Mr. Wilson in Los Angeles in the past two weeks.

One contract of importance is that made by Wilson with Peter B. Kyne, the short story writer, for a series of four of Kyne's best known stories. These stories will be produced with an all-star cast and while personally supervised by Wilson will be made under the direction of one of the best known directors of the West Coast. Since the contract with Mr. Kyne was completed Wilson began a search for suitable players from the long list available. He selected Roy Stewart and Marjorie Daw and has made contracts with these popular players to co-star them in the Kyne stories.

Continuity for the first of the Roy Stewart-Marjorie Daw co-starring productions is now being written from the Kyne story "Motion to Adjourn," and production will be started within the next few days.

Producer Wilson has a long term contract with Jack Hoxie, now making a series of personal appearances throughout the East, and another with Ann Little to play in future serials. Hoxie will begin a new series of western features upon his return to the Coast.

Miss Little is now at work on a serial which will combine the natural scenic effects to be found in the Yellowstone National Park with a mystery story centered about a falling meteor. For many weeks this serial entitled "Nanette of the North," has been in preparation. A number of years ago Ben Wilson, then with the Edison Company, produced a number of short subjects in the Yellowstone Park. The time he spent in the national reservation made it possible for him to become intimately acquainted with a great portion of the park and the many decidedly unusual scenes possible for filming there. In preparing for the serial now being produced, Mr. Wilson sent Carl Coolidge to the Yellowstone weeks ago and Coolidge has written a mystery story laid about the mud paint pots, geysers, grottos, canyons, and his script specifies scenes on angel terrace, cupid's cave, the travatine formations, golden gate canyon, electric park, the handkerchief pool and many others. One of the big features of the picture will be a buffalo stampede and the bears, beaver, deer and elk in the park game reserve will be used in many scenes. The entire staff of rangers of the park have been granted permission by the park commission to take part in many of the scenes.

The producing company headed by Ann Little who is to be featured in the name part has now been in the Yellowstone for more than a month. Duke Warne is directing the making of the serial and Ashton Dearholt is business manager, and the supporting cast for Miss Little includes Leonard Clapman, featured by Universal in a number of western subjects; Joseph Gerrard, Jay Morris, Foster, Howard Crampton, Hal Wilson, Edith Stayart, Wilbur McGaugh and others.

Arrow Announces 52 Comedies

DR. W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, threw down the gauntlet to the entire film field, independents and others alike, some months ago, when he concluded an interview with these words: "Watch our dust during this coming Fall and the new year."

A short time afterwards came the announcement from Arrow that they had signed up for the release of a series of four new James Oliver Curwood productions, one of these being already released and another in course of production.

Now comes the announcement from the Arrow headquarters that they are ready to take the field against any and all with a program of 52 two-reel comedies to be released one a week, on a franchise arrangement for the entire series in each territory. This means that in each of the independent key centers, the entire 52 comedies will go as one entire unit for sole distribution in each territory by the exchange securing the exclusive franchise.

Three exclusive units of production will furnish these 52 new Arrow comedy releases.

Morris R. Schlank, one of the best known independent comedy producers in the field, is making a series of 14 to be known as Broadway Comedies starring Eddie Barry, Harry Gribbon and Helen Darling, all former Christie stars. Three of these comedies are already completed and awaiting release. They are entitled, "His Hansom Butler," "A Designing Husband" and "Should Brides Marry." The best and most original comedy stories procurable are being used.

A series of 14 other comedies, distinct from these, are also to be made under the Morris R. Schlank banner for this Arrow series. They will be known as Bobby Dunn Comedies, featuring Bobby Dunn whose reputation as a film jester was established in Fox's Sunshine Comedies. One of this series entitled, "Idle Workers," has been completed. All these comedies are being produced at Morris R. Schlank's own studio, at Hollywood.

Another unit, to be known as the Cruelywed Comedies, depicting the marital mishaps of Mr. and Mrs. Cruelywed, will have 12 releases in the series. These are being directed and produced by Mr. S. M. Herzig at the Universal Studios, Universal City. Paul Weigel and Lillie Leslie are being featured in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Cruelywed.

Miss Leslie has had a long and brilliant career on the legitimate stage before entering motion pictures. She began with the Lubin Company after leaving the speaking stage and later went with William Fox, subsequently playing leads in Pathe, World and Metro pictures. Mr. Weigel also earned his spurs in the legitimate, coming to the screen in 1915 and making his debut with the Famous Players-Lasky Company where he played leading comedy and character parts for about a year. After the expiration of his contract there, he appeared in many big productions, playing light comedy parts.

Mr. Herzig, the producer and director, before starting to make his own productions, had been making comedies for Universal. Two of the productions of this series have been finished. They are entitled, "Uneasy Terms" and "Fisherman's Luck."

The series that completes the 52 releases of this Arrow program is to be known as Arrow-Speed Comedies produced by Reggie Morris Productions under the supervision of Mr. Morris at the Hampton Studios at Hollywood.

They will feature particularly, Neely Edwards supported by such well known comedy players as Charlotte Merriam, Margaret Cullington, Eddie Baker and Jack Barry.

Edwards is well known for his recent work in the Hall Room Boys Comedies and for years was a favorite with the vaudeville going public as a member of the team of Flanegan and Edwards.

Miss Merrian and Miss Cullington, together with all the other players in the comedies, have many years of film experience and accomplishment behind them.

Arrow Sells Entire Product for Illinois

IT is believed that one of the biggest film buys ever recorded in the independent market was put through by the Arrow Film Corporation during the past week when Frank Zambreno, president of Unity Photoplays, Chicago, closed a deal with Dr. Shallenberger, president of Arrow that gives him the rights for distribution in Northern Illinois and Indiana for practically the entire Arrow product of feature dramas, specials, serials, comedies and one-reel novelty subjects.

Together with the announcement of this deal comes the news also that they will be released through a new distributing unit to be known as Progress Pictures Co., headed by Mr. Zambreno and with headquarters at 808 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

The organization of this new distribution company especially in the Chicago territory marks another important milestone in the progress and development of the independent field. Men who have been associated with Mr. Zambreno during the past in his various commercial interests in Chicago have been selected as the other officers of the new company.

The deal closed with Arrow gives the new Progress Pictures exchange, therefore, the distribution rights in that territory for the four big special James Oliver Curwood productions. The first of this series, entitled "God's Country and the Law," has already been released. The others are in the course of production. Another big series is that of four pictures starring Grace Davison, the first, "Love, Hate and a Woman," which is now ready for release; also a series of four featuring starring Neva Gerber, two of which already have been released. They are "A Yankee Go-Getter" and "Dangerous Paths."

The deal also gives to Zambreno Arrow's latest serial, "The Blue Fox," starring Ann Little; the second series of the Sport Pictorials, one reel novelty releases and 18 one reel Spotlight Comedies. At the same time this new Progress exchange closed for a franchise in that territory which gives them the 52 special two reel comedy releases which Arrow is just announcing for the Fall and 1922.

Lew Rodgers Purchases "Lonely Hearts"

One of the most important distributing arrangements made in the independent this week from the offices of Charles C. Burr, President of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., concerning the disposition of "Lonely Hearts."

The more important details of the deal disclose that Lew Rodgers, of the Rialto Productions, is the purchaser of the territorial rights to this picturization of Edgar Selwyn's story, aggregating 28 per cent of the entire United States and includes New England, Middle Atlantic and Southern Atlantic States.

Jack Hoxie Completes Tour in Boston

On the last lap of his personal tour starting back across the continent again, Jack Hoxie, Arrow's cowboy star, went to Boston, August 4th from New York. In the Hub City he was the guest of "Baron" Hirsch, of Lightning Photoplays, and according to all reports from Boston, his stop there was one of the most productive of publicity and exploitation of his whole itinerary. He made nearly one hundred personal appearances at theatres in and around the vicinity besides getting a lavish share of space in all the newspapers every day during his stay there.

Selecting Players for Third Arrow - Curwood

Frederick W. Hinckley, president, and Carl E. Milliken, treasurer, of the Fine Tree Pictures Corporation of Maine, who are the producers of the Arrow-James Oliver Curwood series, spent the past week in New York City making arrangements for the selection of story, cast and director for the third picture of the series of four that are being released by Arrow.

While in New York, they made a flying trip to Niagara, where they conferred with James Oliver Curwood as to the final selection of story and director.

The title of No. 3 picture will be "The Girl from Porcupine." A popular and well-known star and director are being selected, the names of whom are to be announced later.

Mr. Hyman, you said it

———When you said you believed that Florence Reed in "THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB" was the big picture that would start every exhibitor off right for the big independent month of September, you said a mouthful. . .

———And when you bought the picture for California, Nevada and Arizona for your concern, the All Star Feature Film Co. you backed up your words with real money.

———And when you booked the picture right off the bat to Gore Brothers, Ramish and Lesser for their entire circuit with a first run flying start at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles, you accomplished something for yourself, for Gore Brothers, Ramish & Lesser and for the public who will see the production.

When you said that September would see the beginning of a prosperous season, especially for independents, you uttered another pearl of wisdom.

All in all we think your batting average is about 1000%, not because you bo't our picture but because you picked the picture that is destined to clean up for all who show it.

We thank you for your wonderful testimonial on "THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB"

We wish every exhibitor throughout the world could see that original letter of yours.

There would be a waiting line for bookings, if they could. Talk exploitation to your exhibitors. See that each one of them gets a copy of the amazing advertising campaign book, one of the biggest of its kind ever issued.

And you can also tip exhibitors off in your territory that we are coming to bat soon with Audrey Munson in "HEEDLESS MOTHS" the picture who's star has had more feature newspaper space than any motion picture ever made and that includes them all, and you can take it from us that, that means somethng.

Thanks, Brother Hyman, for your business, and don't forget that—

"STRAIGHT-FROM-PARIS" and "CHARGE IT"—The TWO latest Clara Kimball Young Pictures will bring a volume of box office receipts to all Exhibitors for the big month of Sept. and all other months.

F. B. Warren to Distribute "Quo Vadis;" Released Sept. 11th

THE F. B. Warren Corporation announces that "Quo Vadis," the first big motion picture spectacle to be produced, will be nationally released on September 11.

Prints of the new 1921-1922 version are now ready in all F. B. Warren branches throughout the country.

This mighty spectacle was the first picture ever brought to America and shown at advanced prices. George Kline imported "Quo Vadis" and handled the sales and bookings as a legitimate theatrical attraction in the important theatres of the United States. It ran for twenty-six weeks at the Astor theatre in New York at $1.00 top price. It also enjoyed a prosperous engagement at the McVickers theatre in Chicago. The business grossed over $2,000,000 during the Kline regime, it is declared.

"Quo Vadis," in its present-day form, is a revival in six reels. Doty Hobart re-edited the negatives and Warren Newcomb created new art titles. It was this skilled pair that achieved fame with "The Woman God Changed." It has been revived at a cost of thousands of dollars, declares a statement from the F. B. Warren headquarters in New York.

Two Paramounts August 21

"Conquest of Canaan" and Cosmo Hamilton's "Wealth" for Release

ON August 21 Paramount will release two features, Thomas Meighan in "The Conquest of Canaan" and Ethel Clayton in William D. Taylor's production "Wealth."

The story on which Mr. Meighan's picture is based is none other than Booth Tarkington's famous novel which is regarded as one of the classics of American literature. The writing of the scenario was entrusted to Frank Wright Tuttle and R. William Neill was the director. After the completion of the script, Mr. Tarkington went over it carefully, scene by scene, at his home and made many notes and suggestions for slight changes where he thought the original story could be improved upon for the picture version.

In the role of Joe Louden, Mr. Meighan has an opportunity for some of the best work of his career. Playing opposite Mr. Meighan is Doris Kenyon, well known as a stage and screen artist of exceptional beauty. Diana Allen, Charles Abbe, Malcolm Bradley, Paul Everton, Macy Harlam, Louis Hendricks, Jed Prouty, Cyril Ring and Riley Hatch are also in the cast. For the filming of "Canaan," Mr. Neill took the company to Asheville, N C., where a wealth of small town was provided.

It has been said by many that in the William D. Taylor production, "Wealth," Ethel Clayton has the best role she has ever had. The picture is based upon a story by Cosmo Hamilton, who wrote "Men, Women and Money," which also was adapted for Miss Clayton. The scenario was written by Julia Crawford Ivers.

The theme of the story, briefly stated, is that money without work is a curse. Miss Clayton, playing the part of a wealthy girl, wears a number of rich Parisian gowns which will delight the feminine portion of audiences, to say nothing of the men, for she has always been noted for her gowns and the style with which she wears them.

Miss Clayton's leading man is Herbert Rawlinson, with J. M. Dumont, Lawrence Steers, George Periolat, Claire McDowell, Jean Acker and Richard Wayne in important roles.

The opinion expressed, following a recent trade showing, is that "Be My Wife" is one of the best screen productions ever offered in the light comedy line. It is described to be fast-moving, high-spirited comedy, filled with novel incidents and original stunts.

Babe Ruth-Lentz Contest in Pathe News

Babe Ruth, "King of Swat," can smash a baseball through a sizzling parabola covering 440 feet. Harold G. Lentz, world's champion baitcaster, using a 4-ounce lead slug, can stretch his spinning fishline over the same distance. But the actual contest is pictured for you in Pathe News No. 64.

In the current issue No. 63, there is also shown one of the most recent triumphs of science and invention—the operation of the Radio-Compass. The U. S. Navy has established radio-compass stations along the concave coastline, which catch radio waves from fog bound ships. Bert Green's animated diagrams make it all clear.

Selznick Sales Conferences

Morris and Selznick, Touring Country, to Hold Meetings

SAM E. MORRIS and Myron Selznick, respectively Vice-President in charge of distribution and Vice President in charge of production of the Selznick Corporation, left New York Thursday, August 11th, on a tour of the country during which they will hold a series of sales conferences to be attended by every branch manager in the employ of Select Pictures Corporation, the distributing branch of the Selznick company.

Their first stop was at Detroit, Mich., where they arrived Friday morning. The sales meeting was attended by R. C. Fox, C. C. McKibbin, R. J. Burns, and Morris Safier, managers of the Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and Cleveland offices, in addition to Manager J. O. Kent, of the Detroit office, and the New York executives.

In Chicago, where Mr. Morris and Mr. Selznick arrived Monday morning, Joseph D. Roderick, E. P. Pickler and D. Williston had come on from the Select branches which they manage in Milwaukee, St. Louis, and Indianapolis to join Manager Silverman, of the Chicago office, in meeting the Selznick chief executives.

The next stop scheduled was Kansas City, with a meeting Wednesday, August 17th, attended by Managers J. E. O'Toole, of Minneapolis; J. H. Carey, of Omaha; C. D. Touchon, of Oklahoma City; R. I. Brown, of Dallas, and William Niles, of Denver, in addition to Lynn S. Card, of the Kansas City office.

Branch managers D. G. Farquhar, of Salt Lake City; T. C. Malcolm, of San Francisco, and J. C. Conant, of Seattle, had been instructed to be in Los Angeles Monday, August 22nd, to attend the sales meeting in Manager E. C. Mix's home town.

Mr. Morris and Mr. Selznick are scheduled to leave Los Angeles Thursday, August 25th, on their way back East, making the trip by way of San Francisco, Portland, Salt Lake City, Ogden, and Chicago.

The trip of the Selznick executives has to do with sales plans which have been formulated in New York for the distribution of the extensive Selznick product which has been prepared for 1921-22. In a sense the territorial sales meetings will serve the same purpose which has been served by the Selznick conventions which have previously been held.

Before leaving a meeting was held at New York City on August 8th and 9th. The meeting was attended by the following Select branch managers: New York, Henry Siegel; New Jersey, Earl W. Kramer; Albany, Charles Walder; Philadelphia, Max Milder; Boston, Benjamin P. Rogers; Portland, Me., J. H. Curran; Washington, W. F. Ballenger; New Haven, Louis Green, C. C. Ezell, personal representative of President Lewis J. Selznick, who spends most of his time visiting the various Select branches, was also in attendance at the meeting.

During the session there was a free and wholesome interchange of ideas among the field men and the Home Office executives. Mr. Morris and Myron Selznick told the field men just what had been prepared as a part of the new year's product and of the company's important plans for the future.

Universal Specials on Way

4 Super-Features Ready in Near Future for Public Presentation

FOUR of what Universal declares will be "the most pretentious productions of the year" are now being cut or are rapidly approaching completion at Universal City. The most important of these super-features is Erich von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives." von Stroheim, who shot it in 129,000 feet in something over a year at a cost of $1,000,000, is editing it down to footage. It will be ready for its review about August 20, when a delegation of censors from every censor board in the country arrive to be Carl Laemmle's guests at Universal City.

Another of the super-features already completed is "Conflict," a story in which Priscilla Dean will be seen in a role even more dynamic than her starring characterizations in "Outside the Law" and "Reputation." The story was filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton from the Red Book Magazine serial by Clarence Buddington Kelland. The Universal producing unit has just returned from British Columbia where the vigorous and colorful lumbering industry was filmed to add atmosphere to the dramatic action.

Closely following the completion of "Conflict" will be Harry Carey's own big Universal-Jewel story "The Fox," upon which he has been at work on the Mojave desert under the direction of Robert Thornby. "The Fox" will go to the screen as a motion-picture trail blazer. An outfit of regular United States Cavalry furnishes some atmosphere. A machine gun crew tearing out a suspension bridge is one of the kicks in the picture, which also will show some of the most magnificent scenery in the West.

A month ago editorial work began on "No Woman Knows," Universal's screening of the big Edna Ferber magazine story, "Fanny Herself," which was directed by Tod Browning. The production gives Mabel Julienne Scott the greatest opportunity of her career in the title role.

Paramount Exchange in Portland, Me., to Open

Paramount will open its new Exchange in Portland, Me., about August 20th. The building, the main part of which is of brick and frame construction, one story in height, is located on St. John Street, directly across from the Union Station. It contains 5,000 square feet of floor space and conforms to the standardized type of Exchange building adopted some time ago by Paramount. In the rear of the main building is a separate fireproof section, top-ventilated, containing the film vaults.

Hodkinson Release for Indiana Circuit

"The Journey's End" Hugo Ballin's most recent production for Hodkinson release, has been booked to play over the Brentlinger Mason Circuit in Indiana during September.

Morris Kohn Discusses Realart Plans

Neilan to Present Barry as "Penrod"

Marshall Neilan will next produce Booth Tarkington's well-known story, "Penrod," with Wesley Barry in the title role. Mr. Neilan acquired the rights to this story some years ago, it is stated. Young Barry will leave the East for Los Angeles within the next few days as the picture will be filmed on the Coast. The scenario will be completed within two weeks, and production work will be started as soon as the script is finished. First National will distribute the production.

Tie-up with Music Publisher on "Devotion"

Through an arrangement with M. Serkowich of Stern, Marks, and Haymond, authors and composers of the song entitled "Devotion," the branch-offices of Associated Producers will make the song the basis of exploitation tie-ups for its release "Devotion." The branch managers have been instructed by the home-office of Associated Producers to work with the nearest branch office of the Jerome H. Remick, Inc., musical publishers, in arranging for special window displays at the same time that "Devotion" is playing at any of their local theatres.

Paramount Will Film "Miss Lulu Bett"

"Miss Lulu Bett," Zona Gale's prize play based upon her own novel, is to be produced as a Paramount picture by William de Mille. Production of the picture will begin at once at the Lasky studio, Hollywood. Clara Beranger has adapted the play and novel for the screen. Mr. Lasky announced that the title role will be played by Mildred Harris and others in the cast will include Theodore Roberts, Clarence Burton, Helen Ferguson, Mabel Van Buren, May Giracci and Ethel Wales. The leading man is yet to be chosen.

Morris Kohn, President of Realart, Says:

"REALART feels particularly proud of the part which it has had in the raising of the industry to the high plane upon which it now stands.

"We point with pride to our past performances and insist that we are entitled to the full faith and support of the exhibitors on account of our record. We feel here at Realart that we have long passed the probationary stage. The success which our various constructive policies have achieved testify unmistakably to their practicability and co-operative value.

"Realart is getting splendid co-operation from the exhibitors, due not only to the fact that we are supplying them with the kind of pictures they need for their theatres, but it is also due to our having won their confidence by making good our promises to them.

"But we are not resting on our laurels. Our next year's production plans call for even better pictures than we have been making. Production has had to step lively to keep pace with exhibition, which has so steadily improved as to be recognized today as a dignified profession. We shall endeavor not only to keep pace for the coming year but by the introduction of even more constructive policies to keep a few steps in the lead.

"We are constantly devising and putting into execution policies that not only rebound to our own credit, but materially assist the exhibitors in working out their individual problems.

"Primarily, of course, they need pictures; high-grade, clean pictures that will build for their theatres the reputation for showing the kind of photoplays that appeal to all ages and classes. It is here that we will be of most service, by supplying them with consistently better pictures, not occasionally, but regularly throughout the year.

"We have the organization to accomplish this, and our production facilities at the West Coast have been so perfected as to leave no room for doubt in our minds that Realart Pictures for the coming season will show even a greater and more consistent improvement over those of last year."

A Second "Bill and Bob" Series for Pathe

Gratified with the success of the first series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob," Pathe Exchange, Inc., has just contracted with Cyrus J. Williams, producer, for a second series of the one reelers. The arrangements were made with Arthur S. Kane, representing Mr. Williams. "The Adventures of Bill and Bob," starring William and Robert Bradbury, eleven-year-old California twins, met with almost instantaneous success. In their new series, it is expected they will attempt even more daring exploits than they engaged in during the making of the first series.

Work on the series is now under way. The boys at this time are in the heart of the mountains outside of Los Angeles, waiting for opportunity to help them in their cinema exploits.

Mrs. Wallace Reid in Cunoe Picture

Mrs. Wallace Reid has been signed to play opposite Cunco in his forthcoming Doubleday Production Company picture, "Behind the Mask." This is the second of a series of eight 5-reel Westerns the Doubleday Prdouction Company is making for independent distribution by Irving M. Lesser, 635 H. W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles.

Press Book for Johnnie Hines' Feature Ready

"Burn 'em up Barnes," Johnny Hines' initial feature length starring vehicle, to be distributed by Charles C. Burr's Affiliated Distribuotrs, Inc., is a whirlwind automobile racing story, served with a dash of romance, is said to be unusually rich with publicity and exploitation suggestions.

Under the supervision of Mr. Burr, Affiliated's Publicity Department has prepared a campaign book of the type best described as Big Show style, containing reproductions of the attractive and comprehensive line of scene and advertising cuts, lithos and special advertising material.

Sam Woods Starts on Paramount Special

Director Sam Wood started work at the Lasky studio last week on his new special production for Paramount in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter will be seen in the three leading roles. "Don't Tell Everything!" is the title finally chosen for the picture, which is from a story by Lorna Moon, with scenario by Albert Shelby LeVine.

Girl Swimmer Braves Rapids for Fox News

Because she overheard Don Hancock of Fox News remark that he would like to make pictures of a young woman swimming the whirlpool rapids of Ausable Chasm, N. Y., Miss Dorothea Behrman, nineteen, of Brooklyn, an amateur, instantly volunteered to attempt the daring exploit. She swam the dangerous rapids and fought away from the falls, coming through with only a few scratches from rocks in the shallows.

The pictures were shown in Fox News, Vol. 2, No. 88.

Gasnier Selects Cast of "Ma'mselle Jo"

Gasnier has begun the work of selecting his cast for "Ma'mselle Jo," his first Director's Production for the R-C Pictures 1921-1922 series, at the Robertson-Cole studios, Hollywood, "Ma'mselle Jo" is from the novel by Harriett T. Comstock.

The cast includes Arthur Stewart Hull, Rose Dione, Tully Marshall, Jack Livingston, George Seigmann and Jack Mower. The title role will be played by Rose Dione.

Heat Not Deterring "Old Nest" Audiences

Proof of the drawing power of Rupert Hughes' screen masterpiece, "The Old Nest," at the Astor Theatre in New York, says a communication from the Goldwyn office, is the fact that the picture has steadily mounted in popularity since its premier four weeks ago. The hot wave of the past few weeks has been a powerful enough factor to speed the departure of all but three specials from Broadway theatres. Nevertheless, the daily receipts at the Astor have climbed steadily, declares the Goldwyn home-office.

EXECUTIVES WHO HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO REALART'S SUCCESS

J. S. Woody Reviews the Past Year

THE season of 1921-22 will mark the third for Realart as a producing-distributor organization, and J. S. Woody, General Manager, reviewed the progress which Realart has made during its brief existence.

"It is not always a pleasant task to summarize past events, but insofar as they concern Realart, I feel that there is not only no cause for regrets for 'what might have been,' but, on the contrary, we have done a number of things for which we have cause to congratulate ourselves.

"Looking back to the summer of 1919, it is particularly gratifying to note the progress that Realart has made since its inception at that time. Then we had but one star—and a world of confidence. Mary Miles Minter, however, was soon joined by Constance Binney and Alice Brady. With those stars as the nucleus of our producing organization, we steadily forged ahead. The year following, our list of stars was augmented by three others, Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels and Justine Johnstone—and Realart became one of the leading factors in the producing field. Then, instead of selling individual pictures, we were enabled to offer a whole season's output of thirty-six pictures.

"The past year has been one of innovation for Realart, as exemplified by the Honor Plan and the Star Franchise policy. Realart is prouder of the Honor Plan of selling pictures than any other accomplishment of its career. Up to last May, when the pay-after-you-play, let-your-box-office-be-the-jury was inaugurated with the five Mayflower specials, Soldiers of Fortune, The Mystery of the Yellow Room, The Deep Purple, The Law of the Yukon and The Luck of the Irish, the idea of trusting to the honesty and sense of fair play of the exhibitor had never been heard of. It was revolutionary—radical. More than one in the field shook his head and said we had gone loco.

But there is a stack of correspondence in the office from hundreds of pleased exhibitors who took advantage of the opportunity for showing several productions of recognized merit, which is everlasting proof that the Honor Plan is a sound and practicable distributing method. "Realart takes the risk," was our slogan.

"The Realart Star Franchise provided a contract by which the exhibitors acquired the presentation rights of our season's productions for a definite sum of money and pledged Realart to a high average of production throughout the season. In order to assure the exhibitors that we would make our guarantee good, we adopted the slogan 'stars are plus.'

"This slogan and the production policy for which it stands, have again been adopted for the ensuing year. Starting with the best stories obtainable, the whole production, from the scenario to the finished positive, will be in the hands of skilled technicians; directors of established ability, strong supporting casts, recognized cameramen and highly trained artisans. These in themselves would be sufficient to guarantee photoplays of unusual merit, but to make assurance doubly sure, we add a plus quantity—the stars. With the acquisition of May McAvoy, we feel that we have added another 'plus' that makes our list of stars second to none.

"The increased facilities for production at our West Coast studios is one of the best assurances we can offer that the high quality of Realart pictures will be maintained. If anything, Realart pictures will be even better, for we have perfected an organization of experts in production matters that will preclude the possibility of making any but the finest.

"Right here I want to emphasize that Realart does not intend to produce any 'super-specials,' 'specials de luxe,' or any other kind of 'specials.' But we do aim to produce what I cannot better term than 'patronage-building' productions—the kind that will maintain not only the reputation of Realart, but that of the exhibitors who show them.

"There is a well-defined reason for this. A 'special,' no matter how extraordinary and no matter how good a box-office asset it proves to be, leaves nothing whereon to build future business, with the possible exception of a re-run. Once played it is almost as dead as a defeated candidate's poster after election. And the consensus of exhibitor's opinion is that specials are becoming increasingly unpopular on account of having to pay added rentals and consequently having to boost their prices, to which the public does not take kindly, or run at a possible loss.

"On the other hand, an exhibitor runs say six, ten, or a dozen pictures such as Realart's. Soon there is established between his patrons and the pictures something that is hard to define—a personal equation, a relationship. Not only do they get to know the stars and casts and begin to look for them, but a certain familiarity with the company that sponsors them is established. This is proved by the hundreds, yes thousands, of letters that pour into the offices and studios addressed to the stars themselves or to the company asking for bits of personal information concerning them.

"Those are the pictures that have a cumulative value, the kind that pave the way for others. The exhibitor who adopts the policy of using a certain number of pictures each year from a well-established organization, pictures featuring certain stars, is operating his theatre as a retailer on a fundamentally correct and sound basis. Like any retail merchant, he is building up a repeat order business which means assured patronage whenever his advertising announces the coming of that company's pictures and stars.

"And one final thought will bear expression: Realart is producing American pictures with American girls for Americans."

Denver First Runs for Educational Output

The entire output of Educational Film Exchanges for the next year in two-reel subjects, with the Robert C. Bruce Scenics Beautiful and Sketchografs added, have been signed up for use in the Rialto and Princess Theatres, two of the biggest first run houses in Denver.

The two-reel subjects included in this contract include the Christie Comedies, twenty-four in number; twelve Torchy Comedies; thirteen Campbell Animal Comedies; twelve Mermaid Comedies; and all of the Selig-Rork Photoplays. The entire series is contracted for in each case, as well as in the case of the Sketchografs and Bruce Scenics.

Big Trade Showing for "Hurricane Hutch"

Arrangements have been completed by the New York and Newark branches of Pathe Exchange, Inc., for what Pathe officials expect will be the biggest trade showing of a serial ever given in this vicinity. "Hurricane Hutch" will be shown in Town Hall, New York City, at 11:30 A. M. Tuesday, August 30th. Every exhibitor in the Metropolitan and Newark areas has been invited to attend this showing.

Another attraction at this performance will be the first presentation of Harold Lloyd's latest multiple reel comedy, "I Do," which will be presented under the direction of Associated Exhibitors, who release through the Pathe exchanges.

Muskogee Has Impromptu Hodkinson Week

Mr. J. C. DeWalt, Hodkinson Representative in Oklahoma City, reports that Mr. Meyers of the Broadway Theatre, Muskogee, started with him on July 28th by playing "Keeping Up With Lizzie" for three days. He followed with playing the "The Spenders" for four days, opening July 31st. This picture in turn was followed by "The Man of the Forest" which opened on August 4th for a three days run, making ten days solid showing of Hodkinson Pictures at the Broadway Theatre.

In addition to this, the Strand ran "The Other Woman" for three days, starting July 31 and a third theatre, The Capitol, ran "Partners of the Tide" for three days starting July 31st.

Harry Carey Completes Filming "The Fox"

Harry Carey has finished "The Fox," his first big Universal-Jewel super-feature. The concluding scenes were made at Universal City where a picturesque stretch of country was illuminated at night by a flaring brush fire, around which the dramatic action was filmed.

Harry Carey wrote "The Fox" himself. It was adapted to the screen by Lucien Hubbard and filmed under the direction of Robert Thornby. Betty Ross Clarke plays opposite Mr. Carey.

One of William Fox's new pictures is "Hickville to Broadway," starring Eileen Percy

Would Aid In Civic Work

Such Co-operation Would React to Industry's Benefit in Day of Need

IN a statment from the First National home office, the attention of the press department of other organizations in the industry is called to the value of keeping an eye out for the larger brand of publicity; to co-operate, wherever possible, with government and civic enterprises. "For in this way may the industry win a few friends at court who will come in handy some dark and dreary day when inimical legislation is under way," declared the statement.

An example of this brand of publicity is supplied by Associated First National, which recently conducted an active compaign in its house organ, "Franchise," urging exhibitors to help the Citizens Military Training Camp proposition along. The camps opened August 7th, with over-subscribed quotas in every one of the nine Corps Areas, and P. C. Harris, adjutant-general of the War Department at Washington has written First National a letter crediting the organization with having aided the campaign to success. Here it is:

"Through Captain C. S. Coulter, I have learned of the valuable publicity you have given the Citizens' Military Training Camps through your 'Franchise' and in other ways. I want to assure you that this office is deeply indebted to you for this patriotic support, which has done much to popularize the camps, not only in the Second Corps Area but throughout the country."

Prior to the receipt of this letter First National had received a similar one from Major General Robert Lee Bullard, commander of the Department of the East with headquarters at Governor's Island.

"This is a brand of co-operation that cannot fail to help the motion picture business and has pointed the way for a closer and more general tie-up with the War Department when the Training Camp campaign opens up next year," declare the First National statement

Goldwyn Units Are Busy

Three Companies Start Work This Week; Rupert Hughes Film on Way

THREE new companies started production at the Goldwyn studios here this week—"Grand Larceny," "His Back Against the Wall," and Rupert Hughes' latest original photoplay, "The Wall Flower."

Wallace Worsley is directing the Albert Payson Terhune story of marriage and disillusion, "Grand Larceny." Lowell Sherman has just been engaged for an important part. The leading roles will be played by Elliott Dexter and Claire Windsor. Tom Gallery, Roy Atwell and Richard Tucker are other members of the notable cast.

Mr. Hughes' new picture, "The Wall Flower," is in production under the direction of E. Mason Hopper with the author in an advisory capacity. Colleen Moore and Richard Dix have the leading roles. Among others in the cast are Tom Gallery, Gertrude Astor and Fanny Stockbridge.

Frank Lloyd will finish the photography on "The Sin Flood," Henning Berger's dramatic story of a group of men and one woman imprisoned in a saloon by a Mississippi River Flood, early next week. Titling and cutting will at once get under way.

Indian Locations in "A Man of Stone"

Among the production activities of the Selznick organization the preparations for Conway Tearle's "A Man of Stone" are just now occupying much attention. Because of the nature of the story locations were necessary that would reflect the terraine and "atmosphere" of India. To find suitable vistas the Atlantic Coast in the vicinity of New York was searched and on Great South Bay the search was rewarded.

Tangier Island fitted exactly into the picture. Headquarters were established at Patchogue and every morning a flotilla of motor boats carried the Selznick star and his company across the bay to location.

Big Response to R-C's Book-a-Week Drive

The manner in which exhibitors in first run houses throughout the country are falling in line for R-C Pictures Book-A-Week campaign is highly gratifying, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution for R-C Pictures Corporation.

"Reports from every exchange in the organization show an extraordinary increase in full week bookings of R-C Pictures," Mr. Rogers says, "with a greater proportion of first-run houses booking one production for a solid week than in any other year of the organization's history. There is also an unusually large number of bookings of two pictures for a split week program."

"Hickville to Broadway" for Eileen Percy

Carl Harbaugh, author and director of "Hickville to Broadway," Eileen Percy's newest picture, a late August release by Fox, has provided that young star with exceptional opportunities, announces that company. "Hickville to Broadway" is characterized by even more striking contrasts than the title itself suggests, and is replete with surprises. The element of suspense is sustained, and a flow of humor pervades the photoplay. The star is supported by William Scott, Ed Burns, John Lockney, Rosemary Theby, Margaret Morris and Ray Howard.

Hodkinson Releases Are Booked by Paramount

The Hodkinson home-office advises that a report from its Western Division manager bears the news that two of its recent releases, "The Face of the World" and "Keeping Up with Lizzie," have been booked by the Paramount-Empress Theatre of Salt Lake City.

Shooting in South

Catherine Curtis, the woman producer, has gone South to make some scenes for a new production, and is now at Jacksonville, Florida.

Frisco Setting for New Production

Advices have been received in New York to the effect that Robert G. Vignola, Director of Special Productions for Cosmopolitan, and his Company, have arrived at San Francisco after a pleasant transcontinental trip, and will shortly begin the taking of exterior scenes for the next Marion Davies' starring vehicle, which Director Vignola is to do.

It is understood that the majority of the exterior scenes for this production will be taken in and around San Francisco, because the city by the Golden Gate affords the proper atmosphere necessary to this production.

While the title and authorship of the story are not available at this time, it is understood that the story first appeared in fiction form in one of the Hearst magazines.

Accompanying Mr. Vignola is Luther Reed, who did the scenario, and who will work with Mr. Vignola during the course of production, Phil Masy, Mr. Vignola's assistant, and Ira Morgan, Cameraman.

Mr. Vignola expects to be gone about six weeks. The interior scenes will be done in New York at Cosmopolitan studios.

Paramount Exchanges in Close Race for Lead

The race among the various Paramount Exchanges for first honors for Paramount Week, September 4th-11th, is still wide open, with practically every one of the twenty-nine branches having a good chance to come in the winner.

According to H. C. Ballance, General Sales Manager, all the offices are reporting tremendous gains each week, indicating the confidence with which exhibitors all over the country are approaching the opening of the new motion picture season.

According to the returns tabulated August 6, Indianapolis, the newest of all the Paramount Exchanges, is enjoying a comfortable lead. San Francisco, however, is running a good second, hard pressed by Los Angeles which during the week advanced from sixth to third place. Other offices which registered big gains during the week are Seattle, which advanced from eighth to fifth; Chicago, which moved up from tenth to sixth; and New Haven, which jumped all the way from seventeenth to twelfth.

Pathe Series Opens Sept. 25

"Netting the Leopard" Is First of Major Jack Allen's Hunting Films

MAJOR JACK ALLEN, well-known hunter and tamer of wild animals, will make his bow to the motion picture public on September 25. Pathe announces this date of release of "Netting the Leopard," the first of a series of one-reelers produced by Adventure Films, Inc., in which, according to the major's published statement, his savage four-legged captives "play the star parts." Those who have seen the screen results, however, declare that "Major Jack" fully lives up to his wide reputation for extraordinary courage, physical activity and general uncanny mastery of his specialty of taking alive and unharmed the most powerful and ferocious of wild animals. Through his illustrated lectures before vaudeville audiences throughout the country, and widely published newspaper articles describing these exploits, Major Allen's name and fame are familiar everywhere, declares a statement from the Pathe headquarters.

As indicated in the title, "Netting the Leopard" fully illustrates the most important point in connection with "Major Jack's" jungle adventures. He never uses firearms except for defense of human life in a sudden emergency. Most of such emergencies he is able to foresee and avoid owing to his thorough understanding of the habits of the beasts. He throws a rope with the accuracy of a "cowpuncher," and, with movements as rapid as those of the enraged animal itself, renders the latter harmless-bound head and feet before it can do any damage.

The hunter is accompanied into the jungle by native "beaters," but they do not aid him in the actual capture, which he performs single-handed. The picture of course has its "story," in which a coffee planter and his daughter are saved from the leopard's attack.

First National Units in East Hard at Work

Eastern independent units releasing their plays through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., are hard at work. Richard Barthelmess is well under way in "Tol'ble David," the Joseph Hergesheimer-Saturday Evening Post story which he is making in the West Virginia mountains. Constance Talmadge has about finished "Good for Nothing," while Whitman Bennett has completed "Wife Against Wife"

Europe in Need of Comedies, Writes Stern

Some of the largest countries in Europe in their great fight to re-establish normalcy have an unsatiating hunger for clean comedies, says part of a letter received several days ago from Julius Stern, president of the Century Comedies, who is spending the last days of his vacation in Paris, Berlin and Karlsbad.

Cities like Paris, Berlin, Munich, Lyons, Luxembourg, Havre, and countries of France, Cecho-Slovakio and Germany, resort to motion pictures for propaganda of good cheer more than any other of the countries in Europe. The most popular comedies, the letter concludes, are Sennett, Fox and Century Comedies, and the educationals that show the wonders of America are always in demand.

Elaine Hammerstein Has Fine Vehicle

The early showings of "Remorseless Love," the Selznick offering pre-released against its regular date, August 10th, have resulted in much praise for Elaine Hammerstein in a type of role she has not previously specialized in. Society plays have been generally used in exploiting Miss Hammerstein in Selznick pictures, but in "Remorseless Love" there is an entire absence of any scenes or incidents that reflect "society."

Miss Hammerstein appears in the role of a country school teacher who becomes the center of a quarrel among mountaineers that finally ends in the termination of a feud of long standing.

Craftsman Laboratory to Handle "Tarzan"

Arrangements were perfected this week between Louis Weiss, Secretary of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation and Leonard Abrams, General Manager of Craftsmen Film Laboratories, whereby the latter organization will handle the entire output of release prints for the latest Tarzan serial starring Elmo Lincoln. Ten million feet of the serial "Adventures of Tarzan" will be printed by the Craftsmen forces during the course of the next four months. An extra corps of laboratory workers has been engaged for this special purpose.

"The Sting of the Lash" Scores on the Coast

"The Sting of the Lash," Pauline Frederick's most recent starring vehicle for R-C Pictures Corporation, was exhibited at the California Theatre, Los Angeles, for the first time recently. The opening exhibition was marked by the longest line of patrons in front of the theatre recorded since the big house was thrown open, it is declared.

Press reviews of the most complimentary nature were given the production in the Los Angeles press. Florence Lawrence, writing in the Examiner, wrote: "The best work in Frederick's career. One of the strongest character portrayals ever given. Will rival her far-famed interpretation of 'Madame X.'"

News Reel Shows Scene from Aywon Picture

"The Fighting Breed" is the first of a series of three productions featuring this versatile actor, the world's rights of which are owned by Nathan Hirsh, president of Aywon Film Corporation.

New Christie Comedy on Educational Schedule

"Falling for Fanny," is the fourth of the new series of Christie Comedies being distributed by Educational. It presents Eddie Barry in the leading role, that of a bashful fellow trying to follow the directions of his best friend on how to win a wife.

The comedy complications are numerous when the first girl on whom Eddie tries the advice of his friend (Vic Rottman) happens to be his friend's own wife. This part is played by Helen Darling.

Selznick Scenario Staff Gets 4 More Readers

Myron Selznick, vice president in charge of production of the Selznick Corporation, has just added four more readers to his staff in the scenario department. This is taken to mean increased production.

The story problem, insofar as it pertains to the Selznick organization, is being given particular attention at this time inasmuch as the company is now making definite plans for an entire year's productions for the future, it is announced by the Selznick headquarters.

'We'll Get You Yet," Hallroom Comedy

"We'll Get You Yet" is the title that has been given the seventh of the Federated Hallroom Boys comedies, featuring Sid Smith, which Harry Cohn, the producer, has just forwarded to the New York office of Hallroom Boys Comedies, Inc., for final editing and titling.

This comedy will follow "We Should Worry" on the release schedule, the latter comedy having been turned over this week to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release.

Old & Present-Day New York in Kineto Reel

Charles Urban has just published a Kineto Review called "Old New York," that will give motion picture audiences an excellent comparative idea of how the splendor of the metropolis today compares with the city as it used to be. Each of the scenes is comparative. First one sees the view of former times, then follows the picture as it actually is today.

Twelve Warner Pictures

Dozen Features for Independent Market; Five Already Completed

TWELVE feature productions have been planned for the forthcoming season by Warner Brothers for distribution to the independent market, according to a recent announcement by A. Warner. Five of the features have already been completed, and these in addition to the others now in the course of production are being made under the direct supervision of Harry Rapf. William Nigh is directing.

"The twelve features will comprise the best stories obtainable, coupled with the acquisition of the best known screen celebrities available," said Mr. Rapf. "Each and every production will be made to meet the highest and most artistic demand of the general public, and in this respect we are working for the benefit of the exhibitor. Probably at no other time in the history of motion pictures has there been the incessant cry for better and bigger productions, and it devolves upon the independent producer to give the exhibitor features worthy of high class presentation at reasonable rentals."

The five productions already completed and directed by Mr. Nigh under the supervision of Mr. Rapf are: "Why Girls Leave Home," featuring Anna Q. Nillson and an all star aggregation comprising Julia Swayne Gordon, Corinne Barker, Claude King, Dan Mason, Jack O'Brien, Maurine Powers, Kathryn Perry (Mrs. Owen Moore), Kate Blanke, and George Lessee; "School Days," with the inimitable Wesley Barry, by special arrangement with Marshall Neilan; "What Children Will Do," with an all star cast; "The Daughter-In-Law," starring the famous portrayer of mother love roles, namely, Vera Gordon; and "Parted Curtains" with Henry B. Walthal, Mary Alden, who portrays the lead in the Ruphert Hughes story "The Old Nest," and other well known screen players.

The remaining seven productions being made by Warner Brothers are now being filmed.

Foreign Business Growing

William Fox Sees Big Year Ahead; "Connecticut Yankee" a London Hit

THE great success of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" at the Alhambra Theatre, London, has brought an increasing demand from British exhibitors for all of William Fox's new product, but especially in the demand for the big special productions extraordinary, announces William Fox. Not only is this true but these big pictures may have the effect or more effectively breaking down the advance booking system against which all England is crying, declares the Fox statement.

As is known by everyone, the British exhibitors have kept booking pictures in advance with such a vengeance that most of them have already contracted for pictures that they will not show until the latter part of 1922 and some of them in 1923.

The British public is tired of hearing about good pictures today and not being able to see them for a year or more.

When Winfield R. Sheehan was abroad recently he arranged for the trade showing of "A Connecticut Yankee." Both trade and newspaper critics lauded it. The demand from exhibitors for the picture came in volume. Mr. Sheehan explained that the Fox pictures must be shown within several months, and the exhibitors agreed.

"A Connecticut Yankee" will therefore be one of the big fall features for the British public. The Britihs exhibitors recognize the wonderful drawing power of the picture. Mr. Sheehan arranged for a six weeks' run of this Mark Twain story at the Alhambra and it drew to the Alhambra box office not only the ardent picture goers but Royalty and men and women from all walks of life.

The London office is reported to be overwhelmed with inquiries about "Over the Hill" and "Queen of Sheba," the next two big Fox pictures planned for release in Great Britain. These will also get an early release date so that the British public will see them at their local theatres within a short time after their release in this country. Mr. Sheehan has also ordered frequent trade showings of the regular Fox pictures.

The Fox company reports excellent business throughout Great Britain and Ireland. And good reports are made from every corner of the globe where Fox pictures are shown. On the continent, especially, is the Fox product in demand. The sales force in Paris from which all France and Belgium is served, has had to be increased because of the widening of the territory that is now showing Fox pictures.

In far away Australia where the Fox brand of photoplays has always been well received, comes the statement that the Fox serial, "Bride 13," has broken all sales records. It is called the best serial Australia has ever received.

Rothacker Educational on Shoe Industry

A three-reel educational picture, "Shoes of Service," has been produced by the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. for a large manufacturer of rubber footwear. Scenes of the production of crude rubber in tropical countries opens the picture. Then follows a visualization, step by step, of just how American industry creates a rubber shoe. The film will prove an educational adventure for persons who have never been through a rubber shoe manufacturing plant.

Paramount Week to Be Held in Australasia

PARAMOUNT week, September 4th to 11th, will reach more than half way around the world, for it will be observed not only throughout the United States but in Honolulu, Manila and Australasia.

Word has been received from the headquarters of Feature Films, Ltd., the organization which handles the distribution of Paramount Pictures in Australasia, located in Sydney, N. S. W., that the Antipodean territory is now witnessing its first annual Paramount Week drive. The dates are the same as those of Paramount Week in this country, and every indication points to an excellent showing.

Six Mayo Subjects for New Term Are Chosen

Director General of Productions Irving Thalberg of Universal has already provided Frank Mayo, with six of the eight stories in which he will appear during the year 1921-1922.

The first picture is entitled "The Shark Master" and was written and produced by Fred LeRoy Granville. The second Mayo production is entitled "Flying Fists" and was developed from a magazine story by William Harper Dean, which appeared in The Country Gentleman. The third production is "Doctor Jim," and was written by Stuart Paton. This picture is now nearing completion under the direction of William Worthington. "Doctor Jim" like "The Shark Master" is a sea story.

Three other productions have been purchased and are now being put into continuity form for Mayo. One is "The Slipper Tongue," a Saturday Evening Post story by William J. Neidig. The second story is Clarence Buddington Kelland's "Wards of the North. This story was written especially for Mayo by Mr. Kelland and is to appear in story form in the American Magazine. The third new story is "The Altar Stairs" by G. B. Lancaster.

Goldwyn Acquires Rider Haggard's "Beatrice"

A third "foreign" film has been acquired for distribution in America by Goldwyn. Although made in Italy, the picture was directed by Herbert Brenon, one of the best American producers, and its star is one of America's most popular screen and stage players, Marie Doro. Alexander Salvini, son of the famous tragedian, Tomasso Salvini, plays opposite her.

The picture is "Beatrice," an adaptation of Rider Haggard's romantic story of the rocky coast of Wales. Mr. Brenon directed it for the Unione Cinematografica Italiana de Roma. Photographing was done at the picturesque Italian city of Tarmone, and many superbly beautiful backgrounds were caught by the camera.

A. P. Closes Deal with So. California Chain

GENERAL MANAGER AL LICHTMAN of Associated Producers, Inc., has completed the contracts whereby all the releases of that distributing company will be shown by the Southern California circuit of theatres owned by Gore Brothers, Ramish and Sol. Lesser. The contracts cover the entire eighteen features so far released by Associated Producers.

The contract was negotiated through V. P. Whitaker, resident manager of the Los Angeles Exchange of Associated Producers, representing Mr. Lichtman, and Harry C. Arthur, Jr., General Manager for the Gore-Lesser chain.

Seven-Reel Special for Warren

F. B. WARREN announces from California that a contract has been closed with Nell Shipman Productions, Inc., through Willian H. Clune, its president, for the world-wide distribution of a tremendous seven-reel outdoor production "The Girl from God's Country," written, directed and starred in by Nell Shipman.

"The Girl from God's Country" is, in Mr. Warren's opinion, the biggest of the great Canadian outdoor productions which made Miss Shipman one of the most powerful drawing stars of the screen for the past two years.

Competitive distributors have been bidding for "The Girl from God's Country" throughout the year that was consumed in its production, it is declared. Acquisition of this important distributing contract by the Warren organization comes about through a long-time acquaintance between Mr. Warren and Mr. Clune, one of the veteran and pioneer producers and exhibitors of the motion picture industry. Mr. Clune has expressed his confidence in the Warren organization and the business policies of the company.

Nell Shipman Starred in "The Girl from God's Country"

"The Girl from God's Country" will have its American premiere at Clune's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles, beginning September 11th, for an indefinite run, thereby changing the policy of the theatre. It is announced for nation-wide release on September 18th, but will play important releases in other large cities the week of September 11th.

Miss Shipman has written and directed with Bert Van Tuyle assisting as co-director, a picture of immense scope and dimension, it is declared.

Nell Shipman portrays a dual role as Marion Carslake, daughter of an American millionaire — then as Neeka, a girl of the great outdoors; she has two distinct characterizations and personalities. The story deals with the great Canadian outdoors and many novelties aided by animal actors are in evidence. Beautiful snow scenes and thrilling aeroplane maneuvers make this picture a distinct production for the coming year.

The acting cast is headed by Nell Shipman. Other screen celebrities included in "The Girl from God's Country" are Boyd Irwin, Edward Burns, Al. Filson, George Berrell, Walt Whitman, C. K. VanAuker, Lillian Leighton, L. M. Wells, Milla Davenport and others.

Announcement is also made by Mr. Warren that the Warren organization will distribute in thirty states of the Union and in Canada the famous W. H. Clune production "Ramona" and will also handle the foreign sales in all lands of "Ramona" and "Eyes of the World."

The Warren organization has also obtained a four-reel automobile novelty thriller and two-reel novelty, "A Boy, a Bear and a Dog" from Mr. Clune and his allies.

Other announcements of powerful productions of which the F. B. Warren Corporation has acquired the distribution will be made in a few days from California, where Mr. Warren has been watching productions in the making for the past thirty days.

Pickford Picture Soon Ready

MARY PICKFORD is making every possible effort to complete the filming of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" within the next week so she can acompany her husband to New York for the opening of "The Three Musketeers" at the Lyric Theatre on August 28th.

The Pickford company has divided into two flying squadrons, with Jack Pickford at the head of one and Alfred E. Green in command of the other, and while one division shoots interiors the other works on exteriors. As a result of this arrangement, Miss Pickford finds herself working under the direction of her brother one day and under the guidance of Mr. Green the next, depending on whether the scenes she is to do are interior or exterior.

With the exception of a trip to San Francisco, to make scenes representing the exterior of Dorincourt Castle, the entire celluloid version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been filmed on the Brunton lot. Sets representing the interior of Dorincourt Castle, the exterior of the Lodge, and a New York street scene were built; also several interiors that duplicated old New York flats of a half century ago.

Had it not been for the special generator designed by Miss Pickford's electrician, William Johnson, some difficulty would have been experienced in getting "juice" for the lights, owing to the fact that a strike is now on at Los Angeles studios. But with a "lightning-maker" mounted on rubber tires and driven by a Liberty motor, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was able to light not only his castle but also any location where "juice" was needed.

"After the Show" Editing Is Completed

A Glance at Realart's Schedule

REALART'S intentions for the season of 1921-22 are illustrated by the preliminary announcement of some of the attractions for the coming year. Unique is the slogan which Realart has adopted in connection with their production plans, "stars are plus," particular emphasis being placed upon the matter of stories as being one of the principal elements.

To this end they have arranged to produce not only standard books and plays by such authors as E. Lloyd Sheldon, Edward Locke, and Sam Merwin, but have assembled a staff of well-known writers, who will furnish original material, among whom are Hector Turnbull, Harvey O'Higgins, Elmer Harris, Douglas Doty, Percy Heath, Lorna Moon, Grace Drew, J. Clarkson Miller, Aubrey Stauffer, Ewart Adamson and others. Another important element, that of direction, will be in the hands of some of the most capable men whom the industry has developed.

One of Mary Miles Minter's stories will be "Her Winning Way," which has been adapted by Douglas Doty from the play "Ann." This was written by Lechmere Worrall from the popular novel, "Ann Annington," of Edgar Jepson. Joseph Henabery is the director and Gaston Glass plays the lead opposite Hiss Minter.

Another Minter picture will be "Tillie," an adaptation of "Tillie the Mennonite Maid," the novel by Helen R. Martin. This story was dramatized and played at the Henry Miller Theatre in New York.

Bebe Daniels will be seen in "The Speed Girl," an original story by Elmer Harris which has been adapted by Douglas Doty and directed by Maurice Campbell.

"Spring Fever" will be another one of those jazzy stories for which Miss Daniels is eminently fitted.

Constance Binney will be starred in "Room and Board," a story of old Ireland by Charles E. Whittaker, which has been adapted by Donnah Darwell. It was directed by Alan Crosland.

"The Case of Becky" is another Binney story. As a stage drama this story was played under the direction of David Belasco with Frances Starr. Edward Locke is the author of the original, the adaptation being done by J. Clarkson Miller and directed by Chester Franklin. The theme of the story is based on a dual personality and hypnotism.

"The Heart of Youth" by Sonya Levien, and "The Heritage of Dedlow March" by Bret Harte, which was adapted from one of the stories in "Maruju and Other Tales," are the tentative titles of two other pictures that Miss Binney will do.

Wanda Hawley will be seen in "Her Face Value," a Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers which originally appeared under the title of "The Girl Who Paid Dividends." This story was directed by Thomas H. Heffron from the adaptation by Percy Heath.

"The Love Charm" in which Miss Hawley will also star is the first original story for the screen by that eminent author, Harvey O'Higgins, the author of "The Argyle Case," "On the Firing Line," "Mr. Lazarus," and other great stage hits. The scenario was arranged by Percy Heath and directed by Thomas N. Heffron.

"Bobbed Hair," another Hawley picture, is an original by Hector Turnbull, the adaptation being the work of Harvey Thew.

Two of the "Goldie" stories which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post are the sum and substance of "Brass Tacks," another picture by Wanda Hawley. Sam Merwin wrote these two under the titles of "Eva on the Ice" and "Saving Sister," but Edward Adamson welded them into one picture for Realart's blonde comedienne. Her breezy manner is the requirement for the part of this twentieth-century business woman who demonstrates that she can take care of herself under any and all conditions.

"The Cry Baby" is another typical Hawley picture, the story for which was written by John H. Blackwood.

For Alice Brady there will be "Dawn of the East," a story of the Orient by E. Lloyd Sheldon, an intense drama based on an actual occurrence in the Far East. It is a melodrama with exciting chances, hair-breadth escapes and rescues combined. The direction is by E. H. Griffith.

Another Alice Brady picture will be "Hush Money," a story by Sam Merwin. It is the story of a wealthy New Yorker who believes that money can purchase everything. His daughter (Alice Brady) through an automobile accident is brought to a realization of her father's fallacy, as is her fiance also.

Realart's "Wonder Girl," May McAvoy, will be seen in "Everything For Sale," "A Virginia Courtship," "Too Much Wife" and "The Happy Ending."

Fox Plant Typifies Advance

Laboratory Shows Marvelous Progress Made in Handling of Film

IN the Fox Film Laboratory located in West 55th Street, New York City, may be seen concrete evidences of the marvelous progress that has been made in the laboratory treatment of film. The great Fox Studio Building in New York stands as an example of the amazing progress made by what is still regarded as an infant industry.

It was not so long ago that positive film was printed on a machine that was turned by hand, with halts here and there to give a different density to the scenes. Now all this is done by machines that work automatically, notches in the negative controlling the differences in lighting.

In these "advanced" days, machines have been constructed to turn out sufficient finished product to encircle the globe many times. For instance this Fox laboratory can make ready for the public three million feet of film every year. And in this plant also are machines that can turn out millions of feet of positive film which no human hand touches from the time it enters the machine until it comes out in reels of a thousand feet, developed, washed and dried, ready for shipment to the various theatres throughout the world.

The Fox Laboratory is generally conceded to be the finest of its kind in the world. Its vaults where the films are stored are so constructed as to eliminate practically all hazzards. They are the safest of any in America. Eighteen inch concrete walls separate one vault from another. Eighteen inch concrete walls separate the vaults from the other rooms. From each of these vaults there is a baffled ventilator that reaches above the roof. The racks for the films in the vaults are so arranged that damage to film is impossible. In this Fox laboratory also is the largest printing and perforating plant in the world. In one room with its white tiled walls are over thirty printing machines, and in another, also white tiled, are nearly forty perforating machines.

Jack C. Leo, vice president of the corporation, is the man who planned and executed the plans for the Fox film laboratory.

"Selznick Supreme Six"

Specials to Be Heralded by Big Campaign; Two Already Completed

IN the recent Selznick announcement for 1921-22 a group of pictures were listed as "Selznick Supreme Six" to indicate the limited number of specials which the Selznick company plan to release during the next twelve months. Included in the list were "A Man's Home," the photoplay version of the play by the same name written by Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese; "Conceit," from Michael J. Phillips' story recently published in Munsey's Magazine, William Faversham in John Galsworthy's "Justice," and "The Easiest Way," the new photoplay version which is to be made coincident with the revival of the famous Eugene Walter play by David Belasco some time this Fall. The remaining two specials were not announced.

Of the "Selznick Supreme Six," two have been finished and are practically ready for release. The first, "A Man's Home" will be in the territory, it is said, about the latter part of next month.

Just now, with advertising accessories being prepared for the first big special, lot of people not directly connected with the Selznick organization are being given the opportunity of viewing the picture and from these—among them lithographers, lobby display men, etc.—comes the report that in "A Man's Home" the Selznick Corporation have one of the biggest pictures of the year.

On paper, at least, "A Man's Home" looks like an exceptional bet. Anna Steese Richardson, who is responsible for the plot material, is widely known as a fiction writer and as an associate editor of the Woman's Home Companion. Ralph Ince directed the production. Harry T. Morey, Kathlyn Williams, Faire Binney, Grace Valentine, and Roland Bottomley are included in the cast.

R-C In New Step Forward

Resumption of Production in West Opens New Phase of R-C's Expansion

THE formal opening a few days ago of the R-C Pictures Corporation studios in Hollywood marked the beginning of a new phase of development and the start of the most ambitious program ever attempted by this rapidly growing organization. Several weeks ago the studios suspended operations, having completed their schedule of releases considerably ahead of time, thus giving the New York office an opportunity to carry out its $4,000,000 reorganization plans and to perfect production arrangements for the summer, autumn and winter.

With a schedule calling for a series of productions with Pauline Frederick, Sessue Hayakawa, Doris May and an all-star series to be directed by L. J. Gasnier together with a number of other interesting features to be announced later, every one of the big stages at the studio will be in constant use from now on it is declared. William Christy Cabanne is at work in the East at present on "The Barricade" from the novel by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "The Wonder Man."

Work has already begun on Doris May's first starring vehicle for R-C Pictures. The story with the working title "The Foolish Age" was adapted for the screen by Violet Clark from the original version by Hunt Stromberg.

Campbell Animal Comedy on Educational List

William S. Campbell has completed and delivered in New York for early release by Educational the first animal comedy made under his own banner. It is called "The Stork's Mistake."

Campbell is well-known as a director of children and animal actors. He has directed more animal pictures than any other director in the industry, declares a statement from Educational's home office. During the last year, during which he directed animal comedies for another producer, but which also were released by Educational, Campbell was seldom to be seen except with his chief animal actor at his elbow.

In "The Stork's Mistake" Campbell has used an unusual collection of animals, as well as many babies and children, it is stated. A turtle, dogs of different sizes and types, a monkey, a bear, and the Great White Horse of the Campbell company are all in the play.

Evelyn Greeley Signed for "The Storm"

Evelyn Greeley, who co-starred with Bernard Durning in "Diane of Star Hollow" and who has worked with William Farnum in "His Greatest Sacrifice" since completing the former, has signed with A. P. Bimberg to start immediate work as one of the leads in his prospective production of "The Storm."

Hodkinson Names Fall Releases

IN a statement issued during the week, W. W. Hodkinson announces the release schedule for the first four months of the coming fall season.

In September will be released "A Certain Rich Man" and "God's Crucible." "A Certain Rich Man" is a screen adaptation of William Allen White's novel, and was produced by Benjamin B. Hampton. The cast includes Robert McKim, Claire Adams, Jean Hersholt and Carl Gantvoort. During its pre-release showing at Miller's Theatre in Los Angeles, the press and public accorded the picture a highly favorable reception.

"God's Crucible," an Ernest Shippman presentation, was made in Winnipeg, Canada, by the Winnipeg Productions, Inc. It is the picturization of Ralph Connor's novel "The Foreigner." The cast includes Gaston Glass, Wilton Lackaye, Gladys Coburn, Kate Price, Edward Elks, Bradley Barker, Robert T. Haines, Gordon Standing, Ann Sutherland, Bigelow Cooper, Edna Shippman, William Colvin and Dan Duffy. "God's Crucible" was directed by Henry Alexander McRae.

In October, Hodkinson lists three productions for release—"Rip Van Winkle," "Jane Eyre" and "The Mysterious Rider." Ward Lascelle procured for the playing of the central role in "Rip Van Winkle," Thomas Jefferson, the son of the famous Joseph Jefferson, who created the role upon the speaking stage. His supporting cast includes Mary Anderson, Daisy Robinson, Pietro Sosso, Milla Davenport, Max Asher, Francis Carpenter, the child actor, and many other popular players. It is expected that the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation will arrange for a very elaborate premier presentation at a Broadway theatre where "Rip Van Winkle" will appear simultaneous with after its national release.

"Jane Eyre" is said to be the greatest work that Hugo Ballin has yet done for the screen. Mabel Ballin plays the central role in this production and is supported by Norman Trevor and Crauford Kent. "The Mysterious Rider," also scheduled for release in October, is a Benj. B. Hampton production adapted to the screen from Zane Grey's greatest novel.

November—Hodkinson Anniversary Month—will be celebrated by the release of "The Light in the Clearing," "Fifty Candles" and "Heart's Haven." "The Light in the Clearing," which has just been completed on the West Coast, under the direction of T. Hayes Hunter, of "Earthbound" fame, is the first of Irving Bacheller's novels to be screened.

"Fifty Candles," Irvin V. Willat's fourth production for Hodkinson release, was written by Earl Derr Biggers and appeared originally in the Saturday Evening Post. Marjorie Daw will be the featured player. "Hearts Haven," the third November release, is a pretentious production made by Benj. B. Hampton. It is the screen adaptation of the nevel by Clara Louise Burnham, and Mr. Hampton has engaged for its making a strong cast, which includes such players as Carl Gantvoort, Claire Adams, Robert McKim, Claire McDowell, Betty Brice, Frankie Lee, Mary Jane Irving, Jean Hersholt, Harry Lorraine, Aggie Herring and Frank Hayes.

December will see the release of "French Heels," the picture which marks Irene Castle's return to the screen after a considerable absence. "French Heels" was produced under the direction of Edwin L. Hollywood. Included in Miss Castle's supporting cast are Ward Crane and Charles Gerard.

"Cameron of the Royal Mounted," will be the second December release of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and incidentally their second Ralph Connor story. It was acquired from Ernest Shippman. Gaston Glass again is entrusted wiith a most important role, and the balance of the cast includes Irving Cummings, Vivian Osborne, and many other players of equal repute.

Fairbanks Coming East with "Three Musketeers"

Douglas Fairbanks is bustling through the titling and cutting of "The Three Musketeers" so as to get it started for New York and the Lyric theatre for its debut on August 28th. Doug will personally conduct this picture into the "Big Village," and will be very much among those present at the initial showing. Accompanying him will be his wife, who by that time will have finished "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

High Quality Cast in Arbuckle's Next

While the cast of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's current production for Paramount, "Freight Prepaid," isn't a large one, it is said to make up in quality what it lacks in quantity. Lila Lee, always a delightful foil for the heavy comedy star, is leading woman. Nigel Barrie has the juvenile lead. Herbert Standing has an important role, while the part of a minister is portrayed by the well-known character actor, Raymond Hatton.

Strong Cast for "Beauty Shop"

Raymond Hitchcock in Film Version of Stage Comedy

IN a statement just received from Cosmopolitan Productions, attention is called especially to the strong line-up assembled for "The Beauty Shop," which is an adaptation of the musical coredy by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. Raymond Hitchcock, who starred in the original stage version, heads the cast appearing in the picturization. Concerning the list of players which will contribute to the fun making in the motion-picture adaptation, Cosmopolitan makes the following statement:

"Billy B. Van and James J. Corbett, that famous pair of comedians, will play the parts of prominent Bolognians who conspire to make Dr. Budd's life in their native country a series of highly uncomfortable thrills. Van and Corbett are not new to pictures, the former having played in five two-reel comedies, and the latter as the hero of motion picture dramas.

"Montague Love, leading man of many screen dramas and an actor with a splendid stage career to his credit, has the role of the heavy who leads the other Bolognians in their handling of Dr. Budd. Mr. Love recently was seen in another Cosmopolitan Production, 'The World and His Wife.'

"The Fairbanks Twins—Marion and Madeleine—will use what spare time their work in Two Little Girls in Blue at the Cohan Theatre affords them to appear in 'The Beauty Shop.' The famous twins will be seen as two dancers with one of whom Dr. Budd falls in love. The twins were attractions a few years ago in the old Thanhouser productions.

"Louise Fazenda, creator of many laughs in scores of comedies, has a comedy role in this production. Miss Fazenda came East from Los Angeles recently to appear in 'The Beauty Shop.' Her newest role is one which her long experience in comedy qualifies her to assume with an assurance that she will be funnier than ever.

"Diana Allen, a Follies girl, known as the 'Swedish Snowbird' because she was born away up north in Gothland, will grace the production as niece and ward of Dr. Budd. This is the third Cosmopolitan Production in which Miss Allen has had a part—the first being 'Heliotrope' and the second 'Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford,' the George M. Cohan comedy-drama that will be released in the Fall.

"Laurence Wheat, familiar in musical comedies and on the screen, completes the cast. He supported Mr. Hitchcock in the theatre production.

"'The Beauty Shop' ran for eighteen weeks at the Astor Theatre in New York in 1914 and the following year covered the country. Mr. Hitchcock is considering appearing next year in the musical comedy in London. Edward Dillon will direct for Cosmopolitan Productions. The scenario was written by Doty Hobart whose script of 'The Woman God Changed,' with its novel development, earned him much praise from the reviewers and public."

New "Cissy" Comedy

Another new subject of the Cissy Fitzgerald series that is being released through the Producers Security Corporation has just been cut and titled, the screen title now being "Cissy's Economy." Another new one will be called "Cissy's Financial Flivver."

Realart Plans for May McAvoy, Latest Star

Pretty May McAvoy, Realart's newest star, who has demonstrated that she is an actress of exceptional ability and unusual versatility

MAY McAVOY—the Wonder Girl—that is the appellation which has been applied by Realart to its latest star. For Miss McAvoy is now a luminary in her full right and will take her place in the group which has been assembled to reflect the glory which is Realart's. And it is not undeserved that stowed upon this youthful artiste, for her progress since her introduction to motion pictures has been phenomenal.

May McAvoy's portrayal of "Grizel" in "Sentimental Tommy" did more than anything else, perhaps, in confirming the opinion held by Realart officials that here was the new star for which their astronomers were searching. And while her rise has been meteoric she does not impress one as possessing only the transitory brightness that will burn itself out in intensity, but rather that of the lasting luminosity of a star of the first magnitude. To quote the New York News, "It seems to me that May McAvoy belongs in a consellation all her own," and, not to mix the methaphors intentionally, the New York World says, "Miss McAvoy is a fresh blossom on the tree of this season's young actresses."

That is wonderful praise, tho' deserved, for a girl who three short years ago humbly started as an "extra" and worked herself up to the very top of the ladder without pull of any kind. Early in her career she created quite an impression as an interpretive actress of no mean ability and it was not long before she achieved a notable success as a leading woman and co-star.

Her first appearance in films was as a little girl in a commercial film which advertised a brand of sugar. That gave her the entree into the studios, however, and her first real part was a sensation to her. Then came a succession of "sister" roles, played with actresses of repute! with Madge Kennedy in "The Perfect Lady," with Florence Reed in "The Woman Under Oath" and later in a similar role with Marguerite Clark in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Her next portrayal was as "the other wife" in "My Husband's Other Wife" and following that as a nurse in "The Sporting Duchess" with Alice Joyce. After that she appeared in "Man and His Woman" with Herbert Rawlinson. Then in rapid succession came "Forbidden Valley," "The House of the Tolling Bell," "Truth About Husbands," "The Devil's Garden" and others that constantly added to her screen technique. Her "Grizel" in "Sentimental Tommy" has already been mentioned.

Realart's General Manager, J. S. Woody, discussing that organization's plans, declares, "We have engaged capable writers to provide stories for Miss McAvoy; as with all of our other stars, no story will be considered just 'good enough.' Each one will have to conform with very rigid qualifications so that even before the story is placed in the hands of the director we shall be sure that the production will be such as to merit its appearance under the Realart banner.

"We have been very proud of the standard which has been set for Realart productions and we will not sacrifice one lot of the prestige which we have striven so hard to attain. We are depending upon Miss McAvoy to gain even greater laurels for Realart during the coming year and if stories will help do the trick, as we know they will, it would be a poor policy indeed to provide any but the best.

"And we will not stop there, for we realize that providing stories is only one step toward the fulfilment of our obligations to Realart Franchise Owners. We will insure the maximum results as far as direction is concerned and to that end we have secured Frank O'Connor as our Wonder Girl's director. He is eminently fitted for this exacting position, and he will have the undivided assistance of Mr. Hector Turnbull, who will supervise all of Miss McAvoy's productions."

The first opportunity which Realart Franchise Owners will have of showing Miss McAvoy as a Realart star will be in "Everything For Sale."

Hector Turnbull has fashioned this drama. Miss McAvoy enacts the role of Helen Wainwright, beloved of two men, one impulsive, romantic; the other a man of wealth who believes that everything on earth has a price. Canada's Big Film Future

Wm. F. Barrett, New Fox Canadian Manager, Sees Further Growth

WILLIAM F. BARRETT, recently appointed Canadian General Manager for Fox Film Corporation, is a firm believer in a great future for Canada and for motion picture enterprises in the Dominion. Mr. Barrett has been identified with the motion picture industry in Canada for thirteen years, and in that time he has seen it grow from almost nothing to its present scope and importance. In the amazing progress made he sees promise of growth such as could not have been dreamed of a few years ago.

"I have seen it grow," said Mr. Barrett, "from the nickelodeon store show, of which there were only four in Toronto, to what it is now, with one hundred and five theatres in the city, and some of them among the finest motion picture palaces in the world. East and West, tremendous strides have been made, and the development of the motion picture field has been truly marvelous. All this, however, is as nothing at all, in my estimation, compared with what is going to be. I consider the outlook for Canada more promising, in proportion to population, than any other field in the world. It is a country of enormous undeveloped possibilities and a people with the will of determination to make the most of these. The Canadians are fond of entertainment, and willing to pay for it. There is a strong and increasing demand for big special productions, such as our twelve big specials which began with 'Over the Hill,' 'A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court,' 'Queen of Sheba,' 'Thunderelap,' 'Shame' and 'A Virgin Paradise.' These are assured of a splendid reception in Canada, where the people are ready to welcome and support the greatest photodramas that can be produced.

A notable achievement by Mr. Barrett was the adjusting of motion picture theatre admission prices in Winnipeg while serving as manager for Western Canada. The theatres were charging 10 eents and operating with diffieulty. Mr. Barrett got the exhibitors together and advised an admission of 15 cents with improvement in the offering. This plan was followed, with the result of larger attendance at the inereased price.

Excellent Exteriors in Viatagraph Feature

David Smith, who is directing Vitagraph's new special, "Flower of the North," returned from the Oregon border this week, carrying some excellent negatives of scenes never before viewed by the eye of the motion picture camera. This was one of the northern locations discovered by David Smith a few months ago, when plans for the adaptation of this James Oliver Curwood novel were started. Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke, the stars of the coming special production, accompanied Mr. Smith, as did about thirty odd members of the supporting cast. One more trip will be taken North to the interior of Oregon before Mr. Smith takes the final interiors.

Big Railroad Scenes in "The Iron Trail"

For the scene of the big fight at the crossroads, between the rival gangs of workers, so vividly described by Rex Beach in his story, "The Iron Trail," nearly a half mile of the tracks of the Wharton & Northern Railroad were torn up and replaced, and over a quarter of a mile of new roadbed was constructed to intersect the main line of the road, while the cameras were grinding for this forthcoming United Artists production.

The location of the Wharton & Northern Railroad was ideal for the scenes because of its location in mountainous country. Miles of open country are seen from its roadway and mountain ridges towering one above the other form a vast vista of wild country.

Critics Laud Ince Picture

"Mother O' Mine" Well Received by Press Reviewers of Big Cities

THE Thomas H. Ince production, "Mother O' Mine," distributed by Associated Producers, has met with an annual measure of praise from the newspaper critics of the various large cities in which it has been given its first-run showings. The following excerpts taken from some of the dailies of San Francisco, Atlanta, Chicago, New York, and St. Louis are typical of the favorable reception accorded by the press reviewers to "Mother O' Mine."

In San Francisco, the News said: "'Mother O' Mine' is the second important work Ince has done for Associated Producers, whose stock goes up with each picture that comes from his studio.

"Miss McDowell gives a sterling performance of the mother. Lloyd Hughes is splendidly employed as the son, and Betty Ross Clark, a lovely creature, is the girl who loves him and brings about his rescue at the eleventh hour."

In Atlanta, much the same opinions were evoked. The Constitution said: "Glory be. Mr. Ince has discovered a fact that very few directors recognize and that is that the motion picture public wants action and lots of it. In 'Mother O' Mine' dramatic situation follows dramatic situation until a climax is reached with as desperate a race with death in as sublime a thunderstorm as has ever been screened."

The St. Louis Globe Democrat said: "'Mother O' Mine' is fully entitled to be called one of the season's best photoplays. The picture contains suspense, excitement, love, and pathos, and in all forms a story that causes smiles and tears."

May Tinee in the Chicago Tribune said: "Here's a picture that is bound to prove popular because of the sheer loveableness of everybody in the cast. If you like tears and dramatics 'Mother O' Mine' will please. Chances are it will, anyway, whether you do or not."

Grace Wyden Vail, in the New York American, sounded the consensus of opinion in that city when she wrote: "'Mother O' Mine' is distinctive and worthwhile for several pleasant reasons. It is melodrama produced with fine dramatic insight. It has a splendid cast of players in roles always human."

Wm. Vogel Sails Again

Change "Passers By" to "Pilgrims of Night"

"Pilgrims of the Night," the first of the fall releases of Associated Producers, Inc., has been completed by J. L. Frothingham. It is a film version of "Passers By," the popular novel written by E. Phillips Oppenheim, and the use of a title for releasing purposes was necessary to avoid confusion with another motion picture which was released formerly. The prints of this subject will be shipped this week to the various A. P. exchanges.

Rubye de Remer and Lewis S. Stone head the cast which also includes Raymond Hatton, Walter McGrail, Frank Leigh, Catherine Kirkham and William V. Mong. Edward Sloman adapted this subject for the screen and also directed the production.

E. W. Hammons Abroad

President of Educational to Study Conditions in the Foreign Markets

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Films Corporation and Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., sailed from New York on the Steamship Olympic Saturday, August 13, for Europe.

Mr. Hammons is to make an extensive study of conditions abroad. He will meet leading exhibitors to discuss their problems as to short subjects, and will examine carefully the various angles of the distribution of American pictures in Europe and the other continents on the other side of the world.

Educational Pictures are now being shown not only throughout Europe, but in Asia and Africa as well. This trip, however, is taken to presage a considerable extension of Educational's activities abroad.

The growth of Educational's business beyond the seas as well as in the United States during its first year as an international distributing organization has made necessary the extension of its European facilities just as it has forced additions to the domestic organization. It was announced just this week that a new American branch exchange would be established at Oklahoma City in addition to the thirty-five already existing in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Hammons will spend several days in London, where he will confer with his London associates on Educational's program of activities for the coming year. Educational's products have shown an especially favorable increase in popularity throughout the British Isles, it is reported.

BUCK, Regional supervisor for the Synchronized Scenario Music Co.,of 64 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago, in the midst of an exploitation campaign in the interests of Synchronized Scenario Music Scores, reports that Chicago exhibitors evincing great interest in the Synchronized Music movement, for better music in motion picture theatres.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to April 9, 1921.

There Are Many Excepted Risks in Fire Insurance

Theatre Owners Should Read His Policy for Protection

EVERY standard fire insurance policy, unless it contain a specific provision to the contrary in the form of a rider, contains a clause which exempts the insuring company from liability on the risk under certain conditions.

These conditions usually provide that the company shall not be liable for any loss or damage to the insured property occasioned by riots, insurrection, civil war or commotion, military or usurped power, by order of the civil authorities, theft, explosion of any kind or lightning. In some policies provisions are made against loss or damage by flood " or other means " not mentioned. There is usually a further provision to the effect that any of these risks may be assumed by specific agreement hereon.

The purpose of this excepted clause in the policy is to limit the liability of the company to only that risk which arises naturally and not through the agency of man or God.

Most business men assume, when they protect their business property by taking out a fire insurance policy that they have secured the maximum protection (from fire) upon said property. But this is not always the case, especially where the business man permits the well-known American trait of carelessness to enter in and he does not read over his policy and understand precisely just what measure of protection it offers.

Did you know, for instance, that only three persons are necessary to constitute a riot in the opinion of the courts, provided they are acting together and have committed or are attempting to commit an unlawful act in a tumultuous manner? A hundred people may be noisily and illegally moving in your direction, but unless they have committed an unlawful act or are attempting to commit one, they are not guilty of rioting. And under the provision of your policy, if your building is damaged or your property, as a result of a riot you cannot recover from the insurance company.

Suppose that a serious fire is in progress and the people present determine to dynamite your building or property in order to prevent its spread. If such is done can you recover from the insurance company? Some of the courts are divided, but the following extract from a decision seems to voice the better rule:

" It is certainly very much against the true interests of insurers to raise any objection founded on honest efforts of the insured or others to prevent the spread of fires, much more to print clauses meant to make the right of recovery depend upon what is or what is not done by strangers or others present at the fire. Life indeed, as well as property, is often in peril, but where it is not, men might be disposed under such circumstances, out of regard for the insured, to stand still and let the property perish rather than imperil his rights by interfering with his claim for indemnity against the insurers. It would be a novel clause to introduce into a policy that in case of fire the insurance would be void if any water were applied to extinguish it. Quite as novel would it be were it provided that if there were no water nothing should be done. Yet the defendants in this case have told us that the clause that the insurers would not be liable for an explosion by gunpowder was meant to guard against the very thing which had been done."

The excepted clause to the effect that the insurance company will not be liable for any loss occasioned by an explosion, is also susceptible of different rulings. No less an authority than the U. S. Supreme Court, however, has held that if an explosiion occurs in a building across the street which causes a fire then spreads to the insured property and destroys it, that the insurance company is not liable for the loss, under such a provision in the policy. The theory upon which the decision was based was to the effect that the explosion produced the fire; that it was immaterial whether it be produced on the insured premises or not and that no intervening cause had arisen to change the original origin of the fire.

There is also a provision in the excepted clause to the effect that the insurance company will not be liable for any loss occasioned by the fall of the building or any part thereof, to the building or to the contents thereof.

Speaking of this provision, Joyce, an accepted authority, has said: " Under a provision that " if a building or any part thereof fall except as the result of fire all insurance by this policy on such building or its contents shall immediately cease," the company exempts itself from any and all loss occurring subsequently to the falling of the building, although a fire may ensue immediately after a building has fallen . . . An exception of this nature in a policy is, like all others, to be strictly construed. So long as the building remains standing the policy does not cease, and the insurers are not exempt, no matter how much it may be damaged by the action of the elements or otherwise . . . If the fall of the building is caused by anything except, or as the result of, fire, recovery is precluded, but if the fire preceded and caused said fall insurer would be liable."

There are also many exemptions to the effect that insurance companies will not be liable for loss or damage caused by earthquakes. The San Francisco disaster gave us many cases upon this point. In one case, it was shown that the earthquake had not damaged the building or property in question but that fire, starting from damaged buildings had spread to it and destroyed it.

The insurance company contended that it was not liable for the reason that the earthquake had been the proximate cause of the damage and loss. The U. S. Circuit Court, however, did not seem to accept this view for it held the insurer liable, under this decision: " Conceding that it (the earthquake) was the procuring, efficient, predominating cause, it was not nevertheless the direct cause. It did not produce a fire on the insured premises. An earthquake, unaided by other agencies, produces no fire."

Fire very often originates on insured premises by means of lightning. The Music and Color and the Moving Picture Alcove

Decorating Music With Light and Color

By Mary Hallock-Greenwalt

For decorating music nothing succeeds like succession. For decorating the moving picture alcove nothing "arrives" like color. The picture is brown, no matter how "rosy and violet" be the star, or vivid the plot. The music, too, is likely to seem grey following the light of the world, offered in the lover's kiss on the screen.

What choice for the house manager but to link the color and the color succession to music. This is not the way the idea was born; but what a cradle for nursing the rainbow in the darkened house.

I am supposed to half way interest the readers of the Motion Picture News. This is hard to do, with the human masterpiece creations of a Goldwyn, a Griffith, a Lasky and all the others, speaking from every page.

Try to describe the colors in the light? Try to find the words with which to wing the ray to music? Let us at all events be practical and definite.

Mary Hallock-Greenewalt seated at her invention for playing with light as a means of emotional and abstract expression in time succession. She considers this a sixth fine art to which she has given the Arabic name of Nourather: essence or impress of light—Photo by Ellis. (Insert) Rodney Clarke, the first Nourather player or light playing artist. His accompaniments to the highest music are extremely subtle and fine. Photo by Chandler, Philadelphia

To begin at the end. We hold now, after fifteen years of thought and labor, the patents for accompanying music with light, and light means also the color rays of which it is composed. We can make light scores without being interfered with, and some other hundred points or so underlying the whole subject are ours alone to use.

The light player table, compact, graceful, keyed to the human body whose individual emotion it is to pass on to others, is manufactured. Daily rehearsals are in progress. Students are in training, and the "now you have it, now you haven't it" of light and music interpretation is better nailed to the ground.

We, too, have a silver screen cage to hold our visions, but it is called an "ellipdomeria" (we had to coin the word), and it is scientifically constructed to safeguard all the rays and their spill.

Our heart thumps like mad when the light artist, while accompanying the music, does the right thing at the right time, and exactly in the right way. This, I imagine, is about as hard to do as getting the aforementioned screen kiss "over." We could murder "green" for all time to come when it makes itself too fresh with the "blue." It takes two husky prize-fighting blue lamp filters, you know, to keep one cocky green one in sufficient subjection to make his appearance modest to the emotion in hand.

After playing with rose creeping into blood red at the height of an "Oh, my love!" phrase, we go with peace and quietness into a lagoon of blue, and so ad infinitum. A few million etceteras, please.

We have decided it is without any shadow of doubt a new fine art, the sixth to come into existence, and that it is a great one. But, like all the fine arts, it depends almost entirely on how the thing is done.

A violin, as every one knows, can sound worse than a cat on the back fence, and I daresay it is also a known fact in studio circles that the prettiest movie stars are likely on occasion to outdo their homely sisters in homeliness. So it goes with the best in the world, and this supremely exquisite art finds no exception to the rule.

There is, however, now in existence, a mechanism that can make possible the Pipe Organs a Necessary Adjunct to Motion Pictures

King of Musical Instruments Sought by Patrons

By David Marr, Marr & Colton Co., Inc., Warsaw, N. Y.

People go to a moving picture theatre primarily, of course, to see an attractive picture.

But a motion picture theatre may offer excellent pictures week after week and yet, through lack of a Certain Something in the atmosphere of the house, may fall far short of playing to capacity audiences. Every alert house manager has studied the psychology of a moving picture audience as they sit watching the unfolding of a story on the screen.

You, of course, have noticed how for a time there seems to be a little undercurrent of unrest throughout the house. Neighbors talk to one another in undertones—or not in undertones; irrepressible small boys make comments concerning the action in the pictures; little children ask questions in high treble voices.

Then soothing, resonant and restful, come the first clear notes of the music—and in a flash the whole spirit of the audience is changed. They relax and give closer attention to the picture, and an atmosphere of friendliness and comfort pervades the theatre.

Time was when the manager of a motion picture house who felt that he required music to bring the utmost returns from his theatre found himself in somewhat of a quandary. If he hired an orchestra as expensive as his ambition desired, this rather considerable expense would cut deeply into his profits; with only a piano it was doubtful whether the instrumental music alone would draw and hold the extra percentage of patrons that he sought.

Now, however, all that is changed, for in the modern pipe organ one secures an instrument which furnishes music of such splendid quality and volume as to charm the most critical audience, organ music which forms a perfect accompaniment to every picture—be it a simple comedy or a complicated emotional drama. Nor is a large investment required, either is first cost or for the upkeep. These instruments are built in various sizes at reasonable prices and if desired terms can be arranged which extend payments. Some of these organs are no more difficult to play than a piano, and any musician will get really wonderful effects out of these instruments.

David Marr

Here are five reasons why you should have an organ in your theatre:

First, there is but one instrument which alone will give you thorough satisfaction and that instrument is an organ. The pipe organ is conceded by all musicians to be the "King of musical instruments."

Second, Even if you use an orchestra there are times when the organ is indispensable.

Third, Patrons of the better class of motion picture theatres have reached the point where they expect organ music to be at least part of the regular program.

Fourth, The organ is being used today in many theatres not only alone but also in conjunction with the orchestra. Organ music alone is soothing and restful.

Fifth, In the smaller theatre and neighborhood houses the pipe organ is fast displacing all other forms of music. The installation of an organ in these theatres provides an added attraction that is sure to increase their patronage.

The pipe organ has passed through an evolution during the last ten years. In the large organs the electro-pneumatic action has superseded both the tracker and pneumatic action. There is no question but that the electro-pneumatic action will soon surpass all other forms of action in the small as well as the large organ. It is well for the would-be purchaser to familiarize himself with the different types of organs and make his choice carefully. The cost of upkeep is an item of importance. It is well to select an instrument of such careful design and workmanship that there is small chance of any of its parts getting out of order or adjustment.

Of course the prime requisite in any musical instrument is its tone, and while many organs sound all right when first hearing them they prove to be a great disappointment after months of service. Be sure when buying an organ that you select one with a tone of which you will never tire. While a great many stops are desirable it is much better to have an instrument with a fewer number of stops of refined tone than one whose many stops are harsh and rough in tonal quality.

It is always well to have a new theatre planned from the start with organ chambers appropriately placed. Installing the organ in an organ chamber places it in a better position for the distribution of tone and also leaves the orchestra pit clear for musicians whenever required. If your architect is not familiar with organ construction it is well to have him obtain the necessary information from an organ builder. If you are installing an organ in a theatre already constructed have it placed in a chamber if possible. We always recommend this to our customers and make a careful study of their conditions.

One mistake many theatre owners make is to install a large and costly instrument and then expect to employ an ordinary musician to play it. It is much better to buy a small organ and place it in the hands of a good player than to buy a large and costly instrument and put it in the hands of an ordinary musician. There are also many cases where small theatres have been provided with too large an organ. One would not think of using a brass band in a small parlor or reception room. A large and loud organ is as much out of place in the smaller theatre.

Break Ground for Detroit's $500,000 Theatre

Unique ceremonies marked the breaking of ground for Detroit's proposed $500,000 Cinderella theatre on July 19. Carlyle Blackwell pulled the throttle that started the big steam shovel on the excavating work.

Moving pictures of the ceremonies were taken and will be shown at the opening of the theatre, which is scheduled to take place some time in December. The Cinderella will have a seating capacity of 2,000.

CINEPHOR

The New Projection Lens

designed by the world's largest lens-making house, after years of research to solve the optical problem of better motion picture projection, so much demanded.

To produce a lens of greater free aperture, hence greater illumination, was a simple matter. But better illumination alone did not satisfy the Scientific Staff of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. They were not content until they had devised a lens possessing as well all the elements necessary to real projection improvement—a flatter field, sharper definition to the very corners of the picture and stronger contrasts between light and shadow; a lens that will give the quality pictures expected by the patrons of a quality house.

CINEPHOR is such a lens, as determined by comparative tests and the judgment of unbiased experts, and it is uniformly reliable in quality. Offered in two series—I, with an effective aperture of 1 23/32 in. (outside diameter, 2 1/32 in.), and Series II, with a free aperture of 2 7/16 in. (outside diameter, 2 23/32 in.).

Daylight Continuous Projecting Machine Now on Market

Picturola Has Capacity of Two Thousand Feet

An automatic, continuous motion picture machine, the Picturola, with a capacity of two thousand feet of film, has been invented and perfected. It performs automatically every operation necessary to project continuously rewind and repeat any amount of film up to two thousand feet.

Picturola continous machine, which has a capacity of 2,000 feet of film

The entire control of all operations is centered in a small button, and to start or stop the Picturola you simply press this button.

The Picturola operates in broad daylight, or will project a picture eighty feet to a twelve foot screen. It does not require any attention from the operator, for even if the film should break, the automatic switch stops the motor and turns off the light.

The Model "A" machine, now being manufactured by the Picturola Corporation, is designed largely for industrial and educational purposes. This machine is, therefore, placed in an all-steel, fireproof, mahoganized cabinet, and the picture is shown at the top of the cabinet, although it may also be projected to a wall screen if desired.

The Picturola has been tested under the severest working conditions and has been pronounced perfect by prominent engineers and leading men in the industrial film field.

There is undoubtedly a tremendous market for a machine of this type, for it makes it possible to show motion pictures anywhere in broad daylight and will be a valuable lobby display device for high grade motion picture theatres.

How this machine solves the problems of automatic, continuous motion pictures is extremely interesting. The principles of operation and construction are, however, comparatively simple. Briefly explained, the Picturola is a machine that keeps in continuous operation and endless film, wound double. The Picturola winds, unwinds and rewinds the film double with the ends cemented together. No reels are used in the Picturola. It winds, unwinds and rewinds the film on metal core film spools or fluted wheels, as shown in the illustration. The film, as it is unwound over the lower ball, passes through the projecting head. From this point it is rewound on the upper ball. When the lower film spool is empty, the upper one drops into this position, and the spool which was standing idle takes the place of the upper film spool that has been carried to the lower position. It starts rewinding the film at this point. By constantly unwinding and rewinding the film from the film spools, which change position, the Picturola shows and repeats the motion picture film automatically.

The inventor built the first model five years ago, and the Picturola is today a thoroughly practical machine in construction and operation. It is being manufactured by a financially strong organization, in their own fully-equipped factory, located in Chicago. The officers, directors and stockholders of the company are well-known Chicago business men.

A Technical Description of New Projection Machine Rheostat

Inventor Gives Facts of Interest on His Device

Amperage regulation can be had to a degree of wonderful fineness with the new Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat. J. H. Hallberg, the inventor, needs no introduction to the motion picture public. He is probably one of the best known engineers in the business and has contributed generously to the improvements that have made modern projection one of the wonders of the age.

Last week Mr. Hallberg announced his new multiple unit rheostat. Following his advertising announcement there were innumerable inquiries regarding this new device. The editor of the Construction and Equipment Department visited Mr. Hallberg's office to witness a demonstration and received a technical description of the new rheostat.

The following is Mr. Hallberg's description and explanation of the working the multiple unit rheostat:

General Description

The steel frame as illustrated in Fig. 1 supports four standard Multiple Unit Frames made of flat welded steel provided with the necessary insulating porcelain knobs flexibly attached to the steel frame so as to follow for expansion and contraction and to prevent breakage in transit. Upon each Unit Frame there is stretched on the knobs a 7-16-inch diameter spiral made up from non-corrosive tempered resistance wire; two resistance units being placed on each Frame Unit. The resistance wire used has zero temperature co-efficient, and this means that each coil offers practically the same resistance whether it is hot or cold; therefore, when the arc is struck and set with a given line voltage and a given current, the amperes will remain constant, even though the rheostat should become hot. It is a fact that in other rheostats when the arc is first switched on it may be operated at a given amperage, but as the resistance box gets hot the amperes will drop off 20 to 25 per cent., making it necessary for the projectionist to always start with about 25 per cent. higher amperage than required for normal operation, or he must cut in additional resistance for the first fifteen or twenty minutes, and then cut it out as the rheostat increases in temperature, and that requires some attention, and not only that, but it makes uneven amperes at the arc, which prevents the prompt formation of an efficient crater. Not so with the new Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat. There the amperage at the arc remains just the same throughout the entire run; but, of course, the voltage at the arc may vary, depending upon the amperage for which the rheostat is adjusted, so that with low amperage the arc voltage may be 50, but as the amperage is increased to 100 or 125 the arc voltage may have to be put at 70, in order to maintain a steady arc, and that is practically accomplished by decreasing or increasing the carbon separation at the will of the projectionist.

Each one of the steel frame units is supported with four screws to the main frame as illustrated in Fig. 1, and the extreme end loops of each of the resistance units is connected by means of an asbestos covered lead to the terminals of a standard Edison main line plug cut out, so that both ends of each resistance unit are protected by plug fuses, and it has been found that for commercial purposes each multiple unit is wound for a current capacity between ten and fifteen amperes. Besides the end connections on each unit there are loops or taps at the bottom which connect to the terminals of a dial switch by means of which steps of about five amperes may be obtained, there being provided eight such steps.

It will be observed, and should be remembered, that in addition to the steps provided by the dial entire units may be disconnected by merely unscrewing a set of fuse plugs, giving a greatly increased range of control from 15 to 120 amperes in 15 ampere steps.

Additional Advantages From Application of Fuses on Individual Units

The Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat is essentially like an ordinary electric light system in which each multiple resistance unit compares with one or a bank of incandescent lamps connected in multiple across the bus-bars or mains. The Underwriter's rules and common sense demands that all such branch circuits should be protected by a fuse of practically the same capacity as the branch circuit, so that in case of trouble on any branch circuit only one set of small fuses will blow without disturbing or disrupting the entire service. In this same manner each set of fuses protects each resistance unit. It is common practice to operate upon systems with grounded neutral, and most theatres are now constructed of steel and cement, and in most instances the rheostats are mounted upon steel girders or upon a metal or otherwise grounded floor. Now, therefore, it is not unsafe to assume that there may come a time when a resistance coil might break due to a defective wire or due to a welded joint in the wire being defective, under which condition the spring coil will pull apart and, of course, ground against the rheostat case, and in that manner may form a dead short circuit. How convenient and practical it is to have each unit protected by a fuse? The interruption would not be noticed on the screen, and the projectionist may then repair or replace the unit at his convenience.

The porcelain cut out also forms a substantial and practical means for securing all of the leads and terminals within the rheostat unit, and where it should be necessary to operate without the fuses, it is possible to bridge the fuse, and that is optional in each individual case.

Where the rheostat is mounted some distance away from the control panel it is often desirable to have knife switches or a dial switch before the projectionist to control the rheostat. With the Hallberg used Multiple Unit Rheostat it is permissible to wire with control wires between the rheostat and the control panel having a capacity of not to exceed 15 or 20 amperes each for each step, and the control switches and other contacts need not be over 20 or 30 ampere capacity. Not so with other forms of rheostats not protected by fuses because there the Underwriters and City Inspection Departments will demand the following of their rules which state that no branch circuit may be run with smaller wire than the main circuit unless a double pole fuse is provided in each branch circuit, and, as a consequence, where it is not practical to install a fuse on each separate resistance units it becomes necessary to run wires of 120-ampere capacity for

Uses Two Theatres but Has Only One Screen

Unique Idea of Southern House for Colored and White

One of the most unique theatres in the Southeastern Territory is the one which has recently been opened to the public in Parish, Ala., by J. T. Savage.

Parish is a city whose population is about equally divided between white people and colored, and in order to make his theatre a paying investment, Mr. Savage had to cater to both classes. He did not like the idea of building a balcony for the negroes, nor did he believe it would be a paying idea.

Finally he hit on the right idea—a theatre in the shape of a V. Each side of the V is a perfect auditorium, and the screen is placed at the bottom of the V, so that a full and perfect view of the screen is given from both sides. The right half of the V is for white patrons and the left half for negroes.

There are two separate entrances, and each lobby display is in duplicate, and each one does credit to the ingenuity and enthusiasm of Mr. Savage.

The operating room is placed in that small, triangular space where the sides divide, and back of this, where the space is wider, is a first-class, up-to-date soda fountain, divided by partition, becoming virtually two soda fountains, where both the white and the colored patrons may be served.

The operating room is modern and up-to-date in every respect, being equipped with two Powers machines. The screen is a gold-fibre Minusa, and insures perfect projection.

The theatre, which has been named the Star, has another unique feature in its lighting. There are no electric lights in Parrish, but the Star is furnished with current by the Railway Fuel Company of Parrish, said to be the only concern of its kind working 100 per cent.

The theatre seats six hundred—three hundred to the side—and is cool and restful. No attempt at anything save simple decoration has been made, but it is immaculately clean, and well kept.

Mr. Savage states that there has been no trouble of any sort since the theatr was opened, on July 4th, nor does he an ticipate any trouble through having whit and colored people under the same roo

Other exhibitors throughout the Sout —particularly those in small towns whe the population is like Parrish, about ever ly divided between white and colored pec ple—are watching Mr. Savage's exper ment with keen interest.

If it proves a success there will doub less be a perfect epidemic of V-shape theatres for white and colored throughou the South.

The problem which faces the exhibito in this situation is that there are no enough white people to make it profitabl to operate a theatre solely for them; an a theatre that was meant for negroes onl would never be permitted in a town wher there would be but the one theatre. There fore some way must be found to cater t both races, and it is the firm belief o those who know that Mr. Savage ha found it.—Gaddis.

Technical Description of New Rheostat

each control step, and the switches must be of the nearest higher capacity, which in that instance would be 150 amperes. These are some of the valid reasons for the installation of individual fuses for each multiple unit.

Taken as a whole the design is modern, and different from all others. An observation shows the complete resistance unit well within the center of the steel frame, giving plenty of space, approximating four inches between any of the units and the outer case, so that the hand may be held on any of the sides on a 125-ampere rheostat for an indefinite time, and where forced ventilation is used by connecting the rheostat with a flue the temperature at the top may be kept so low that it would not burn the hand. The weight of the rheostat is about one-quarter of the weight of the older types for the same capacity, and it occupies practically no more space. The Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat is made standard for any amperage up to 125 in one unit, the size of the unit depending upon the maximum amperage and the voltage.

The United Theatre Equipment Corporation is the exclusive distributor of the Hallberg Multiple Unit Rheostat in U. S. A. and Canada. Outside of that territory Mr. Hallberg takes care of the sales personally.

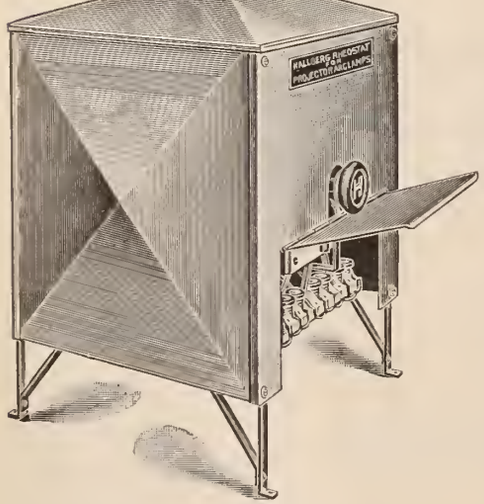

Figure 4. The same Rheostat equipped with entirely enclosed case and top provided with a six inch standard ventilating flue which may be connected to the general ventilating system pipes or through the wall to the outside of the projection room, or wherever it may be installed.

There are Many Excepted Insurance Risks

standard policies uniformly exempt the company from liability from damage or loss caused by lightning. Does the business man fall into the error of assuming, then, that if the lightning does nothing but produce the fire and the fire in turn causes the loss that he can collect the insurance under his general fire protection?

If he does, he has not read his policy carefully. Such an exemption in the policy releases the insurer from liability and the owner of the damaged property could not recover one cent of damages from the company.

The test as to the liability of the company always rests in the facts of the case. If the lightning caused the fir or the building fell before the fire, o an explosion damaged it and caused th fire to break out, or rioters in the street set fire to it, then the insurance com pany, under the excepted provisions, i released from liability.

If, on the other hand, the fire precede the explosion or the fall of the buildin or the stroke of lightning, then the in surer is not released and must pay, re gardless of what happened subsequentl to the breaking out of the fire.

Too many business men are content t take a great deal for granted when the take out insurance policies. Naturally they wish to secure the maximum o protection, else they would not hav taken out the policy in the first instance There is no way of knowing just wha the measure of your protection is, unles you take the trouble to read over the ex cepted clause and determine just exact ly what it releases the insurer from.

Then, if additional protection is neces sary or desirable, it is a simple matte to have a rider attached to the polic covering those probabilities and a fe cents extra premium will cover the whol thing.

Then, and then only, will you be justi fied in assuming that your fire polic grants you the maximum of protection The extra premium beats protracte litigation and possible disaster in th end, and it provides what all insuranc should, in order to be worth while in business sense, absolute security agains the unexpected.—By Chesla C. Sher lock in The American Contractor.

Large Capital Theatre, Winnipeg Wonder House of Western Canada

Famous Players Canadian Corporation House in Manitoba Has Seating Capacity of 2,200

With the completion of the wonderful Capitol theatre at Winnipeg, Manitoba, western Canada, is possessed of a theatre of which it may well be proud. Equipped with all the latest devices and conveniences, the house stands as an architectural triumph.

The Capitol theatre is now the most beautiful house of western Canada. Lavishly and elaborately decorated, still every detail has a definite aim. The enormous expense to which the owners went in providing a first-class theatre has resulted in a house where ease and comfort blends with refinement and luxury.

Situated on one of the principal business corners of the Canadian city, the entrances are arranged so that access may be gained from two streets. A large auditorium holds most of the seats of the theatre which has a capacity of 22,000. The main portion of seats are flanked on either side of tiers of loges, containing wicker chairs having exquisitely decorated coverings. The balcony has a seating capacity of about six hundred.

In entering the theatre the patron is struck by the magnificence of the lobby's decorations. The spacious rest rooms are designed primarily for comfort, but the same splendor and good taste of decorations which is characteristic of the whole theatre is carried out well here.

The booth is equipped with all the latest modern devices and conveniences for the operator, three of the latest type Simplex machines being installed. The stage was designed large enough to accommodate the orchestra of twenty-two pieces. R. C. Wagner designed and installed the setting.

The Capitol is owned and operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, and it is the plan of N. L. Nathanson, the managing director to make the Winnipeg house the leading theatre on the Canadian chain of the company.

The theatre is being run on the lines of the highest class theatres on the North American continent, and the success achieved in the first few weeks of its running presages that it will be one of the leading moving picture theatres.

Operator Now Runs String of Eight First Class Motion Picture Houses

Starting in 1915, J. W. Allender Has Grown Into Large Chain Owner

Entrance to Majestic theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Lyric theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Under the corporate name J. W. Allender Inc., "Jack" Allender, Spokane, Wash., is now operating a string of eight motion picture houses, two in Spokane and six in nearby Inland Empire towns, with others in contemplation. The out-of-town houses are all Liberty theatres, while the two Spokane houses are known as the Majestic and the Lyric, respectively. In every case, the out-of-town houses are new theatres or rebuilt, conforming in most cases to the same general style of architecture. They are located at Moscow, Idaho; Colfax, Pullman, Cheney, Dayton and Pomeroy, Wash. Mr. Allender has come forward rapidly in the picture exhibition game. He acquired the Lyric, Spokane, in 1915, having previously been an operator under the Clemmer regime. In June, 1918, he purchased the Majestic theatre, Spokane. His outside interests date from the fall of 1919. In October that year he acquired the Colfax and Pullman houses. The Moscow house was acquired last year, and the houses at Dayton and Cheney are but recent Allender acquisitions.

The Majestic and the Lyric theatres in Spokane, are "second run" houses. The policy has proven a distinct success with their Spokane houses. The same pictures are shown in Colfax, Pullman, Moscow, etc., but are first-run pictures in those towns.

Control of eight theatres gives the Allender interests unusual buying power and they are able to secure some of the biggest productions in the market.

The picture houses operated by the Allender interests are up-to-date in every particular and have many devices not usually found in the smaller houses. The Majestic theatre in Spokane has a Kimball organ; the Lyric, a piano, while most of the out-of-town houses are supplied with the Wurlitzer. The Colfax theatre is equipped with the American photoplayer organ. The Colfax theatre is a new building, erected by Mr. Allender, of concrete construction, with seating capacity for 450. Two Simplex machines of the latest type are used, and the throw is 65 feet. The Liberty at Pomeroy uses Power's machines and has a Wurlitzer organ. It has a seating capacity of 320. The Majestic in Spokane seats 470. The Liberty theatre at Moscow, rebuilt to suit the Allender interest, is ideally located in the civic center of Moscow. The hall above the theatre is used by the chamber of commerce for club rooms. The Moscow house uses motiograph machines.

"A Devilish Romeo"

(Fox Sunshine Comedy—Two Reels)

DOMESTIC difficulties and a burlesque of old time melodrama form the main ingredients of this Sunshine comedy. Better efforts at laugh-producers have reached the screen from this organization, and "A Devilish Romeo" may be classed no higher than the average. But the average Sunshine is a reliable, satisfying filler for any program.

Taking a henpecked husband, an indolent wife and a squalling baby, there is some household comedy in the beginning. Then the handsome villain, a former lover, comes along with a plot to destroy the domestic bliss of the home. He convinces the sheriff that hubby is a dangerous criminal who is "wanted for forgery, bootlegging and spitting on the sidewalk." But effeminate hubby finally gets good and sore, breaks out of prison and permits the comedy to end in a chase. The title-writer has had a lot of fun—or perhaps it was trouble—trying to find a pun for each title, with fair success.

The fat husband has great ability in moving his ears and blowing smoke out of them.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Wild and Willy"

(Gayety Comedy-Educational—One Reel)

"WILD AND WILLY" breaks the rules of the unusual comedy plot, for the author has laid his scenes in the backwoods and has added a few exciting moments to give it impetus.

Action is the by-word and the four comedians, Josephine Hill, Dorothy Orth, Henry Murdock and Thornton Edwards are a very busy lot when the story gets into motion.

The two young ladies, with a chaperone, have decided on a camping party in the woods and have entered on their first day's routine when the boys decide to give them a surprise.

In the meantime a tramp discovers the camp, becomes enamored of the chaperone and is determined to make her his squaw.

The scenes that follow are amusing and exciting, especially those in which the tramp and one of the young "lovers" participate. The latter has disguised himself to resemble the former and mistaken identity runs rampage.

A very pleasng comedy.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Name the Day"

("Snub" Pollard-Pathe)

"SNUB" POLLARD is a much mixed-up bridegroom in this one-reeler, which has many amusing situations. For a comedy the story is rather unique and is one that will arouse attention from its opening scenes.

The spectator's mind is put in a humorous vein as the comedy opens when he sees a wedding party sitting on the church steps in an impatient mood. In the center is the bride registering dejection.

To give the comedy a little of the old time melodramatic plot, the deep dyed villain is brought into the foreground with his schemings and plannings. In this incident he is seen as a most persistent lover "with the papers" which this time are of the marriage variety and which are always poked into the heroine's eyes when she bewails her fate.

The scenes then shift to Pollard who is seen sitting impatiently on the steps of another church with his "assistant" "Sunshine" Sammy.

As the situations swing about and come together the star is mixed up in much "confusion."

When things are straightened out and he is leading his bride down the church steps the "plotting one" pulls up the cover of a coal shoot with his cane and down goes the groom.

It's a good finish to an amusing comedy.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Robinson Crusoe, Ltd."

(Mermaid Comedy-Educational)

LLOYD HAMILTON is the man of a thousand "gags" in this comedy, some of which are new and the others rather trite but worked so well by the star that they are good for a laugh.

Hamilton is one of those comedians who likes his "props" which he introduces when the action begins to slow up.

First we see him on a steamer nonchantly enjoying the atmosphere with a few friends. After a fit of sea sickness which he does very well, the scenes shift to a canable island where the comedian indulges in every trick on the calender, for amusement sake.

His scenes with the natives are amusing especially those in which the chieftan is persuaded to play a game of crap. When the latter loses, he is led by the pompous comedian to the chopping block. But the axe will not work and the adventurer is led again to the slaughter.

One of the most amusing tricks is to see Hamilton sitting in a tin wash-tub and driving a small poodle dog through the water as he calmly smokes a cigarette.

It's a good two-reeler and will make them laugh.—FRANK LEONARD.

"High Life"

(Universal—Two Reels)

HARRY SWEET'S latest offering doesn't measure up to those of his previous releases. And this is because of the scenario which is full of hodge-podge and tricks.

As far as real comedy is concerned, this element sticks out occasionally but is lost in the general scuffle.

The principle scenes are laid in, on and around the steel girders of a large building which is in process of construction. The star loses his hat and in searching for it becomes entangled in one of the girders which is being hoisted in the air and is carried with it up into the clouds, as it would seem.

The scenes on the girders are amusing, especially the double exposure sequences but there is such a sameness to the action that it grows monotonous.

"The Mountain Lion"

(Bill and Bob Series-Pathe)

WHEN the big moment arrives in this "animal drama," there's plenty of interest and excitement. Up to this time the picture runs along in the same manner as the other previous releases in this series.

The young stars are seen hiking through the woods in search of their prey and when the opportune moment arrives lay their traps and wait for developments.

This time their object is to entrap the mountain lion.

After the traps are set and the bait attached, the animal is shown approaching, biting the meat and then hoisted in the air by a rope which has encircled his body and is attached to a bent sapling.

The boys approach and in a series of exciting moments, tie the big cat—and then for a comedy exit, when they find he is too heavy to carry, obtain a wheelbarrow, and lift him into it.

A good educational and one that should be seen.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Not Wedded But a Wife"

(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon—Wm. Fox—One-Half Reel)

IT is surprising the number of new contortions which these two pen-characters can go through. The artist has again conceived some original backward somersaults by which Mutt and Jeff register surprise and excitement. The idea is a hopelessly old one. Mutt inherits a fortune on condition that he marry before a certain day. Not being able to find a suitable lady who is willing, he dresses Jeff up in a female costume, drags him to the law office, and claims the money. Thereupon he is told that the will states that the money must remain in the bank until the first child is born.

The strip is not up to the standard of many of its predecessors.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Tricked"

(Irving Cummings—Two Reel Western)

THIS two-reel sample of the Northwest Mounted is a reminder of the old-time Broncho Billy offering of a few years ago. Which is to say that it seems out of date. The very characterization gives it away and destroys the suspense, and the action follows an exceedingly familiar groove. The Policeman "who always gets his man" doesn't take to the long trail, but captures the villain by employing trickery after the manner of a Scotland Yard detective. The number is movie-ish throughout and carries very little interest because of the arbitrary planting of incident and characters. LAURENCE REID.

"Robinson's Trousseau"

(Lee Moran-Universal—Two Reels)

IF it wasn't for the good judgment which Lee Moran uses in putting over his scenes, this comedy would certainly be short in its principal element.

The star plays the role of a prize fighter who is very anxious to make a hit with his "gal" but is detained from doing so for the reason that he is of the punk variety.

When he tells his sweetheart that he is a champion in his class and that he has a fight on with a very tough fellow, she tells him to go ahead and defend his belt.

Ambition seizes hold of him, he works himself up to fight with the champion, defeats him and wins the "gal."

The other situations are rather tame or resort to too much boisterousness.—FRANK LEONARD.

"A TRIP TO PARADISE"
(Metro)

Lytell Splendid in a Fascinating, Human Picture

WHEN the screen announces that this production is based upon Franz Molnar's "Lilliom," now running on the New York stage, one naturally expects a somewhat higher class of movie. The result is not disappointing. It is one of the most fascinating and interesting of Bert Lytell's pictures, well directed, and developed in a conservative, logical, and interest-holding manner. It is, at the same time, a picture for the masses, for the action, with the exception of the "paradise" sequence, all takes place in Coney Island. The atmosphere of the amusement park is perfectly established.

Lytell proves conclusively that he is able to handle the most varied roles. After playing the English snob in "A Message from Mars" he jumps to the hard-boiled, slangy "barker" of the side-show. The scenic railway is known as "A Trip to Paradise" and "Curley's" glib tongue brings in the crowds. He meets pretty Nora O'Brien, a resort waitress, and, when she loses her job and her home on his account—they stay out after twelve o'clock—marries her. But "Curley" quarrels with his employer, the Widow Boland, and, his reputation for honestly ruined, goes down hill. Jobs are few and men plenty—a timely touch to appeal to the audience. In desperation he is persuaded to rob, but is badly wounded. Then comes the paradise scenes. The court sits to decide whether he should be allowed to live or die, while double exposure shows his body on the operating table on earth. The scene is impressive and fascinating, despite the fact that it is a difficult one to handle and one very apt to be cheapened in the making.

Lytell gives an excellent performance. He lives his part; he typifies the city-bred, worldly-wise, but not-at-all vicious young man of the artificial amusement park. Director Maxwell Karger makes no attempt to prove him an all perfect movie hero. He is human, thoroughly human—quarreling with his nagging aunt-in-law, bitterly discouraged in fighting the fierce battle of providing for his wife.

The picture ends as he is allowed by God's Court to continue his life on probation. His old job is given back to him and he is once more the smooth-tongued barker and the crowds pour in to take the exhilarating ride to "paradise." Virginia Valli plays opposite the star. She is true to type, never overacts, and impressive in her simplicity. The whole picture is whimsical and decidedly different. Even if it were perfectly orthodox, its Coney Island atmosphere would provide an interesting setting. No religious people will be offended by the filming of Heaven. No Divine characters are shown, and it can be taken as simply metaphorical.—Length, 5,800 feet.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A treat is offered to the patrons of the ———— theatre on ———— when "A Trip to Paradise," Bert Lytell's latest screen production, will be shown. Mr. Lytell is one of the most popular players on the screen. He is known as one of the most accomplished and versatile players and has been voted the most popular movie star in countless contests.

Mr. Lytell is fortunate in obtaining such a story as "A Trip to Paradise." The picture is founded on Franz Molnar's play "Lilliom," which has been conceded to be one of the dramatic masterpieces of the New York stage. The story is laid in Coney Island, and the star plays the part of a barker at a scenic railway known as "A Trip to Paradise." The story is novel, original, and remarkably true to life. The main role proves conclusively this star's versatile ability. In his past pictures he has played such roles as an English snob, and here he is the city-bred slangy young man of the amusement park. His acting is a delight to all who see him.

In the cast with the star is pretty Virginia Valli, playing the role of the little waitress who loves and marries the prize "barker" of the island. Others in the cast are Brinsley Shaw and Victory Bateman. The picture was produced by Maxwell Karger and the scenario is the work of June Mathis, one of the most successful continuity writers in picturedom. "A Trip to Paradise" will be shown for ———— days beginning ————.

"MORAL FIBRE"
(Vitagraph)

An Entertaining Picture With Plenty of Heart Interest

"MORAL FIBRE" is a strong heart interest story with all the embellishments necessary to make it attractive and audience proof. It is just a story of home life in the small town and the big city with plenty of incident and suspense cropping out here and there.

From the opening scenes the sequences follow along logically without the least confusion until the finish when a surprise is sprung. And Webster Campbell should be given praise for his spendid direction of a picture that is sure to grip the hearts of those who have had their "home troubles" before leaving the small town. He has carefully selected his exteriors and interiors, and injected plenty of action into the scenes.

When the story opens and for the first three reels or so the plot is devoted to the early life of a boy and girl, brother and sister, who conduct a country grocery store. Into the scenes are injected plenty of comedy interest until the "older woman" is introduced.

The role is played by Catherine Calvert in a most convincing manner, and borders on the "vamp" variety. The scenes in which the young man is led to believe that he is being loved by the female deceiver, who is simply toying with him in order to while away a summer outing, are well played and brought to a climax when the young fellow tells his sister that he is in love with this woman and intends to marry her. The following sequence in which the young man buys a ring and tries to place it upon the finger of his "coming" bride, only to be surprised by her husband who has returned from the city, and then the touching and dramatic scenes in which he commits suicide, because he cannot stand the disgrace, are strong and convincing and afford Corrinne Griffith one of the best opportunities of her career.

The story then shifts to the big city where the star has become a prominent illustrator. She has determined to wreck vengeance upon the head of the woman who has caused her brother's suicide and when opportunity presents itself, makes love to the "vamp's" husband, and encourages her jealousy until she tries to take her life. She is prevented by the heroine. The latter scenes are not as convincing as those which precede.

But the story has plenty of interest, a good star and competent cast.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Friends and admirers of Corinne Griffith will have an opportunity of witnessing Corinne Griffith in her latest production, "Moral Fibre," at the ———— theatre on ———— of next week.

The story is one of unusual interest. The action shows Miss Griffith as a girl of fourteen, barelegged and barefooted with curls hanging down her back, playing around a country store. Then, like all girls, she matures and in the latter part of the production wears many beautiful gowns. She has won a reputation of being the best-dressed woman of the screen and "Moral Fibre" will add to that reputation. Numerous dresses were designed by exclusive New York modistes especially for the production.

The story tells of a young girl who set out to avenge her brother for a wrong done him but learns that revenge is not hers to take. A charming love story runs through the piece. In the cast are such well known players as Catherine Calvert, William Parks, Jr., Harry C. Browne, Joe King and Alice Concord.

"Moral Fibre" is a unique production and furnishes Corinne Griffith with a role entirely different from anything she has portrayed before. In the early scenes she delineates the girl of fourteen and does all that might be expected of a child of this age.

A lapse of several years brings her to womanhood and in this portion of the production Miss Griffith does some highly emotional work.

PROGRAM READER

"Moral Fibre," in which Corinne Griffith appears and which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— is an adaptation of a story by Harrison Goodby. William B. Courtney wrote the scenario and the production was filmed under the direction of Webster Campbell.

The excellent cast includes Catherine Calvert, Harry C. Browne, who plays opposite Miss Griffith, William J. Parks and Alice Concord.

Miss Griffith, who is steadily adding to her popularity by the various roles she portrays, ventures into a new field in "Moral Fibre." Throughout the early scenes she appears as a girl of fifteen, knee-skirted and sunbonneted and with all the abandon of youth.

Later, a lapse of five years, shows her as a well poised young woman, making her way alone in the world and intent on one purpose—the taking of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, from a married woman who, in the spirit of fun, flirted with the young girl's brother and brought misfortune upon him.

A pretty little love story develops during the action of the play, which serves to teach the heroine that vengeance is not hers to take.

The play is full of action throughout and calls for elaborate sets both interior and exterior and a variety of gowns.

CATCH LINES

She loved her brother with all her heart and soul. And then another woman came into his life, who deceived him. And then he committed suicide. Was his sister justified in swearing over his dead body that she would make the other woman pay and pay and pay? See Corinne Griffith in "Moral Fibre."

"WEDDING BELLS"
(First National)

Constance Talmadge Well Cast in Good Audience Picture

A GOOD bet as an audience attraction: that sums up our opinion of Constance Talmadge's latest release, "'Wedding Bells," which is based on Salisbury Field's farce-comedy. The limitations of the screen, of course, fail to do justice to the humorous dialogue of the original, and in places there are evidences of footage unrequired for action or story. But on the whole Director Chet Withey has turned out a commendable piece of work.

As Rosalie Wayne, ex-wife of Reginald Carter, Miss Talmadge gives a thoroughly amusing performance. In the class of special mention belongs Harrison Ford, who plays the part of the erstwhile husband. Between them the action and the situations in which they dominate are carried forward with many touches of clever acting.

The story itself serves as a type of vehicle in which Miss Talmadge excels. Rosalie bobs her hair without hubby's consent; Reggy contracts the measles without Rosalie's knowledge. Both these circumstances precipitate a divorce. for which Reno is offered as the only excuse. Then Rosalie goes abroad and returns on the eve of Reggy's second matrimonial venture. This is where the real comedy starts. Rosalie has discarded her former spouse by due process of law, but she is determined that since she cannot have him no other woman can either. From here to the fade-out the opportunities for laughable incident and amusing situation are abundant, and Director Withey has taken fullest advantage of them. Emily Chichester, in the role of Reginald's second prospective bride, and James Harrison, in the part of Marcia's rejected suitor, acquit themselves creditably, especially in the scenes preliminary to the wedding ceremony. William Roselle in the role of Reginald's friend and "best man" also deserves mention.

While most of the action transpires in the interiors of luxuriously appointed hotel apartments, the opening and closing shots present some attractive Palm Beach exteriors. These, however, are of minor interest. "Wedding Bells" serves as an excellent Constance Talmadge vehicle. Add to the popular star and the amusing story the support of a capable cast, and you have a combination which should make "Wedding Bells" ring like a cash register at the box-office.—E. F. Supple.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Constance Talmadge, who stars in "Wedding Bells," which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, has a part which will win even more picture fans to the ranks of the Connie Talmadge admirers. This vivacious and popular star has again been given an admirable light comedy based on domestic misunderstandings in which to charm her audiences. "Wedding Bells" would be entertaining even without this star. With Miss Talmadge it is as entrancing a piece of entertainment as has been shown at the ———— theatre in many a day.

The picture is based on a story by Salisbury Field. The star plays the part of a newlywed wife who decides she will join the bobbed-hair tribe of femininity. Friend husband has always admired her beautiful locks, and the incident is the cause of a quarrel which finally ends in the divorce court. But the young wife never ceases to love her husband, and what she loves she will not give up—not even when hubby is on the verge of another marriage.

Playing opposite the star is Harrison Ford, well known throughout screendom as a capable leading man for Miss Talmadge. Others in the cast are Emily Chichester, Ida Darling and James Harrison. The picture was directed by Chet Withey, who has a number of screen successes to his credit.

PROGRAM READER

It all started when Connie bobbed her hair. Friend hubby just wouldn't stand for it, and the whole thing ended in the divorce court. But true love does not mind a little thing like divorce. Connie wanted hubby back and in the end—she got him. Yes, "Connie" is Constance Talmadge, the vivacious and attractive screen star, and the picture is "Wedding Bells" which we will show on ———— for ———— days. Seldom can we offer such a humorous, and fast-moving comedy to our patrons. It is filled with zest and romance, excitement and suspense. Connie is supported by her usual capable cast, including Harrison Ford, as the "boob" husband. The story is from a stage play by Salisbury Field, and was directed on the screen by Chet Withey, one of filmdom's leading directors. Watch for Connie Talmadge in "Wedding Bells."

SUGGESTIONS

Here is the most popular flapper star in a light domestic comedy which should bring in all her friends. She should be given liberal newspaper space and as much space as possible in the news columns. Let the publicity be built around her even more than the picture. The stage play from which the picture is adapted will not have unusual value, but Harrison Ford, again the leading man, has become known to many friends. Teaser campaigns are possible from the title such as—"Wedding bells to ring soon. They will ring for someone you know very well and admire. Who is she? We'll tell you soon."

"THE BLOT"
(Lois Weber-F. B. Warren Corp.)

Miss Weber Builds Up-to-the-Minute, Entertaining Picture

THE fertile mind of Lois Weber, the author and producer of this picture, has turned aside from the marital problem or sex play, to tussle with an economic problem. The result is far more entertaining than one might suspect. Miss Weber will strengthen her reputation as a director, possessing the happy faculty of obtaining deft touches of action that hit an audience sympathetically. Her detail of character building, some of which borders on satire, is always up-to-the-minute.

"The Blot" is a splendid example of her powers of direction and her technical ability. The story is laid in a college town. There are some rich rah-rah boys and a down-trodden, underpaid professor with a pretty daughter. Fortunately the college boys and their boyish pranks are kept in the background, and the action centers about the professor and his family. Because of the professor's meagre salary the wolf pokes his head in the window. Next door lives a foreign-born shoemaker who averages $100 a week and whose uncultured and uneducated family live in plenty. When the girl is taken ill, her mother becomes desperate, for there is no money with which to buy nourishing food. Overwhelmed with bitterness, she takes a tempting broiler from her neighbor, but repenting, returns it. Her daughter, seeing only part of the episode, believes that her mother, always proud of her aristocratic family, has stolen the food. But it is the rich college boy who sends the dainties to nourish the family.

There is sufficient romance, for the girl has three to choose from. She naturally selects the rich young man, whose father is one of the trustees of the university. The hero preaches to his dad and convinces him that college professors and ministers are underpaid and thus eventually forced out of their professions.

There is real depth to the theme and it is skilfully handled. A synopsis of Miss Weber's stories cannot do her pictures justice. She makes this picture far more interesting than the above outline would lead one to believe. Her one fault seems to be a superabundance of close-ups of worn shoes, torn furniture and threadbare carpets to prove how dire is the family's needs.

Claire Windsor is the most attractive in the cast. She is perfect as the wistful, frail, and childlike young girl. Louis Calhern is the hero, thoroughly competent to handle his part. "The Blot" should make a perfectly satisfactory audience picture. It is very well acted and directed, and its story, weak in actual drama, has at least an appealing theme.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The ———— theatre on ———— will offer a new Lois Weber production, "The Blot." Miss Weber is one of the few, and undoubtedly the most successful woman producer of motion pictures today. Her pictures, among which will be remembered "Hypocrites," "To Please One Woman,"" "Too Wise Wives" and "What's Worth While," have deft touches of feminine detail which no male director can quite equal. She offers realism—not realism of the gruesome, offensive type—but simply truth in the most minute things of life. Her characters are remarkably true and her stories—she writes her own scripts—remarkable human.

"The Blot,' a typical Lois Weber production. It exemplifies subtlety on motion pictures, and it deals with a powerful theme. There is a depth of thought behind it, while at the same time it presents a most pleasing entertainment. What is the blot upon our civilization? To Miss Weber"s mind it is our lack of interest in things of the mind, as exemplified by the low salaries paid to school teachers and professors. The cobbler and the mechanic may live in comfort while those who nurture our souls and minds must scrimp and save. Whether you believe or doubt, you will find this picture exceedingly interesting.

Miss Weber, however, does not seek to preach. She has aimed primarily at entertainment. Her picture is filled with romance, and clever touches of comedy, Her cast is an exceptional one. Winsome Claire Windsor is seen as the leading lady. Louis Windsor plays the carefree college boy before whose eyes is suddenly cast a cinema of the serious side of life. Philip Hubbard, playing the old professor, does a remarkable piece of character acting and Margaret McWade is a true picture of the proud mother.

"The Blot" will remain at the ———— theatre ———— days beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

How can we help those whose pride will not allow them to seek charity? Perhaps there is a neighbor who is in want while we are in plenty. Fate plays strange tricks as it weaves the thread of life, and fortune may have turned in the lives of those we always thought "comfortable." They may need our help, but they may not ask. This theme is admirably handled by Lois Weber, the most famous woman director of motion pictures, in her latest production, "The Blot," which the ———— theatre will offer as its main attraction on ————.

Miss Weber needs no introduction to picture fans. Her remarkable realism, her true understanding of human nature, and her technical skill have made her past pictures delights of entertainment. "The Blot," it will be found, is no exception. Though a serious theme is treated, there is plenty of romance, comedy, and human interest. There is delightful Claire Windsor playing the young librarian seeking to add to the family income. The part of her father, the underpaid professor, is played by Philip Hubbard, who gives a remarkable performance. Louis Calhern is the young college man—typical of his class. It is truly an all-star cast.

Those who believe that pictureland is a place of exaggerated action, and false characters moving in an artificial world, will have a welcome surprise in "The Blot."

"PERJURY"
(Fox)

Excellent Story Material Marred by Over Acting

IN some theatres "Perjury" is sure to be considered a highly satisfactory evening's entertainment; in others it is apt to be voted an exceedingly "mellow" melodrama enacted in a 10-20-30 tempo, with titles to match.

The picture is a very curious mixture of good and bad according to 1921 standards, viewed as an attraction for the better class houses. The fundamental plot, while somewhat old fashioned and decidedly reminiscent of "The Count of Monte Cristo," is absolutely sound and offered opportunities for building a really big picture. With this material, a well selected cast as to types and native ability insists, perhaps under instructions, in continually over acting. William Farnum is one of the worst offenders in this connection.

To offset the theatrical atmosphere, there has been a careful attention to detail and a very creditable production so far as sets, lightings, and other items of technique go. An episode of the period of 1900 is particularly good, although just how audiences will take this detail is a question. The costumes make the characters look dowdy and the settings appear cheap. The continuity is excellent and the photography good.

The story of "Perjury" concerns a man who is given a life sentence for a murder he did not commit, on circumstantial evidence and who is finally freed on the confession of the real culprit, twenty years later, with some additions in the way of counterplot and incident, having to do with the man's family, the trial, and the shooting of the second heavy who has married the convict's wife after he became a lifer.

Acting honors go to John Webb Dillon, Wallace Erskine and Frank Joyner. In fact these three cannot be accused of overplaying. William Farnum has the principal role but is not convincing. The picture has a juvenile romance, the parts being played by Jack Crane and Alice Mann. —Length, 8 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The latest William Fox special feature, "Perjury," in which William Farnum has the leading role, is scheduled for the ———— theatre for a ———— days engagement beginning ————.

"Perjury" is well constructed and highly interesting drama of a man who was sent to prison for life on the perjured testimony of a supposed friend and circumstantial evidence. The story is divided into two episodes of which the first is laid in the period of 1900. For these sequences the costuming and settings have been reproduced in every detail. The change in the attire of the feminine sex is most noticeable, and many a laugh is provided by scenes in which what was once the height of fashion is shown.

In support of Mr. Farnum is a strong cast of well-known players. Wallace Erskine, John Webb Dillion and Frank Joyner are especially good in their roles. Others who have important parts are: Sally Crute, Jack W. Crane, Gilbert Rooney and Alice Mann.

PROGRAM READER

Another of the big William Fox special attractions booked for the ———— is "Perjury," a domestic drama in which William Farnum has a principal role. "Perjury" was first shown at the Park theatre, New York where it had a successful run at two dollar prices and later was given a week's showing at the New York Capitol. The picture has found success in many of the largest theatres of the country and is one of the "big twelve" special productions from the Fox studios, among which are: "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and "The Queen of Sheba."

The picture screens in eight reels, every fact of which is filled with interesting incident, tense situations and good acting.

In support of Mr. Farnum are such well-known players as Sally Crute, Walter Erskine, John Webb Dillon, Frank Joyner, Jack W. Crane, Alice Mann and others of equal reputation in the film world. The feature was produced under the direction of Harry Millarde from a story by Ruth Comfort Mitchell. It has been lavishly produced, especially in an episode for 1900, where the costumes and stage settings are in exact duplication of the period.

SUGGESTIONS

In billing this it seems advisable to give your audiences a little idea of the story and calling attention to the logical well developed plot. Explaining that the costumes of the first episode are of the period of 1900 will also be advisable, since it is possible that this stuff might be construed by some people to be evidence that the picture was a reissue. If William Farnum is popular with you he should be billed as the star.

CATCH LINES

The story of a man who was convicted of a murder he did not commit on the perjured evidence of a supposed friend. Perjury is a false statement under oath. In this story it was such a statement that sent Robert Moore to prison for life. How the truth finally came out at last and the man was proven innocent makes an interesting and thrilling picture.

"AT THE END OF THE WORLD"
(Paramount)

Disappointing Melodramatic Romance, But May Slide By

A PICTURE with Betty Compson, Mitch Lewis and Milton Sills in the principal roles, its story laid in Shanghai and directed by a man who has achieved fame as an artist might be expected to be colorful, well acted and interesting. However, nothing like this is forthcoming in "At the End of the World," and since the three players mentioned have been tried many times and not found wanting, the fault must be with the artist who became a director and possibly with a story that sketched broadly a general idea, not so new at that, but provided little incident of value in making pictures of action.

In the sequences having to do with a Shanghai saloon keeper, his daughter, a globe trotter, a sailor and some minor characters, Penrhyn Stanlaws, the artist who forsook his brushes for the megaphone, has evolved a conglomeration of scenes where a lot of people come and go with titles telling you what it is all about.

The action then jumps to an uninhabited island somewhere at the end of the world. Here three men and the girl spend most of their time climbing up and down the circular staircase of a lighthouse. Each of the males is in love with the girl. Two of them finally eliminate themselves when in a fight at the top of the lighthouse they crash through the railing and to the rocks below.

Bad lightings, eccentric camera angles and a draggy, walk-through-it tempo, are in evidence most of the way. The players show little of the acting ability that they have proven they possess. The incident provided is commonplace. The fights are pull and haul and tumble about affairs. Miss Compson looks as if she was tired and a bit peevish. Mr. Sills gives the impression that he is obeying orders and not giving expression to his own ideas. "Big Mitch" acts all over the place.

Taken as a whole, the feature is very disappointing, and if it gets over with audiences it will be a personal triumph for the cast of characters and not for the production as a whole or what is delivered in the way of entertainment.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The picture is a melodrama of the underworld of Shanghai, suffused with the lure of the sea and containing much glamor of the East. The star plays the daughter of a saloon-keeper, who has known only men that drifted in and out of the "Paper Lantern" cafe, a guzzling, gambling rabble, most of them rough and uncouth and not a few of them thieves and knaves.

A talented supporting cast, practically all stars themselves, has been secured for the other roles of "At the End of the World." Milton Sills is the hero, a traveler, poet and artist who wanders to the "Paper Lantern." Joseph Kilgour is a Shanghai banker, and the villain. Mitchell Lewis plays the role of a sailor who loves "Cherry O'Day," the part played by Miss Compson. Others of the cast are Casson Ferguson, Spottiswoode Aitken and Goro Kino.

The production was directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws. It was adapted from the stage play of the same name written by Ernest Klein. The adaptation to the screen is by Adelaide Heilbron.

PROGRAM READER

Pretty Betty Compson, star of "Prisoners of Love" and a member of that never to be forgotten cast appearing in "The Miracle Man," in her first Paramount starring vehicle, "At the End of the World," comes to the ———— theatre for a ———— days' showing next ————.

"At the End of the World" is a melodrama of the underworld with its story laid in Shanghai and a South Seas Island and contains a world of action and incident of the sort that the star is noted for.

The role which Miss Compson plays is that of "Cherry O'Day" daughter of the keeper of the "Paper Lantern" cafe, a Shanghai dive and gambling joint, who in spite of her environment manages to keep the motley throng of wharf rats, sailors, and Far East rabble which frequents her father's saloon at arm's length. In the role of the hero is Milton Sills, playing "Gordon Deane," traveler and novelist who falls in love with her on a chance visit to the "Paper Lantern." Others of a strong supporting cast are Joseph Kilgour, Spottiswoode Aitken, Mitchell Lewis and Casson Ferguson.

"At the End of the World" was directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws. The picture is adaptation of the stage play of the same name written by Ernest Klein. The adaptation is by Adelaide Heilbron.

SUGGESTIONS

Exploitation for the picture will include heavy billing for the entire cast with a mention of the roles played by Miss Compson, Joseph Kilgour, Milton Sills and Mitchell Lewis. The story may be given attention especially to outline the general idea of the ground covered. Prologues should be along the lines suggested by the "Paper Lantern" saloon episodes of the picture.

"OPEN SHUTTERS"
(Universal)

An Orthodox Picture of the "Preachy" Type

"OPENED SHUTTERS" is simply a conventional, manufactured movie, which dainty Edith Roberts in the starring role, cannot make otherwise. One thing can be said about it—it would pass the censor board of Zion City. It is preachy in a vague, indefinite way, with a character something like "the miracle man" who is known as "Think Right" and who wears a long beard and a kindly smile. Edith Roberts has a nondescript role, playing the orphaned daughter of an artist who is cast upon uncharitable relatives. She is wont to return evil for evil, but eventually learns the lesson of "opening the shutters of her soul." Thus comes the picture's title.

The story does not take long to shift to New Engalnd, where Director William Worthington goes the limit in caricaturing the "down east" folks. The man wears chin whiskers and an ancient stovepipe hat, and the woman a trim, grandmotherly bonnet and flowing skirts. The little orphan, finding herself unwelcome, goes to the secluded home of "Think Right," who, it is explained, once loved her mother. "Think Right" gets in some preaching whenever the opportunity presents itself. The hero comes along, and also another girl who has set her cap for him. There is jealousy between the two girls, and the star, taunted beyond endurance, decides to row across Casco Bay during a storm. They give mostly close-ups of her pulling at the oars through the heavy rain, but a few long shots reveal that the water is as smooth as glass. The hero tries to save her, but is beaten to it by another admirer. There is a happy ending. Incidently, it is one of those pictures which make faith responsible for sudden and unaccountable cures of physical ailments.

The picture may be enjoyed by those who do not expect much, that is real from the screen, and are satisfied with an orthodox story. As a picture of New England it does not quite convince, partly because of some of the exteriors. The star is attractive, although allowed few opportunities to impress her personality. There is nothing distinctive about the role allotted her. Edward Burns is her leading man. He never overacts and has a pleasing personality. May Wells, Clark Comstock, and Charles Clary are the New England types. Unfortunately, Joseph Swickard as the father dies early in the picture.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The popular young star, Edith Roberts, in a heart-interest story, "Open Shutters," laid in the quaint environment of New England country life is to be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— and ———— of the coming week. Probably no role that Miss Roberts has yet appeared in possesses the sympathetic appeal found in her part as Sylvia Lacey, an orphan girl, forced by circumstances to cast herself on the mercy of stern New England relatives who have conceived a profound dislike for her even before they have seen her.

How Sylvia wins not only happiness but love also despite the hostile atmosphere into which she has been projected, how she triumphs over the shallow hypocrisy of her hard-hearted custodians and learns from adversity a new-born philosophy of light and service makes this story from the pen of Clara Louise Burnham one of the most interesting that has found its way to the screen in many days.

Miss Roberts is ideally cast in her role as Sylvia Lacey, and her support, including Mai Wells, Clark Comstock, Nola Luxford, Edward Burns and Charles Clary, offers a strong array of talent in the more important parts.

PROGRAM READER

The orphan girl despised by her kin and obliged to battle with life alone and unbefriended is a theme that is bound to appeal to the universal heart of all humanity, especially when the heroine overcomes all obstacles and wins happiness and love in the end. That is the sort of role that Edith Roberts, the popular Universal star, plays in as Sylvia Lacey, in "Opened Shutters," which is to be presented at the ———— theatre during the week of ————.

Sylvia after her father's death had come to New England in obedience to the dying wishes of her parent, expecting to find her aunt and uncle of the kindly old sort who would take her to their hearts. Instead she found them hard-souled and hypocritical. The disappointment stunned but did not demoralize her. How she met the situation and triumphed over all the adverse circumstances that fell to her lot in the stern New England environment will win your heart and afford you a delightful evening's entertainment.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the star and refer to her past successes as the featured player in "The Adorable Savage." "The Unknown Wife," "White Youth," "The Fire Cat," etc. Emphasize the fact that in this picture Miss Roberts appears in a role different from her former parts and in a setting, that of a New England town, not at all similar to the South Sea locale of "The Adorable Savage" and the Spanish atmosphere of "The Fire Cat." How about a prologue with an enlarged shutter in mid-stage which on opening gives entrance to a singer or a dancer.

CATCH LINES

"Opened Shutters" will prove to be a revelation of an interesting story, a popular star ideally cast, and a support of sterling talent.

"EVER SINCE EVE"
(Fox)

Fluffy Story Carries Little Interest

THE latest Shirley Mason picture. "Ever Since Eve," is of such an inconsequential character that it has all it can do to keep going. The dainty star has an equally dainty plot through which she is presented in a series of pretty poutings and close-ups of "sweet sixteen" mannerisms. Even her ankles come in for inspection at times. That the story is proven to be decidedly weak is shown through the introduction of a totally irrelevant figure that wonders about from scene to scene registering a mysterious line of action. The opening shot discloses a murder being committed, the victim lying in bed while his assailant is undoubtedly a woman judging from the gloves which enclose the arms encircling the unfortunate man's throat. The upper anatomy of the criminal is not shown.

Thus the spectator imagines himself in for some mystery. But it is just a hoax and a mighty poor one to perpetrate. It is nothing but kidding the public because the wandering detective goes out of the picture at the conclusion via the subtitle route which says "he made a mistake and was on the wrong track." The onlooker has imagined all the while that the heroine played by the star bas something to do with clearing the mystery. The author should have incorporated something resembling mystery or drama after all, for the plot is as fluffy as tbe foam of an ice cream soda.

The star impersonates a French orphan who comes to America and surprises her artist father. The shop worn Trilby touch is here too. Three cronies pass in and out of his studio cutting up mild didoes. It develops that the "father" who is lacking a sense of humor—a virtue which might have given the story a certain quality—falls in love with his young ward who puts over the Gallic temperament in the accepted fashion. The action here presents another mysterious character, a young girl who masquerades as a youth. Presumably this figure is also added to help out the detective angle.

The picture builds to its orthodox conclusion which appears when the artist pursues his sweetheart who has escaped from her room. He finds her in the arms of the pretty masquerader. The latter is saved from a beating when the dignified hero discovers that she is the real adopted daughter and had assumed a disguise in order to marry a soldier.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The dainty Fox star, Shirley Mason, appears at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "Ever Since Eve," a comedy-romance which permits her to flash her abundant charm in a role which is ideal for the expression of her personality. Miss Mason is truly a daughter of Eve in this delightful photoplay which introduces her as an orphan of France who comes to America to live with her guardian, Carteret, an artist. Celestine presents such charm and personality that she is popularly received everywhere.

Her suitors are quite plentiful. The girl is capricious and causes her "father" much alarm. He discovers that she is meeting a young admirer clandestinely. Having lost his heart to her he is chagrined to think that she encourages other romances. He locks her in her room but she makes her escape. Carteret starts in pursuit and discovers that she is a sister of the real orphan, the girl having used deception because of her belief that he might not look with favor upon the engagement of the ward. The picture carries interesting episodes and is capably acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

Ever since Eve tasted the apple in the Garden of Eden the world has been trying to understand the feminine sex. Our ancient ancestor, Adam, could no more understand the Eve of his day than we can understand the modern Eve. We do know, however, that at the glorious age of seventeen or eighteen, she is presenting her greatest charm. She can play at love, encourage romances, pretend being fickle, and capture men's hearts for the sake of giving expression to her subtle whims and fancies. "Ever Since Eve" is a pretty romance of the present day type of heroine and stars dainty Shirley Mason, who has a role ideally suited for her personality. The picture comes to the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

The title is the best medium for advertising this feature. It carries originality and sparkle and suggests a good time for any audience. You can tell them that the picture is a pretty comedy-romance about a young orphan who plays at love and succeeds in capturing masculine hearts through the joy of the game. Play up the star with stills and tell that her dainty personality is ideally suited for the role enacted here. Since the plot is mild it would be best not to detail it in any way. Simply state that it offers an entertaining hour in the company of a fascinating little actress. A prologue can feature a vocal duet.

CATCH LINES

She was a true daughter of Eve and the men of her acquaintance could not understand her. See Shirley Mason in "Ever Since Eve."

"THE STING OF THE LASH"
(Robertson-Cole)

One Big Punch; Balance Average Western Movie Stuff

ASIDE from one sequence which certainly carries a punch, and some very fine scenic locations, "The Sting of the Lash" is pretty much just another Western movie in which the heroine suffers and suffers through five and a half reels of film and then is shown in the last five hundred feet to have achieved happiness and prosperity.

However, the work of a very good cast, including the star, makes the commonplace and conventional plot on which the story is developed seem less stereotyped and certain scenes carry real suspense and interest. One of these comes in the first reel showing an automobile accident. Another is a fight between the hero and one of the villains. The third is a whale in which Pauline hamstrings her husband and gives him a deserved horse whipping.

The story concerns an Eastern girl who goes to the gold mining country and marries a young miner. It is a love match, but because the husband is tricked out of his mine he starts cutting up like a 10-20-30 villain and finally Pauline's patience is exhausted. She gives her spouse his horse whipping, and goes to work for a mining company. In the meantime the husband has been sent to the pen for bootlegging. When he gets out Pauline is in charge of the mining operations. An official of the company has been sticking around for several reels, the inference being that a romance is developing. However, the hero is alleged to be a regular guy once more and Pauline decides that with all the faults that he once had, she loves him still and they start life anew.

Miss Frederick plays her role very well, but the camera is beginning to treat her badly. Clyde Fillmore is excellent as the hero, if the role can be called that. The rest of the roles present small acting opportunities. The photography is extra good. Most of the scenes have been shot out of doors and many very fine scenic locations have been secured. Henry King directed, and except for some rather abrupt jumps, has evolved a good continuity.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Pauline Frederick in her latest Robertson-Cole production, "The Sting of the Lash," will appear at the ———— theatre on ———— of next week.

This picture is considered by the critics to be one of the best the star has appeared in, giving her plenty of opportunity to display her emotional talents, and to grip and hold an audience by the strong dramatic situations which she dominates.

This is especially noted in the closing scenes when the wife, who has given up everything for the husband she loves goes back to him even though she is wanted in marriage by a man of wealth and refinement.

The locale of the story is laid in the east and west with the star playing the role of a young and beautiful Eastern girl, whose father has failed in business. She leaves for the West, where she meets the man of her choice, only to find that he is given to drink. Slowly she is dragged down, until she is compelled to take in washing for their very existence.

But a day comes when the sun shines into her life again and she is taken into a better life. But she never forgets her man.

"THE JACK RIDER"
(Aywon-States Rights)

Good Incident in This Lively Western

WHILE the general style of westerns does not vary to any extent on the screen, most of them revolving around hard ridin' and straight shootin' with picturesque scenery for backgrounds and a host of cowboys for atmosphere, yet when one comes along which carries all these essentials with lively action and incident to boot, and a new type of star to add the punch—well the spectator is forced to sit up and take notice. "The Jack Rider" is a sort of comedy western with a dash of melodrama added to provide the conflict and it features a regular he-man cowboy, Big Boy Williams. There is a name for you! The minute he hoves into sight, masquerading as a tenderfoot one knows for a certainty that the picture is going to entertain.

There is practically no story at all. But that doesn't matter. One is too busy following the comedy points and the thrilling rodeo stunts and other interesting detail to notice any absence of plot. The idea concerns the embarrassment of a tenderfoot who is made the butt of the cowboys' jokes. He has come to the cowtown to take charge of his estate left by a father under the condition that he show his manliness before he is allowed to inherit the property. Thus it is a put-up job among the cowboys to place obstacles in his path. He is met at the station and compelled to ride a "bucker" and when he is tossed to the ground he mounts a donkey—an animal which takes him around to the end of the picture. The melodramatic note introduces a villain with a trick mustache who is desirous of winning the banker's daughter and making things unpleasant for the hero. The latter, to clear the mortgage, is forced to enter the rodeo in order to gain the necessary money prize.

Big Boy Williams presents a likeable personality and is bound to be heard from in the future. He staged several snappy fights, rescues the distressed damsel on several occasions, rides like Tom Mix, shoots like Annie Oakley, and certainly lives up to the spirit of the West. The rodeo show offers first rate incident. But that touch is only one of many in this lively picture. Will Rogers, Jr., provides the juvenile interest and there is no doubt that he is a chip of the old block. He can ride and lasso almost as well as his talented dad. Rest assured that "The Jack Rider" is going to please your audiences. It is quite a little different from the average western since it features life with a verisimilitude which cannot be denied. Big Boy's real name is Guinn Williams. He also wrote the story. He is not an out-and-out "stunter" but more like the everyday cowboy.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A lively, semi-humorous, melodrama of the modern West is "The Jack Rider," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— featuring a new type of cowboy, Big Boy Williams. This star shows himself to be an exceptional horseman and a true son of the plains. The story in which he is placed takes him through all sorts of adventures—from masquerading as a tenderfoot, to riding a donkey instead of a horse. He shows his skill at rodeo stunts, rescues the girl when the occasion calls for it, and proves to the other characters in the plot and to the spectators as well that he is exceptionally gifted to enact the picturesque cowboy.

As Frank Stevens, Big Boy Williams comes to the West to inherit his father's ranch. It is disclosed eventually that the youth must show his courage against overwhelming obstacles before he is allowed to come into his estate. This pluck displays itself when he rescues the girl from desperadoes, the rodeo stunts, and fighting and shooting and riding like a genuine Westerner. The picture is thrilling and always interesting and is bound to please any type of patron.

PROGRAM READER

He was a big fellow who arrived at the cowtown in a golf suit. The cowboys proceeded immediately to make things unpleasant for him, since they misjudged him for a dyed-in-the-wool tenderfoot. His method was to take their insults with a smile. After a while he won their admiration. He showed himself a superb fighter and rider. He even put up with the humiliation of being compelled to ride a donkey. But in time he proved that he could ride the biggest "bucker" on the ranch. Come and see this lively melodrama at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this is a Western, featuring a new star it would be a good plan to put special emphasis upon his name. Play up that name. It is a winner. Also tell that the picture offers as lively action as has come from the screen in some time. Tell that it not only thrills but offers amusement. The rodeo show can be featured. Describe it as realistic adventure of life as it is lived at the present time among the cowboys of Texas. Play up the action and tell that the patrons will get their money's worth. A cowboy quartette may be used for a prologue. Also a cowboy lasso number would attract. Also state that the son of Will Rogers is in the cast.

CATCH LINES

They thought he was a tenderfoot, but he proved to them that he could outshoot and out-ride them all. See the lively western, "The Jack Rider."

See the lively melodrama of the modern West. See Big Boy Williams in "The Jack Rider."

Something Doing Every Minute in This Two-Fisted Picture

THOSE patrons of the screen who are "fed up" upon society dramas will certainly be delighted in "The Fighting Breed," a lively melodrama detailing the adventures of a last Mohican type of character. This is not to say that the hero is an Indian, but he is the last of the Fighting O'Farrells of Australia and his object is to show that he lives up to the traditions established by his forefathers. The picture was made in Australia and features the Tex Richard of the Antipodes, namely, Snowy Baker. The star proves himself as able an actor as he is a promoter and impresario. Possessing a magnetic personality, with a smile which immediately radiates warmth and sympathy and which makes friends, he certainly will establish a healthy following or we miss our guess.

Mr. Baker does not look unlike the late Sydney Drew, but his style of acting is entirely different. He does not pretend to be a comedian, but the manner in which he plays his part indicates an enthusiasm for screen work which takes on the form of interesting physical action. He has arrived incognito at his ranch and playfully cuts up capers and pretends to be very much of a tenderfoot. He shows his mettle time and again in the pinches and comes up smiling always. This smile greets the spectator in the introductory scene and by the time the picture is over he has won your admiration. The offering starts off by planting the characterization with a few flashbacks revealing the courage of his ancestors in moments of extremity. What follows are flashes of superb horsemanship. Baker then takes the wheel of his auto and rides into the city.

This is the point in which the plot develops another angle entirely. His neighbor's daughter is engaged in dangerous settlement work and the action places the hero in contact with her in order that he may effect a timely rescue. You may call it rather arbitrary but the fact that the incident is exceptionally lively destroys any thought of dramatic conveniences. Feeling peeved over his ungentlemanly conduct in seeing the right girl for the first time, he journeys down to the settlement district. What occurs is about as lively a sample of two-fisted action as has come from the screen in some time. He employs a good right and a hefty left and thugs and cut-throats, dock-rats and derelicts take the count. The girl realizes eventually that she has jumped at conclusions too readily. This is Baker's picture any way you look at it. And he will certainly put it over. Wilfred Lucas directed and played a character part, and he accomplished both jobs in an able manner.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Buck Jones Western Entirely Satisfactory in Every Respect

BUCK JONES has another picture here which should add to his popularity. No one can say that it is unusual in plot or scenic background. Nor does it get away from the usual run of Westerns in its theme and development. But Director Bernard Durning has found a few new tricks for heightening suspense and original schemes with which the hero may fool the villain. And best of all there is the star rescuing a girl from a runaway team, outwitting his enemies, fighting his way through a gang of thugs, and lastly bridging a chasm hand over hand along a rope, while his horse strains his forelegs at the cliff in an effort to support the weight of his master. Action like this is more pleasing than endless riding over the hills with the villain still pursuing.

Once more the corrupt politician and dance hall keeper of a cow-country town is the heavy. Once more the girl is lovelessly engaged to him, and the hero maligned by him. The town, states the sturdy young ranchman, is not big enough to hold both of them, and at the end it doesn't. The dance hall keeper is at the bottom of the cliff and the star in Helen Ferguson's arms, vindicated as a cattle-rustler. Incidentally, a true picture of Western life is presented, scenically speaking. The ranch houses are thoroughly modern and even the dance hall is without its bare boards and crudely made chairs and tables.

The runaway team is excellently pictured and is a real thrilling scene, which looks as if it might have been dangerous work. Then comes a dance hall fight, very well executed by Jones, and photographed from many angles with equal skill. The nick-of-time fight takes place in, and on top of, a small house crowning a cliff. Jones and G. Raymond Nye go to it with realism. There is not, in any of the action, any little slip of direction to mar the realism and thereby destroy the convincing powers of the picture.

As the hero, Buck Jones is ideally cast. He rides well and fights well, and he will be in no wise displeasing to the feminine element when they give him a few close-ups in his romantic scenes. Helen Ferguson is his leading lady. She gives a much better portrayal of her part than any of the baby-faced type could possible do. She is the outdoor type, and she can act. Nye and Norman Selby supply the villainy, the former with a snarl and a sneer to make him thoroughly hateable and the latter in a sneaking, cowardly manner. Altogether it makes as entertaining a Western as the average fan will demand.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.
